THE PACKERS VIE WITH EACH OTHER IN CLEANING THEIR PACKING HOUSES

President Says Their Haste in the Matter is Humorous.

Sends Reports and Letters to Committee on Agriculture.

Report of Department Investigation Not in Conflict.

Washington, June 8.—In response to a request from the house committee on agriculture President Roosevelt today forwarded to Representative Wadsworth the report made to him by a committee of the department of agriculture, regarding conditions in the Chicago meat packing houses. Accompanying the report was a letter from the president in which he points out that there is no conflict in substance between the Neill-Reynolds report and that of the agricultural department report. It is said that in the latest report that the packing house proprietors are manifesting almost a "humorous haste to clean up, repave and even to plan for future changes." New toilet rooms are being provided, with additional dressing rooms and clean towels. The report says that the haste toward reform would have been amusing if it were not so nearly tragic.

The president says his investigations have not been completed, but that "enough has been developed in my judgment to call for immediate, thorough going and radical enlargement of the powers of the government in inspecting all meats which enter into interstate and foreign commerce."

Following is the text of the letter:

White House, Washington, June 8.—My Dear Mr. Wadsworth: In accordance with your request, I send you herewith the two reports of inspection by the commission appointed by the department of agriculture of April 5 and 13. This committee had already been appointed when I notified the secretary that I desired such a commission should be appointed in order to make the investigation. Subsequent complaints to me and the consideration of complaints already made showed that the charges were not only against the packing houses, but also to a certain extent reflected upon the action of the government inspectors, and I came to the conclusion that it was best to have an investigation by outside individuals who could not be charged with being in any way interested in the matter. Accordingly before the completion of the investigation by the department of agriculture I directed Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Neill to make an investigation, the first report of which has been laid before congress. Much testimony has been offered to us which has not been considered in this report, for Messrs. Neill and Reynolds in this report confine themselves to stating in more or less summary way the facts as to which they had been eyewitnesses; and what they have said cannot be successfully controverted. Some of the ground traversed by Messrs. Neill and Reynolds is not touched upon in the report of the committee of the agricultural department. As to the ground covered in common by the reports of the two investigating committees, there is no conflict in substance as to the important matters, although there is a marked difference in emphasis, this being particularly due to the greater length and detail of the report of the committee.

In my judgment, the emphasis of the report of Messrs. Neill and Reynolds is abundantly justified by the facts. To show the immediate and extraordinary change for the better which the mere fact of their investigation is already bringing about in the condition of the packing houses in Chicago, it is only necessary to instance the following portions of a letter received from a most competent and trustworthy witness in Chicago, whose name I will give the committee if it so desires:

"Chicago, Friday, June 1.—On Monday I began a tour of all the great packing houses, going first to Libby's and then Swift's.

"Tuesday all the morning I discussed changes that ought to be made and caught a glimpse of the awakening at Armour's. In the afternoon I visited the plant with the superintendent.

"Wednesday I rested and contemplated the 'awakening of packingtown.' It is miraculous. Thursday did Nelson Morris with superintendent. • • • Nelson Morris has done much to make things better. By the time the next inspecting party arrives they will have still more new lavatories, toilet rooms, dressing rooms, etc. Cuspidors everywhere, and signs prohibiting spitting. In most, the awakening seemed to come by force from without. There was the slightest indication that the 'still small voice' was at work, also.

"At Armour's, at my suggestion, I made on pretense of making an investigation, but frankly announced my desire to see things for myself and to get a fresh impression of conditions, as I had not seen the plants since before the strike. On every hand there was indication of a most numerous haste to clean up, repave and even to plan for the future changes. Brand new toilet rooms, new dressing rooms, new towels, etc. Swift's and Armour's were both so cleaned up that I was compelled to cheer them on their way, by expressing my pleasure at the changes. The sausage girls were moved upstairs where they could get sun and light, they too have dressing rooms, etc. I asked for showers and leckers for the casing workers at Armour's, and got a promise that they would put them in. The canning and stuffing room, chip beef and beef extract at Armour's seemed really quite good. In all of these rooms the girls work. At Libby's the girls are to be put in a blue calico uniform which they will buy at half price. They are putting in toilet rooms which they say are temporary, and that when the building is remodeled they will have these put in a better place. The haste towards reform would have been amusing if it were not so nearly tragic.

"They tried to win my help on the ground that loss of foreign trade would mean hardship for the workers in my neighborhood and I must say I do share this fear, but I cannot see the wisdom of my coming out publicly and saying that I saw indications of an awakening, for I want the changes to be radical and permanent, even though we all have to suffer for the present."

"I wish to repeat that my investigations are not yet through. I am not prepared to make a final statement either as to so much of the complaints as concerns the statement of the bureau of animal industry or as to certain of the graver charges in connection with the adulteration of meat products as well as other matters. But enough has been developed in my judgment to call for immediate thoroughgoing and radical enlargement of the powers of the government in inspecting all meats which enter into interstate and foreign commerce. Unfortunately the mistreads of those who are responsible for the abuses we design to cure, will bring discredit and damage not only upon them but upon the innocent stock growers, the ranchmen and farmers of the country. The only way permanently to protect and benefit these innocent stock growers, the farmers and ranchmen, is to secure by law the thorough and adequate inspection for which I have asked.

Sincerely yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

PACKERS HAD KNOWLEDGE

Of Higher Rate When They Accepted a Lower One.

The Government's Contention in the Rebate Trial.

Kansas City, June 8.—A. S. Vanvalkenburgh, district attorney for the western district of Missouri, in the federal court here this morning, presented the government's side of the cases of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy & Co. and the Nelson Morris Packing company, on trial on a charge of accepting rebates from the Burlington railroad on export shipments. Mr. Vanvalkenburgh declared that the packing companies' acceptance of a rate of 23 cents a hundred pounds, when the regular tariff was 35 cents, was a plain violation of the interstate commerce act.

In arguing the governments' side of the case, Mr. Vanvalkenburgh addressed himself to four propositions, as follows:

One—Has congress power to legislate respecting export rates?

Two—Has congress so legislated, and has it conferred upon the interstate commerce commission authority respecting the publication and adhesion to such rates in so far as the rail carriage to the port of trans-shipment is concerned?

Three—Is this rate such a through rate, depending upon the facts and circumstances without the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission, as to bring this case within the reasoning of the Texas & Pacific Railway vs. Interstate Commerce Commission (162 U. S.) and to take this case out of the operation of the interstate commerce law.

Four—Would the contract between the packers and the Burlington railroad, if valid when made, protect the packers against prosecution for violation of the Sixth section of the interstate commerce act, as amended by the act of February, 1903, if they persisted in accepting a rate which was in effect a concession after that rate had been raised by the railroad company, and effective on and after Aug. 1, 1905.

Mr. Vanvalkenburgh said that the first three propositions had been settled for the purpose of this trial by Judge Smith McPherson, the presiding judge, who had overruled the demurrer to the indictment. He, therefore, addressed himself more in detail to the question of whether the packers' contract with the Burlington railroad protects them in these cases. He said in the course of his argument:

"Since the passage of the Elkins amendment the shipper is liable with the carrier and the more soliciting, accepting or receiving of a concession or rebate, is made an offense. No intent is necessary to the completion of that offense. Where the specified intent is not essentially a mistake or ignorance of fact, is quite as immaterial as a mistake or ignorance of law.

"The duty is laid upon the shipper and it is incumbent upon him to guard against violating either the law or the spirit of the law. If he ships and accepts a rate, he is bound, at his peril, to know that the rate he accepts does not involve a concession from the published rate."

Vanvalkenburgh says that the packers knew of the actual rate of 35 cents at the time they made the shipment in the case at point and accepted a rate of 23 cents.

In closing, he said:

"No damage would have been entailed upon the defendants by observance of the law. It will be noted that nowhere in the evidence does it appear that the shippers would have suffered in the matter of their ocean rates, nor in the matter of their foreign contracts for the sale of their products by observing the published schedule. The shippers were simply seeking concessions, preferences and advantages in the matter of rates, and the railroad was seeking tonnage without reference to the mandate of the law."

MEMBERSHIPS SELL HIGH.

Three Thousand Dollars for Duluth Board of Trade Seats,

Three memberships in the Duluth Board of Trade were sold this morning and brought $3,000 each, the high mark in the history of the board. One was purchased by the Van Dusen & Harrington company and one by McCarthy Bros., for outside people and one was bought by C. H. Thornton for a Minneapolis licensed house.

WORKMEN ARE ARMED

Supplied With Mauser Rifles and Drilled by Officers.

Revolutionists Are Very Active in City of Moscow.

Moscow, June 8.—There is a noticeable increase in revolutionary activity here and it is evident that the leaders are preparing to take advantage of the first opportunity to start an armed uprising. The workmen of the factories and mills are being systematically armed with Mauser rifles and drilled under the supervision of army reserve soldiers. In spite of the repressive measures adopted by the authorities, revolutionary meetings are held nightly in the industrial sections. The leaders appear confident that the morale of the troops of the garrison is undermined, as they have received from some regiments promises of support in the event of a conflict. Revolutionary emissaries have been sent out in all directions into the country to incite the land-hungry peasants to appropriate land and strike on the big estates. The plan evidently is to secure unity of action in the country and cities and inaugurate a conflict with a general strike. The leaders evidently hope for a complete rupture between the government and parliament, which would furnish the necessary opportunity for an uprising. The situation has greatly alarmed the business men of Moscow and the big landlords of the country.

THREE DROWNED AT BASS LAKE

St. Paul Men Lose Lives by Capsizing of a Boat.

St. Paul, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dennis F. McQuinn, saloonkeeper; Ole Nordby, saloonkeeper, and John Saga, bell boy at the Aberdeen hotel, were drowned while fishing in Bass lake, about seven miles north of St. Paul, today. The men, with George Brooks, were in a boat, about 100 feet from shore. A strong wind was blowing. The wind lifted the hat from the head of one of the men, and he jumped up suddenly in an effort to catch it. This capsized the boat. McQuinn, Nordby and Saga went down at once, but Brooks was rescued by two men in another boat, a short distance away. One of the bodies has been recovered.

TRAIN WRECKED; NO ONE HURT.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 8.—The Los Angeles limited, on the Union Pacific, was derailed last night, east of Pine Bluffs. The engine, tourist car and diner left the tracks, as did one of the trucks of a Pullman, but no one was seriously hurt. A wrecking train from Cheyenne cleared the road in a few hours.

FAIR TRIAL IMPOSSIBLE

For Will J. Davis, in Cook County, Says His Attorney.

Arguments for a Change of Venue Begun in Chicago.

Chicago, June 8.—Arguments on the motion of a change of venue on the charge of manslaughter against Will J. Davis, former manager of the Iroquois theater began today before Judge Smith. It is probable that they will continue for several days. Counsel for Davis insisted that all classes of people here are still so prejudiced against Davis on account of the fire in the Iroquois theater, where so many lives were lost, that it is impossible for him to have a fair trial in Cook county. It was asserted by the attorneys that they had more than 10,000 affidavits by persons who admitted having prejudice against Davis.

CONGRESSMEN TO BE ABSENT

Bede and Buckman Unable to Attend the State Convention.

Washington, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representatives Bede and Buckman had intended to be present at the state convention which will be held in Duluth on June 13, but both have now decided that their presence is required in Washington, and they can better subserve the interests of their constituents by remaining at the capital. Mr. Bede has two matters of the utmost importance to Duluth to watch. The first is an appropriation for the enlargement of the public building at Duluth. He is also making an effort to secure some action looking toward the improvement of the harbor. These two matters he has been at work upon during the entire session and hopes, in the closing days of congress, to get results which will be satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr. Buckman has, as his pet piece of legislation, the matter of the drainage of swamp lands in the state. The measure is in fair shape before the committee, but he does not feel that he can leave at this time, even for a few days, as his absence might jeopardize the good work already done on the proposition.

OLIVER MINING CAMPANY TO MAKE BIG PURCHASE.

Menominee, Mich., June 8.—The Oliver Iron Mining company, it is announced today, will close a deal for all the holdings of the Cedar River Land company, embracing over 60,000 acres in Menominee, Dickinson, Delta and Marquette counties. Mills and other property are included. The consideration is $700,000.

IN NIGHT CLOTHES

Gov. Blanchard and Citizens Fought Fire in Capitol.

East Wing of Louisiana Statehouse Destroyed by Flames.

Baton Rouge, La., June 8.—The saving of the state capitol building from complete destruction by fire last night was accomplished in a spectacular manner with Governor Blanchard assisted by many Louisiana legislators dressed in their night clothes and by thousands of citizens supplementing the fire department. The fire started from defective wiring near the roof of the senate chamber destroying the capitol's eastern wing above the floor. The damage was between $50,000 and $100,000. Among the valuables in the ruined senate chamber where the roof fell in was the famous painting, "The Battle of New Orleans," said to have been valued at $40,000. Governor Blanchard directed the work of saving valuable papers. The legislature now being in session the senate will meet today in the Elks' theater.

The capitol is an imposing piece of architecture on the bank of the Mississippi. It was first built in 1847 and was destroyed by fire during the Civil war, after federal troops evacuated it. The present structure was erected in 1880.

MINERS STRIKE

In the Southwest Will Probably be Declared Off.

Kansas City, June 8.—When the subcommittee of the conference of Southwestern soft coal miners and operators met today to submit to the full conference, the agreement on their differences adopted last night, it was predicted that the strike in this part of the country would be declared off during the day.

The agreement renews the 1903 scale of prices for the period ending March 31, 1908. It affects approximately 32,000 miners in Missouri, Kansas, Indian Territory and Arkansas. The strike has been in effect since April 1.

THREE ROOSEVELTS GO TO OYSTER BAY.

Washington, June 8.—Miss Ethel and Master Quentin Roosevelt, and Mrs. Roosevelt left today for Oyster Bay where they will be during the summer at Sagamore hill, the president's country home. They were accompanied by two maids. They will be joined in a few days by their brothers. Mr. Roosevelt does not expect to go to Oyster Bay until towards the last of this month.

TRAINS IN COLLISION.

St. Louis, June 8.—A collision between passenger trains occurred on the Iron Mountain road, near Mengo, early today, resulting in the death of a fireman and injuries to two trainmen. No passengers were injured.

STATE CONSTABULARY SHOOT DOWN STRIKING MINERS AT NEW MINE

THE FIRM ATTITUDE

Of Russian Government Causes a Storm in Parliament.

Conservative Leaders Have Difficulty in Controling Radicals.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—The storm produced by overnight developments broke as soon as the lower house of parliament opened today, exposing the split between the radical and more moderate elements of the opposition, and proving that leaders of the Constitutional Democrats would be unable much longer to hold their extreme allies of the peasants-workmen group, who openly favor parliament shaking off all governmental control and proceeding independently. The firmer attitude of the government as foreshadowed by yesterday's decision to demand a month's time for consideration of the law providing for the abrogating of the death penalty, in accordance with the statutory privileges, was further emphasized by Premier Goremykin's reply to an interpellation on the subject of the Black Hundred publications, which was communicated in writing, which practically amounted to flat refusal to make any explanation, basing his refusal on the ground that the house was exceeding its rights, as under Article forty of the regulations of parliament, it is only empowered to "exact explanations upon matters submitted directly for its examination."

After reading this communication, President Mourmontzeff announced that he had officially written a letter to the premier, insisting upon a reply, maintaining that the publications directly affected the dignity of the house as a body, and upon motion of M. Petrunkevitch, the president's action was unanimously approved.

When the government's decision to insist on a month's delay for the death penalty bill, contained in the form of a communication of the minister of war, navy and the interior was communicated to the house, M. Nabakoff, in behalf of the Constitutional Democrats, offered a resolution accepting government's decision, but in the meantime demanding the suspension of all death sentences, contending that the government must accept the notice of the bill as a stay of execution. This was the signal for violent protests from the socialistic and peasants-workmen group.

The bill abolishing the death penalty should immediately be passed. Several times President Mourmontzeff was compelled to call M. Alladin to order, as the latter continued his denunciation of the government. During the course of his remarks, M. Alladin said: "As soon as the reign of liberty began, the government commenced to publish Black Hundred dispatches." Wild cheering from the left greeted this statement of the peasant party leader. M. Siplaguine of Sevastopol offered a way out of the embroglio by proposing a resolution, instructing the president to go to Peterhof, in the name of the house, and request the emperor to suspend all death sentences. After an exciting debate, the house rejected M. Siplaguine's proposition.

This concession is granted to the Mississippi River Power company, which proposes to develop the water power. This bill passed the house on June 5, and, having today passed the senate, goes to the president for approval.

Town of Ernest, Pa., the Scene of Bloody Conflict.

Member of a Band Fires a Pistol at the Officers.

Police Return Fire, Killing Two and Wounding Six.

Indiana, Pa., June 8.—The new mining town of Ernest, five miles from here, was the scene, early today, of a conflict between a detail of state constabulary and striking coal miners, in which two strikers were killed and six others wounded. Shortly after daylight a body of strikers, headed by a brass band, marched from Anita mines, in Jefferson county, to receive one of the mine officials, expected from Punxsutawney. On the way to the station the marchers encountered a detail of twelve members of the constabulary, and as they passed a member of the band fired his pistol at the troops. No one was struck, but the constabulary immediately retaliated with a volley from their carbines.

When the smoke cleared away eight strikers were lying on the ground, and the others had fled down the hill.

Two of these shot were killed, and the six others were seriously wounded. The latter were at once removed to a hospital, and the dead were carried to Ernest.

All is now quiet and no more trouble at this time is expected. The mines at Ernest are owned by the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Coal & Coke company. On April 1 a strike was begun, and the men have been out ever since. Three weeks ago the plant was started by non-union men, and a detail of the state constabulary has since been guarding the coal company's property.

At present about one-half of the regular force of 400 men are at work in the mine.

MINERS BADLY DISAPPOINTED

Over Failure of Committee to Agree on Wage Scale.

Dillonvale, Ohio, June 8.—The miners in this district are a disappointed lot since the adjournment of the Columbus joint convention without a agreement. With a great many of them in straightened circumstances and no funds in their treasury, it is doubtful if they will remain out much longer.

Preparations are being made by the Roby coal company at Ramsey and Robyville and by the M. A. Hanna coal company, at Dillonvale, to resume operations. Both claim to have pledges from a sufficient number of their striking employes to resume work.

Only a few men are working at Plum Run. The imported men do not stay more than a few days and this proves a great handicap to the mine officials. The strikers are peaceable.

COURTMARTIAL RECORDS

Of Trial of the Rhode Island's Officers Reaches Department.

Washington, June 8.—The records of the cases of Capt. Perry Garst, commanding the battleship Rhode Island, and of Lieut. Commander Edward T. Witherspoon, navigation officer of that vessel, have been received at the navy department. These two officers were tried by courtmartial, of which Rear Admiral Sigsbee was president, on the general charge of neglect of duty in connection with the recent grounding of the Rhode Island, near the mouth of the York river.

If the usual course is followed, the finding and sentence (if any) of the court in these cases will not be officially announced until after final action has been taken by the navy department.

OSTRANDER FORMERLY RESIDED IN ST. LOUIS.

St Louis, June 8.—It has been definitely learned that Herbert Ostrander, who killed Mrs. Anna McKee and committed suicide at Findlay, Ohio, Wednesday afternoon, resided in St. Louis until April 15 last. He was an expert electrician. His divorced wife and 8-year-old child live in California. Ostrander's father lives near Des Moines. Ostrander recently wrote to his cousin, the husband of Mrs. McKee. Mrs. McKee replied to the letter, saying her husband had died. Ostrander immediately went to Findlay to see the widow, and the tragedy followed a quarrel over property.

NO ACTION TAKEN

To Grant San Francisco a Rebate on Building Material.

Washington, June 8.—Representatives Gaines of Tennessee and Williams of Mississippi have called to the attention of the house the fact that the ways and means committee has failed to take any action on the bill to grant San Francisco a rebate on building material. Mr. Williams says that the failure was due to "stand pattism." Mr. Kahn of California has made reply, saying that the relief would not extend over a longer period than one year, and the people of San Francisco interested practically all agree that to extend the provisions of a drawback bill for a period of less than three years would prove of no advantage whatever. The people of California had ample assurances, he said, that the orders from San Francisco for structural steel would be given priority over all other business, and that prices of that commodity should not be advanced.

Chang has just accepted the invitation and has gone to Berlin to begin his task. His report will be made to the imperial Chinese commission which is now touring this country. Chang was given the degree of doctor of common law from the Yale law school three years ago, graduating with high honors.

WEST END

RESENTED INTRUSION

Husband Makes Unexpected Discovery and Acts Quickly.

Finds Strange Man Washing Wife's Hair and Starts Rough House.

There was something of a ruction on West Michigan street on Wednesday afternoon and a jealous husband seems to have been the primary cause, to say nothing of his provocation. This husband is a railroad man who is accustomed to take long runs. So far as developments show he has had no previous cause to be jealous, but Wednesday afternoon he returned unexpectedly and found another man paying attention to his wife. The attentions consisted of the other man helping the woman wash her hair.

It was rather a damp climax, but the angered husband, not knowing the other man, started to create a scene and there were lively actions for a time until the other man left. Then the angered husband began carrying on so and making such threats that his wife had to rush out and call for the police.

She was the picture of woe, for the husband had not permitted the strange man to help her dry her hair, and as she appeared on the street her hair shed water like an asphalt roadway and her eyes shed tears in profusion. When the police arrived, the husband had skipped. Whether or not the matrimonial tangle has been straightened out yet could not be learned.

NELSON IS POPULAR.

Leader of Bethany Choir Presented With Purse and Address.

A delightful surprise party was given on George Nelson, leader of the choir and organist of Bethany Lutheran church, by members of the choir last Tuesday evening, at the church. A pleasing program was rendered, and refreshments were served. Addresses were made by Rev. Carl Solomson and C. A. Carlson, and the choir gave two or three selections.

Mr. Nelson has been organist and leader only since the first of the year, but already he has attained to great popularity, and is well liked by members of the choir and congregation. Thus far he has been very successful in his work.

As a token of esteem and appreciation he was presented with a purse Tuesday evening.

HIS FINE BIRD DOG.

L. A. Gunderson Has One With Over-Strong Pointing Instincts.

John Vivian and L. A. Gunderson, both formerly of the West end, got into a fine mixup at their farms which are side by side about three miles up the Lester river, a few days ago. Mr. Vivian is quite a poultry fancier and recently bought some fine eggs out of which he hatched in his incubator a large brood of Plymouth Rock chickens. A few days ago Mr. Gunderson bought several fine bird dogs.

On Sunday last Mr. Gunderson and Mr. Vivian went away together on a short pleasure trip and on returning found that one of the Gunderson bird dogs had been keeping his bird instinct in practice by killing forty-four of the chickens. Mr. Gunderson is being joshed a good deal about the fine hunting proclivities of his dog.

VERY HEAVY FLOOD

Caused by Rain of Wednesday Causes Damage and Delay.

The heavy rain of Wednesday night did a considerable amount of damage in the vicinity of Twenty-ninth avenue west and Third street. The water poured down in torrents at that place and as the storm sewer is not sufficient for carrying off a heavy rain, cellars were flooded and some wooden crossings carried away.

The flood was so heavy that it stopped traffic there for about an hour on the street car line.

CANADIANS ARE FOOLED

Insane Alien Landed at Port Arthur Despite Protests.

Johnson Walked Through Angry Crowd Without Being Detected.

A lot of curiosity has been displayed around town within the last few days concerning the final disposition of the case of Oscar Johnson, the insane alien who was brought to Duluth from Fergus Falls for deportation to Canada, upon a warrant issued by the immigration department, and served by an inspector from the Minneapolis office under direction of Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean of Duluth.

Is the man wandering around the streets in his insane condition, or was he delivered in Canada? Mr. Dean and officials of the Booth company, on whose boat Johnson was to be returned, maintain a strict silence when confronted with this question, or else answer in an evasive manner. Capt. Flynn of the Booth company says he doesn't know where the alien is, which might easily be true, whether he is on this side of the boundary or the other, and Mr. Dean asserts that he is not allowed to give out news for publication. It is learned from what seems to be an authoritative source, however, that Johnson was actually deported on the steamship America, and that he left the boat at Port Arthur, undetected by the citizens' committees, chief of police and mayor of the town, who were awaiting him. When it became known that Johnson was to be taken back to Canada because of the fact that he was a public charge in this country within two years after landing, the authorities of Port Arthur announced that the man would not be allowed to land under any consideration.

Believing they meant what they said, Capt. Flynn notified Inspector Dean that he could not accept the alien, and Inspector Dean said in return that if Johnson was not accepted the Booth company would find itself in serious trouble with the United States government, and open to a fine of several hundred dollars. Capt. Flynn maintained his stand until the last minute, however, and when Johnson was brought here in the care of an inspector from the Minneapolis office; the steamship officials refused to allow him to step aboard the boat. Accordingly he was placed in jail, and the steamship officials, their attorneys and the local government authorities locked themselves in a room and fought the matter out, with the result that along in the afternoon Inspector Dean went to the jail, took Johnson in tow and, it is presumed, started for the Booth dock. Shortly afterward the America was seen leaving port.

Meantime there was great excitement in Port Arthur. The citizens seemed really afraid of the prospect of having a crazy man roaming the streets, which was not entirely unnatural, and indignation meetings, protesting against his being allowed to land, were held. There was great excitement for several days, and citizens' committees were appointed to assist the chief and police and mayor in preventing the landing of the unwelcome and unwilling visitor.

When the America reached Port Arthur, these citizens' committees, numbering twenty or twenty-five persons, the mayor, chief of police and other town authorities were lined up at the dock. They closely scrutinized every passenger who landed, and then seached the boat afterwards, it is said, to make sure that the insane alien was not concealed. While all this was going on Oscar Johnson, it is understood, calmly and quietly walked down the gang plank, passed through the crowd of angry citizens and made his way up town.

The Booth people deny the truth of this, and Inspector Dean will have nothing to say regarding it, but all the same it is a certainty that this is just what happened.

WILL BUILD IN SPOKANE

Marshall-Wells Hardware Company to Establish Branch There.

Big Duluth Wholesale House is Still Extending Operations.

The Marshall-Wells Hardware company of Duluth is to establish a branch wholesale house in Spokane, Wash., making the third branch of this large concern.

Formal announcements of the move have not come yet from the local offices of the company, but simultaneously with the presence of A. M. Marshall, the president, in the West, came reports from Spokane to the effect that the Duluth concern had already secured the lots in the Washington city, and was planning to erect a six-story wholesale building thereon.

The company has purchased ground, measuring 200 by 150 feet, on the corner of Pacific avenue and Browne street, Spokane, paying $45,000 for it. The sellers were Louis Schermerhorn, the Falls City Pickle works and F. L. Preston and W. B. Hale. The property is unimproved save for a foundation on the pickle works property. This will be torn out to give room for the construction of the huge structure which will be needed to carry on the Marshall-Wells company's growing business in this part of the country.

The Spokane papers are very jubilant over the acquisition of the new enterprise. The company already has a number of traveling men who make their headquarters at Spokane, and this town has already been established in the minds of some of the Western tradesmen as the location of one of the Marshall-Wells houses.

One Spokane paper saw in the establishment of the big hardware house there the lowering of freight tariffs by all the railroads. It complained bitterly that rates have been very high, but that if a change of rates on hardware is made there will be a sweeping change for the better along all lines, from the viewpoint of the shipper.

The Marshall-Wells Hardware company already has large branches at Winnipeg and Portland, Or. The general offices and headquarters of the concern will continue to be located in the huge main house on Lake avenue, Duluth.

SURGERY ON WILD ANIMALS

Ferocious Jaguar's Leg, Broken in Three Places, is Set.

New York, June 8.—Dr. H. Amling, Jr., assisted by half a dozen veterinary students, conducted a wild animal clinic at a local zoo.

The most serious operation, and one probably unequaled in animal history, was setting the bones in the leg of the jaguar Nellie. She is about to become a mother. She had jumped for a shelf, missed it, and fell to the ground.

Dr. Amling declared the bone broken in three places. Chloroform is the only anaesthetic that will render a carnivorous animal absolutely unconscious, but it was declared that to give it to Nellie would be dangerous, owing to her condition. It was suggested that she be roped securely and a local aqaesthetic applied. This was done, but the jaguar became frantic and the plan was about to be abandoned, when Canoes, her trainer, nervily entered. Nellie immediately yielded to petting by Canoes and gradually quieted down. Dr. Amling then went into the cage and performed the operation. the entire leg is now in plaster.

Another operation was the cutting of the corn on the fore foot of Caesar, a big camel. Caesar displayed a stoic patience.

The veterinarians also cut the tails of the two self-eating leopards down to the roots.

CLERGYMAN GETS YEAR

In Prison for Discarding Old Wife for New One.

Los Angeles, June 8.—Rev. James R. Wylie, self-confessed bigamist, has been sentenced by Judge Smith to pay a fine of $5 and to be imprisoned at Folsom penitentiary for one year. The district attorney's office represented that the crime was not an aggravated case, and dropped prosecution against the clergyman's second wife, a Mrs. Green. Wylie was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church at New York, where he married his first wife, eighteen years ago.

Last year the Wylies moved to a mining camp near Phoenix, Ariz., and were visited by Mrs. Fannie M. Green of New York. The clergyman sent his wife and adopted child to relatives at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and, during their absence, married the Green woman at Los Angeles, last August. The first wife learned of the second marriage and swore to a complaint charging the contracting parties with bigamy. The clergyman and his second wife were en route to Ensenada, when intercepted by the police.

WILL KEEP HIS PASSES

But to Do So Mayor of Sac City Will Resign.

Sac City, Iowa, June 8.—Mayor Phil Schaller expects to resign from his office before July 4, to have his annual railroad pass.

The new Iowa anti-pass law, going into effect July 1, provides a fine and imprisonment for any municipality officer who accepts a pass from a railroad or other corporation. For many years Mr. Schaller has been right of way agent for the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and of course has all that time has had transportation for himself and wife. He cannot devise any means by which he can continue to have his passes and also retain the office of mayor. Consequently he expects to resign.

PANTON & WHITE COMPANY — THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE — WHERE QUALITY IS PARAMOUNT

BLIND SHOPPING IS SAFE HERE!

PANTON & WHITE COMPANY — THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE — WHERE QUALITY IS PARAMOUNT

Hundreds of people here in Duluth go along from year to year giving little care to the selection of household supplies or personal necessities, when they ought to be careful. Careful about quality, price,—every representation made of the goods they buy. But that care can be changed to almost nothing by letting us "shoulder the burden,"—OUR care in buying insures your safety in buying. We take no pleasure in constant reference to our ability to "undersell competitors," but its truth is a weighty argument. The public is interested to know where it can get "the best for the least," and where we know positively that by our greater purchasing and selling powers, we can save money for our patrons, its our duty to say so.

Economical Shoes for the Children's Outing.

Did you ever consider the cost of a season's supply of rubber sole tennis shoes—either the 50c kind or the best the market affords? Do you know why the bill is so high? It is because rubber tennis shoes are thrown away as soon as any part of them wears out.

READY TO BE FRESHMEN

Eighth Grade Pupils of West End Schools Hold Exercises.

Give Interesting Graduation Program at the High School.

Last evening the High School Assembly hall was filled to overflowing with the fond parents, relatives and friends of the 308 students of the grammar schools in the Western part of the city, who held their graduating exercises at that time.

With the 308 graduates from the schools in the eastern division, this makes a total of over 600, by far the largest class that has ever been graduated from the Duluth schools, and the freshman class at central high school next year bids fair to break all records as to numbers, notwithstanding the fact that many of the graduates will attend the West Duluth high school.

The Irving was numerically the strongest of the western division, the eighth and ninth grades together making a total of 61. The Bryant was second with 53, there were 25 each from the Fairmount, the Adams and the Madison, and 48 from the Lincoln. Nine graduated from the Lowell, eight from the Oneota, six from the Stowe, and the Smithville and Fond du Lac schools brought up the rear, the first having two graduates and the latter one.

The invocation was given by Rev. J. L. Murphy, pastor of St. John's English Lutheran church. The first number on the program was Gounod's chorus, "Praise Ye the Father," by the class. Thomas E. Quinn represented the Oneota school with a well-delivered recitation, entitled "Riding the Broncho."

The graduates from the Emerson went through a very intricate wand drill without a mistake and were warmly applauded. One movement, in which the class formed in a large circle, and while marching around the stage each member tossed the wand over his head to be deftly caught by the one behind him, was highly appreciated.

A feature of the program was the Fairmount school's offering, a dialogue entitled, "A Train to Mauro," by Floretta Bujold and Archie Smith. Miss Bujold showed marked ability as a sympathetic and very talkative country woman, and Archie Smith was a very realistic short-tempered stationmaster, while Luther Kutkenbecker, a member of one of the lower classes of the Fairmount, brought roars of laughter from the audience by his frequent and evident heartfelt cries for gingerbread.

The next numbers were songs by the class, "The Sandman," by Brahms, and Lacome's "The Dancers." The Madison school, the girls dressed all in white, and the boys wearing white shirtwaists, gave a pretty and difficult club drill.

Arnold Berg showed real oratorical ability in his declamation, "Spartacus' Address to the Gladiators,' and the number was very pleasing. One of the most effective drills of the evening was an illuminated reigen, by the girls of the Bryant school. Each girl bore an arch on top of which was placed a red light, and when all the lights were turned off, the effect of the rapidly moving spots of red was brilliant in the extreme. Minnie Gottschald represented the Adams school contingent with a recitation, "Prayer and Potatoes," to which she did full justice.

In their club swinging and march, the sixty-one boys and girls of the Eighth and Ninth grades of the Irving school were attired in white sailor suits with red sashes and ties, and the appearance of the first contingent of girls of the stage brought out a storm of applause. When the girls had finished swinging, the lights were turned off and the boys entered, each one having his Indian club tipped with a wad of burning cotton —saturated with alcohol. The wonderful effects obtainable by twenty-four carefully trained boys, each equipped in this way, is almost unlimited and the performance was excellent.

Clarence Fleischer carried off the honors in the way of humorous recitations, by his delivery of "Sonny's Diplomy," a selection from Ruth McEnery Stuart's popular book, "Sonny."

The most elaborate number was a series of "plastic groupings" representing classical subjects, by the young people of the Lowell school, and in spite of the fact that the stage curtain refused to operate at critical moments, the effects were very pleasing. The young actors were dressed all in white, with their skins powdered to a marble whiteness, and when the lights were turned off and a brilliant spot light centered upon the group it was hard to realize that they were not the cold stone which they resembled. The groupings and those who took part in them were as follows:

Barbara Frecor of the ninth grade of the Irving gave a pleasing rendition of Godard's cradle song from "Jocelyn," on the violin, and the program closed with a song by the class, "Love's Sweet Song," by Molloy.

GOTHAM HEIRESS

Working for Living While Awaiting Accounting From Executors.

New York, June 8.—Heir to half her father's estate, Adeline M. Mathews, only daughter of A. P. Sturtevant, who died nearly fifteen years ago, leaving property valued at $3,000,000, is today employed in a dyeing and cleaning agency at a weekly salary of $7.

Bereft of friends, who sought her society when she was in receipt of a handsome income from her father, Miss Mathews is waiting for a long-delayed accounting from the executors of the estate whereby she hopes to receive a small part of what her father intended she should have as indicated by his will.

Answers in Land Suits.

Answers have been filed in the land contest suits of James Y. Dunphy against the Northern Pacific Railway company, and the separate suits of Hans Olson and Edward H. Holdren against John A. Humbird and Frederick Weyerhaeuser. These answers have been filed in the United States court and are almost wholly a general denial of the allegations in the complaints in the cases.

MADE JOUETT MAD.

Kansas City Journal: The recent trouble at the Naval academy at Annapolis recalled to older officers the story about Admiral Jouett, who read one day in his newspaper that the secretary of the navy had expelled some midshipmen from the academy for fighting. Jouett toddled over to the navy department and called on the secretary. What's this I hear about expelling some of the boys for fighting?" he asked. "It is true," the secretary replied. "I expelled two." "What!" roared Jouett. "What is a naval officer for if it isn't to fight? We are not raising a lot of ministers over there at Annapolis. Are you going to keep those middies playing checkers all the time?".

THE GLIB YOUNG MAN.

Picked Wrong Old Lady to Sell a Barometer To.

New York Sun: "On one of my trips through the hemlock belt," said John Gilbert, the traveling groceryman, "I picked up a glib young chap who was passing through that interesting rural district afoot, with an assorted stock of side lines that he insisted he would have no difficulty in dickering off to the unsophisticated dwellers, either for cash or barter, such entire confidence did he have in the persuasiveness of his tongue and the slickness of his manner.

"He assured me of this in a way that I wasn't brought up to regard as modest as I was giving him a lift on his way toward Geeville, and he was so anxious to show me an example of his irresistible style of doing business with the hemlock belters that I stopped at a comfortable looking little farmhouse near the roadside, where the benevolence and sympathy that beamed from the gold rimmed specs of the old lady who stood in the door led the glib and confident young man to remark to me as he got out of the wagon that if he didn't have a mortgage on that place before he got through he had forgotten his business.

"'La!' exclaimed the old lady, as the confident side line chap approached the house and saluted her. 'Sellin' things?'

"The glib merchant said he was, and she told him to sit down, which he did, in the only chair there was on the little porch.

"'I see you are a woman of business,' he began at once, 'and so there is no use of wasting time. I'll get right at it. Now, here's barometers'—and he produced one from his stock, with a sly wink over his shoulder at me. 'There ain't anything more useful than bar—'

"'Them's the things that tells you when the weather's goin' to change, ain't they?' asked the benevolent-looking old lady, innocently.

"'Yes, ma'am,' replied the side line man. 'There ain't anything that'll tell the—'.

"'Oh, yes there is!' the old lady cut in on him. 'I've got a bunion. See it h'stin' itself there on the right-hand corner o' that foot?

"'Why, say! When that bunion begins to make weather I kin size up the kind it's goin' to be three weeks ahead, an' kin gener'ly tell when it's goin' to set in, down to the littlest part of a minute!

"'That bunion took to workin' toler'ble early this season, an' I sent word up the creek fer folks to git fer high ground, fer on March 9, at jest 2:30 p. m. in the afternoon, the ice would break and come down a-hummin' and clean things from A to Izzard; but it didn't do it, not till 2:31 p. m.

"'I see to wunst that there was somethin' the matter with that bunion, an' so I investigated. And what do you think? Part o' that bunion had got a little frosted, somehow, and it sort o' stagnated it so it couldn't work exac'ly up to its full tilt, and it had fell shy a minute on tellin' the time o' the comin' o' that ice down the creek.

"'Sensitive? That bunion? La, me!

"'And tell the changes? Why, say! That bun—but there's lots o' folks 'round here that hain't got no bunion in the family, an' I git tired o' their runnin' here a-consultin' mine every time they want to plant 'taters, or kill a hog, or pole beans, or go to town, an' them folks ought to have barometers.

"'I'll jest do you a good turn, young man, seein' as you're strugglin' to benefit th' district! I'll hang that b'rometer o' your'n up here, an' when they come here after weather they'll see it, an' how it works, an' they'll pine fer one. So all you'll have to do, when you come round this way ag'in, is to fetch along a big stock of b'rometers, an' you'll ketch a trade that'll skeer you.

"'Don't thank me! I'd ruther do it than not. I like to lift people along.'

"And the benevolent and sympathetic old lady took the barometer and hung it on a nail against the side of the house:

"'Now,' said she, turning to the amazed and wilting side line distributor, 'I bet you got cough medicine!'

"'That's what I have,' said the glib young man, rousing again to duty. 'Here you are! Dr. Strainem's Elixir of Egyptian Tar! Nothing ever like it for knocking a cough or cold endways! I'll—'

"'Fudge and fiddlesticks!' exclaimed the benevolent old lady. 'Why don't you cure that cold o' yourn', then?

"'We don't never have no coughs nor no colds 'round here! Why? 'Cause o' my mixtuh' o' boneset, allycampane and skung cabbage! That's why!

"'Here you be, young man! See it?' and she produced a bottle done up in a red wrapper.

"'Here you be!' said she. 'Fifty cents a bottle, it is, but I kin make it three bottles fer a dollar to you!

"'Three, hey? All right! I make it myself an' warrant it. There! They'll fit right in there where you took the b'rometer out of. Dollar. Thank you! An' don't fergit when you come agin to —'

"But the glib young man of the side lines grabbed his budget and made tracks down the road, and as the benevolent old lady gazed after him I heard her say:

"'Shucks! Now, I'll jest bet 't that feller'll jest be keerless enough not to come 'round here agin with them 'brometers.'

"Then she beamed on the one she had hung on the nail, and I drove on my way musing on the mistakes of men, and the sweet, childlike simplicity and ingenuousness of these hemlock belt folk."

BUD KEIFER, OF OHIO.

Kansas City Journal: Among the crowds of visitors in Washington the other day was a young Ohioan named Bud Keifer. Two of the sights he wanted to see were Senators Foraker and Dick, but one of these gentlemen was absent and the other too busy. The doorkeeper informed Bud that he would call out Senator Clark's secretary, George Gilliland, an Ohio man. Bud was delighted, he and Mr. Gilliland having been schoolmates. As they stood chatting over old times Bud was introduced to one or two senators who passed by. Then Vice President Fairbanks came along and Mr. Gilliland said: "Mr. Vice President, let me introduce Bud Keifer of Ohio." The vice president stuck out his hand. Bud grasped it briskly, and said: "Glad to meet you, sir. What's the name, please?"

JACOBSON IN THE LEAD

But No Great Popular Clamor for Any One Man.

Result Will be Decided by the Unpledged Delegates.

Minneapolis, June 8.—The Journal says: Only one things stands out as a certainty in the returns from Republican county conventions. The Republican nominee for governor will be chosen at Duluth by uninstructed and unpledged delegates. No great popular clamor for any one man was developed.

Jacobson leads in the figures, as everyone expected. He surprised the politicians in some quarters and failed to make good the claims in other places. The Journal's returns by counties gives him a positive strength of a little over 330, which will be his first and last. It is expected. It will be trading stock. He will probably secure 350 on the first ballot, by scattering votes from counties reported as "unpledged," and given in the Journal's table as "unattached." Some additional strength is promised him on the second ballot, which may run his vote up to 400. This is without counting votes secured by trading. It takes 545 to nominate, and Jacobson is a long way from that figure. The organization will be against him, and the fight for him will be an uphill one. The field is against him. His friends are expressing the greatest confidence today and say that the opposition cannot unite. When it tries to deliver delegates to any one man, Jacobson will draw from all the others, they say, and will be nominated.

A. L. Cole made a good showing, and will have votes from several counties not credited to him in the table. C. H. Warner, who is managing the campaign of the Walker man, claims half of Becker, thirteen out of the seventeen from Blue Earth, ten in Dakota, four out of Fillmore, four in Isanti, the entire delegation from Todd and three from Wabasha. He says Cole will have 245 or better on the first ballot, with many second choice votes. Cole defeated Jacobson in Crow Wing and Otter Tail but both counties are for Jacobson as second choice. Cole seems to have gotten the best of it in Todd, and unexpectedly broke into Isanti. Jacobson won hollow victories in Chisago, Anoka, Kanabec, Sherburne and Benton, all of which were contested, and broke into the Ninth by taking Clay, Norman and half of Wilkin.

Stephens has only six counties solid in the Ninth district. He lost Beltrami to Cole and has not displayed any strength in other districts.

Block has a fair share of his own district, the Third, and secured Martin and part of Jackson in the Second. His friends claim about 75 votes out of Hennepin, and with these he will run a fairly close race with Cole for second place.

Lord has all the best of it in the First district over Dimert, and the latter may not be presented to the convention, though he is held in reserve for a compromise.

Somerville has been badly treated in the Second district, where three other candidates have cut in strong, and the western counties have not pledged themselves on governor, standing for Dimehart for state treasurer.

Several large delegations are tied up to candidates for other places on the ticket, and not to be counted as yet for any governorship candidate. Ramsey is for Lemon for clerk of the supreme court, and Wright for Pidgeon. Redwood is for Schmahl for secretary of state, Rice for Capt. Hunter and Kittson for E. A. Nelson. Koerner has the Meeker delegation to help his candidacy for treasurer, and Rinehart has Murray, Nobles and Pipestone.

The situation is full of interesting possibilities.

The following table is based on reports from Journal correspondents in each county, giving the preference of the delegates where known, and leaving the unknown in the column with delegations instructed for minor places on the ticket. The delegates for Somerville, Stephens and Dimert are not in the table:

TO REMOVE GOREMYKIN

Emperor Nicholas Said to Have Decided on That Course.

Extremely Dissatisfied With the Premier's Sorry Failure.

St. Petersburg, June 8.—According to reliable reports from Peterhof, Emperor Nicholas has about decided to retire Premier Goremykin. From the first it was apparent to outsiders that M. Goremykin did not possess the force, capacity or skill necessary to steer the ship of state in the present crisis and and the emperor who is extremely dissatisfied with the premier's sorry failure to make any headway toward a rapproachment with the lower house of parliament, is now ready to sacrifice him. The emperor, however, seems to be torn by conflicting counsels. A few of his advisers are urging him to make frank surrender and accede to parliament's demand for a ministry from the opposition majority. These influences are hardly likely to prevail against the party headed by Gen. Trepoff, which believes that no further concessions should be made. The cabinet itself under the leadership of M Kovosoff, the minister of finance, and M Stichninsky, minister of agriculture, the rivals of M Goremykin, is in open rebellion and with the support they are receiving from the court the rebels are confident of being able to unhorse M Goremykin. Should M Stichnisky succeed to the premiership, M Belgrade, formerly chief of Gen. Trepoff's chancellery of Moscow, will it is understood be the camarillas candidate for minister of the interior, M Gurko stepping into M Stichninsky's shoes.

The Reich regards the government's decision to shield itself in the matter of the death penalty bill behind the provision of the fundamental law, requiring thirty days notice to the cabinet before the consideration of a bill, as being a sign that bad influences are gaining the upper hand at Peterhof, but the paper commends the wisdom of the Constitutional Democrats in refraining from making an issue of the question, in the meantime insisting on the suspension of excutions.

Dispatches from the interior continue glomy and show that the gradual extension of the agrarian disorders and partial strikes now affect 126 provinces. The latest disturbances reported are at Kieff and Tver. Numerous collisions between peasants and rural guards have taken place but nothing in the nature of mass movements has yet occurred.

A sensation has been caused by the disclosures of M Vladimiroff, a correspondent of the Twentieth century, formerly the Russ, who investigated the case of Mlle Spiridonovo and who is now in the Baltic provinces investigating the repressions there. He declares that six out of the eight men executed at Riga were innocent and says they were forced to confess by tortures which put the Spanish inquisition to shame.

Although the Social Revolutionists have proclaimed a temporary cessation of the terrorist campaign, there is little abatement in the murders of police officials in the interior. Mounted gendarmes yesterday charged a crowd of workmen at the government cartridge factory at Vassili-Ostrov, who emerged from a meeting singing "Marseillaise." The gendarmes used their whips and sabres injuring many and wounding two men seriously.

THE FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT

At Cass Lake Promises to be Very Successful Event.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 8.—Arrangements for the firemen's tournament are now completed, and it may be looked forward to as an enjoyable and successful event. President Leeman and Secretary Rutledge have been unceasingly working to make the coming meet the most successful one ever held under the auspices of the association.

June 20 will be the opening day, and although none of the firemens races will take place on this day, there will be plenty of amusement, including boat races, speeches by prominent men, a ball game between two well known teams and various other attractions. In the evening of this date the annual meeting of the executive committee of the association will take place. Thursday, June 21, will be Bemidji day, and the Bemidjites, headed by Mayor Carter, contemplate making this day a gala one. The annual firemen's parade will be the opening event of the day. Following this, Mayor Gilbert of Cass Lake will deliver an address, which will be followed by an address by Mayor Carter of Bemidji. In the afternoon the championship hose race will be run and the winners of this race will carry with them the championship banner now held by Park Rapids. Friday, June 22, has been designated as Deer River and Grand Rapids day. A special excursion train will likely be run from these towns on that day. Saturday, will be known as Mesaba Range day.

Besides the regular races, a special program has been prepared, including sports of all kinds. It is the intention of the committees in charge to make the meet one round of pleasure. The Commercial club, village council and, in fact, every citizen in Cass Lake, from the youths to the gray-haired men, have joined in and are doing their utmost to boost for the tournament. Every cent of money necessary to defray the expenses of the tournament has been subscribed. The railroads have all offered a fare of one and a third for the round trip to Cass Lake.

The following teams have been registered: Cass Lake, Park Rapids, Bemidji, Eveleth, Deer River, Ely, Virginia and Sparta.

CENSUS OF BEMIDJI

To be Taken Under the Direction of Committee of Citizens.

Bemidji, Minn., June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—Bemidji will have justice done her relative to the idea prevailing abroad as to her population, as arrangements have been made for an enumeration of the residents of the city in a manner that will be accurate. Judge M. A. Spooner, M. E. Thurston, Sheriff Thomas Bailey and Mayor A. A. Carter are a committee who will have charge of the taking of the census. It is the intention of the committee to place four enumerators in the field, and the work will probably be finished in a week or ten days.

The White Earth Indian baseball team will play in Bemidji with the local team next Sunday. It was thought that the new baseball park would be in readiness for this game, but some of the arrangements of the place are not yet complete. However, the park will be in readiness for use one week from Sunday. Summers, the shortstop who has been playing with the Northern league team of Duluth, writes that he will return to Bemidji on the 15th inst.

WOMAN SAYS THAT THEY TRIED TO MURDER HER.

Brainerd, Minn., June 8.—Henry Provost is in jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Mrs. Spies of Sand Lake, who secured the warrant for his arrest, says that he deliberately attempted to murder her.

According to her story, two teams loaded with men and women on the way to Butte, Mont., drove into the Spies enclosure and wanted to drive through. Mrs. Spies refused permission, and one of the men suggested cutting down the fence. Mrs. Spies remonstrated and, she alleges, a woman in one of the wagons handed Provost a revolver and bade him "do a good job."

Mrs. Spies says Provost fired at her twice, the bullets passing through her clothing but doing her no injury. The party then drove on.

Mrs. Spies next day came to Brainerd and swore out the warant, and Sheriff Erickson pursued the party and brought Provost back. He pleaded not guilty at his preliminary hearing and will have another hearing today.

His Spree Was Expensive.

John Briggs, a railroad employe residing at Virginia, entered a plea of guilty to the charge of unlawfully entering a building, before Judge Dibell yesterday, and was fined $250. He paid the fine and was released. Briggs was indicted for burglary in the third degree, the information being that he broke into a saloon at Virginia. He claimed that he was drunk when he went into the building and did not know what he was doing. On the showing made by Briggs the county attorney consented to his pleading guilty of a lesser charge. Briggs has been in the county jail since last April.

New Orleans, La., June 8.—T. Spence Smith of Rapides, has introduced into the state legislature a bill to regulate marriage contracts and prevent race suicide. The bill applies only to whites and provides:

Before making such attempt he shall inform the parents or guardian of the woman he proposes to court of his intention to do so.

SOCIETY GROWING

Annual Meeting of Modern Samaritans Finds Order Flourishing.

Officers of the Imperial Council Are Re-elected.

The ninth annual meeting of the Modern Samaritans came to a close yesterday afternoon after a three days' session. The reports of the Imperial officers showed that the beneficiary society, which is of local origin, has made splendid progress. From its organization in 1897, the membership of the society has increased to 7,650, of whom 2,585 members were added during the past year. The average age of the total membership is 34 years and the average of the members added during the past year is 29½ years. The benefit certificates issued last year totalled $2,449,000, and the amount paid out in death claims for the year ending Dec. 31, 1905 was $47,900.

The report of the officers of the Imperial council of the Modern Samaritans showed that the society has seventy subordinate councils in flourishing condition in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and North Dakota, most of them being in this state.

George H. Crosby, the imperial good samaritan, recommended in his annual report that the organization work be confined at present to the states where the order is now operating, for the reason that the four states are recognized as the most healthful part of the country and that it is sufficiently prosperous and growing to furnish an ample membership. Mr. Crosby also recommended the formation of grand councils, or other measures of representation, from all states where the organization is now in operation. During the nine years of its existence the Modern Samaritans have paid out $180,000 in death claims.

The report of O. F. Collier, imperial treasurer, gave an itemized statement of the receipts and expenditures and showed a balance on hand, Dec. 1, 1905, of $66,331.50.

Dr. W. H. Salter, imperial director, reported forty-seven deaths during last year from various causes. He said the death rate of the order for the year was 6.14 for every 1,000 members. Dr. Salter recommended that the constitution be amended so that no death claims will be paid where the cause of death is shown to be suicide.

Following are the officers' reports, the committee on the state of the order submitted a supplementary report declaring the affairs of the organization to be in a flourishing condition.

The constitution of the Modern Samaritans was so amended that any state, territory or province in which the society is operating, having not less than 500 beneficiary members, shall be entitled to one representative to the Imperial council, and that ninety days before the annual meeting the Imperial Good Samaritans shall call a convention of the delegates from the several subordinate councils within the state for the purpose of electing the said representative. In states where there are over 3,000 members, the Imperial Good Samaritans is authorized to institute a Grand Council from which delegates to the Imperial council shall be elected.

The constitution has been amended so that any who takes his or her own life, except by accident, within three years after joining the order, shall forfeit all claim to a benefit certificate.

All of the officers of the Imperial council were re-elected. These are: George H. Crosby, imperial good samaritan; John Christie, vice imperial good samaritan; C. E. Lovett, past imperial good samaritan; W. A. Hicken, imperial scribe; O. F. Collier, imperial treasurer; Dr. W. H. Salter, imperial medical director; A. E. McManus, imperial counsellor; H. R. Golton, imperial organizer; John Christie and H. J. Achenbach, imperial auditors.

FIRST BALL GAME

Of Baseball of the Season in Eveleth's New Park.

Virginia, Minn., June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The opening game of baseball of the season in Eveleth's new athletic park will be played next Sunday afternoon between the Virginia and Eveleth nines. A number of new players have been signed by Eveleth and an interesting game is looked for.

It is reported here that Catcher Wegman, who did good work for the Hibbing ball team last season, is coming to Virginia to locate, and it is proposed to make him field manager of the local team. Manager Winchester has a plan to purchase a canvas fence to stretch around the ball park when games are played, so that some revenue can be derived from the crowds that turn out to visit the games. The school board is opposed to having the ground fenced with lumber and so the canvas fence may be introduced.

REACHES NO AGREEMENT

One Man Hangs Up Boyle Jury Twenty-Four Hours.

The jury in the personal injury case of Martin Boyle against the Virginia Lumber company could reach no agreement after deliberating twenty-four hours and was yesterday afternoon discharged by Judge Cant. It is rumored that the vote throughout the entire twenty-four hours' session stood practically eleven to one.

Boyle was employed by the lumber company to haul slabs away from the mill and was being instructed in his duties by another employe. While the wagon was passing under a slab chute it struck the automatic lever and the chute opened allowing a load of slabs to bury Boyle in the box. He had several ribs broken and sustained other injuries for which he demanded $20,000 damages. Boyle claimed that the exhaust steam prevented him from seeing the lever on the chute. The company claimed that it took all ordinary caution to protect its employes and that Boyle's accident was due to his own carelessness.

The trial lasted about a week. Sullivan & Grant and John Jenswold, Jr., appearing for Boyle and C. S. Wilson and Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer for the Virginia Lumber compauy.

The damage case of Still & Howe, after a trial lasting six or seven days, was submitted to the jury late this afternoon. Only one witness in rebuttal testified this afternoon.

During the morning session Douglas C. Cameron of Winnipeg, president and general manager of the Rat Portage Lumber company, was a witness in behalf of the company and also P. A. Smith. Mr Cameron is considered one of the leading lumbermen on the other side of the international boundary line.

The present suit involves a claim of between $14,000 and $20,000 for stumpage which Stitt & Howe allege belonged to them, and which the Rat Portage Lumber company cut while the title was under litigation. Stitt & Howe claim the lumber company was permitted to go ahead with logging operations with the understanding that it pay the stumpage and interest if the former concern won out in the title contest. The Rat Portage Lumber company claimed that it acquired the timber under a former contract made with Stitt & Howe before and litigation was started.

Old Soldiers Will Bury Donaldson.

Charles E. Donaldson, the Civil war veteran who died at St. Mary's hospital early this morning, will be given a military funeral tomorrow under the auspices of Willis A. Gorman Post G. A. R., and will be buried at Soldiers' Rest in Forest Hill cemetery. Capt. Asa Dally, who probably knew as much about the old fisherman as anybody else in Duluth, says that Donaldson once remarked that he had served in the First Battery of New York Sharpshooters and afterward on the United States gunboats Delight and Shenandoah. At the time of his death Donaldson was 62 years of age. He was born at Rochester, N. Y., and in his earlier life followed the trade of a carpenter.

Mahara's Minstrel Carnival will open an engagement of two nights and a matinee Sunday, at the Metropolitan Saturday night.

IS CARRIED AT A LOSS

The Non-Participating Business of Union Central Company.

Milwaukee, June 8.—The non-participating business of the Union Central Life Insurance company was discussed before the legislative investigating committee today. The profits on this non-participating basis belongs to the company. This portion of the business, which amounts to $49,000,000, had, the officers of the company claim, been carried on at a temporary loss. In fact they have, the actuaries claim, had a loss on this business since 1893 of $95,000.

Secretary Marshall said he thought the non-participating business was now on a profitable basis, and said that in two years he thought this business would have earned enough in profits to make good the deficit. Asked how policyholders, who had their policies mature during the last ten years, could get back their losses because this non-participating business had been carried at a loss, Mr. Marshall admitted no restitution could be made to such policyholders.

FORTUNE TELLER MUST DIG UP

Is Fined and Ordered to Refund Money to Victim.

On condition that he would return to a woman, claimed to have been victimized by him, the sum of $50, J. Francis Girard, the fortune teller, was this morning released with a $50 fine by Judge Windom.

Girard was arrested on the charge of telling fortunes without a license. On his arrest he denied having told any fortunes lately. "So help me Heaven, I have not told any fortunes lately," he said to the police.

The officers claim that he has been working on the superstitions of one of his victims, and has induced her to give up a position paying her $2 a day, and to give him various sums of money aggregating nearly $80, to reveal her future and to teach her clairvoyancy.

When arraigned in court yesterday he entered a plea of not guilty, but this morning he changed it to guilty. Judge Windom said he would let him off with a $50 fine on condition that he paid over to the police $50 to be given back to the woman in question.

AN ADDED SORROW.

Hiram Davis, Homeless After Great Fire, Loses His Son.

Word was received this morning of the death of Wave G. Davis, the son of Hiram Davis of San Francisco.

Mr. Davis is a brother of J. H. Davis, J. J. Davis and Dr. G. W. Davis of this city. He sustained the loss of his home and all his possessions in the big fire, and the death of his son comes as an added sorrow.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Loretto Business Man Struck by Lightning and Badly Hurt.

Norway—Abner Hosking, a business man of Loretto, was struck by lightning Thursday afternoon and was unconscious for an hour. He was at the telephone when injured. It is expected he will recover.

Calumet—Mike Kasun, charged with the murder of Martin Simons was acquitted by a jury in the circuit court. The shooting occurred April 25. Simons made a mistake and entered Kasun's home under the impression that it was his own house. He was fatally shot by Kasun who immediately gave himself up to the authorities.

Munising—Back pension money amounting to $2,050 has been secured from the government by Mrs. Owen Riley, Munising, for her five children, sons and daughters by her first husband, the late Isaac Meade, a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars. The children each drew a pension of $2 a month up to the time of the widow's marriage to her present husband, when the payments ceased. This pension has now been restored.

Ishpeming—The Sons of St. George lodges of the Iron and Copper countries of Northern Michigan have taken up the question of bringing to the peninsula this summer a famous English band which has the odd title of "Besses o' th' Barn." The organization intends to make a tour of Canada this year, and the English people of Upper Michigan want to hear it. The band is peculiar, to Americans, at least, in that it is composed entirely of brass instruments, no reeds being used.

Rev. Mr. Rutledge, Upper Peninsula superintendent of the Anti-saloon league, has discovered that of the twenty-six saloonkeepers at Crystal Falls, county seat of Iron county, only four of them have bonds that fulfill the requirements of the state law. As far as the financial wealth of the sureties is concerned, many of the bonds are practically worthless. Notice has been served on a number of the bondsmen that they must withdraw from serving in that capacity or criminal proceedings will be instituted against them.

ORDINANCE MAY BE INVALID

Attorney Attacks By-Law Against Peddling as Unconstitutional.

The validity of the city ordinance against peddlers and hawkers was attacked by Attorney H. J. McClearn of the firm of Reynolds & McClearn, in defending Charles Wagner, who is accused of peddling potatoes without a license.

The attorney claimed that the ordinance was unconstitutional, on the ground that it granted certain persons privileges which were denied to others. Farmers are allowed to peddle their own produce, but peddlers are forbidden to buy of the farmers and resell the same produce. The attorney claimed that this was in direct violation of the constitution, and quoted a decision of the state supreme court, which declared invalid a state law, worded in much the same manner.

Judge Windom granted the assistant city attorney, T. J. McKeon, twenty-four hours to prepare an answer to the argument, and the case was set over until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

SHOCKED BY TELEPHONE

H. J. Walt Injured While Attempting to Answer a Call.

H. J. Walt, local manager for Barrett & Zimmerman, is nursing a badly damaged little finger and remembrances of an electric shock that makes him shy every time he sees a telephone. His trouble dates back to Monday at midnight, when he attempted to answer a telephone call in his residence, at 229 East Fourth street.

Mr. Walt was in the bed when the telephone bell rang and he made his way in his bare feet to the instrument, which is a wall affair. He touched the transmitter with his hand, to adjust it before taking down the receiver, and it gave him a shock that, he says, hurled him half way across the room.

When he came to his senses, he was surrounded by other members of his family. The telephone kept on ringing but no one answered it. When Mr. Walt took an inventory, he discoverd a ugly rip in his little finger, and later, when he again took to his bed, he complained that his feet pained him. The shock had evidently passed through his body.

He was stunned by the shock and did not feel quite himself, he declares, until long after the accident. He was at a loss to account for the shock, but thinks it probable that the telephone wires became crossed with others.

All night long, the telephone kept on ringing but everyone in the Walt household kept religiously away from the instrument. A policeman was called and he notified the telephone company of the trouble, from a neighboring house. The ringing did not stop, however, until about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Mr. Walt's feet seem to have recovered from the shock, but the ugly burn on his finger continues to bother him and the digit probably will be out of commission for some little time.

ENDORSEMENT OF E. A. NELSON

Hallock, Minn., June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The delegates to the Kittson county convention met at the county courthouse on the prescribed time. The name of Knute Nelson for re-election to the United States senate was heartily endorsed.

It was altogether a large and lively convention for this county. E. A. Nelson was endorsed in the following manner:

"That in recognition of strenuous party service, and our faith in the integrity and ability of our citizen, E. A. Nelson, who is a candidate for the nomination for secretary of state, E. instruct our delegates to the state convention at Duluth, to employ all honorable means towards securing his nomination, even to the extent of voting on other candidates entirely in his interests as he may direct."

The annual commence exercises of the Hallock high school were inaugurated Sunday evening with the baccalaureate sermon delivered by Rev. Mr. Hall, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The next event of commencement week was the class play "Mr. Bob." Commencement exercises were held on Tuesday night in the large I. O. G. T. hall. The commencement address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Batten of Valley City, N. D. Other events, such as alumni banquets, will be held on Friday evening in the I. O. G. T. hall. Five pupils graduated. They were: Edward G. McVean, valedictorian, Esther Lindblom, Hilda Lindblom, Nellie Davinie, and James K. McDougall.

EIGHT DEAD IN COAL MINE

Miners Asphyxiated in Northern Pacific Workings Near Red Lodge.

Anaconda, Mont., June 8.—One of the most serious accidents in the history of coal mining in Montana has occurred in the mines of the Northern Pacific at Rocky Fort, near Red Lodge, Carben county.

Eight men are dead, all victims of the deadly white damp that filled the corridors of the mine after the fire which started Wednesday. Their bodies have been recovered, but the story of the work of rescue parties is a tale of unexcelled bravery and heroic self-sacrifice.

Of the dead, two were members of one of the parties that entered the mine in the effort to reach the men known to be there.

The dead:
JOSEPH BRACY.
S. KELLY.
AL McFALE.
WILLIAM BAILEY.
TERRY FLEMING.
ROY TERRY.
TWO FINLANDERS.

Carey and Bracy were of the rescue party. The fire started in incline No. 6 Wednesday. This was believed to be under control after a long, hard fight. At 7:30 yesterday morning the rescue party started down No. 6 incline, proceeding cautiously, as it was found that there were still traces of the fire. When they reached a depth of 1,200 feet, all were overcome. Some managed to struggle back to where they could be reached.

By this time a dense column of smoke burst from No. 5 incline and the air in No. 6 was so foul that volunteer rescuers were driven back. At 10 o'clock another rescue party was formed, business and towns people volunteering when the Finnish miners fled back terrified.

A special to the Standard from Red Lodge says the scene about the mines was distressing. Frantic men and women ran around delaying the work of rescue.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

End Sessions---To Meet Next Year at Norfolk, Va.

New Haven, Conn., June 8.—A final adjournment of the delegates to the national convention of Knights of Columbus was taken tonight. Norfolk, Va., was selected as the place for next year's convention in August.

The directors chosen are: J. C. Pelletier, Boston; E. W. Buckley, St. Paul, Minn; D. B. Lucey, Ogdensburg, N. Y.; D. J. Callahan, Norfolk, Va., for the three years term, and J. S. Leahy, St. Louis, for two years.

Rev. Father Doyle of Washington, appeared before the national body for the purpose of making an appeal to the order that it act as sponsor for the Paulists and lend its support in spreading their influence of the Catholic religion in the United States. It was voted to give a contribution which it is hoped will amount to $180,000.

Considerable time was spent during the afternoon session in considering some revisions of the by-laws and constitution, the most important of which was the reaising of the minimum initation fee from $5 to $10. This was adopted. Among other changes acted favorably upon was the adoption of a new schedule for extra hazadrous risks for membership. This will affect only new applicants.

WOMEN END SESSIONS WITH A JOLLIFICATION.

St. Paul, June 8.—The eighth biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs ended with last night's session, which was something in the nature of a jollification. The resolutions committee was on the program for a report at the evening session, but its report was received and adopted at the afternoon meeting. This left no business for the consideration of the federation, and the evening was devoted to the inducting into office the newly-elected officers, and to felicitious speeches by Miss Caroline Beaumont of Minnesota, Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker of Texas, Mrs. Walter S. Irons of Rhode Island, and Mrs. William Douglas Turner of California.

THE GROWTH OF NEW YORK

Two-Thirds of Century Ago Was a Country Town.

Town Pumps Source of Refreshment for Finest Gentlemen.

New York, June 8.—The traveler who makes New York city one of his stopping places for observation, or recreation, locates himself somewhere between Twenty-third street and Fifty-ninth street. From the window of his hotel, he looks forth observantly, and regards that portion of the city which he sees, as the real New York of today.

The miles of territory extending to the north of him may be the New York of the future. The miles of crowded and built over acres to the south of him, he well regards as the New York of the past, a past it may be remarked parenthetically, with also a present and forever future. For, no matter what great expansion may overtake this imperial city in the future, nothing can ever occur that will not take note of the lower end of Manhattan Island, as one of the great centers of finance and trade.

The historic New York, the old New York, the New York of a century ago, about which old women dream and old men grow garrulous, lies and will forever lie within the circle of a mile of which the city hall and old St. Paul's church may be regarded as the centers.

St. Paul's, which queerly enough, stands with its face toward a little street to the westward of it, with its rear upon Broadway, is open continually for the visits of those who may be attracted by its reverent memories, or those others who desire, for a brief space at noonday, to escape the heat and noise of the city streets.

It was here, a few days ago, that I met a very old man whose home is in Iowa, but who, by the willing attention and company of a daughter, was able once more to revisit the scenes of his boyhood, before passing away forever from the scenes of time.

He was not only a very old man, but one surprised almost to the verge of speechlessness by the transformations which have been going on while he has been spending more than half a century in the quiet of his Iowa farm.

"My name is A. L. Granger," he said, "and I was born near St. John's park, which was then a park in fact as in name. Today hardly a trace of it remains and the space it once occupied is devoted entirely to railroad business. I can hardly realize that this, the New York of today, is the one I knew as a boy so many years ago. I am now in my eighty-fourth year. I was born in 1822. While I can remember many things that occurred before my fifteenth year, it was only at about that period, or, say 1837, when I began to form impressions of locations and surroundings sufficient to make a distinct remembrance in my mind.

"Warren street, which touches Broadway opposite the city hall, was in those days the upper limit of the fashionable residential portion of New York. There were on Chambers street two houses constructed of marble, and I well remember the comments of my neighbors at the time because of what they considered a foolish extravagance in building residences of that cost so far up town.

"When the ladies of New York wished to take a Sunday walk they would pass from Warren street down Broadway to Grace church, which stood below Wall street, and return.

"The little children were taken each morning to play and to enjoy the fresh air of the Battery, which was then considered as lovely and secluded a place as one could desire. There was a colony of people about St. John's park and another in the neighborhood of Varick and Laight streets, but there were considered far out of the limits of the residential parts of the town."

There were many interesting things touched upon by Mr. Granger in his hour's talk. The New Yorker of his day did not do as much walking as do those of a later generation. A tramp from the city hall to a group of sycamores which stood on the west side of Broadway at about Twenty-sixth street, was considered a feat open only to athletic young men.

Ice cream and popcorn were carried about the streets on summer evenings and purchased by the citizens, who usually took the evening breezes on thir doorsteps. It was not considered below the dignity of any gentleman to stop at the frequent town pumps and take a long drink of water.

It was a time of numerous fires, and one of the chief pleasures of the New Yorker of the day was to run with the engine. A famous place was the Cafe Francais, which, located in Warren street, was the resort of the wits of the city and the poets Halleck and Hoffman were daily visitors. It was here that the Siamese twins took up their abode on their first day in New York.

This quiet place was favored only by the chosen of the gentler spirits, while gayer and younger men, who loved noise and glitter, were patrons of the Cafe De Mille Colonnes, where music was to be had with the coffee or the ices, or the stronger drinks of that period. It was at this time also that Delmonico the first of the famous American caterers, started on his successful career.

Mr. Granger well remembers that famous grammar school for boys that stood in Murray street, near which was then located Columbia college. It was presided over by the famous Prof. Charles Anthon, known everywhere for his translations from the Roman and the Greek.

Prof. Anthon has been described by one who knew him as famous for his pearl colored tight fitting cloth trousers and his light cane. The boys of his school were as ambitious to copy the fit of the one as they were anxious to avoid contact with the other.

In those days many of the retail merchants still adhered to the old fashioned plan of dwelling over their stores and of dining with the family at noon. The homes and industries of the city being mainly within a short distance from Trinity church, there was little occasion for omnibuses or cars. Stages were first introduced in 1829, and the first line ran between Bowling Green and Bleecker street. This innovation was soon followed by the appearance of rival lines, each competing for traffic by the elegance of its vehicles, to which were given grandiloquent names, suitable to the period, such as the Lady Washington, the Lady Clinton, the George Washington and the De Witt Clinton.

These stages, sometime drawn by four horses, brought the suburban villages of Greenwich and Yorkville nearer to the city. The omnibus was soon followed by the street railroad. The first horse railroad incorporated in the city, which was in fact the pioneer horse railroad of the world, was that of the New York & Harlem Railroad company, organized in 1833.

The advent of the railroad added a new enterprise, the manufacture of tram cars. John Stephenson was the originator of this industry, and his first street car, the John Mason, named in honor of the first president of the company, who was also the founder of the Chemical bank, made its initial trip between Prince and Fourtheenth streets on Nov. 26, 1832, carrying the mayor and common council of the city as invited guests to witness the success of the experiment.

As New York grew it became in the early 30's necessary to look after the protection of the public. There was no day police force. Civil process were executed by the marshals attached to the courts; public order was maintained by the constabulary, except upon occasions of unusual public excitement or during riots, actual or apprehended, when, under laws for the time in vogue, a mayor possessed the power of appointing special constables. As in the Dutch times, the city watch began shortly after sunset and continued until dawn.

In the early Knickerbocker days the watch was a small force, but before 1840 it had increased to a corps of nearly 1,000 men. Watchmen were drawn from all vocations. The stevedore, truckman, or carpenter who was dissatisfied with his wages, or anxious for a larger income was ineligible to serve as watchman by night, with hours for relief.

Watchmen wore no particular uniform except the old varnished firemen's hat, from which the front helmet piece was removed, and the wearing of which gave rise to the sobriquet of "Leatherheads," which long continued to be applied to these public servants. The old round of duties, known for nearly two centuries, was still maintained; watchmen were to call the hours of the night, give alarms of fire, cry out the street in which the fire was raging, ring the watchmen's bell, and hang out a lantern upon a pole to indicate the site of the conflagration.

As New York grew northward the fashionable residents began to make their escape from the old abodes. The erection of Grace church on Broadway near Tenth street, and the new Church of the Messiah in which Dr. Dewey regularly officiated, and where could have occasionally have been heard the eloquence of Dr. Channing, exhibit this tendency. Washington square, Waverly place, Astor place, Bond street, the lower part of Fifth avenue and East Broadway were the neighborhoods to which the wealth of the day aspired. Here pretentious mansions were built at a cost which would have shocked the old residents about Bowling green or in Wall street.

THE POST DISCOVERY

A Revelation in Human Food.

Previous to the discovery of the Post process of changing the starchy part of Wheat and Barley into a form of sugar, many people suffered from what is known as starch indigestion.

That was shown by gas and all sorts of stomach and bowel trouble (sometimes ending in appendicitis) brought on by the undigested starch in wheat, oats, white bread, cake, puddings, etc., etc.

Nature ultimately punishes anyone who continually takes some medicine or drug to smooth over or nullify bad conditions of the body. The only safe way to cure such is to correct or remove the cause. Therefore it was plain to Mr. Post, in working out his discovery, that people who show some weakness in digesting the starchy part of food, (which is much the largest part of all we eat) must be helped by having the starch digested or transformed before being eaten. And, of course, the safest and truest way to do this would be to imitate nature and avoid all chemicals, or outside and unnatural things. The body digests the starchy food by the following process: First, the moisture or juices of the mouth and stomach; then warmth or mild heat, which grows or develops diastase from the grain. Time is also an important element, and when all work together and the human organs operate properly, the starch is slowly turned into a form of sugar, as it must be before the blood will absorb it and carry the needed energy to different parts of the body. Of course if the body fails to do its work perfectly, trouble sets in.

So in the making of the famous food —Grape-Nuts—moisture, warmth and time are the only things used to turn starch into sugar, thus imitating nature and keeping the human food in original purity, free from outside things and just as Mother Nature intends it shall be kept for advantageous use by her children. The food is fully cooked at the factories, and is crisp and delicious with a little thick cream poured over.

It can be softened for people with weak teeth, but is most valuable to others when it must be energetically chewed, thus bringing down the saliva from the gums to go to the stomach and help digest the entire meal, besides the use of the teeth strengthens and preserves them. Nature blesses the parts of the body that are used and not abused. Grape-Nuts food brings peace, health and comfort when people are in despair from any one of the ails resulting from undigested food.

THE REMOVAL OF JEROME

As District Attorney of New York Demanded of Gov. Higgins.

Albany, June 8.—Removal of W. T. Jerome as district attorney of New York is demanded of Governor Higgins in a complaint which has been filed at the executive chamber by William N. Amory of New York. Frank E. Perlee, secretary to the governor," admitted last night that such a complaint had been filed, but he would say nothing as to the nature of the charges made against Jerome.

While nothing definite can be learned here as to the nature of the charges made by Mr. Amory, it is assumed that the complaint is the one which was threatened by him before a legislative committee, last winter, and is based upon the charges he then made against Mr. Jerome of negligence in failing to prosecute persons in connection with certain Metropolitan Traction Interests.

New York, June 8.—The charges filed with Governor Higgins against District Attorney Jerome, it was learned here tonight, were signed by five residents of this city.

They declare that Mr. Jerome has wilfully omitted to perform his public duty, and that he received $50,000 from the large life insurance companies toward his campaign fund last fall. These contributions, it is charged, he received "as a gratuity or reward in the shape of campaign funds to compound a crime, and for a violation of the criminal statutes of this state, and has agreed, or has abstained, in pursuance of a previous agreement or arrangement from the prosecution of sundry criminal actions, in violation of section 125 of the penal code, and is, therefore, guilty of a felony."

Mr. Jerome was informed of the charges against him last night. He said: "I do not wish to dignify these charges with a reply. Charges accusing me of malfeasance in office, and neglect of duty, have been made before to Governor Higgins. He has never considered them of sufficient merit to give them his attention."

OFFICERS MUST WORK.

Washington, June 8.—In order that as many officers as possible may be present for duty at the maneuver camps of instruction, which it is proposed to establish during the summer, leaves of absence will not be granted to officers of the army between July 1 and Sept. 30 next, except for urgent reasons specially set forth in the application.

LAGGARD PUBLIC OFFICERS.

The news dispatches relate that the building commissioner of Chicago and twelve deputy building inspectors have marched out to the stock yards in a body to make an inspection of every building in the place. And it was announced, with great flourish of trumpets, that the packers would be compelled to correct every violation of the building ordinances that might be found.

Then they went to work, and they found plenty of things not only needing correction, but crying out for it. The stairways and fire escapes of one plant were ridiculously inadequate. Going into the hog killing department of a large packing house the building commissioner indignantly declared that the conditions were "filthy and dirty", and he pronounced the place "a dirty hole, unfit for the use to which it is put". He said that there is not a modern building in the entire district devoted to the packing industry, the majority of them being, to use his words again, "dilapidated, filthy, and unfit for their uses."

Of course this sudden spasm of devotion to duty is fine. It should result in materially improving conditions. But—

Why so slow about it? Those dirty, filthy, dilapidated buildings have been there for some time. So has Mr. Building Commissioner. Yet he and his army of deputies had to wait until a young man with a bottle of ink stirred up the federal government to send out a couple of men from Washington to tell the country and the world about it, before they became busy.

Perhaps Chicago may say it is none of our business whether its officers do their duty or not. Maybe it isn't. And again, since Duluth eats meat and meat products coming from these plants, maybe it is. Anyway, consumers will be glad that officialdom has been heated up to the point where it is doing its duty, even if its activities have been long delayed. But just the same it does not seem quite right that there should be so many instances where officers paid to perform such duties as these do not perform them until their neglect has resulted in a condition that is a stench in the nostrils of civilization.

And while we are on this subject, the 600 government inspectors who have been working around the stockyards and packing houses of the country for years should not be neglected. What have they been doing all these years? It is true that they were not paid to inspect sanitary conditions or methods of packing, but surely some of them should have noticed these conditions and reported them to the department of agriculture long before this.

Public officials that need a vast scandal to stir them up to the point of doing their duty are certainly open to suspicion and criticism.

If anybody is staying up nights to worry about the exhaustion of the coal supplies, let him possess his soul in peace, and go to sleep.

According to the wellknown German periodical Stahl and Eisen, Germany alone has 280,000,000,000 tons, which will last, at the present rate of consumption, a couple of thousand years, and in any case, making allowance for probable increased demand, should last until the year 3000.

Other European countries are in a less favorable position. The coal deposits of Great Britain and Ireland are placed at about 193,000,000,000 tons, and with an annual consumption twice that of Germany, they will exhaust that supply in less than four hundred years.

Belgium has 23,000,000,000 tons, France 19,000,000,000, Austria 17,000,000,000 and Russia 40,000,000,000 tons.

The same authority estimates North America's coal deposits at 681,000,000,000. The total for all Europe, adding minor supplies to the preceding figures, is placed at 700,000,000,000.

The figures are pretty large. They are probably much larger than most people imagined they would be. But they are said to be dwarfed into insignificance by Asia's deposits, which cannot at present be even approximately estimated. China is supposed to possess deposits that are practically inexhaustible. Indeed, a German scientist is credited with estimating the deposits of the province of Shansi alone at 1,200,000,000,000 tons. Siberia and the island of Sakhalin are also supposed to have vast deposits, of unestimated extent.

So there is no immediate danger of a coal famine. However, while the total supply is large, it is not distributed anywhere near in relation to its use. American and European supplies will be exhausted, probably, before any noticeable impression has been made upon Asiatic deposits, and ultimately the cost of transportation from Asia to other continents will make it rather expensive.

In the meantime the coal trust is doing its best to give us in this country a foretaste of that day when the civilized world will have to pay heavy carrying charges on its coal supplies, which will then have to be brought from the remoter regions of Asia.

PERPETUAL CHRISTMAS TREE.

Though the packing house scandal has pushed its unsightly form into the limelight of late, in the meantime the interstate commerce commission has been grinding away in Philadelphia with its examination into the internal affairs of the Pennsylvania and other railroads.

And what a joyful career has been that of an Eastern railroad official, according to the revelations that have been made there. He dwelt under a perpetual Christmas tree, from whose heavily laden branches he could pick at almost any time a nice bunch of coal stock, a little bundle of money, or some other toothsome favor, so that by this time, doubtless, the average reader of the news pictures the third assistant inspector of railroad ties as living in a mansion, supported by the proceeds of a safety deposit box full of stocks and bonds.

Sometimes, as in the case of the New York Central, the railroad itself got the bounty of the coal companies. One coal company gave this railroad 5,000 shares of stock, par value $100 each, "for traffic reasons". Later, when this coal company was merged into the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke company, this stock was surrendered, the railroad receiving in lieu thereof stock in the new company worth $1,500,000.

"For traffic reasons."

A very illuminating phrase. If it is not illuminating enough, give it a side light from the testimony of the coal shippers who did not make presents of money and stock. While the railroads had plenty of cars for the generous companies, cars enough to hold upon sidetracks until they were wanted, the companies with no stock or money to give away couldn't get cars enough to meet their most urgent demands.

Of course the railroad men who have confessed to accepting gifts from patrons of the road all say that it was pure friendship that dictated the gifts, and that there was no consideration for them in the way of discrimination. Of course they say this, but of course nobody believes it. "Friendship goes a long ways," sagely remarked one of the railroad men who innocently explained that that was why the coal corporations made gifts to railroad men. It does. It is a lovely thing, friendship, and it does go a great way. Sometimes, in case of need, it goes a great way around to avoid the friend in need. But it doesn't amount to much with a corporation seeking to make all the money it can. When a corporation makes gifts it gets good returns, every time.

The statement that the donations were made for traffic reasons sounds much more plausible.

THE MUCK-RAKER.

Now that the term "muck-raker" has been bandied about until it is worn nearly threadbare, what is your idea of it? Is it a term of reproach and contumely, or is it a tribute to the civic activity of the individuals so labelled? Does it indicate that they are doing something unlovely and discreditable, or that they are performing a task that is necessary, though unpleasant?

Very likely opinions on this point will differ. The victim of exposure will beyond doubt hasten in with his opinion that there is hardly any term more to be despised than "muck-raker". But the plain, honest citizen, who has done nothing to be exposed for, and who has, therefore, no reason arising from personal prejudice for hating the muck-raker, will probably agree that a certain amount of muck-raking is good.

It all depends upon whether the man to whom the term is applied earned it by raking muck for muck's sake, or whether he got it by fearlessly exposing the evils that he found, in order that an awakened public might wipe them out.

It must be remembered, however, that the president when he started the "muck-rake" discussion took a slightly incorrect view of the original muck-raker, the man in Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" who was so engrossed in his probing in the mire that he refused to look at brighter things above. The muck that that muck-raker raked in was money. He was so engrossed in his accumulation of money that he had no time or thought for anything higher and better. And the subjects of latterday muck-raking, in most cases, have been men so engrossed in the slime of unscrupulous moneygetting that they have refused to look at the beautiful heights of honest, sane and wholesome living far above them.

The existence of social, economic and political evils in this and other countries is undeniable. Their importance is not great enough to warrant pessimism, but they stand in the way of progress, and they must be moved before civilization can approach anything like Utopian conditions. The man that takes up one of these evils and mercilessly exposes it does much to bring about its extinction. His task is not pleasant, unless he is a born fighter and loves fighting for its own sake. He will be called numerous unpleasant names by the objects of his raking, but by bringing the evil to the eyes of the people in such a way that they cannot avoid seeing it, he will make it possible to remedy it, and thus he will be making his existence worth while.

Yet such a man, in the eyes of many, is a "muck-raker", to be condemned and cast out if possible.

Muck-raking may be made a most respectable and useful profession, when it is pursued with enlightened aims and methods.

It is full from cover to cover with pictures and literary sketches of people prominent in Anoka and Minnesota. The pictures are splendid, the sketches well done, and altogether the edition formed a suitable milestone in a career that has been full of energy and usefulness. Let's hope Granny Pease will be alive to get out an eightieth anniversary edition.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Complications in the insurance situation at San Francisco are materially increased by the reinsurance question," said M. L. Harvey of Chicago at the McKay. "A number of the reinsuring companies have served notice upon the companies whose liability they assumed that they will not regard themselves as held unless the loss settlements are in strict accordance with their wishes. This is having a noticeable effect upon the attitude of some of the larger companies, which otherwise would be inclined to make liberal settlements.

"The continental fire insurance companies have held a meeting at Frankfort, Germany, to consider their attitude toward the payment of earthquake and dynamite losses by the American companies with which they had insurance treaties. They adopted a long statement of their position, considering these points from a legal and equitable standpoint, and decided to stand by the reinsured companies, provided they were not unduly liberal in their adjustments and took due advantage of their legal exemptions under their policies."

"Advertising is what makes the mare go in modern business," said T. L. Johnson of Saginaw, Mich., at the Lenox. "A company that doesn't advertise what it has to sell to the public doesn't stand much show of making money for its backers. Look into the history of almost any of the big stores in cities throughout the country, and you will find that they have been expending large amounts of money in judicious advertising ever since they opened their doors to the public. An immense amount of money is thus spent by some of the large mercantile establishments, but in every instance the returns more than justify the expenditure.

"Advertising seems to be developing greater importance every year. In the magazines of today there isn't much besides advertising matter, and all the progressive dailies have several pages of it. All the people have become educated to its value, and if they haven't anything large to sell, they use the for-sale columns, or if they want anything that can possibly be gotten by advertising, the first thing they think of is sticking a few lines in their favorite daily.

"Advertising is a good business for a young man to get into. It pays well, as compared to two other vocations where an equal amount of brains and energy are required. For the man of average intelligence the field offered is an excellent one. Thus far most of those who devote their whole working time to it are graduates of correspondence schools. I believe it will be only a matter of time before advertising schools outside of the correspondence departments will be the common thing. The business is one which can readily be taught by correspondence, however, and good results have been obtained in this manner. Some of the brightest ad writers in the country are graduates of the mail schools."

"I Love You."

A Danish paper compares "I love you" in many languages. Here are some of them—the Danish paper is our only authority for their correctness: The Chinaman says, "Uo ngai ni;" the Armenian, "Ge sirem ez hez;" the Arabian, very shortly, "Nehabeeck;" the Egyptian, similar, "Nachkeb;" the Turk, "Sisi seveyorum," and the Hindoo, "Main tym ko pijar karyn." But overwhelming is the declaration of love of an Esquimau, who tries to win the chosen one by the pleasing sound of the dainty little word: "Univifigsasaerntdluinalerfimajungnars i-gujak."

Ought to Have Known.

London Chronicle: One of the American visitors who are swarming into Oxford for the eights week was surprised to learn from a porter on the station that he had about another mile to cover before he reached Magdalen. He asked—as many have asked more mildly—why the blazes the station had been built so far from the college. The Oxford porter replied gravely: "I dunno, sir; but I 'spect they thought it more handy to have it down here by the railway."

Kansas Surprise Party.

It was a sort of a surprise party, as Mamie didn't know she had company until she opened a door leading into the room occupied by the strange guest.

How Good Roads Help the Horse.

Chicago Journal: A horse can draw on the worst kind of earth road about four times as much as he can carry on his back. On a good macadamized road he can pull ten times as much, on a wood-paved one twenty-five times as much, and on metals fifty-eight times as much.

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday was a day worth having. The wind came from the southwest, somewhat briskly at times, it is true, but it brought a breath of summer that was very agreeable. Late in the afternoon a few smart showers came up, and dampened limited areas. This morning, though the wind still came from the westerly quadrant, it was cloudy at times, and more unsettled. Last night's lowest temperature was 50 degs., and yesterday it got up to 74 degs. The weather man expects it to remain partly cloudy, with probable showers occasionally, tonight and tomorrow, but he expects the southwest winds to keep up.

A year ago today the southwest wind was creating an ideally beautiful day, warm and glorious with sunshine.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The northwestern storm remained about stationary over North Dakota. The pressure continues quite low there, but not so deep as it was yesterday morning. This storm caused a continuance of showery weather in the lake region, North Atlantic states and the Northwest, and high temperatures in the central valleys, Eastern and Southern states. The eastern Gulf high pressure area has moved to North Atlantic coast districts. Another disturbance is developing over Arizona with high pressures in the Rocky Mountains. Conditions still favor occasional showers and brisk southwest winds in this locality tonight and Saturday."

What "Granny" Pease Thinks.

G. S. Pease in Anoka Union: The tariff is awful when it hits some folks. When it don't, perfectly proper.

When a man wins at any game, how he blows. When he loses, he's as mum as an oyster.

Tariff revision must come, if not from the Republican party, then some other party. The people are crying for it, and their tears will accomplish it.

Republican state convention next week, and nobody seems to care what it does. The Union confesses that it does not like the situation, and is afraid it is not good for the Republican party.

Mountains of Fleece.

Philadelphia Ledger: Somewhat less than three years ago a New York broker failed for $2,000,000. He was obliged to compromise with his creditors for 50 cents on the dollar. Recently he mailed to these creditors checks representing the $1,000,000 to which claim had been relinquished by them, together with interest on the sums. Because the man chose to pay his just debts and did so when he was able, the term "conscience money" has been applied to the amount voluntarily surrendered. This does not seem to be the proper term. The desire to pay a debt is a natural prompting. If the example of a man who does this when he might evade it is deemed extraordinary, the general virtue is assumed to be at a low plane.

The astonishing feature of the case is that a broker, even operating in New York, and starting from the basis of the clean sweep caused by failure, could in less than three years have "made" a million to donate to creditors, besides a presumable income sufficient for living meanwhile in the style befitting a New York broker. There arises the old question, this time not in malice or aspersion, but a mere expression of desire to know: "Mr. Broker, where did you get it?"

Golden showers descending upon the speculator who deals in the money earned by others must remain more or less of a mystery to the others. By laboring for decades a merchant builds up a great business and becomes a multi-millionaire, nobody begrudging him his good fortune. Through a tangible process of development the blacksmith grows into the manufacturer, the mechanic into the builder, toiling for a lifetime to acquire the wealth that falls to a Wall street operator in a season. Somebody, shrewd and perhaps not nice as to method, obtains the monopoly of oil. Another recognizes in a mere prospect hole the latent potency of a productive mine. Their wealth is no puzzlement. But the broker piling up millions a year is a problem.

Words of the Wise.

Lucretius: Continual dropping wears away a stone.

Emerson: The street is full of humiliations to the proud.

Diogenes Laertius: Fortune is unstable while our will is free.

Fielding: A good countenance is a letter of recommendation.

Pthenaeus: Goodness does not consist in greatness, but greatness in goodness.

Coleridge: Our own heart, and not other men's opinions, form our true honor.

Pliny the Elder: Always act in such a way as to secure the love of your neighbor.

John Burroughs: Love is the measure of life; only so far as we love do we really live.

Success Magazine: Comfort and independence abide with those who can postpone their desires.

Marcus Aurelius: Blot out vain pomp; check impulse; quench appetite; keep reason under its own control.

Phoedrus: Whoever has even once become notorious by base fraud, even if he speaks the truth, gains no belief.

George Eliot: Sympathetic people are often uncommunicative about themselves; they give back reflected images which ride their own depth.

We Is Fired.

Cecil Whig: I beg to announce the disappearance from these columns of the editorial "we." Why should it remain? The essayist says "I," the orator says "I." Why shouldn't the editor say "I?" He should and he shall—except when he has passed within his own door—then he will say, "My dear, what had 'we' better do in that matter?" But here, in the quiet retreat of his sanctum, barred and double barred against the public, I am a free man, and I boldly declare in the face of my dog and sundry time-stained portraits that I (who have often made twain one) will not make one twain. "I" will not be "we."

A Needed Reform.

Washington Star: While all these language reforms are going on, it might be a good plan to introduce a few English words into the American bill of fare.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Minneota Mascot: When investing your money you always look well to the proposition you put it into. Your vote is also a valuable asset. Do you always invest it carefully? How many stop to consider the qualifications, character and fitness of a candidate for office? Very few. It is, as a rule, either party or friendship which wins the day. Personal likes and dislikes do the business.

Windom Reporter: A pessimistic, sour old granny says platitudes in the pulpit makes pharisees in the pews. He ought to be run out of town.

Princeton Union: There exists in our mind a strong suspicion that some of the breakfast foods on the market consist largely of denatured sawdust.

Princeton Union: Odin Halden is honest, competent and fearless, and is well qualified to fill any position within the gift of the people of Minnesota from governor down.

Elk River Star-News: It does not require much perspicacity to determine the source of "juice" in political campaigns.

Red Wing Republican: Col. Bryan writes a friend that he would run again for the presidency if circumstances should demand it. And the Sioux Falls Argus-Leader is of the opinion that Col. Bryan will do what he can from now on to be handy when circumstances ring the doorbell.

Mankato Free Press: One of those muck-rakers went into the packing houses at Chicago, discovered a bad state of things, and the result was that the United States senate sat up and took notice. There is some good left in the muck-raker.

Anoka Free Press: A law licensing highwaymen, pirates and thieves to take every man's property above a certain amount in the name of taxation, would be more direct and more honest than the tariff law which the standpatters are so strenuously defending.

Red Lake Falls Courier: McCleary is still standing pat. Some day a man with as much as a pair of deuces will call him and beat him a mile. It is one of the rules of the game that the man who is caught bluffing loses.

Ortonville Herald-Star: Endorsements are coming thick and fast for Bryan these days, but no one has heard Grover Cleveland or Billy Hearst say a word.

Two Harbors Journal: An Eastern physician says that strawberries cause insanity. Bring on your strawberries; the mad house for us!

Le Sueur News: It is the legislature that makes the laws, and not the governors. Your political interests center in your senator and representatives.

Pine City Pioneer: Great towns from little boostings grow.

Moose Lake Star: Wonder if any of the candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, as the convention time draws near, feel any of that nervousness which starts in a fellow's neck and creeps down to his knees?

Minneapolis Telegram: You have no idea how much real enjoyment you can get out of life by being a booster—unless you have tried.

How the Preacher Got His Call.

On the outskirts of the town a building painted brown,
By a wooden cross surmounted, that was pointing at the sky,
Where the shadows used to meet, as they danced along the street,
And the sunbeams used to whisper, as they met, and glided by;
In its quaint, and high-backed pews,
where the good Lord got his dues,
Sat the old men and the maidens, on the Sundays, long ago.
Through its rafters, brown and bare,
swept the anthem and the prayer,
And the tales of sin, once scarlet, that became as white as snow.

O'er the preacher's snow-white head—
the good man is long since dead—
The warm sunbeams used to linger when the summer days were long,
And the echo of a prayer seemed to linger in the air,
While the mantle of God's mercy o'er the little flock was spread;
In the twilight hours of June, when the world was all atune,
We would linger in the doorway for the coming of the girls,
Etta, Nancy, Sue and Belle—how their memories with me dwell
When the daylight slow is fading, and the Night her wings unfurls.

I remember well one morn, when the army of the corn,
Was its tasseled banners raising up in greeting to the sky,
How there came a whisper sweet that the preacher bent to meet,
While the congregation scattered in the twinkling of an eye;
For, without a warning sound, from the sky, or within the ground,
There came to his ears a message from the land no man hath seen,
And his head fell on his breast, as he slowly sank to rest,
While the shadow of an angel swept across the fields of green.

They have torn the old church down. In the center of the town
They have built the Lord a temple that is grander than the old;
Through its windows of stained glass,
swift the sunbeams come and pass,
And its steeple is surmounted by a cross
of gleaming gold;
But the girls we used to know, with their eyes and cheeks aglow,
Have scattered o'er the wide world, or are sleeping 'neath the sod,
And the flock that gathered there, in that humble house of prayer,
Has assembled with its preacher in the great sheepfold of God.

SMILING REMARKS.

Philadelphia Press: "Yes," said the man, who was beginning to sour on the national sport, "it's interesting sometimes, but baseball nowadays is becoming very dirty."

"O!" exclaimed his fair companion, "I understand now why all those players are wearing gloves."

Washington Star: "A man in politics should have lots of friends, shouldn't he?"

"It depends," answered Senator Sorghum, "on whether they are friends who want to do something for you or who want you to do something for them."

Philadelphia Ledger: "I suppose it's always hog-killing time in your town, Miss Packer?" sneered the New Yorker.

"Oh, yes," replied the fair visitor from Cincinnati; "but don't let that keep you from visiting us. We always protect our guests."

Chicago Tribune: Visitor—Do your various women's clubs fraternize with one another?

Boston Girl—Certainly not. Occasionally, however, we sororize."

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: "Here you!" growled the fat man in the corner of the crowded car, "my feet are not there to stand on."

"That's so," replied the quiet offender, "since you're sitting down you don't need 'em for that purpose, do you?"

Philadelphia Press: Senior Partner—So that new salesman's gone, eh? Why, I thought he was a most careful, painstaking man—"

Junior Partner—I found him most painstaking. He gave me so many that I just fired him.

Cleveland Leader: Applicant—I was looking for a treatise on "Pure Canned Food," but I can't find it on this shelf.

Librarian—Look for it under the head of "Fiction."

Chicago Tribune: Deacon Giles—Doctor, there's a question I've been wanting to ask you. In what language did the ass speak to Balaam?

The Rev. Dr. Fourthly—In its own language. Balaam had been making an ass of himself and he had no trouble in understanding.

Over the Hills.

Over the hills and far away
A little boy steals from his morning's play,
And under the blossoming apple tree
He lies and dreams of the things to be;
Of battles fought and of victories won,
Of wrongs o'erthrown and of great deeds done—
Of the valor that he shall prove some day.
Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills and far away!

Over the hills and far away
It's oh, for the toil of the livelong day!
But it mattered not to the soul aflame
With a love for riches and power and fame!
On, oh, man, while the sun is high—
On to the certain joys that lie
Yonder where blazeth the noon of day!
Over the hills and far away—
Over the hills and far away!

Over the hills and far away
An old man lingers at close of day;
Now that his journey is almost done,
His battles fought and his victories won—
The old-time honesty and truth,
The trustfulness and the friends of youth,
Home and mother—where are they?
Over the hills and far away?
Over the hills and far away!

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: When a girl gets the fad of taking exercise, either she is trying to walk off flesh or walk it on.

A man isn't half as anxious to try his hand at speculation as those who run the game are to have him.

A mother seems to think it's a horrible reflection on herself if her daughter doesn't get married before she is twenty-two.

When a New York man gives his seat to a woman in a street car it's a sign she is suspicious he wants to flirt with her.

If he wasn't so busy making everybody else nervous, it would make a baby awful nervous to have women talk all the queer languages to it they do.

Wouldn't Scare.

New York Mail: The son of a wealthy New York family came home intoxicated quite frequently. His parents tried to break him of his intemperate habits, but without any results.

Finally a friend of the father volunteered his assistance.

The next time the young fellow came home in a helpless state the friend carried him to a dark room provided with a coffin and dull illuminating flames. Then he placed him in the coffin and sat beside it to await his awaking.

After a sleep of eight or nine hours the sleeper awoke, sat up in the coffin and looked about him. Seeing the dim figure of the watcher, he inquired where he was. In a deep, solemn voice came the answer that he was now in the lands of the lower regions. The young fellow immediately said: "Well, you've been here before me. Can you tell me where I can get a drink?"

Old Soldier Found in Barn Never Recovers Consciousness.

Led Lonely Life in a Shack on Shore of Lake.

Edward Donaldson, the aged man who was found unconscious in a barn at Lakeside, Monday night, died early this morning at St. Luke's hospital.

The old man was about 70 years of age. He was a wood cutter, and lived on the lake shore, about two miles east of Lester Park, keeping bachelor's quarters in an old shack. He lived all alone, and so far as is known he had no friends or relatives in the city. He was a married man, and is believed to have two children living. His wife and daughter are some place in the East, and a son is believed to be living in Chicago.

Donaldson was an old soldier, and drew a pension from the government. He came in to the city Monday and drew his pension. Before returning home he became intoxicated, and stopped off in the barn to sleep off the effects of the liquor. He was not found until Wednesday night, and all efforts to revive him from his stupor have failed.

The hospital attendants were unable to force any food down his throat, and he has been without nourishment since Monday. His death is believed to have been partly due to the weakness of old age, which was aggravated by his starvation.

He passed away without recovering consciousness about 2 o'clock this morning.

The old man was quite well known by the employes at the pumping station, for whom he had frequently chopped wood. A search will be made among his effects, and an effort made to find the address of his wife and children, in order that they may be notified of the old man's death. The Grand Army posts will probably take charge of the body and give it proper burial.

Nature's Laxative Best.

Many Are So-Called "Natural."

There are many Laxatives on the market that are often styled "Natural," because of the well-known fact that the Laxative which Nature gives us is the best. Such ones are constantly coming up, but soon disappear, because in reality they are manufactured, and can never attain the inimitable merits of the product of Nature. HUNYADI JANOS, the genuine NATURAL Laxative Water, has stood at the head for nearly half a century as the ONLY Laxative whose established reputation is its best recommendation. It remains always the standard, because it is NATURE'S remedy in its original form, pure and simple, in no way dependent, as the others are, on artificial composition. At all druggists. Try it.

FIERCE TORNADO STRIKES IOWA

Great Damage Done to Farms in Winnisheik County.

Decorah, Iowa, June 8.—Between 4 and 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon a tornado passed over a section of Winnisheik county, doing much damage and injuring a number of people. Reports of the storm did not reach Decorah until yesterday, when it was learned that within a radius of a few miles of Locust, a postoffice twelve miles north, not less than $5,000 damage had resulted. At Edward Therson's the barn and residence were destroyed and all the people in the house were injured. The youngest son was buried in the ruins of the house and when rescued was found to be in a serious condition. At Kittle Sorenson's, the barn and windmill were blown away, but four horses that were in the barn were uninjured. On the farm tenanted by Eldine Ellingson, the house, the barns and outbuildings were demolished. Mrs. Carrie Luros and Louis Larson each lost a barn, and D. T. Manning's residence was blown away. Undoubtedly other damage resulted in the same section. It is one of the richest parts of the county with buildings of substantial character.

St. Paul, June 8.—Sunrise, Minn., a little town of 800 inhabitants, fears for the safety of which were expressed on account of lack of communication, escaped uninjured. The storm devastated the country about three miles from the village, wrecking many houses and injuring a large number of people. The large new frame house of William Stevens was blown to kindling wood and Stevens and his wife seriously, but not fatally hurt.

The tornado then turned in the direction of the farm of M. W. Deming and destroyed every building on the place. Mr. Deming was not at home, his wife and nine children being alone in the house. Arthur, the oldest boy, heard the roar of the approaching storm and went to the door to look out. The first thing he saw was a pair of horses coming down through the air. They had been in the barn which was blown away and the horses taken high in the air. The boy ran back and gave the alarm and the family succeeded in reaching the root cellar and escaping injury. The horses came down feet first and were uninjured, the plank to which they tied in the stable, still being attached.

After passing Sunrise, the storm struck northeasterly into Wisconsin, going through a heavily timbered section. A road 100 feet wide was cut through the timber as far as the St. Croix river. There was considerable damage done to sawmill property near Neenah, Wis., but no lives were lost.

About Ham Lake, in Anoka county, Minn., the tornado destroyed much farm property, but no loss of life is reported.

MORE RED TAPISM IN THE AUSTRAIN POSTAL BUREAU.

Vienna, June 8.—The Austrian postal department is giving fresh proof of being the most red-tapish and retrogressive in Europe. In order to meet the extra expenditure due to the increased wages of postal employes, the authorities are considering the proposal to raise postage on inland letters by a fraction of a cent. This step, besides being reactionary, would create strange anomalies. For instance, letters to Germany are now sent on the inland rate, but, as postal arrangements between the two countries can only be altered by international agreement, the postage to Berlin would be less than to any Austrian provincial town. Business men in Austria are greatly hampered in their undertakings by the bureaucracy, who impose irksome conditions, and no new enterprise can be started without the consent of the local authorities.

PROGRAM FOR KING'S CORONATION COMPLETED.

Christiania, June 8.—The program of ceremonies attending the coronation of King Haakon VII and Queen Maud have been completed. The royal couple will arrive at Trondhjem the evening of June 19, and wait there the arrival of the foreign princes and ambassadors. The coronation will take place at 11 o'clock the morning of June 22, at the cathedral and will be followed by a state dinner, which will be attended by 300 guests. The remainder of the week will be taken up with celebrations, including musical festivals, popular entertainments and processions, in which children will predominate. King Haakon, on June 25, will receive deputations and give a soiree at the palace.

Yesterday, the first anniversary of the dissolution of the union with Sweden, was celebrated as a general holiday throughout Norway. In the cities flags were flying and the streets were crowded with merrymakers.

WONDERFUL ONE-ARM MAN.

Builds House Unaided, at Same Time Carrying Mail.

London, June 8.—Snodland, a quiet little village in Kent, possesses a wonder in the shape of a six-roomed cottage, planned, constructed and completed by a one-armed man. W. G. Collins has seen thirty-nine years' service in the postoffice as a rural mail carrier. In his leisure moments he has built the house. He got the plans and then drew his own designs. First of all he laid down a solid foundation of cement. In a cart, also of his own construction, he drove over to the cement works each week and purchased enough cement to make bricks. He took his time; he has been ten years building "The Cosy," as he calls it.

The while he farmed an acre of land, did his postal duties of twenty odd miles a day, and lived in Rochester, ten miles away.

THE LIQUOR DEALERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Louisville, June 8.—The National Wholesale Liquor Dealers association yesterday elected the following officers: President, Marion E. Taylor, Loiusville; first vice president, M. W. Murphy, Chicago; second vice president, E. V. Daugherty, Philadelphia; treasurer, E. P. Brice, Philadelphia.

The next annual meeting will be held in Atlantic City. A resolution was adopted calling upon the national government to enact laws putting federal supervisors in charge of all distilleries, whatever their capacity.

APPEAL FROM AWARD.

Fidelity Trust Company Objects to a Nominal Reimbursment.

The appeal of the Fidelity Trust company and others from the 36 cents award by the board of public works for the right of way of a road through their lands, was submitted to Judge Cant yesterday afternoon. It is probable that the court will modify the award. Judge Cant intimated that as long as the appellants were unwilling to give up their land they should have been paid in proportion to the value of the acreage in the locality in question.

Last December the board of public works selected a sixty-six foot roadway in sections 1 and 12-50-14 and in the southwest quarter of section 6-50-13. With the exception of the parties that have appealed the other property owners donated the right of way and contributed to the cost of construction.

A number of the local real estate men were called to testify for both sides the value of acreage where the roadway was built.

All of the teams in the Northern and Copper Country league are strengthening up.

The announcement of a raise in the salary limit to $1,100 a month, has enabled the club managers to retain at least eleven men at an average wage of $100 a month. This gives them a full team and three pitchers, leaving two men on the bench in every game. Some teams, paying their men less can carry twelve players, but the Duluth club will probably run with eleven men all summer.

In The Herald last evening, it was announced that George Hilbert of Knox college had been signed, and he will report at once. This will complete the outfield, and there will be no necessity to play a pitcher in one of the outer gardens.

Grand Forks has finally been awarded Leach, after many disputes, and the Grand Forks Herald announces that the crack backstop of last year's team will join the Tigers at once. Leach will greatly strengthen the team. Joe Miller, the heavy hitting outfielder of the Crookston team of 1904 has also been signed, and is due to report at once.

These two men will strengthen the weak spots in the Grand Forks nine, and should put the team in the running.

Winnipeg has been making some big shifts during the last week, and for the first time this season the Maroons present a full line up. A new pitcher, a new outfielder and a new infielder have been added, and the Winnipeg team as it now stands should cut a figure in the pennant race, when it strikes its galt.

The Calumet team remains unchanged from the opening. It was better organized than any of the other nines, and the club has so far had no reason to cast around for new players, or release the old ones. The Aristocrats have been playing great ball, and the fans are greatly pleased with the showing made.

Hancock has been pulling up on the first division teams in rapid style. The hoodoo which pursued the team in the opening games, seems to have been shaken off, and the Patriots must be taken into consideration.

Dr. Glass has continued his efforts to strengthen the infield of his Lake Linden team, and he now has a bunch of players who should at least break even on their games.

In fact it is hard to pick a bunch of second division nines in the league, and the prospects are very bright for a closely bunched finish in the pennant race.

Yesterday was an off day with the Duluth and Houghton teams, the Giants being on their way to Duluth. This afternoon is ladies' day, and all members of the gentler sex will be admitted free to the grounds and to the grand stand.

TIGERS LOSE FIRST.

Tailenders Take Ragged Game Under Unfavorable Weather Conditions.

Grand Forks, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—Less than half a hundred people gatherd yesterday at the University Athletic park and saw the tailenders take the first game of the series from the Tigers. During the entire game a drizzling rain kept the few rooters rather damp, and a cold south wind kept the players lifeless. Some of the rather peculiar features of the game were: Eleven stolen bases, fourteen hits off Gabeau, fifteen hits off Keil, five two baggers, two three baggers, a half a dozen passes on each side, a couple of men hit by the pitchers, seventeen assists on one side and twenty-two on the other, two double-steals on bases, and a couple of rank decisions by the umpire.

The Tigers scored in the first, sixth and seventh innings. In the first Wilson led with a hit, and Leighty went on fielder's choice. Ludvig took another hit, and Harris, Luderus and Tucker did likewise, scoring Leighty and Ludvig. Steverding went on a fielder's choice. Harris was caught by the first baseman and Luderus by the third baseman on Steverding's hit. In the sixth after two men were out Wilson took a hit and scored Holstein, and Gabeau came home while the Linden team was trying to catch Wilson between first and third. In the seventh a couple of hits by Harris and Tucker, an error by Curzon, and Ludvig being hit by a pitched ball, gave the Tigers the last scores they got.

The visitors scored in the second, fifth, eighth and ninth. In the second Boglan got a life on Harris' error, and was sacrificed to second by Curzon, and to third on Kprke's hit. Gruebner took a two-bagger and cleared the bases with two men gone, and Wotell struck out. In the fifth a two-bagger by Becker, a base on balls, and three-bagger by Solbraa gave the visitors two more scores. In the eighth four hits and two errors by the Tigers allowed the vistors three socres and then in the ninth four more hits and an error by Gebeau gave the visitors four more scores.

Hancock Gets Six Tallies Against Fargo in the Fourth

Fargo, June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hancock took Fargo into camp in the first game of the series. The contest was pulled off on a muddy field with a stiff gale and low temperature. The injured list included Catcher Stripp of the locals and Twirler Rogers of the visitors, and several shifts were made in the line-up.

The batting of Foster of Hancock was the stellar feature.

In the fourth, after there was a chance to retire the side, Hancock followed four erros, a base on balls and a wild pitch with three stolen bases and four hits, netting them a half a dozen scores.

Game Postponed.

Winnipeg, Man., June 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Winnipeg-Calumet game scheduled for yesterday afternoon was postponed on account of rain.

ONLY ONE THROWN OUT.

Secretary Says Other Winnipeg-Grand Forks Game Will Stand.

Secretary Glass of the Northern and Copper Country league was in the city yesterday on his return home from Winnipeg, where a meeting of the league officers was held to discuss the protested games between Winnipeg and Grand Forks and other business matters.

Dr. Glass stated that The Herald had been misinformed on the outcome of the meeting, and that only one of the two games had been thrown out instead of both, as announced last evening. The second game was thrown out, but the fine of $50 was considered punishment enough for playing Sessions.

The corrected standing is given this evening. The game was thrown out because a postponed game cannot be played in the same series, but must be played in a later series.

CHICAGO, 19; NEW YORK, 0.

New York, June 8.—The Chicago team simply smothered the New York National league champions yesterday. Mathewson was knocked out of the box in the first inning. GO BETWEEN WINS THE WESTMINSTER HANDICAP.

New York, June 8.—Closing with a great burst of speed in the final furlong, Go Between, backed down from 12 to 1 to 9 to 1, won the $10,000 Westminster handicap, one mile and a quarter, at Gravesend yesterday. Eugenia Burch, an added starter and quoted at 15 to 1 for the place, was second, and the favorite, Cairngorm, third.

Pater went to the front at the start, and was leading by a length passing the stand. Rounding the far turn, Crimmins sent Eugenia Burch from seventh place to the lead, and was in front as the field swung into the stretch. Meanwhile Shaw, on Go Between, who was trailing his field for a mile, began to make his move. Go Between responded gamely to the whip, and gradually overhauling his field, caught the leader, Eugenia Burch, near the finish, and in a hard drive won by half a length. Eugenia Burch was three-quarters of a length before Cairngorm.

SEEK PARDON FOR HANNAN.

Friends Circulate Petitions Directed to State Board of Pardons.

The friends of Richard Hannan, a Hibbing saloonkeeper who was sentenced to the state penitentiary for fifteen years for killing Charles Ness, are making an effort to have him pardoned. Hannan has served three years of his time. Petitions directed to the state board of pardons have been largely circulated and signed by Hannan's friends who believe that his punishment was too severe.

Ness was shot in the knee while he was attempting to climb over the bar. He was taken to the hospital where he died three weeks later from blood-poisoning as a result of the bullet wound.

Hannan, who had always borne a good reputation at Hibbing, claimed that he shot in self-defense and not with the intention of killing Ness. He was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree.

LEAGUE OF LITTLE HATS FORMED BY A COUNTESS.

Paris, June 8.—Countess Greffulhe will earn the heartfelt blessings of all men at the theater if her newly formed "League of Little Hats" succeeds. Every member pledges herself to wear smaller headgear at the play. Hitherto the theater hat had been the biggest in the market. Small ones have been seen in shops, and have even been worn, but never at the theater. Managers and husbands have done what they could for years, but except at the Francaise, the Opera Comique, the Sarah Bernhardt theater, and, of course, the Opera, at all of which hats are forbidden in the stalls, the men have abjectly given in. There never was a more striking proof of the invincible strength of the weaker vessel. Now that a woman has taken up the cudgels for man, it is believed there is a chance for him at last.

EGYPTIAN FORCES PREPARE TO OCCUPY TERRITORY.

Cairo, June 8.—Preparations are being made in Egypt to occupy the disputed territory in force if the sultan's attitude should render it necessary.

Orders have been issued by the intelligence division at Cairo for all concerned in its department to be ready for service. The ordnance officials have taken stock of the material and ammunition, and the railway and transport authorities are ready to deal with orders for mobilization.

With additions the British strength in Egypt will consist of 6,122 men.

The Egyptian army, which is officered from the British service, has a strength of 18,476 men and brings the total force up to 24,598. The discipline and courage of the native troops has been well proved under Lord Kitchener, and the sirdar, Sir Reginald Wingate, has reported very favorably on the present quality.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

There are good and substantial reasons why intelligent people and physicians as well, employ Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of diseases and weakness peculiar to women.

In the first place, it is not a cure-all, serving only a singleness of purpose, being a specific for one class of diseases only—those peculiar weaknesses and maladies incident to women. Besides it is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for the cure of such maladies, all the ingredients of which have the endorsement of leading medical practitioners and writers, as being the very best known remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is advised. All this will be learned to the reader's full satisfaction by perusing a booklet of extracts compiled by Doctor Pierce from standard authorities of the several schools of practice, and which will be sent free to any address on request for same, mailed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

In the second place, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Presciption is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and affections, all the ingredients of which are printed upon the bottle wrapper in plain English, so that all who take it may know exactly what they are using.

A further reason for the unprecedented popularity of the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce for the special use of women, is to be found in the fact that it contains not a drop of alcohol—pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, being used instead, both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles extracted from such roots of native, medicinal, forest plants as are employed in its make-up. The printed formula will also bear witness that it contains no narcotics or other harmful or habit-forming drugs, being entirely made up of glyceric extracts of native, American plants of marvelous efficacy in the cure of the diseases peculiar to women.

Now, in this connection, it is well to bear in mind, that, curious as it may seem, yet it is a fact that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only medicine for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and maladies that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. This fact can be easily proven; and yet it is a fact well known to all the best physicians that alcohol, even in small quantities, when long continued is very harmful, and especially so to weak, invalid, nervous women. While the effect of spirituous wines and liquors, sold under various enticing names may at first be to exhilerate, brace up and unduly support the system for a brief time, yet a reaction comes sooner or later and the patient is worse off than before. Besides, a craving for alcoholic stimulants has gradually fastened itself upon the poor, deluded, suffering woman—a malady generally more to be dreaded than the original affliction.

Furthermore, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has a record of cures extending over a period exceeding one-third of a century and embracing more genuine cases of full and complete recovery than any other medicine in its line can boast of. Thousands have been saved from the operating table and the surgeon's knife by the use of this marvelously efficacious specific for woman's ailments. Other thousands have escaped the disagreeable ordeal of the doctors' questionings, and offensive examinations by taking this remedy and being cured in the privacy of their homes. It has cured thousands of bad, obstinate cases in which doctors had failed and in which cures were thought to be impossible.

What it has done for others it will no doubt, DO FOR YOU, if similarly afflicted, and you give it a good, fair and faithful trial.

In favor of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription being regarded away above the secret patent medicines of our time, is the frank, confiding open, honest statement of its full composition, giving every ingredient in plain English, without fear of successful criticism and with confidence that the good sense of afflicted women will lead them to appreciate this honorable manner of confiding to them what they are taking into their stomachs when making use of this medicine.

If suffering from backache, sideache, periodical headaches and other recurring pains at more or less regular intervals, disagreeable drains as if from pelvic catarrh, sickening sensations, dizziness at times, monthly headaches, irregularities, bearing-down or dragging-down sensations in the lower abdomen or any of the many kindred distressful and painful symptoms which accompany female weaknesses, then you cannot find any remedy quite so perfectly adapted for the cure of your malady as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Bear in mind, it is not a secret nostrum, is not a patent medicine, to the use of which most intelligent people object because of the close secrecy with which the formulæ of such medicines are held, and which, no doubt, are many times harmful in the long run, especially as all those for women contain large quantities of alcohol and oft times other objectionable ingredients. The only wise and safe course is to use only MEDICINES OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, and which, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, contain no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs.

The exact proportion of the several ingredients used in Dr. Pierce's medicines, as well as the working formula and peculiar processes, apparatus and appliances employed in their manufacture, are withheld from publicity that Dr. Pierce's proprietary rights may not be infringed and trespassed upon by unprincipled imitators and those who may be piratically inclined.

For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The Golden Seal root, Stone root, Mandrake root and Black Cherrybark, entering into its composition are all recommended by such eminent authorities as Dr. Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College; Prof. John King, author of the "AMERICAN DISPENSATORY"; Prof. John M. Scudder, late of Cincinnati; Dr. William Paine, author of Paine's Epitomy of Medicine; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Medical Dept., University of N. Y.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., Professor of Materia Medica in the Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, and many others, as remedies for indigestion and dyspepsia, torpid liver as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections, as will be seen from reading a little booklet recently compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., who will send the same on request, by postal card or letter, to any address, free. This little booklet tells of what Dr. Pierce's celebrated medicines are made, and gives the properties and uses of each and every ingredient entering into their composition. Write Dr. Pierce, as above and receive it by return post.

Queen's root, or Stillingia, is an ingredient entering into the "Golden Medical Discovery" highly recommended by several of the above mentioned authorities for the cure of chronic or lingering bronchial, throat and lung affections, public speaker's sore throat attended with hoarseness, dry, rasping cough and kindred affections. Not only is Queen's root specific in its curative action in all these affections, but in "Golden Medical Discovery" it is greatly assisted by the combination with it of Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark and Bloodroot, with which it is blended in just the right proportion.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. Thereby they avoid the disagreeable questioning from which most women shrink as well as the still more repulsive examinations which are generally unnecessary. All letters of consultation are regarded as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

How to preserve health and beauty is told in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It is free. For a paper-covered copy send Dr. Pierce as above directed, 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; for cloth binding 31 stamps.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure bad, foul stomach and constipation and so help to cure nearly every disease of mankind. They regulate, tone up and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

WOMEN AT LUNCHEON

Peculiarities of Women Worker at Her Restaurant Meal.

Indulgence One Day and Slim Lunch the Next.

New York, June 8.—There are hunderds of women in Greater New York who live "by the day," whom night finds with their papers and pencils figuring up the expenses of the day past and arranging the allowance for the day to come. To them the biggest question they face is where and what they shall eat. An indulgence one day means a slim lunch the next, so that some balance can be preserved in their accounts. They are roomers, who have the eating question to struggle with—women who prefer the independence of eating where they please to the hampered atmosphere and precarious bill of fare of the boarding house. One sees them in streams and droves at the meal hours pouring into the eating places where respectability and small prices go hand in hand.

A woman and a man differ when it comes to the subject of eating. A man would rather have his beefsteak though his trousers were frayed, but a woman would have her elbow gloves every time and make the lunch of weak tea and toast.

The woman worker at her restaurant meal is about as interesting a subject as one would find to study anywhere. To watch a mass of them stream in and out is—well, is almost worth becoming one of the throng for the time. Her lunch or her dinner really is a matter of as much interest to the woman as to the man, and a much more intricate one because there are calculations to be made in mathematics before the order is given, and a woman has her difficulties in calculating. But she goes about the matter with with very much less apparent interest than the man does.

He grabs the bill of fare, studies it a few minutes as if it were a quotation of the stock market whereon his fortune hangs, makes his decision, states it positively to the waitress, then props the last edition of the newspaper up before him and proceeds to digest the newest graft revelations or the raciest murder report while he waits.

A woman comes in with an attempt at casualness and indifference, picks up the card and fingers it awhile, looking about the room to see what she can see, while really in her mind she is adding tens and fifteens, though she hates to be seeming to. The calculation finally adjusted somewhat to her appetite, she gives her order, then calls the waitress back and changes it as soon as she has gone. Still, with her air of indifference, she casts her eyes about and takes in just what each of her neighbors within reach of her eyes has orderd. By the time her lunch arrives she has estimated the checks of all the diners at her table, has made speculations as to the status of the women across the way, and is beginning to regret, on looking at the menu again, not ordering strawberries instead of ice cream.

At the lunch hour in the down town restaurants, the clerks and stenographers arrive in groups and chat together like magpies while they eat.

They wear the signs of their work about them. One has forgotten to take off the paper cuffs she has worn at her desk to keep the sleeves of her white shirtwaist fresh, another has an ink spot on the front of her waist, which she bemoans constantly. The orders are a matter of a good deal of discussion before they are finally given, and call for much whispering and laughing behind hands.

It is curious what they choose for their midday meal to sustain them through the afternoon work. The dairy lunch biscuit, the sallow, half-dough-looking creation is the favorite, and pie always has a large slice of popularity. The girl with an exaggerated pompadour, who wears a Fraulein Scheff belt about a tiny waist, is perfectly sure to order pie. You can count on it always.

The checks you watch the waitress lay down at their plates are seldom punched for more than 15 or 20 cents. By dexterous dividing of dishes, it is delightful to see how a group can stretch out a 20-cent order. If a margin of 10 cents is saved on the order, the lunch is sure to be topped off with an ice cream soda, Dutch treat, at the drug store around the corner.

These are the patrons of the lunch rooms. It is a dinner that one finds especially the women who live by the day, the furnished roomers. Breakfast is apt to be a chuffled-up affair, managed on the tables in their own rooms when they don't forget to lay in the commodities the night before. It is a slight formality with breakfast food and milk as the cornerstone always, and an egg and a piece of toast if the wee bit gas stove is in the humor to cook. At the hour for dinner they are tired after the day's work, and calculations have no attractions for them. They are apt to seek a place where some sort of table d'hote at a stable price is served, such as the Young Women's Christian association restaurants, where one buys all the comforts of home, with soup and dessert thrown in, for the sum of 25 cents.

There are not many vacant chairs at a restaurant of this kind during the dinner hour. The women workers are there in force, an interesting lot, absorbed and deliciously unconscious of their own whimsicalness.

A Young Woman's Christian association or any purely feminine restaurant is entirely different from the usual cafe, has less formality and more of the village atmosphere. There is apt to be a sprinkling of dear old women in bonnets among the groups, and old women in bonnets are almost the rarest things one finds in New York.

They probably are the mothers of the workers come to visit them from little towns, else they would have doffed the habit of bonnets, hiding their white waves of hair under frivolous, flowered hats. Most of the patrons of these restaurants come every day, and they soon have a nodding acquaintance here and there, or they drift into conversation with neighbors across the table, on the pretext of passing the salt and pepper.

In the hallways one finds some one waiting for a room-mate or a chum to go in with, or an older sister waiting for her younger to return from work. Some of the more sociable of the regular habitues make little journeys from table to table after dinner, to gather opinions on a new shirt waist or spread the glad news of a raise of salary.

The conversation that flows back and forth from the groups is as varied as the menu, which frequently presents the same familiar friends, but always under different names. Two at your back are discussing the plays of the winter. One thought "Zira" was really sublime in places, and the other is quite positive about its being overdrawn and impossible, though she concedes the power of Miss Anglin's acting.

"I have been taking my dinners uptown," she said; "that is, the evenings I didn't dine out. I have been dining out with friends almost every evening for perfect ages."

Looks of envy from the group around. Across the way one girl is telling another that she doesn't believe she will be able to stand her work under Mr. M—, and everybody in the office feels the same way. He simply is unbearable, a perfect tyrant. A scrap of conversation reaches you from somewhere else: "Of course she lives in a horribly inaccessible place and carfare coming and going mounts up some, but her work really is lovely."

The the subject of vacations comes up with another group. It is the theme of all themes just now, which makes other topics of conversation slink into sudden insignificance. Such a babble begins, like a mill wheel suddenly starting. Splashing up above the general hubbub, you hear detached phrases: "The seashore for me;" "Mine's from July 30 to Aug. 14;" "Perfectly glorious—this soup really is abominable tonight;" "Just the woods and the mountains;" "Home, a hammock, plenty of good things to eat and plenty of time to sleep"—a ceaseless whirl it goes on, punctured now and then by the sing-song calls of the waitresses through the window: "Two soups, Amelia; "One shad and potatoes," "Two steaks medium and one ice cream."

A new form of women's restaurant is coming into popularity, the club cafe. There are two or three of them in Manhattan that have flourished like the green bay tree. There one is one's own waitress, helps one's self at a long counter of huge platters, passing a reviewing stand to have one's helpings appraised, and does al lthe little table chores without aid or assistance. Women like it, because it smacks somewhat of the bargain counter, where you grab for remnants, and then the price tallies with the "Marked-down-to-twelve-and-a-half" of the bargain tables, and there is no tip tacked on to the bill.

LOS ANGELES TO MAKE CEMENT

Scarcity of Material for Public Works Has Doubled Cost.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 8.—Councilmen and members of the board of public works are seeking to devise ways and means of reducing the cost of cement. At the present time the demand in Los Angeles is greater than the supply, and consequently the product has doubled in value during the last three years.

Locations have already been selected for the cement plants. The board of public works has informally adopted Water Superintendent Mulholland's suggestion that the city shall manufacture its own cement. Deposits of cement rock have been staked out and orders will soon be given for the machinery. The board would like to make cement for use in the city.

The grips of the cement famine is felt here in street improvements. Three years ago sidewalk cost 9 cents a square foot; now it costs 14 cents, and the greater portion of the cost has gone into the cement.

Under city specifications a barrel of cement will lay sixty square feet of sidewalk. The prevailing price here at the present time is $4.80 a barrel; this means 8 cents a square foot for cement alone.

When cement sold here for $2.80 a barrel a contractor could make a fair profit at 9½ cents, the appreciation of the price of material has caused a consequent advance in most of the street improvements.

In building the Owens river conduit the city will likely follow the example set by the United States government at the Tonto basin. When bids were received for that cement work the lowest was about $5 a barrel. The government rejected them, established its own plant near the dam and manufactured its cement for a little more than $2 a barrel.

Generally cement is cheaper here in the fall than in the springtime. The wheat fleets from European ports bring cement as ballast. Last year it was the wheat fleets that prevented a complete tieup of local sewer work.

Deposits of cement rock have been located in Antelope valley. The council and the board of public works is willing to lend every encouragement to local capital to develop these mines. Colton cement is reported to be of first grade and with the two Los Angeles should get its cement for not more than $2 a barrel. This is the opinion expressed yesterday by a veteran cement contractor. The reduction would cut at least 4 cents a square foot from the present cost of cement sidewalk.

AWFUL FUTURE FOR POOR EARTH

Terrible Things Predicted by the Prophets of Disaster.

London, June 8.—Terrible predictions concerning what will happen to this poor old earth during the next twenty-five years are being made at a congress of prophets at Exeter hall.

The prophets of disaster were in attendance at a "prophetic and Second Advent conference," and while they differed somewhat in details they all agreed that the end of the world is at hand. They were not quite sure whether the final catastrophe will come on May 2, 1920, or April 9, 1931, but they are quite sure that one of these dates will prove to be the right one.

There can be no doubt that the world has nearly outlived its usefulness, the prophets declared. The wars and earthquakes which have afflicted it recently are proof positive, and all that is required to fulfill the prophecies is the coming of anti-Christ, who is somewhat unkindly identified with Napoleon.

The chancellories of Europe will no doubt be interested to learn that an entire readjustment of the political divisions of the Western world is coming. Between now and 1919 the twenty-two states into which the original territory of the Roman empire is now divided will be reorganized in ten allied kingdoms, and then anti-Christ, or Napoleon will arise.

He will make his first political appearance as king of Syria, but in 1922, he will attack and conquer France and then he will extend his rule over the rest of the ten kingdoms.

There will be 10,000,000 Christians in the world at this time, the prophets declare, but evidently they will not all be equally deserving of favor, for in 1924 of 1926, 144,000 of them will be translated to Heaven, while the other 9,856,000 will be transported to a desert near Mount Siani, where they will have to wait three and one-half years.

It is distressing to learn that only a few members of parliament will be found worthy of immediate translation. The Rev. Mr. Baxter declared that the great majority of the M. P. S. would be left behind.

Mr. Baxter presented a glowing picture of the delights of life in the desert of Siani.

"It will be a strange congregation, in which there will be no distinction of rank," he said. "Food and water will be brought by angelic hands and the time will be spent in reading the Bible, hearing sermons and attending prayer meetings. It will be a good time for the non-sweated workers, who will look upon it as a pleasant picnic and an enjoyable holiday. At the end of the three and one-half years the plous will be translated to heaven as the 144,000 were before them.

"Everywhere else anti-Christ will have full sway. In all the cities and towns of England his image will be placed in the principal squares and the soldiers and police will bring all the inhabitants—men, women and children—before it. Those who refuse to worship the Napoleonic Caesar will be taken to a scaffold and have their heads cut off. Those who accept the worship of the image will be branded on their foreheads and right hands with 666, which Napoleon's names, singly or conjointly, will contain as the total of the numerical value of their letters in the Greek language.

OLDEST TWIN SISTERS.

Two Women Who Shared Their Joys and Sorrows.

Chicago, June 8.—Having gone through life together, traveling in almost the same paths, suffering the same ills, bearing each other's troubles and joys and now ending their years in each other's company, Mrs. Martha Erickson and Mrs. Bertha Fugelstandt, twin sisters, a few days ago, celebrated their eighty-fifth birthday anniversary, surrounded by four generations of their descendants.

Throughout their life the twins have invariably suffered the same ills. Thirty-five years ago they both had measles, and ever since, when an ailment has seized one the other has been similarly affected. Last week both had severe colds. When both had the measles one of the sisters was in Norway, while the other was in America.

Although the oldest twin sisters known in the United States, the two old women are still active.

The many imitations of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve that are now before the public prove it the best. Ask for DeWitt's. Good for burns, scalds, chafed skin, eczema, tetter, cuts, bruises, boils and piles. Sold by all druggists.

GENERAL ORDERS AGAINST SONG POPULAR IN NAVY.

Washington, June 8.—"Damn, damn, damn the Filipino" is not to be sung in the American navy hereafter. Secretary Bonaparte issued a general order forbidding officers and men of the navy singing the song "at any public gathering" or by any body of "assembled men connected with the navy." The order was sent to Rear Admiral R. D. Evans, commanded in chief of the Atlantic fleet of warships.

The song was written by a naval officer, Lieut. Cotton, on board one of the ships attached to the Asiatic fleet. It is not altogether complimentary to the Filipinos. One stanza runs:

I'd rather be driving a bobtail mule
And living on pork and beans,
Than be a lightning bug
Out here in the Philippines.

The secretary wants to stop the song, once and forever. He doesn't believe that the singing of it publicly will help to create a friendly feeling between Americans and the people of our Eastern possessions.

Get What You Ask For!

THERE is a Reason—

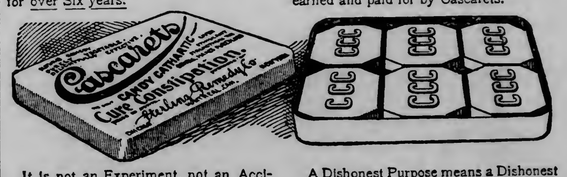

Why the Good People of America buy Cascarets as Fast as the Clock Ticks.

Every second some one, somewhere, is Buying a little Ten-Cent Box of Cascarets.

1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6—60 times to the Minute, 60 Minutes to the Hour, 3600 Boxes an Hour, 36,000 Boxes a Day of Ten Hours, 1,080,000 Boxes a Month, and then some.

Think of it—220,000 People take a Cascaret tablet each day. Millions use Cascarets when necessary.

The Judgment of Millions of Bright Americans is Infallible. They have been Buying and Taking Cascarets at that rate for over Six years.

It is not an Experiment, not an Accident or Incident, but a sound, Honest Business, based on Time-Tried-and-Tested Merit, never found wanting.

There is a Reason.

Cascarets are the Implacable foe of All Disease Germs; the Incomparable cleanser, purifier and strengthener of the entire Digestive Canal.

They Act like Exercise on the Bowel-Muscles, make them strong and active—able to Help Themselves do their work—keep themselves clean.

Cascarets are the safe-guard of Innocent Childhood against the Dreadful Death-dealing Dangers that threaten the Lives of the Little Ones.

They are Purely Vegetable, absolutely Harmless, always Reliable and Efficient, a true, faithful, loyal servant of Mankind.

Over Five Millions of Dollars have been Spent to make the merits of Cascarets known, and every cent of it would be lost, did not sound merit claim and hold the constant, continued friendship, Patronage and Endorsement of well-pleased people year after year.

There is also a Reason—

Why there are Parasites who attach themselves to the Healthy Body of Cascaret's success—Imitators, Counterfeiters, Substitutors.

They are Trade Thieves who would rob Cascarets of the "Good Will" of the people, and sneak unearned profits, earned and paid for by Cascarets.

A Dishonest Purpose means a Dishonest Product and a Disregard of the Purchasers' Health or Welfare.

Beware of the Slick Salesman and his ancient "Just as Good" story that common sense refutes.

Cascarets are made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and the famous little Ten Cent "Vest Pocket" box is here shown. They are never sold in bulk.

Every tablet marked "CCC."

Be sure you get the genuine.

FREE TO OUR FRIENDS!

We want to send to our friends a beautiful French-designed, GOLD-PLATED BONBON BOX, hard-enameled in colors. It is a beauty for the dressing table. Ten cents in stamps is asked as a measure of good faith and to cover cost of Cascarets, with which this dainty trinket is loaded. 726

CONCERNING WOMEN

High school society closed its career for the year in a blaze of glory last evening, when the class of '07 tendered to the class of '06 one of the most brilliant and successful Junior-Senior receptions in the history of the school. The greatest credit is due to the committee in charge of the affair, for everything about it was as nearly perfect as time and care could make it.

The prevailing tone of the decorations was red, which in combination with white forms the school colors, and with black and gold forms the class colors of '06 and '07 respectively. The programs were very plain, red covered and with pencils attached, with a heavy yellow cord. La Brosse was at his best, and about eighty couples of the Juniors, Seniors and their friends enjoyed the twenty-four dances to the utmost, and it was in the wee, small hours of the morning that the last strains of "Home, Sweet Home," died away. A novel feature of the dance was a number of "Moonlight" numbers. All the lights of the hall were turned off and the only illumination was furnished by a huge electric moon, high in one wall of the room. The effect of this dim light, mistily outlining the gracefully swaying forms of the dancers, made a most striking and beautiful picture.

The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Millar, Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Goodman, Mr. and Mrs. Jack MacLaren, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Stockling, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Frick and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ball. Those present were:

What Retail Markets Offer

Cantaloupes, 30 and 35 cents each.
California cherries, 35 cents a lb.
Cherries for pie, 15 cents a quart.
Pineapples, 15 and 20 cents each.
Spring boilers, $1.85 a pair.
Spring lamb, $2.25 a hind quarter.
Nice pot roast, 12½ cents a lb.

The market is a precious joy, luscious fruits without end, and the exclusive things in the meat department are at such prices that one would think they must be fresh and pure and antituberculosis and all the other things which the news says they aren't. If only the eternal fitness of things would have pot roast that nobody wants for $1.85 for all the pot roasts in a cow, and spring boilers that everybody likes, for 12½ cents each!

The melons for Sunday breakfast are delicious looking and exclusive, but the pineapples, which are really the prettiest things in the market, are there in quantities, and are cheap. Everybody can have pineapples, and really there is nothing nicer. They are delicate, juicy, tasteful and good, and only 20 cents each. The cherries, both for pies and plain eating, are good, and nearly everything else the market offers is in prime condition.

Delicious Methods of Putting Up Strawberries

BY MRS. EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

There is no better way to put up strawberries than the old Weisbaden process. The berries should be home grown, fresh and firm. The first pickings from the vines are usually the finest flavored. For a dozen quart cans measure out twelve quarts of large, fine, dead ripe berries. Prepare a syrup from as many more quarts of berries, which should be fresh and ripe, but need not be large. Add just a little water to these to keep them from sticking to the kettle and cook a few moments, then mash and strain the juice through a jelly bag. To six pints of juice add six pounds of sugar. Put into a porcelain lined or granite kettle, boil three minutes and skim. Fill sterilized cans with the fresh whole berries that have not been cooked, shake down so as to get in as many as possible without crowding, cover with the hot syrup and put on the covers loosely without rubbers. Set the jars on a wooden rack fitted into the bottom of an ordinary wash boiler with straw, cloths or a rope between, to keep them from knocking together.

Fill the boiler with hot water nearly to the depth of the cans and let them remain in just five minutes from the time the water begins to boil. The strawberries will rise to the top of the cans during this process and have absorbed some of the syrup. Now, lifting out the cans one by one, take off each top in turn, adjust the fresh rubber and fill to overflowing with more of the syrup which should have been kept hot in another small kettle. Screw as tightly as possible. As they cool, keep tightening, and when quite cold wrap in paper to keep the light from them. Write the name of the fruit with the date of canning plainly on the outside so that it will not be necessary to unwrap the can to find out its contents. Set away in a cool, dark place.

In "scalping" strawberries, as an Arizona woman, one of the pioneers, aptly terms the hulling, use the little strawberry tongs that come on purpose and do not cost over 5 cents, or quite as good, the tongs that come with fine bonbons. This removes the hulls more expeditiously and thoroughly than can be done with the fingers.

Preserved Strawberries.

Still another way to preserve strawberries is this. "Scalp" fresh picked berries, lay in shallow earthen dishes, sprinkling plentifully with sugar. If you wish the berries very rich a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit, is the usual proportion, but I think three-fourths of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit quite sufficient. Set away in a cool place for two or three hours, then pour off the juice which the sugar will have drawn from the berries. Put this into a kettle, adding just a little water (not more than a cupful for every five quarts of juice). Bring this to a scald, then drop in about enough of the berries to fill one jar. Let them remain two or three minutes only, take out carefully with a perforated spoon so as to leave the juice behind and fill a sterilized can two-thirds full. Repeat this until all the berries have been used, keeping all the cans meanwhile in a dripping pan of hot water, with a folded towel on the bottom and another pan turned over them to retain the heat. Then fill each can in turn with the scalding syrup, put on a layer of paraffine or a tablespoonful of brandy or good olive oil and seal quickly.

Strawberry Bar le Duc.

Three things are indispensable in making this finest of preserves. The first is strong, steady sunshine, the second hot platters or plates, and third plenty of window glass. The fruit should be perfect and of good flavor, the sugar pure. To every pound of fruit allow a pound of sugar. Heat the sugar on tin plates in the oven, taking care not to let it melt or get too brown. It should, however, be as hot as possible without melting. Have in readiness hot platters or deep plates. Spread a thin layer of hot sugar over the bottom, then a layer of fruit and lastly another layer of sugar. Cover the platter with a sheet of window glass and place out doors in the hot sun or in a sunny window in an unused room. If the fruit is out of doors it must be brought in when the sun sets and set in a dry place in the house over night. Return to the sun in the morning. In two or three days the fruit will grow plump and firm and the syrup almost a jelly. Pack in tumblers and seal. If the syrup is not thick, boil until clear and thickened, then pour in the glasses over the fruit. Some good cooks in this part of the country prefer to cook fruit and sugar for ten minutes before spreading on the platter. This of course hastens the preserving process in the sun.

Strawberry Jam.

Hull ripe, dry strawberries, being sure the fruit is dry and clean, though not necessarily large. Weigh and to every two pounds of fruit allow a pound and a half of sugar. Put into a preserving kettle, mash, heat gradually and cook until a spoonful turned on a cold saucer jells. Put into jars, cover with a round brandied paper or paraffine, then tie close.

There's little room in this great world of ours for the "Fat Woman." She's a hindrance to herself in street cars, flats, elevators; but what can she do, poor thing—take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

FAMOUS WAR GOVERNOR.

Kansas City Journal: Frederick Holbrook of Vermont, who recently passed his 93rd birthday, is the only one of the famous "war governors" now surviving. He stood with Governors Curtin of Pennsylvania, and Andrew of Massachusetts, as one of the stanchest supporters of the Lincoln administration when it most needed such support as they could give. Among the beneficent institutions for which the nation is indebted to Mr. Holbrook's initiative were the military hospital established at Brattleboro during the civil war, where from 1,500 to 2,000 soldiers were cared for at once, and the national bureau of agriculture. The ex-governor was choirmaster in the Brattleboro Congregational church for forty years.

CLAIMS IT IS A NUISANCE

Christian Evens Starts Damage Case Over a Stone Crusher.

Claims George R. King Has Irreparably Damaged His Property.

Did George R. King, the street contractor, trespass on Christian E. Evens lots at First street and Fifth avenue east. Was and is his stone crushing plant, which has been occupying the premises for a year or two, a nuisance? Has Mr. Evens been irreparably damaged by the removal of a large quantity of rock which formerly covered the lots?

These are three questions which will have to be settled at the September term of the district court in a damage suit that Mr. Evens has instituted against Mr. King. In the complaint filed with the clerk of the district court this morning, Mr. Evens demands $2,900 general and special damages and $1,000 exemplary damages. He also petitions the court to prevent Mr. King, his assignees or agents, removing from the premises or the adjoining lots, the piles or heaps of crushed and uncrushed rock that have accumulated.

The location of the stone crushing plant which is probably familiar to nearly everybody that resides in the East end, is described as on lots 10, 11, and 12, block 24, Portland division. These are all owned by Mr. Evens, according to his complaint.

Mr. King, it is asserted, went on the property without the consent of the owner, in April, 1903, and has ever since "unlawfully trespassed on the land and has created and maintained a nuisance thereon and destroyed the use and greatly impaired the value of the land."

Mr. King is claimed to have been operating his rock crushing machinery continuously since he went on the land, his material for crushing being rock that he mined and blasted out of the lots. Mr. Evens claims that his damages in this particular alone are $1,600.

The dumping of rock on the premises, and the driving of teams and wagons across the land are claimed to have added $300 more to the damages sustained by Mr. Evens. He alleges that because of the so-called unlawful occupation of the land by the stone crusher he lost an opportunity of selling the lots in 1905, and for this he asks another $500 damages.

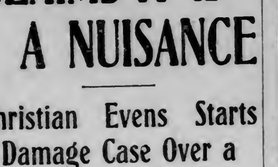

Another allegation made by Mr. Evens is that while the stone crusher was in operation vast quantities of dirt and dust were carried by the wind to adjoining properties, thereby interfering with the healthful and convenient use and enjoyment of those properties by their owners. For that reason Mr. Evens classes the plant as a nuisance.

The exemplary damages of $1,000 are demanded for Mr. King's alleged "wanton disregard and violation of the plaintiff's rights and the malicious, intentional and wrongful trespass that the plaintiff has sustained."

Mr. Evens is represented by John J. Jenswold, Jr.

A LETTER FROM PROF. MUENTER

Is Received by an Uncle of His Murdered Wife.

Milwaukee, June 8.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Fond du Lac, Wis., says: Lewis F. Haas, an uncle of Leona Muenter, the woman who died under mysterious circumstances at Cambridge, Mass., is in receipt of a letter which he believes is from Eric Muenter, the woman's husband, who is wanted on a charge of murder. The letter is unsigned, and is dated New Orleans.

It starts with a description of the murder of a woman, the details of which might well have corresponded with the supposed Massachusetts crime. It then goes on to harshly criticise the newspapers for giving so much notoriety to the case, and the last two pages are filled with pleadings with the dead woman's relatives to believe him innocent of the crime with which he has been accused. Then he immediately turns about and denounces his brothers-in-law for calling him a murderer, and calls them despicable.

There is no doubt here that the letter is from Muenter. Mr. Haas says that the letter gives the names of all the dead woman's brothers, and for this reason he is sure that it must be from the missing Harvard professor.

SHORT ROAD TO CARLTON

Good Roads Association of That Place Agitating It.

Only Bridge is Needed at Fond du Lac to Make It.

The Carlton County Good Roads association is certainly taking the good roads matter seriously, and it putting up an active and vigorous campaign. Alderman L. A. Barnes has received a letter from F. B. McLeran, who is secretary of the Carlton association, and in the letter he has the following to say:

"We are pushing hard for a road from Carlton to Duluth, via Wrenshall and Fond du Lac. We want you to help us. It is needless to state that the importance of this road to West Duluth is enormous, as it would bring the farmers' trade of this community all to your end of the city. I do not think I need to detail the advantages of this route.

"It is shorter by ten miles, more direct, without hills, and the road is already built. All that is lacking is the bridge. 'Pull for the bridge.'"

It is understood that the bridge which he means in the letter is needed at Fond du Lac. The road, it is claimed, is excellent in most seasons, but a little fixing up would not hurt it any.

MERELY IDLE TALK.

Central Avenue's Roadway Can be Remedied in Only One Way.

The morning paper is again agitating the improvement of Central avenue, and suggesting that it be put in better shape. This has been going on for two years, and seems to be to no purpose, for the only improvement which can be made is by petition of the property owners.

Two years ago they petitioned for a telford macadam roadway, and they got it. They were urged at the time to petition for a tar macadam roadway, but would not stand the expense, although it is now acknowledged that that is what is needed. The macadam roadway is not satisfactory, and the city knows it, but the authorities can do nothing unless the property owners petition for something else, and are willing to put up the expense of furnishing it. So these protests are idle and can accomplish nothing, for the city cannot act in the matter independently.

Most of the people on Central avenue know this, and are rather tired of seeing the printed protests against the city.

PROUD OF SHOWING.

Irving School's Part in Graduation is Very Gratifying

The showing made by the graduates of the Irving school at the Central high school last night was most creditable, and West Duluth is quite proud of them. Sixty-five Irving school pupils were graduated, which is the largest class ever turned out of that institution. The part taken in the exercises by these pupils was one of the features of the affair, and much praise was received for its success.

During the past year a Freshman high school class has been conducted in Irving school, and during the coming year a Sophomore class will be conducted. Each year a course will be added, until the entire high school course will have been supplied.

Sinks With Launch.

A gasoline launch which has been on exhibition in Wade's store since about Jan. 1, was launched in the bay at Sixty-first avenue yesterday and Charles Lovelace got into it. The long stay of the boat out of water in a steam-heated building had caused the seams to open to some extent and the boat rapidly filled and soon went to the bottom, leaving Mr. Lovelace to do the best he could. The worst he got was a soaking and a good deal of joshing since. The boat was left on the bottom, to allow its seams to close again and then it will be raised.

MAY BLAST AT NIGHT.

Work on Point of Rocks Will Not Obstruct Traffic.

For the purpose of ascertaining the best method of removing the face of the cliff at Thirteenth avenue west, with the least possible obstruction to traffic, a conference was held this morning between the city engineer, the members of the board of public works and the manager of the street railway company.

As a result of the conference, it is likely that the blasting will be done at night, and the company will probably assist in the work of removing the rock.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Sensational Alienation Case Suddenly Dropped at Grand Forks

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—In the district court the case of Stephen J. Gravelle against Dr. F. P. Williams was dismissed on motion of the plaintiff, against whom the costs were taxed, and this disposes of the case that was expected to attract the greatest amount of attention at the present term of the district court. The action was brought several months ago to recover damages in the sum of $5,000, the plaintiff charging Dr. Williams, a prominent practitioner of Superior, Wis., with alienating his wife's affections.

At an adjourned meeting of the council the salaries of officials and employes were fixed as follows: Auditor, $1,500; attorney, $1,200; health officer, $400; assessor, $1,200; treasurer, $1,500; street commissioner, $960; fire chief, $1,500; assistant, $960; chief of police, $100 a month; captain of police, $80; patrolmen, from $60 to $70 a month.

Fire broke out in the large plant of the Grand Forks Lumber company in East Grand Forks and the big mill was threatened with a total loss. However, the mail was saved, but two large barns and other smaller structures were destroyed, entailing a loss of from $6,000 to $8,000.

Fargo—The chances for a military encampment in this state have gone glimmering. The lack of state funds for that purpose is the reason assigned. The annual encampments have been held at Devils Lake. It is probable that a representation will be sent to Wyoming this summer to take part in the national encampment. The chief difficulty is the inability of a majority of the militia to get away from their private duties the length of time required by the government.

Thirteen years ago Thursday Fargo had its great fire, when the property loss was estimated at over $3,000,000. The area on which houses were destroyed was forty-two blocks. The fire is generally, in the light of later events, regarded as a boom, and the new Fargo dates from that time. No celebration has been arranged other than the annual Shrine meeting.

On a complaint charging him with practicing medicine in this state without a license, Dr. Van Snyder was arrested. He has conducted a local sanitarium here for some time and advertised to cure all chronic diseases.

The Fidelity & Guaranty company has brought suit against the estate of the late United States marshal, Haggart, for $3,000, and the action is an echo of the convictions of Deputy Marshals Hurst and Schindler of using passes on railroads and turning in expense accounts. The government brought suit against the bonding company and won, and the latter seeks reimbursement through the estate of the man who appointed the deputies.

There has been a change of ownership in the Fargo Milling company. Manager W. A. Tenant selling his interests to C. A. Tenant and C. M. Wright.

Grocer S. A. Perry and Clothier D. Aronson were arrested on a charge of violating a city ordinance in keeping their stores open Sundays. The complaint was made by a member of the clerks' union, and is the result of the refusal of the two men to agree to an early closing movement. The stores of both have been picketed for several weeks.

Two efforts at suicide by Christ Anderson of Bisbee have been unsuccessful. While intoxicated he fired two shots at himself, but neither took effect. He was then disarmed.

Towner—Torey Hougom, 85 years of age, who resided five miles east of Towner, was struck by lightning and instantly killed.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Rapid City—A serious runaway occurred when I. H. Chase and family were driving to the Indian school. When coming down the hill this side of the school the horses became frightened and ran, and the carriage was overturned. Mrs. Chase had her arm broken in two places and was seriously bruised. Mr. Chase was unconscious and it was thought at first that he was dead, but a subsequent examination showed that he was living, although it is feared that his spine is seriously injured. He is one of the pioneer merchants in the Black Hills, owning dry goods and clothing stores in almost every town in the surrounding country.

Pierre—A term of United States court will be held in this city next week, at which several land-fencing cases against men in the country west will come up for trial. It is said that over a hundred such cases will be tried in a few months, and the result will put a stop to a large amount of fencing on government lands.

A party of caisson workers, with J. W. Laws as foreman, have arrived from New York to work on the piers of the permanent railroad bridge at this place. They will have to go down about forty feet below the water level in the main channel of the river, working through sand. Part of the material for the work is on the ground, and it is expected that active operations will begin shortly after the 15th.

Yankton—Early Wednesday morning fire destroyed the Van Epps livery and boarding stables. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it had a good start when discovered. Mr. Van Epps' loss is total. He lost five horses and his entire livery equipment, including harness, carriages, etc. One team belonging to a transient was lost. One of Mr. Van Epps' teams was out and it is all that was saved.

SUPREME COURT OUSTS JUDGE

Grants Issuance of a Writ Against C. B. Jack of Stillwater.

St. Paul, June 8.—C. B. Jack of Stillwater, who has refused to vacate the office of municipal judge at Stillwater, although M. E. Sullivan was elected to succeed him last November, has finally been ousted by the supreme court, which in a decision filed today grants the issuance of a writ of ouster.

Jack's contention was that Sullivan had failed to properly qualify.

When a gambling house is raided by the police without formal authority of law, the supreme court holds the character of the place justifies such action, though the officers are not armed with search warrants and other legal ammunition.

The decision in the case of Fred Hoyle, appellant, is an affirmation of the Minneapolis municipal court.

In reversing a Steele county decision the supreme court today elucidated certain phases of the law in regard to a divorced wife's interest in her former husband's property. The syllabus: Augusta Linse, respondent, vs. Carl Linse, appellant. When divorced from husband is granted to the wife upon the ground of adultery, her interest in the husband's estate is the same as upon his death. Holmes vs. Holmes, 54 Minn. 352.

But if in such action the wife freely and advisedly consents to a certain division of the estate and agrees to accept a certain amount as permanent alimony in lieu of all other interests and such division is accepted and adopted by the trial court, and judgment is entered that except as to such amount the wife has no share, or interest in the husband's estate, such judgment is final unless set aside for cause and having accepted and retained the amount adjudged as permanent alimony, she is estopped from denying the validity of the judgment. Judgment reversed.

PRESIDENT OF R. R. DEFENDED

Witness Says Former Penna Head Advised Against Taking Stock.

Philadelphia, June 8.—W. G. Spangler, local agent of the Pennsylvania railroad at Milton, Pa., was the first witness before the interstate commerce commission today. Mr. Spangler testified that in addition to his duties as railroad agent, he also acted as sales agent for the Keystone Coal & Coke company. He said that the greater portion of the coal tonnage for Milton had been shipped over the lines of the Reading company, until he became sales agent for the coal company, when the Pennsylvania's tonnage was increased about 1,000 tons monthly. He was made sales agent after a conference with Robert K. Cassatt, and his appointment was made with the knowledge and consent of H. B. Lincoln, division superintendent of the road at Milton. He received a commission of 2½ cents a ton from the Keystone company.

Milton is a manufacturing town, and most of the coal used by the factories came from the Beech Creek district, on the lines of the New York Central road. The Keystone Coal & Coke company's operations are located in the Greensburg district, on the Pennsylvania line.

J. McClellan of Blairsville, Pa., the first witness at the afternoon session of the interstate commerce hearing who appeared voluntarily, said he came to Philadelphia to vindicate former President Frank Thomson of the Pennsylvania road. Mr. McClellan said that while he was in the employ of the railroad company he had been offered a "block of stock" by Capt. Alfred Hicks, who was about to organize a mining company. Witness said he wrote to Mr. Thomson, asking his advice in the matter and that Mr. Thomson had advised him "not to take the stock"; that "honor is worth more than all the stock you can acquire." McClellan produced Thomson's letter, which was dated June 13, 1894.

Previous witnesses before the commission testified that Mr. Thomson sanctioned the acceptance of gifts to employes from coal companies.

MATAAFA'S ESCAPADE

Steamer Runs Away Into Lake, With Two Reid Boats.

Tugs Are Necessary to Bring the Fleet Back Again.

The steamer Mataafa ran away this morning and it required the services of two tugs, the Inman and the Zenith, to bring her back into the bay again. She had drifted away out into the lake before she was captured. Now she has been taken over near the Superior dry docks, that haven of refuge she has been yearning for ever since the big storm ripped her up so.

A peculiar feature of the Mataafa's wild prank was the taking along of two of the Reid Wrecking company's boats. These craft were moored alongside the Mataafa in the bay and both of them apparently had steam up when the little fleet began to drift out to sea. But their motive power was not brought into effective play, for the three boats—the big Mataafa and the two tugs—drifted merrily along toward the lake.

Mariners blinked in bewilderment and wondering citizens on the pier and other places near at hand gaped in astoishment. Could it be that the Mataafa was to be taken out into the lake again after all the work that had been put forth to bring her into the harbor?

In her drifting, however, the Mataafa had much better luck with the piers than she did when she attempted to gain the harbor during the big gale of last fall. The trip to the lake was made without accident.

When everyone who saw the affair had overcome their astonishment, the tugs Inman and Zenith were dispatched to the rescue, from the tug office. They caught up with the three boats while they were drifting in the direction of Two Harbors.

Considerable trouble was had in bringing the fleet about and getting it back into the harbor again. The theory that Capt. Reid had turned pirate and was trying to make off with the big steamer presented itself. As there were no guns aboard the tugs, the formality of firing a shot across the Mataafa's bow had to be dispensed with.

But, seriously, it was some little time before the strange runaways were back in the harbor. The operation had to be accomplished just about as carefully as when the Mataafa was brought in last Sunday.

Now the boat is in the ship yards bay, where it will be impossible for her to run away. In a very short time, she will be placed in the dry dock and made over into practically a new ship.

The boat was lying in the bay without anchors with the Reid boats to hold her in position and the fresh wind and current caught them unawares.

A BETTING QUESTION.

Mataafa's Break Complicates Matters on Wagers Made on Her.

The dash for liberty made by the wrecked steamer Mataafa this morning has mixed things up in regard to some bets which have been made concerning her, and there is a fine point to be decided in some of these bets. Many have been made.

A fair sample of some of them is one which was made some time ago between George Barney, engineer of the tug Excelsior, and J. L. Travers. Mr. Travers offered to bet a new hat that during this season the Mataafa would go out of the harbor with a load of ore. Mr. Barney took the bet. If one was permitted to presume things, the conclusion might be drawn that in that bet there is a case of parentheses in which was included the understanding that the Mataafa was to have been repaired and formally resume her navigation career. But that was not the spoken understanding, and, technically, Mr. Travers has won a new hat from Mr. Barney.

It is said that there are many such bets, and doubtless there will be a good deal of discussion concerning the winners as a result of the gambol the steamer took this morning, for she had on board 4,000 tons of ore and went through the piers into the lake.

ACCIDENTS TO STEAMERS.

Sawyer Drops Propellor---Iroquois on Ground at Boston Dock.

This morning, while the steamer William H. Sawyer was lying at the Missabe dock loading ore, the engineer, in overhauling the machinery, was turning the engine over slowly. While doing so her wheel dropped off, having become loosened in some manner. The Union Towing & Wrecking company sent a diver up and this afternoon he found the wheel, and it was hoisted onto the tug Record. Then two tugs took the steamer to the drydock in Superior to have the wheel put on again.

The steamer Iroquois is stuck on the sand at the Boston coal dock, and two tugs are at work trying to release her.

Two More Freighters Ordered.

Cleveland, June 8.—The American Shipbuilding company yesterday closed contracts for two more freighters, making six steamers booked for construction by that company during the past ten days. These latest orders were placed by the Gilchrist Transportation company and the news ships will be six feet longer than the steamers Sherwin and Wood of that line, which came out this season. The new boats will be 540 feet long over all, 520 feet keel, 54 feet beam and 31 feet deep. They will have triple expansion engines and Scotch boilers. The boats will cost $370,000 each and will be ready for service at the opening of navigation next spring.

RAILROADS

TO COME VIA GREENBUSH

New Plans Concerning the Canadian Great Northern Line.

Will Not Enter Duluth by International Falls Branch.

If James J. Hill's proposed Canadian transcontinental line enters Duluth, it will not be via the International Falls branch, which is about to be construct ed, according to present plans of the railway magnate. Should the Canadian road enter Duluth, which it very likely will do, it will be by a survey run southeast from Winnipeg by way of Greenbush, Minn., to Dewey Lake, Minn., from which point the Hill lines have their own rails into Duluth. The extension from Dewey Lake to International Falls is to be built as a feeder, and is said to have no connection with the Canadian plans.

During the past few weeks much has been said and written in regard to the so-called invasion of Canada by Mr. Hill, and curiosity has been expressed concerning Hill's reasons for building this new transcontinental line, when already the country is served by the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern, with the Grand Trunk Pacific under construction. The Railway Age gives the following explanation:

"In Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and Alberta lie the great wheat-producing fields of Western Canada, a territory which is estimated to contain 800,000 square miles of fertile agricultural lands. The development of this section during the past few years has been remarkable. Hundreds of thousands of farmers have flocked to this new country from the United States, and the inflow continues. From Winnipeg west to the Rocky Mountains, and south of lat. 54, the country is now half occupied, but Mr. Hill makes the assertion that there is still room for more people in this region than are now contained in all of the old provinces of Canada. During the past forty years the United States has had an almost unlimited amount of land to offer homeseekers, but the supply of arable lands is nearly exhausted, and the tide of immigration, which has built up a dozen or more of the great Western states, has turned to the Canadian Northwest. Thousands of settlers are pouring into this new country monthly, and it will continue to grow with marvelous rapidity.

"Mr. Hill asks this question: 'How long will it be before the United States ceases to be a wheat exporting nation? We now use 600,000,000 bushels of wheat annually for bread and seed, and the yearly consumption is increasing at a rapid pace. With our population growing steadily, home consumption will increase, and it will not be a great many years until the United States will have to import wheat from Canada.'

"The occupation of these fertile lands means an immense grain traffic for the railroads and Mr. Hill has determined to get a share of it. The mountainous regions of British Columbia are wonderfully rich in coal, minerals and lumber. The farmers on the prairies east of the mountains need this coal and lumber and there will be a large traffic in these commodities when the new line to Winnipeg is built. The people of Western Canada want to reach Canadian markets. With the mountain road nearing completion, the Hill system, serving the rich Kootenay district, must have communication with the Canadian commercial centers. Winnipeg is the gateway between Western Canada and the eastern provinces. It is now the third city of the Dominion, and with the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Hill roads complete it will not be surprising if it soon takes its place as the second city."

E. D. Sewall Promoted.

E. D. Sewall, for the past four years assistant general superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road at Minneapolis, has gone to Chicago as assistant to the president of the road. Mr. Sewall formerly was connected with the freight department, and is well known in Duluth. He opened the Milwaukee's offices in this city.

TOBACCO SOLACE OF ALL.

World's Rulers Are Constant Users of Weed That Soothes.

Berlin, June 8.—Every throne in Europe is enveloped in tobacco smoke, except those of Holland and Turkey. Queen Wilhelmina's ideas on the subject differ from those of some other women of exalted station, while Abdul Hamid is restrained by the Mohammedan religion.

Moreover, every president of a republic in the old and new world so far as is known, except President Roosevelt, and every Oriental potentate finds solace in "the weed."

Emperor William of Germany smokes huge cigarettes, specially made for him.

King Edward of England has always been devoted to cigarettes, but of late years has leaned more and more toward dark Havana cigars. Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria likes the Austrian made cigars manufactured of Virginia tobacco with a straw running through it. King Leopold of Belgium is a cigarette fiend, but always enjoys a pipe.

The greatest smoker of all is the stout, ever contented King Carlos of Portugal. It is said that he smokes forty cigars a day. King Alfonso of Spain takes an occasional cigarette. Pius X is the first pope who has been known to enjoy a good cigar. His predecessors confined their love of tobacco to snuff. The khedive of Egypt burns such bad cigarettes that the English master of his household, taking pity on the diplomats, had some good ones specially manufactured for the use of the diplomatic corps.

HER WORD IS LAW.

Bertha Krupp Picked Out Husband and Her Choice Unquestioned.

Berlin, June 8.—Bertha Krupp, the richest girl on earth, has picked out a husband and compelled her family's consent, as your dispatches have told, but she has not set her wedding day. Probably she will name some day in October.

When she insisted on her dowage the family had to yield, for her father stipulated in his will that her choice of a spouse should not be influenced.

Her bridegroom-elect, Gustav Von Bohlen Und Halbach, is 36, fifteen years older than she is, and in no sense of striking individuality, though highly educated. In manner he is quiet, unassuming and diffident. He has known Bertha ever since she was a child, when her father was minister for the grand duchy of Baden at The Hague. He is connected by kinship or marriage with Prince Leopold of Lippe.

It has been reported that he is a poor man, but in truth he owns considerable property, though his fortune is a mere bagatelle compared with Bertha's wealth.

Her property in the mammoth iron works at Essen alone is estimated to be worth $40,000,000, and eventually she will be worth $150,000,000 or more. Her annual income is said to be now $4,000,000.

Under the terms of Baron Alfred Krupp's will, Von Bohlen Halbach will enter the great iron firm and conduct its affairs.

THE "FLOWER OF INDIA" OUTSHINES AMERICANS.

Philadelphia, June 8.—For the first time since she landed in America the Maharani of Baroda, the Gaikwar of Baroda's wife, the "Princess Beautiful," or "Flower of India," as she is known at home, appeared last night in her best clothes at a party given in her honor by Mrs. John Law of New York.

She proved her right to her titles when she sat at table with some of America's loveliest women.

Besides Mrs. Law, herself a famous beauty, were Miss Elkins, the daughter of Senator Stephen B. Elkins, Miss May of Washington, Mrs. H. S. Kip of New York and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt.

It was a severe test, but the Maharani's pre-eminence was admitted.

Contrary to expectation the dinner was private and not at all elaborate, but the appearance of the Maharani compensated for anything that might be lacking.

She wore a collaret of pearls, one of the priceless heirlooms that it had been supposed the Maharani had left for safekeeping in India.

One of the pearls pendant from the collaret is a priceless gem, easily the largest pearl ever seen in America. Next to the collaret in interest was the Maharani's ear jewelry. From each ear dangled a star-shaped piece of gold carved in Oriental pattern. To each of the three lowest points of the star and pendant from it was attached a great pearl.

The Maharani's gown was of wonderful diaphanous silken drapery, which was carried over her head and bordered with gold about her face. She wore a golden girdle. Her hair was combed down smooth in a coil in the back. The drapery seemed yards in length and fell about her feet as she walked to her seat of honor at the table.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

The fact that S. S. S. is a purely vegetable preparation, containing not the slightest trace of mineral in any form, has been one of the strongest points in its favor during its forty years of existence. It is recognized everywhere not only as the best of all blood purifiers, but the one medicine that can be taken with absolute safety by the youngest child or the oldest member of the family. Next in importance to removing the cause of any disease is the condition in which the system is left after a course of medical treatment. Medicines containing mercury, potash or other strong mineral ingredients often do permanent injury by eating out the delicate lining and tissues of the stomach, producing chronic dyspepsia, unfavorably affecting the bowels and so damaging the system that even if the original cause of the disease has been removed, it is left in such a deranged and weakened condition that the health is permanently impaired. S. S. S. enjoys the distinction of being the only blood medicine on the market that does not contain a mineral property in some form. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks it is absolutely harmless to any part of the system, and while curing disease adds strength and health to every part of the body. S. S. S. removes all poisons, freshens and purifies the blood and gives better and more lasting results than any other blood medicine. S. S. S. is the very best treatment for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrotula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison and all troubles due to an impure or poisoned blood supply. Besides being the King of blood purifiers S. S. S. is the best and most invigorating of all tonics.

POTATOES ARE SCARCE

Few Southern States Have Any Surplus Supply for Shipment.

No Lower Prices for Strawberries Looked for This Year.

Potatoes have now reached a higher figure than they have been at any time since the new crop came on the market last spring.

The old potatoes are selling at 80 and 85 cents a bushel on Michigan street, and it is difficult to secure enough to fill orders even at that figure.

The cause of the scarcity is the break between the two crops. The new potatoes are not yet on the market in large enough quantities to supply the demand, and the old crop is almost exhausted.

The potato crop in the South is reported to be a partial failure. In some parts the supply has not been sufficient to supply the home demand and shipments have been made from the North during the last week or ten days.

The supply of old potatoes on hand is very light and it is not unlikely that potatoes will go to $1 a bushel before they are any lower than the present figure.

The new potatoes are being brought in by the carload lot at the present time, but the receipts are not sufficient to supply the demand, and the price is firm at $1.75 per bushel.

The strawberry market is very firm at the present time. The crop in many parts of the South has been a big disappointment, and the supply has hardly been sufficient to keep pace with the enormous demand from all parts of the country.

Illinois berries are now on the market, and the Missouri and Arkansas berries are about done.

The Illinois crop is rather light, and it is not expected that any material drop in prices will result from the nearer approach of the source of supply in the market.

The Wisconsin crop is also reported to be light, and while there may be a slight decrease in price when the home supply gets on the market, it is not expected to be very material, and the dealers predict that berries will not sell at a much lower figure than they are now, during the remainder of the season.

Some shipments of the famous Hood River berries from Oregon have been received on the market this week. They are considered very choice and are bringing a higher price than any of the other varieties, selling for $1 for a case of twenty-four quarts. This means about twenty cents a quart at retail.

Aside from strawberries and potatoes there has been little change in the fruit and vegetable market conditions from last week. Oranges and lemons continue firm in price, though there has been no material advance. The heavy demand caused by the hot weather in the East is ascribed as the cause.

There is a plentiful supply of all kinds of fresh vegetables, with the exception of beets and carrots, which are reported to be rather a scarce commodity.

The season for Florida pineapples is now at its height. The season is a short one, and the dealers advise housekeepers to buy their supplies for preserves now.

Until yesterday the weather was very unfavorable for the commission business. The cold, raw wind kept shoppers indoors, and there was little or no local demand for fresh fruits and vegetables. The arrival of warmer weather yesterday was a very welcome change to the commission men, and they are expecting a brisk revival in business conditions.

The supply of fish is still very limited. Owing to the heavy northeast winds on the lake, it was impossible for the fishermen to venture out during the early part of the week, and until yesterday the source of supply for the local market has been practically cut off. Several consignments were received today, however, and by tomorrow the market should be well supplied again.

Butter, eggs, cheese and poultry all remain practically unchanged from last week. The market appears to be firm on all of these products, and the dealers report that there is little prospect of lower prices in the immediate future.

SEE END OF WORLD.

Members of Sect Say It Will Come About 1929.

London, June 8.—The spring meetings, famous all over the world, are on in full strength just now. Exeter hall, in the Strand, has a meeting of some sort morning, noon and night. One of the strangest of the meetings there has been that of the End-of-the-Worlders. The members of this curious league are aged people. Several venerable prophets with bushy whiskers, assisted by limelight views, held the stage for a time. Practically all of them had different ideas regarding the end of the world, but the audience applauded each alike.

It was genrally declared that exclusive signs and wonders will commence in twelve years' time but nothing serious will happen until 1929. Socialists will by that time be governing the world and will have adopted as their trademark the number "666." This will be branded or tattooed on the forehead of all who do not wish to be beheaded and the members of the Socialist Labor party.

At or about this date the world will be invaded by 200,000,000 infernal demons, probably from Mars. These demons will begin to kill off the population. Finally will come Armageddon, the greatest of all battles, in which all the people of the world will fight the demons. The result will be a draw, but not until both sides have been absolutely exterminated. Then down will come the curtain, for that will be the end of the world.

Total shipments for the same months were 49,425,657 bushels in 1906, 34,715,526 in 1905, and 24,961,954 in 1904.

Receipts for the four-month period aggregated 231,042,837 bushels, while shipments amounted to 177,269,093 bushels. Both the inbound and outbound movements show large gains over those of the corresponding periods in either of the two immediately preceding years. Of the receipts, 55,688,073 bushels were wheat, 79,553,559 corn, 70,704,377 oats, 22,414,448 barley, and 2,682,380 rye; the gains made in the wheat, oats and barley receipts more than offsetting the losses sustained in those of corn and rye.

Livestock receipts at Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, St. Joseph and St. Paul during April totaled 2,836,250 head, in contrast with 2,768,765 in April, 1905, and 2,696,692 in 1904. Shipments for the same months were 712,790 head in 1906, 811,147 in 1905, and 670,526 in 1904. Receipts at these markets during the first four months of the current year were 2,574,336 cattle, 171,521 calves, 6,680,809 hogs, 3,355,997 sheep, and 181,620 horses and mules, a total of 12,967,283, compared with 12,318,415 for the corresponding months in 1905, and 12,296,349 in 1904. Of the current year's movement, 5,631,228 were received at Chicago, 2,259,464 at Kansas City, 1,329,308 at Omaha, 1,449,415 at St. Louis, 1,242,285 at St. Joseph, and 534,652 at St. Paul. Compared with the preceding year, gains occurred at all of the markets except Chicago at St. Paul. Total shipments for the same month were 3,345,539 head in 1906, 2,995,538 in 1905, and 2,894,102 in 1904.

Eastbound movements of provisions from Chicago and Chicago Junction points during April totaled 110,640 tons against 105,333 in April, 1905, and 101,479 in April, 1904. For the present year to April 28 similar shipments aggregated 464,095 tons, compared with 437,378 for the like period in 1905, and 470,709 in 1904.

Grain movements eastward from Chicago and Chicago Junction points over the trunk lines during April amounted to 10,461,000 bushels, in contrast with 11,081,000 in April, 1905, and 6,623,000 in 1904. For the four-month period ending with April shipments amounted to 51,635,000 bushels in 1906, 45,395,000 in 1905, and 37,796,000 in 1904. Flour shipments both for the month and for the four months, which amounted to 512,402 and 2,577,375 bushels respectively, were largely in excess of corresponding movements in 1905, but fell below those for 1904.

Spring wheat receipts, from Aug. 1, 1905, to April 30, 1906, amounted to 85,167,950 bushels at Minneapolis, 34,551,440 at Duluth, 18,611,999 at Chicago, and at Milwaukee 6,281,140, a total of 144,613,129 against 129,255,440 for like months in 1904-5, and 133,922,958 in 1903-4. At the winter wheat markets of Toledo, St. Louis, Detroit and Kansas City wheat receipts from July 1 to April 30 totaled 61,777,981 bushels in 1905-6, 54,333,261 1904-5, and 69,555,973 in 1903-4. Of the present year's movement 35,327,800 bushels were received at Kansas City, 19,740,000 at St. Louis, 4,658,200 at Toledo, and 2,042,981 at Detroit.

Grain receipts at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Orleans during April totaled 16,346,290 bushels, against 17,836,548 received in April, 1905, and 14,259,365 in 1904. For the four-month period similar arrivals were 110,937,805 bushels in 1906, 84,575,128 in 1905, and 66,565,322 in 1904.

Cotton sight receipts during April amounted to 509,440 bales against 902,212 in April, 1905, and 287,590 in 1904. During the first eight months of the present season similar receipts aggregated 3,890,823 bales, 1,633,620 less than for like months in 1904-5, but 407,093 greater than in 1903-4. Then et overland movement during the same months was 822,723 bales in 1905-6, 932,643 in 1904-5, and 853,714 in 1903-4, while the exports totaled 5,605,618 bales during a like period of the currene season, 6,964,416 in the preceding one, and 5,534,719 in 1903-4. Of the domestic spinners' takings for the surrent season, 2,040,012 bales were shipped to northern mills and 1,731,516 to mills in the South, a total of 3,771,528 bales compared with 3,590,357 for the corresponding months of 1904-5 and 3,562,537 for 1903-4.

Cotton receipts at United States ports from Sept. 1, 1905, to April 30, 1906, totaled 7,137,636 bales, 4,440,645 of which arrived at Gulf and 2,687,991 at Atlantic ports. Those receiving over a million bales were Galveston, 2,388,643; New Orleans, 1,483,144, and Savannah, 1,331,685. Total corresponding receipts in 1904-5 agregated 8,359, 753 bales, and in 1903-4, 6,891,877.

Receipts of leaf tobacco at six interior markets from Jan. 1 to May 1 aggregated 93,784 hogsheads, 21,536 more than for the like months in 1905 and 26,227 in excess of 1904. Cincinnati received 27,272; Louisville, 57,862; Clarksville, 3,139; Hopkinsville, 3,530; Paducah, 1,498, and Maryland, 422.

Shipments of anthracite coal from Eastern producing regions during April totaled 488,203 tons, nearly 5,000,000 below corresponding movements in either of the two preceding years. The decrease was largely due to the cessation of labor in the coal fields, the miners having remained idle during the entire month pending a settlement between their representatives and those of the operators regarding a new three-year agreement. During the 3-year agreement. During the 4-month period shipments of anthracite coal from these regions aggregated 16,404,254 tons in 1906, 18,867,787 in 1905, and 18,243,333 in 1904.

The estimated production of coke at Connellsville during the current year to April 28 amounted to 3,154,868 tons, against 4,423,724 for the corresponding period in 1905 and 4,742,863 in 1904. Of the 243,299 cars required to handle the 1906 movement, 32,052 were delivered to points east of Connellsville, 136,311 to points west of Pittsburg, and 74,936 to Pittsburg and the river. The total number of cars employed for like weeks in 1905 were 226,901, and in 1904, 165,048.

In Eastern petroleum pipe-line producing territory the runs from wells during April amounted to 3,007,104.09 barrels, over 650,000 less than in April, 1905, while for the 4-month period similar receipts aggregated 12,014,047.72 and 14,777,773.10 barrels, respectively. Regular deliveries in 1906 amounted to 3,925,817.17 barrels for the month and 15,653,193.14 for the four months, while during the preceding year they were 4,131,645.08 for April and 15,929,158.43 for the year to April 30.

HANGMAN MISSING.

Man to be Executed and English Cannot be Found.

London, June 8.—Somewhere in the United States is England's public executioner, commonly known as the hangman. If anyone finds him they are respectfully requested to send him back to Mr. Gladstone, secretary of state for the home department. The hangman's name is English and he is believed to have gone to the United States in February.

Last winter when the job of public executioner became vacant, he applied for it and after a severe test secured the job from a number of other applicants. It is a good paying job if there are plenty of executions. But the home secretary has been very merciful of late and murderers have been reprieved so often that English and his family were on the verge of starvation. English told his wife he would like to emigrate to the United States.

Recently English was sent for by the government, for a hanging is coming on soon. Then it became public that he had disappeared.

SUFFERED AGONIES FOR FOUR YEARS

Whole Foot Nothing But Proud Flesh — Tried Different Physicians and All Kinds of Ointments — Could Walk Only With Crutches — Ohio Man Says:

"CUTICURA REMEDIES THE BEST ON EARTH"

"In the year 1899 the side of my right foot was cut off from the little toe down to the heel, and the physician who had charge of me was trying to sew up the side of my foot, but with no success. When he found out that wouldn't work, he began trying to heal the wound with all kinds of ointment, until at last my whole foot and way up above my calf was nothing but proud flesh. I suffered untold agonies for four years, and tried different physicians and all kinds of ointments. I could walk only with crutches. It is sixteen months ago since I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my limb and foot. The first two months the Cuticura Remedies did not seem to work, but I kept on using them both. In two weeks afterwards I saw a change in my limb. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment often during the day and kept it up for seven months, when my limb was healed up just the same as if I never had trouble.

"It is eight months now since I stopped using Cuticura Remedies, the best on God's earth. I am working at the present day, after five years of suffering. The cost of Cuticura Ointment and Soap was only $6; but the doctors' bills were more like $600. You can publish my name and refer any one to write to me about Cuticura Remedies. I will answer all letters if postage is enclosed. John M. Lloyd, 718 S. Arch Ave., Alliance, Ohio, June 27, 1905."

CLOSES AT HIGH PRICES

Wheat Goes Still Higher on Reports of Damaging Rains.

Flax is Dull But Closes Higher in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 8.—Wheat had a somewhat erratic course today, but closed stronger on reports of more damaging rains in the Northwest. The skies are still black, portending more rain. About the middle of the session, prices were off from yesterday, but the rally was a good one. All the American markets were higher at the close and Kansas City stronger than all others. Liverpool closed ½d to ⅝d higher, Antwerp unchanged and Paris unchanged to ¼c higher.

The Argentine shipments were about 200,000 bus below the estimate. The Missouri crop report for June shows a decrease of 10 per cent in the condition of wheat.

The July option closed ¾c higher in Duluth, Chicago and New York, ⅝-¾c in Minneapolis, ⅞c in St. Louis, 1⅝c in Kansas City and 1c in Winnipeg. The September option closed ⅞c higher in Duluth, ⅛-⅝c in Chicago, ⅝c in Minneapolis, 1c in New York, ⅝c in St. Louis and 1¼c in Kansas City. The October option closed ⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

The strength of oats was the feature of the coarse grain market. July oats in Chicago closed 1½c higher. July oats in Duluth had a similar gain, but oats on track and to arrive were 1¾c higher in Duluth. Corn was ⅛-¼c higher in Chicago and ½d lower in Liverpool.

Car receipts at Duluth were 24, against 17 last year, and at Minneapolis 131, against 122 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 155, against 139 last year. Chicago received 8, against 1 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 247,000 bus; last year, 163,000 bus. Shipments, 174,000 bus; last year, 165,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 107,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 2,208,000 bus, as compared with 2,432,000 bus last week and 2,352,00 bus a year ago.

Primary receipts of corn were 752,000 bus; last year, 450,000 bus. Shipments, 530,000 bus; last year, 464,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 45,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of corn were 3,136,000 bus, as compared with 2,763,000 bus last week and 2,708,000 bus a year ago.

Wheat was active and erratic during the entire session of the Duluth market, closing stronger. July wheat opened ⅜c higher at 84¾c, fell off to 84c at 10:20, rallied to 84½c at 10:30, fell off to 83⅝c at 11, rallied to 85¼c at 1 and closed at that price, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. September wheat opened ⅜c higher at 83⅛c, fell off to 82¼c, rallied at the close to 83⅝c, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. It is expected that the stock of wheat in store in Duluth will decrease 325,000 bus this week.

Flax was dull in the local market all day but prices were stronger at the close. Some flax was worked for export by local exporters.

It is expected that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 57,000 bus this week. Argentine shipments of flax were 296,000 bys, against 168,000 bus last week and 472,000 bus, a year ago.

July flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.14½, advanced to the close, which was $1.15¼, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday. September flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.15, advanced to $1.15½, declined to $1.15¼, rallied to $1.15⅝ and closed at $1.15¾, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weak Cables and Rains in Northwest Give Wheat Steadiness.

Chicago, June 8.—The wheat market opened steady, the cables failing to respond to yesterday's upturn in the local market, but this fact was offset by reports of additional rains in the Northwest. The Missouri crop report, which showed a decline of 10 points in the condition of wheat during the last month, also encouraged the bulls. Commission houses were fair buyers, and the chief selling was by local longs. July opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 82⅝c to 83½c, declined to 82¾c and then sold at 83¼@8⅜c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 163 cars, against 134 cars last week and 140 cars one year ago.

About the middle of the session the market became weak because of general profit taking and July dropped to 82⅝c. Later there was a sharp rally on covering by shorts which sent the price of July up to 84¼c. The closing was strong, with July ⅝c up at 84¼c.

The corn market was weak, chiefly because of realizing sales due to rain in Illinois and Indiana. July opened ⅛@¼c to ⅛@⅜c lower at 51⅝c to 51¾c and sold down to 50⅞c. Local receipts were 362 cars, with 151 of contract grade.

The low point for July was 50⅛c. During the last half hour prices advanced sharply and July went up to 51⅝c, the high point of the day. The market closed strong.

The oats market was firm, chiefly because of the bullish character of the crop report. July opened ⅛c higher at 36¼c, declined to 36@36⅛c and advanced to 36¼c. Local receipts were 133 cars.

The provisions market was quiet and steady. July pork was a shade lower to 2½@5c higher at $16.75 to $16.80. Lard was unchanged at $8.82½. Ribs were down 5c at $9.45.

Close: Wheat—July 84¼c; Sept., 83⅜@⅝c. Corn—51⅝c; Sept., 51½@⅝c. Oats—July, 37½@; Sept., 34⅝@⅝c. Pork—July, $16.85; Sept., $16.47½. Lard—July, $8.80; Sept., $8.95. Ribs—July, $9.45; Sept., $9.35. Rye—Cash, 61@65c; July, 61½c; Sept., 61c.

OPHIR

It frequently happens that strangers have difficulty because they do not understand each other. These difficulties vanish when the parties become acquainted and find that their interests are not conflicting, but are mutual and can be best subserved by harmonious action. Much has been said, in the recent past, about the Ophir-Buckhorn consolidation. Now, Cliff Mining Company is receiving some attention. What is the Cliff Mining Company? Answer. The contract, so often referred to in our advertising, contemplated the organization of a corporation to be called the Buckhorn Ore Company (or some other name to be "hereafter selected"), for the purpose of taking over the Buckhorn Mine and also the stock of the Ophir Tunnel Company at par. That is what we understand the Cliff Mining Company is organized to do. We are willing to bury the supposed hatchet, which we are said to have been wielding on behalf of investors in Ophir Tunnel stock, if the Cliff Mining Company will carry out, without needless delay, the conditions of the contract of which we have so often made mention. In order that all seeming differences may be removed we would suggest representative Ophir stockholders arrange to meet the officials of the Cliff Mining Company and get a clear understanding of the situation.

ARRESTED IN MINNEAPOLIS

Colored Chauffeur and Companion Wanted by Duluth Police.

Charged with the theft of jewelry valued at $57 from Miss Beatrice Butler, of 1010 West Superior street, William King, a colored chauffeur, and Cleo Kellogg were arrested today in Minneapolis at the request of the Duluth police.

King was employed by the owner of a disreputable resort on St. Croix avenue, and boarded with Mrs. Butler on West Superior street. While his landlady was out he is claimed to have decamped with all the jewelry he could find in the house, and to have taken the Kellogg woman with him.

The police notified the Minneapolis authorities and the two fugitives were arrested there this morning. Detective Irvine left this afternoon to bring them back to Duluth, taking with him "Frisco Shorty" one of the three young men arrested here recently for hotel prowling. The Minneapolis police want "Shorty" and the Duluth police have not a very strong case against him.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Closing Generally Was Easy and Near the Lowest Point.

Sharp Upturn in Wheat Given as Motive for Selling.

New York, June 8—Small fractional gains except for a few stocks and light dealings gave the character to the opening in the stock market today. Consolidated Gas sold at an advance of 2 but immediately lost all but a fraction. New York Central gained 1 and Union Pacific and Atchison were up large fractions.

The narrowness of the current speculation was shown by the immediate relapse to below yesterday of the more prominent stocks when traders attempted to take profits on the slight opening advances. St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, and Great Northern preferred scored the chief losses of ¾ to 1¼. Consolidated Gas fluctuated frequently between 145 and 147 on the continuance of the injunction against the enforcement of the eighty cents gas law. A spirited buying movement in Atchison, followed by a demand by Delaware & Hudson, caused a general recovery before 11 o'clock. Atchison sold 1⅜ higher; Metropolitan Street Railway, 2; Biscuit, 2¼; Pneumatic Service, 3½; the preferred, 2; and Delaware & Hudson, 4.

The market became dull and sluggish and was not stirred by movements in separate stocks, mostly all of a minor grade. The rise in Delaware & Hudson reached 8¾; Hocking Valley, 3; Texas & Pacific and Land Trust, 2½; American Woolen, 2; Central Leather and Missouri Pacific, 1¼, and Central of Jersey, St. Paul preferred, Northwestern and Sugar, 1. Bonds were steady.

Reading accounted for a large proportion of the limited dealings between 12 and 1 o'clock, and although it crept up gradually to 145⅝, the general market remained practically at a standstill.

Profit-taking began in Reading and most of the rise was lost. Otherwise the market continued dull.

Prices fell to the lowest of the day in the final hour. The sharp upturn in wheat was given as the motive for the selling, but some of the specialties were even more affected than the grangers. Colorado Fuel, Smelting and Anaconda sold at declines of 1⅝ to 2, Illinois Central 1⅝, Northern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line 1⅛, St. Paul 1¼, Amalgamated Copper, People's Gas, Locomotive, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific and Louisville & Nashville 1. International Pump preferred gained 1⅝, Delaware & Hudson was marked up to 235 at the last. The closing generally was easy and near the lowest.

Copper Gossip.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The News Bureau says: "The estimated production of the Butte mines for May was 32,881,480 pounds of copper, which compares with 30,842,400 pounds in April, and is 3,543,630 lbs more than the average monthly production for the first four months of the year. The May production makes a new high record for the Butte camp, the largest output in any single month previous to May having been in June, 1905, when 31,290,000 pounds of copper was produced. The May production therefore is nearly 1,000,000 pounds in excess of any previous record."

A BUILDING COLLAPSES

Three-Story Structure Falls at Pittsburg, Burying Fifteen.

Pittsburg, June 8.—A three-story business building on Liberty avenue, near Cecil alley, collapsed this afternoon. Several persons are in the ruins, and their cries for help can be heard by the firemen, who have been called. It is reported that fifteen persons are in the ruins.

Fitchburg, Mass., June 8.—Former Congressman Fred F. Collidge died here today of pneumonia. He was 61 years old.

Clintonville, Wis., June 8.—George W. Sutherland of this place, died yesterday. Mr. Sutherland was a veteran of the Civil war and it is said was the first man on top of Lookout mountain at the time of that great battle.

Philadelphia, June 8.—Llewellyn Randolph Snowden, a prominent Philadelphian, died suddenly late last night in the Friends asylum for the insane, under mysterious circumstances. He was admitted to the asylum yesterday and appeared despondent. In the pockets of Snowden's clothing was found a quantity of cyanide of potassium.

To Many Papers From Noted Specialists of the Country.

Boston, June 8.—Many meetings of the various sections were arranged for today for the delegates to the annual convention of the American Medical association, which will end tonight. Before the department on the practice of medicine, the speakers included Dr. Bertram W. Sippy of Chicago, Dr. A. O. J. Kelly of Philadelphia and Dr. Christopher Graham of Rochester, Minn. One of the most interesting discussions was expected to be that on "The Causes and Treatment of Chronic Headache." Among those who were to contribute were Dr. Cornelius G. Coakley of New York, Dr. George Gould of Philadelphia, Dr. Joseph Salter of Philadelphia and Dr. Alfred C. Croftan of Chicago.

THE ALCOHOL BILL IS SIGNED BY PRESIDENT.

Washington, June 8.—The president today signed the denatured alcohol bill.

RECOVERED HIS WATCH.

Kansas City Journal: While in Moscow some time ago a correspondent of the London Times had his pocket picked of watch and all the money he carried. The timepiece was quite valuable and the newspaper made a good deal of noise about his misadventure. In a day or two just as he was leaving for home a young officer of the imperial entourage restored the missing articles. The czar, hearing of the robbery, had directed the governor of Moscow to recover the correspondent's property at all hazards. The governor sent for a half dozen known criminals and informed them that unless they found the watch and money he would send them to Siberia. The threat was sufficient.

IMPECUNIOUS ROYALTIES.

Kansas City Journal: There have always been poor royalties, not only exiles, but princes and princesses who lived under the thumb of some niggardly or intensely selfish head of the house. Louis XV, a man who spent vast sums on his own low pleasures, cared little about his children and allowed his four younger daughters, superfluous princesses of the French royal family, to be educated on the cheap at a country convent. At 14 years of age one of them had not mastered her alphabet, and the quartet remained dull, ignorant and uninteresting to the end of their lives.

LONGEST BRIDGE.

Kansas City Journal: The longest bridge in the world is that crossing the Danube at Czernavoda with a length of 12,705 feet; followed next by the Galveston bay bridge, in Texas, with 11,197 feet. The Firth of Forth bridge, near Queensspring, in Scotland, ranks eighth, and the Brooklyn bridge ninth.

CHAIRMAN INDIGNANT

Head of Agricultural Committee Condemns Packing House Notoriety.

Considers Neill-Reynolds Statements Not Founded on Fact.

Washington, June 8.—James B. Reynolds, the co-author with Mr. Neill of the beef report, was questioned today by the house committee on agriculture, in continuation of its beef inspection hearings. Mr. Reynolds was asked his previous experience to qualify him to make the meat report.

"I have no official position now," he replied and then stated he had had eight years experience in university settlement work in New York, had been two years secretary to the mayor of New York and in the past few years had been traveling. His profession was that of a lawyer.

Twelve years ago he had incidentally visited the stockyards in Chicago and had also visited the stockyards in Berlin. In the latter place he said the work was done under city regulations. He was impressed by the absence of wood and the constant cleaning going on. They were even cleaning the cars which brought in the stock. There was no canning going on. He did not recall any superiority in actual killing over Chicago.

He said he had received no notice of the first hearing and had not heard Mr. Wilson's statement. As to Mr. Neill's testimony there was nothing in it he wished to modify. In particular he wished to substantiate Mr. Neill regarding the shoveling of pieces of meat from the floor of the Nelson Morris company. He saw the operation. At this point Chairman Wadsworth made a somewhat heated statement setting forth his reasons for questioning Mr. Neill yesterday, and he said he should feel free to question the present witness.

"I may bo called a friend of the packers," he said. "I am a friend of the packers and a friend of all other American industries. I don't believe in fouling our own American nest. We are here as members of the agricultural committee to promote agriculture, not to injure it, nor to cast aspersions on it.

"This report has cost the agricultural interests of this country millions and millions of dollars, and if our foreign demand decreases in the next weeks as it has in the past two weeks the value of American livestock will decrease anywhere from 30 to 50 per cent a hundred pounds.

"But for the publication of this report," continued Mr. Wadsworth, "the foreign demand would have gone on as it has in the past. There was absolutely no complaint.

"Now I claim as an individual member of this committee the right to find out from these gentlemen, and I don't mean in any offensive way, to find out absolutely whether these statements are facts from personal observation as they claim they are, or whether they are made on assumption."

Continuing he said the questions he had asked Mr. Neill yesterday, regarding that unfortunate hog, had shown conclusively that he did not know whether the hog was afterward cleaned or not.

At this point, Representative Lamb (Virginia) wanted to know if the chairman was summing up the testimony.

"No, sir," replied Mr. Wadsworth, "I am talking of what I was criticised for yesterday because I propose to ask Mr. Reynolds the same questions. In my own judgment I was perfectly justified in asking these questions. Then addressing himself to Mr. Reynolds, he put the question, "Do you know whether that hog was sent to be canned or salted uncleaned?"

"I do not,' was the reply.

"Don't you think that statement in your letter of transmittal, which says that the matters set forth in the report were founded on fact was not quite true?"

"I do not, sir, no. I think the statement is perfectly true."

"But did you see that hog go to the can—explain it anyway you please, I do not want to embarrass you or examine you as a pettifogger."

The reply to this was a reiteration of the circumstances that the hog fell and was made filthy, picked up and placed with the others.

Mr. Haskins (Vermont) said that this was all that was stated in the report. Mr. Wadsworth maintained that the fair inference was that the hog had never been cleaned. I am not concerned with inferences, remarked Mr. Reynolds.

"You heard what Mr. Neill said yesterday that in his opinion the hog went to the can uncleaned?" asked Mr. Wadsworth. The witness believed Mr. Neill had a right to his own opinion. Mr. Neill here asked to make a statement in view of the fact that his testimony of yesterday had been called into question by the chairman. "I want to state," he began "that what I stated yesterday was my opinion—that by any fair construction of the English language, we did not say as a fact that no time in the weeks and weeks after we left no effort was made to clean that hog. The time to have cleaned it was immediately," he maintained, otherwise its identity would have bee nlost with the others. "It is not fair," he concluded, "to take a statement I made yesterday as my belief."

"I will refer the gentleman to his own statement," commented Mr. Wadsworth.

"And I am perfectly willing to stand on it," retorted Mr. Neill. Mr. Haskins here poured oil on the waters by saying he heard no questions yesterday that were improper.

Mr. Reynolds was then taken over his report by members of the committee, and reiterated it in detail. The criticisms, he said, had reference in particular to the process of preserving and canning meats. He saw men whom he believed had tuberculosis. He saw them spit on the floor. He saw meat on the floor. Switched again to the dressed meats, Mr. Reynolds stated that, generally speaking, fresh meats left Chicago in a good condiiton. They were well washed and cleanly.

ST. PAUL PACKERS

File a Vigorous Protest Against Expense of Inspection.

Say the Cost Will Inevitably Come From Stock Raisers.

Washington, June 9.—The beef inspection hearing before the house committee on agriculture was begun today by listening to Representative Garner (Tex.) who made a plea for speedy action. He said: "The people who have contracted to take our Texas steers have become alarmed and say they do not know whether or not they are going to take our cattle. Every day this thing is continued the stockman is losing money."

Representative Davis (Minn.) read a statement from the St. Paul live stock board, voicing the unalterable opposition to having expenses placed on the packers, because it would inevitably come out of the stockraisers.

Mr. Wilson, representing the packers, corroborated this conclusion.

S. H. Cowan of Fort Worth, Tex., was next heard. He detailed the extent of the Texas cattle industry. Mr. Cowan said that while the raisers had their differences with the packers, and had not got the best of them yet, in this question the interest of the raisers and packers was identical. If there was an additional expense some one would have to pay it. The stockmen believe the packers could put this expense on the stock raisers. He read a telegram from John T. Lyttle, president of the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas, which read: "Present agitation has seriously depressed cattle business. Universal impression that cattle values will suffer from $4 to $5 per head decline."

W. H. CAMPAIGNE IS FOUND DEAD

Old Resident of Tower Expired Suddenly From Heart Failure.

Tower, Minn., June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—W. H. Campaigne, an old-time and highly respected citizen of this city, who for several years filled the position of municipal judge of Tower, was found dead yesterday morning on the county road close to the Iron Range brewery in the city limits. He left home in the morning as usual to do some planting on a piece of land that he had cleared for that purpose in the southwestern limits of the city. On his way to the farm, it seems, he was taken ill, sat down on a rock on the roadside and there expired. He was found about 7:30 by two of his children who happened to go that way loking for some cows. Heart failure is supposed to have been the trouble. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss.

Milwaukee, June 9.—Milwaukee is preparing to entertain the largest gathering of flour millers in the history of the country, the occasion being the annual convention of the Millers' National Federation, June 20, 21 and 22. An attendance of 1,500 is expected, including many ladies and a delegation of foreign visitors. The program will include as speakers, B. J. Rothwell of Boston, on "The Arbitration Committee;" A. W. Howard, Minneapolis, on "Comparative Baking Tests;" Harry E. Hooker, Lansing, Mich., on "The Model Local Organization;" S. T. Ballard, Louisville, on "Cost and Accounting Methods in Flour Manufacture;" H. B. Sparks, Alton, Ill., on "Millers' Mutual Fire Insurance;" H. B. Tasker, London, England, on "The Export Trade;" Charles Espenchied, St. Louis, on "Common Sense Mill Management."

A very elaborate program of entertainments will be tendered the visitors by the Milwaukee trade.

SAN FRANCISCO MINT AGAIN MAKING MONEY.

San Francisco, June 9.—The big machines of the local mint were put in operation yesterday, and for the first time since the fire the work of making money will be resumed.

The mint will not open for a regular session, but just for a few days, long enough for the coinage of silver that is now in the building. As soon as this work is accomplished the mint will be closed down, so that officials may get ready for the annual count. The regular session of the mint will, it is expected, open July 1.

WANTS TO HEAR MORE FROM MEAT INSPECTORS.

Washington, June 9.—Representative Fulkerson of Missouri, has introduced a resolution calling on the president and secretary of agriculture to immediately make public any and all information that they may secure from "the great army of meat inspectors employed by the government," or from any other source that will tend to credit or discredit the product of any plant where meat products are prepared.

The resolution also calls upon the secretary of agriculture to immediately give to the public his opinion of the sanitary condition of the plants and the healthfulness of the products coming from the various plants.

POLITICIANS AT SEA OVER THE RESULTS OF COUNTY CONVENTIONS

More Uninstructed Delegates Than at Any Previous Convention.

No Candidate Pretends to Know What the Situation Is.

Halden's Candidacy Is Giving Iverson the Fight of His Life.

St. Paul, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—If the reports from the various county conventions can be relied upon, Jacobson leads in the race for the gubernatorial nomination. There is no way of ascertaining beyond a questionable doubt that the delegates have been pledged from any but the immediate home districts of the candidates themselves. If the conventions did nothing else, they demonstrated the truth that has been uttered so many times during the preconvention fight that the candidates are going up against a large body of uninstructed delegates at Duluth next week. Ramsey, in a sense, is a directed delegation as the unit rule was adopted, but it rests with Lemon with whom he shall trade, so that as far as the gubernatorial situation is concerned. Ramsey county's delegation is just as uncertain a factor as many others which will next week turn their rfaces toward the Zenith City of the unsalted sea.

The classifications made from all corners of the state as to the various standings of different candidates are based largely on guess work. They place Jacobson in the lead with over twenty counties to his credit; Cole next; Lord third; Block fourth; Stephens fifth; Somerville sixth, and Diment seventh. An analysis of the results of the recent county conventions built on such broad lines clearly demonstrates the fact that it is a mere creature of speculation. None of the candidates, who have gathered this week to talk things over at the capital city, pretends to know what the situation really is.

It becomes more and more evident that Duluth will see more uninstructed delegates at its first Republican state convention than ever attended a convention in the history of the state. If the delegation from Hennepin is typical of the feeling over the state, each candidate has friends in nearly every delegation. This is true of Hennepin, and while it is true also of Ramsey the unit rule will prevent it from becoming operative. To indulge in a little speculation, it is advanced Jacobson has now at his command about 300 votes. Giving him his share in the delegations which have no preference it would not be unreasonable to add fifty more to that number. Should Lord drop out on a second ballot it is the opinion that about half of Lord's strength will switch over to Jacobson. The strength of any of the candidates is at this time merely conjectural.

The most dramatic thing in the political arena this week is the entry of Halden as a candidate for state auditor. It came like a lightning flash from a clear sky, and now the supporters of Iverson are working night and day, and intense worry has taken the place of that complacent assurance which characterized the friends of the state auditor a few days ago. Opposition to Iverson has been forming for some time, and it is generally credited to Dunn who, it is declared, is out after Iverson's scalp for the half-hearted support Iverson gave him when he was beset with his enemies two years ago.

It is understood that Halden will enter the convention with the solid support of the St. Louis and Ramsey county delegations. Dar Reese will dominate the Ramsey county delegation, and it is known that Reese is not friendly to Iverson, as he credits him with being responsible for his defeat as clerk of the supreme court. It looks like war to the knife, and Iverson is going to have a hard struggle to land in the office again.

There comes a rumor that one of the candidates for governor will be handed the lieutenant governorship as a consolation prize. The choice will be governed likely by the strength the second best man displays.

Hanson sentiment is still brewing, and it may force his name to be presented to the convention. He remains as reticent as ever, but there are rumors that his name will be mentioned. He will not attend the convention, and is in no way attempting to secure the nomination.

St. Paul has been the mecca for prospective nominees this week. Jacobson, Lord, Nelson and Schmahl have all made flying trips to the capital. They are all delightfully optimistic over the future.

The Democratic state central committee has called a meeting for June 22 at the Merchants hotel. The meeting will be called at noon, and active plans for the approaching campaign will be laid out.

J.; second vice president—Alex Daw, Detroit, secretary-treasurer—W. C. Leglin, Philadelphia. The next meeting place was left to the executive committee.

RELIABILITY OF THE INSPECTION

Of Meat in United States is Asked by England.

London, June 9.—John Burns, president of the local government board, has requested the foreign office to communicate with the state department at Washington and ascertain to what extent reliance can be placed on the system of meat inspection undertaken by the bureau of animal industry. In announcing that he had taken this action through the medium of a reply to a question put in the house of commons today by William Field, Nationalist member of the St. Patrick's division of Dublin, and president of the Irish cattle traders and stock owners' association, Mr. Burns said he had ascertained that a quantity of boneless beef and pork is imported into this country from America and converted into sausages which are sold as English product. He admitted that there were serious difficulties in the way of efficient British inspection of some of these imported foods, but said the local government board had taken action to see that the local authorities exercised their powers to the full extent.

The name of the man may be William A. Houck of Madison, S. D., who came to Minneapolis about April 1 with $500 in currency on his person.

Six Hundred and Four Seconds Meet to Arrange Details.

Vienna, June 9.—Richard Zombory, a well-known Hungarian sportsman residing at Budapest, has placed himself in the position of having to fight 151 duels as the result of refusing to accept a challenge from a bank clerk, whom he insulted. On receipt of a challenge from the latter, M. Zombory sent back word that the social position precluded giving him the usual privilege. Thereupon 150 officials of the bank challenged M. Zombory. Six hundred and four seconds held a meeting last night and arranged for the duels to be fought with pistols. The meetings will take place Sunday night, one after the other, until satisfaction is secured, one bullet being exchanged in each duel.

For Disorderly Conduct at Louisville Postponed to June 19.

Louisville, June 9.—The cases of President George Tebeau of the Louisville Baseball club and of Richard Padden, manager of the St. Paul team, who were arrested for their conduct at the ball park yesterday over a decision of Acting Umpire Kenna, were today postponed until June 19, when the St. Paul team will return to Louisville. Mayor Barth today issued an order excluding all policemen in uniform from the grounds, the action of an officer yesterday in drawing a revolver in front of the grand stand during the trouble probably being the cause. President O'Brien will investigate the trouble before taking action.

N. Y. POLICE UNABLE TO FATHOM THE MYSTERY IN THE MURDER OF WOMAN

Victim Called to Her Door and Struck Down Dead.

No Motive Can be Found for the Dastardly Crime.

Officers Are Working on the Theory of Jealousy.

New York, June 9.—The identity of the murderer of Mrs. Alice Kinnan, who was struck down on the stoop of her home in the Borough of the Bronx last night, was still a mystery to the police today. The motive which prompted the murder was also unsolved, but the police were at work upon a theory that it might have been jealousy.

Mrs. Kinnan lived with her mother, Mrs. Louisa M. Stanton, aged 85, in an old and decaying mansion surrounded by lawns and shrubbery at Washington avenue and One Hundred and Eighty-ninth street in the Bronx. At 9 o'clock last night she was called to the door by an unknown person, who without a word, struck her a fatal blow on the head. The murderer then disappeared, but left a piece of gas pipe with which the murder was done. Mrs. Stanton, the victim's mother, is so aged and so much shocked by the crime as to be of little service in locating the murderer. That jealousy or revenge may have been the motive which prompted the assault was suggested to the police, by the discovery that a contractor named Clincy died in Mrs. Kinnan's home while calling upon her two weeks ago, and also that Mrs. Kinnan had employed a lawyer to bring suit for divorce from her husband from whom she separated eight years ago. The police today were trying to find a man who is said to have been a frequent caller on Mrs. Kinnan during the last few months. It was said today that Clincy had been a visitor at Mrs. Kinnan's home for five years against the wishes of his family. The mystery in which the case is hidden is deepened by the fact that the whereabouts of Mrs. Kinnan's husband is unknown. After trying in vain for two years to find him and bring suit against him, Mrs. Kinnan believed him to be dead until three weeks ago when he was reported to be in Brooklyn. The search for him was renewed by Mrs. Kinnan's lawyer, but without result.

The police took up the search for him today in the hope that he could give them a clue to either the motive of the crime or the identity of the murderer.

NOW SIMPLY A CASE OF WAIT

Until Rains Cease Before Northern Pacific Trains Can Move.

St. Paul, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—General Manager Horn of the Northern Pacific railroad said to to the Associated Press today that up to 11 o'clock, owing to a high wind in Montana, wire conditions were such that very little definite information concerning trains held up by flood could be obtained.

"We are assured that although our trains are held up by high water, no injury has been done to the trains. We are taking care of our passengers. We had a washout east of Glendive, Mont., and got that repaired, and another on hart river, east of Bellfield, and we fixed that up when the water rose and flooded about two miles of our track. Now it is simply a case of wait until the rain stops and the water goes down. It has been raining hard out in Montana for three weeks, and the ground has had more rain than it could absorb, and that flooded us out."

Officials of the Great Northern railroad informed the Associated Press that their reports received today stated that the rain had stopped in Montana, along the Great Northern line, and the weather was clear. They reported that considerable delay to trains had been caused by a number of small washouts, but they would be repaired, and that the line would be open this morning.

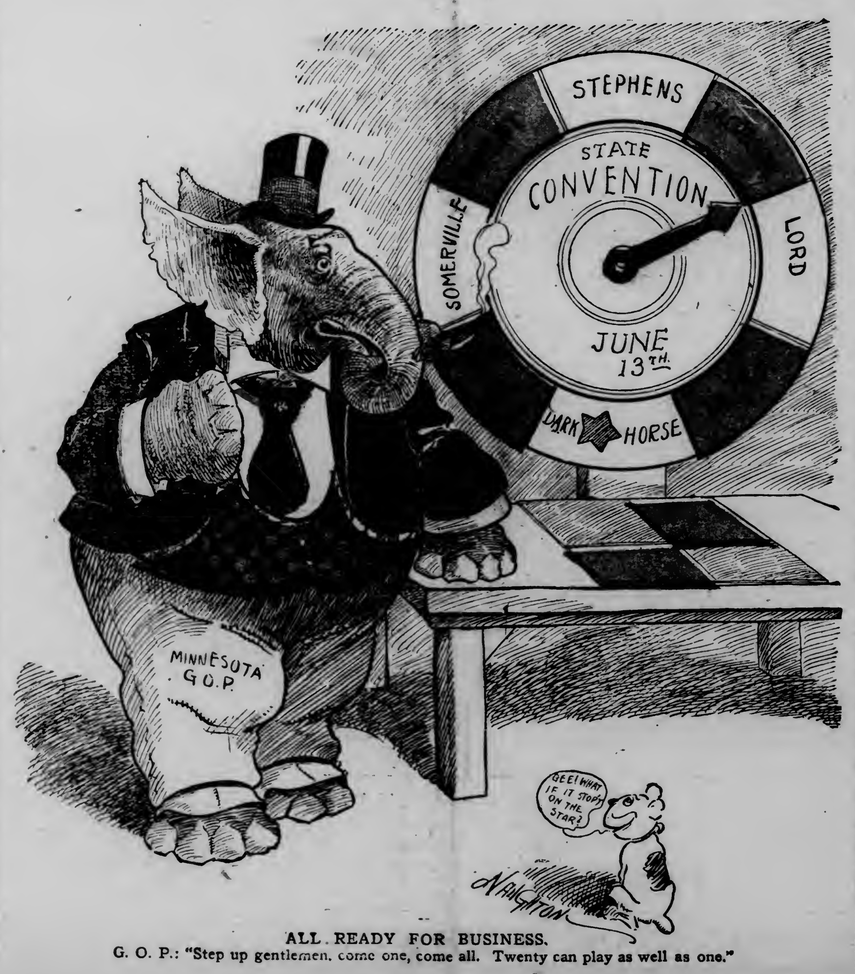

BACHELOR'S FREE STORE.

Californian Pays Debt to Humanity by Clothing Women Refugees.

Oakland, Cal., June 9.—A clothing store for women, where all callers may be served free of charge, was opened yesterday by Raphael Weill, a bachelor paying his debt to humanity, at his home, 1806 Pacific avenue. His stock of goods filled a room forty by sixty feet, and consisted of garments just bought from the best New York dry goods houses. Women who came were served, and their names were not even asked. This will continue until the stock is exhausted, which, as thousands of women are still wearing the clothes they had on at the time of the earthquake, will not be a long time.

THEFT DUE TO MUMPS.

Omaha, June 9.—The fact that she was suffering from the mumps, coupled with the excess of zeal on the part of the detective, made Miss Mae Thomas swallow the diamond she is charged with stealing from Jeweler Combs. This at least is the inference from the argument made on her behalf before the jury. It appears that when the detective saw her raise the jewel to her lips to moisten it, he rushed at her and the instant he placed his hand on her throat, which was sore from the mumps, the gem disappeared.

STOLE HOARD TO DECK BRIDE

Seventeen-Year-Old Boy Hauled to Court by His Mother.

Philadelphia, June 9.—William H. Schrambreaner, with the light of the eyes of his bride-to-be shining upon him, was forced to confess that every cent of the money which he had given her to deck her with "silks so fine" had been stolen from the bureau drawer of his mother. The stern mother stood at his side. William is 17 years old. Sadie Schaefer, who was to have been his bride, is 13.

The mother had caused Sadie to be taken before Magistrate Hughes at Second and Reed streets that she right recover that bureau drawer nest-egg.

William's courtship began in the street and was continued in the public parks. At last she consented to become his wife.

"But we're too young to be married here; we'll have to go to Wilmington," said the boy, who was wiser than the maid.

Sadie thought over this and consented.

"But first you will need some new things," said William. "I'll take you downtown and buy you something to wear for the wedding."

The girl allowed herself to be led to South street, where fine things are for sale. A hat and shoes were purchased there—total outlay $5. Then William gave the girl $20 to carry to her home, a nestegg for them after their marriage.

A day later the blow came. William's mother, who had put $80 in that bureau drawer, went to get some of it. Only $30 was there.

"William, where is that money?" asked a severe mother when William appeared.

William blushed, stammered, cried and told all. Of the $50 which he had taken he had spent $25 upon himself. That he could not return. The mother, despite his protest, had his bride arrested, charging her with complicity in the larceny. When Sadie indignantly returned $20 and offered to return the things which she had purchased, saying that she had supposed her husband-to-be had earned them by the sweat of his brow, Magistrate Hughes arose in the might of the law.

"Go home, Mrs. Schambreaner," he said, "and be content that you have the $20. Sadie, go home and wear the hat and shoes. The kisses you gave William entitle you to them."

And the two lovers went their separate paths without even a word of parting. "So die young lovers," laughed the magistrate.

SHIP SAILS SUDDENLY

The Cruiser Marblehead at Panama Gets Urgent Orders.

Steams North Evidently Bound for the Coast of Guatemala.

New York, June 9.—A cable dispatch to the Herald from Panama, says: The cruiser Marblehead anchored in this port, got urgent sea orders at 2 o'clock Friday and after taking on a quantity of supplies sailed last night. No information was given out as to the cruiser's destination, but it is thought she wil proceed to San Jose, Guatemala, to protect American residents of that city in the event of fighting and to capture the Empire, the American ship now being used by the revolutionists.

Washington, June 9.—The United States cruiser Marblehead has sailed north from Panama. While the navy department officials refuse to say where the cruiser is going, they admit it has started north and it is generally believed that the Marblehead will stop at Guatemala ports to protect American interests and investigate the activity of the American steamer Empire, which is reported to be assisting the revolutionists at San Jose, Guatemala.

MOROCCAN JEWS DEEPLY GRATEFUL

To United States for Intervention for Them at Algeciras.

Washington, June 9.—One of the last and strongest instructions given by Secretary Root to the representatives of America at the Algeciras conference related to the protection of the Jews in Morocco and the procurement for them of equal privileges, guaranteed by the signatory nations. Through Mr. White's efforts such a provision was inserted in the treaty which concluded the conference. The following acknowledgment has been received from the chief rabbi of Morocco:

"Tangier, the 23rd of April, 1906.—Your Excellency: With a deep sense of gratitude, it is my pleasant duty to express to you my warmest thanks for your intervention in the name of your government at the sitting of the Algeciras conference on April 2 last in favor of the Jews of Morocco.

"As representative of the leading Jewish community in Morocco, I am sure I am faithfully interpreting the sentiments of every one of my co-religionists in this country by requesting you to be good enough to convey to President Roosevelt and the American government the expression of our grateful feelings for their noble and generous intervention on our behalf. I pray God to send his blessings on the liberal American nation, the champion of justice and the supporter of the weak and the oppressed. May she have unending prosperity and be always great at the vanguard of nations for the welfare of humanity.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

"MARDOCHEE BENGIO,
"Grand Rabbins, Tangier.

"To His Excellency Henry White, Esq., American ambassador, Rome."

St. Paul, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the suit of Charles E. Lind against William Keefe, the jury today brought in a verdict for the plaintiff of $12,261.51, the full amount asked. The suit, which was bitterly contested, was one in which Lind sued Keefe to recover $11,250 being half the amount of a settlement of a claim against the Soo railroad for injuries sustained by Lind in an accident, and about $1,100 in interest. Keefe handled Lind's case and retained half the amount of the settlement under the terms of a contract which Lind had signed while lying in a hospital.

WATER FAMINE

At Cincinnati on the Hottest Day of the Season.

Cincinnati, June 9.—While suffering from the most intense heat of the season the people of Cincinnati were today also suffering from a water famine, the supply for the hill tops having failed last night. No explanation of the failure of the water has been given. Many sections of the city were entirely without water supply.

Mayor Dempsey this afternoon announced that at 4 o'clock the water supply for the downtown section of the city would be shut off until one of the mains can be repaired. The earliest time set for the completion of these repairs was midnight tonight, until which time the city will be practically without water.

Gary, W. E. Corey, John McLean, A. H. Viele, W. W. Watson, Jr., and George D. Swift. The directors elected the following officers: President, T. F. Cole; vice-president, W. J. Olcott; treasurer, Charles E. Shields; secretary and assistant treasurer, Charles D. Frazer; assistant secretary and assistant treasurer, George D. Swift; auditor, John L. Mullin; general counsel, Frank B. Kellogg; general solicitor, J. B. Cotton; general manager, Pentecost Mitchell, and assistant general manager, John H. McLean.

McCarthy Bros. & Co. of Duluth have sold the Hall elevator at Superior, or T as it is lettered, to a number of North Dakota parties represented by E. Kenefic. The consideration was $35,000. The North Dakota people are understood to own a line of houses. Elevator T is a small house used for cleaning and mixing purposes and has a capacity of about 50,000 bushels.

ROOSEVELT AND BRYAN

Washington Convinced as to Leaders in National Race.

Nebraskan Believed to be Uniting the Democratic Party.

Chicago, June 9.—A Washington special to the Record-Herald says: Elections, conventions and expressions from prominent men within the last few days have done much to shape the program for the next national campaign. William Jennings Bryan is slated for Democracy's candidate for the presidency in 1908. Nothing except death will prevent the carrying out of the program. As matters now stand, only one man can defeat Mr. Bryan at the polls two years hence. His name is Roosevelt. Washington is settled in its convictions as to the situation, and the foregoing statements represent its views.

The Bryan movement, after having been held in leash these many weeks, at last has been launched with great gusto. The action of the Indiana Democratic state convention today, the indorsement of Bryan in the resolutions adopted, is regarded here as of the greatest significance. Previously the Bryan propaganda had been given a prodigious shove by the Democratic organizations in Arkansas and South Dakota.

But that isn't all. Former Governor David R. Francis of Missouri has sounded the battle cry on behalf of conservatives. Mr. Francis, a former member of a Cleveland cabinet, was with the gold Democrats in 1896 and 1900. He is back in line. So are the rest of the old Cleveland Democracy. Bryan is to be the choice of conservative Democrats, and he also will have behind him all his former following.

The trend of political affairs that is working in Bryan's direction was pointed out some time ago by the Record-Herald's Washington correspondent. The most recent happenings have borne out the prophecy heretofore made. When Mr. Bryan returns home in August from his tour of the world he will receive an ovation such as has been accorded to no American since Gen. Grant's time. He will be acclaimed on his arrival in New York as the undisputed leader of one of the great political parties of the nation, and wherever he goes from then until the time of holding the next national convention he will appear as a popular hero.

There has been much discussion here within the last few weeks as to the Republican national ticket in 1908. It has been practically conceded that as the situation stands today Vice President Fairbanks is in the lead for the Republican nomination to head the next national ticket. But as to a contest at the polls between Fairbanks and Bryan the most astute politicians are satisfied that the Nebraskan, who twice before has led his party in unsuccessful battle, would have all the best of it.

With this understanding, the question arises: What will the Republicans do when it really comes to naming the presidential ticket? The answer that inevitably is made is that Theodore Roosevelt will be compelled to reconsider his determination not to accept a renomination and that he will be forced to again become the Republican standard bearer.

The news from New York, once described by Bryan himself as "the enemy's country," is all to the effect that no one aside from the Nebraskan is being considered for the 1908 nomination. It is well understood that the present Democratic organization, as represented by the national committee, of which Tom Taggart is chairman, is overwhelmingly for Bryan. Tammany has come around squarely to Bryanism, the later day Bryanism, which is not by any means the free silver Bryanism of 1896.

One of the New York leaders, who heretofore has been opposed to Bryan and Bryanism, is quoted today as saying:

"It is a long time ahead to begin laying plans for the presidential campaign in 1908, but the activity of Hearst has forced the conservative element of the Democratic party into action. Some of the leaders were frightened by the Hearst boom, and they have set about to check it. That is, they want a man who can beat him, or possibly shoo him out of the running. The question is: Who is the man that can accomplish this?

"The names of several men were suggested as measuring up to the requirements, but they were eliminated for one reason or another, chiefly because none of them was really a national character. It was deemed necessary to pit against Hearst a man who is popular with the masses and at the same time a man who can be trusted not to disrupt the party with insane ideas.

"When the name of everyone else had been eliminated, Bryan was suggested. No one could find any objection to him. It was pointed out that, profiting by experience, he had discarded the doctrines that made him objectionable in 1896 and 1900. And, in addition, there was no denying that he is very popular with the masses, closer to the voters than any other man in the party.

"So he was chosen, and this city, which he once called the enemy's country, is preparing a welcome for him that he never dreamed of."

The Democrats are claiming much as a result of the election in Oregon on Monday of this week. Congressman Bowers of Mississippi, chairman of the campaign committee of the Democratic congressional committee, gave out the following statement:

"The Oregon election is an indication of the revolt of the people against the stand-pat policy of the Republican party. In 1904 Oregon gave President Roosevelt 42,000 majority, out of a total vote of 95,000. This year, two years later, Oregon returns to office, with an increased majority, Governor George E. Chamberlain, Democratic incumbent for the last four years, reduces the majorities of both congressional districts given the Republican candidates, and, on a popular vote for United States senator, against the immense majority given President Roosevelt, offers the Republican managers the cold consolation of a bare 5,000 majority for the Republican nominee, Jonathan Bourne, Jr., over the Democratic nominee, John M. Gearin, incumbent.

"The issues of the revision of the tariff was presented by the Oregon Democrats, and it was dwelt upon in the utterances of all newspapers that supported the Democratic nominees.

"The newspapers that supported the Republican ticket made strong appeal to the voters to yield to the party cry and insisted that Republicans 'vote straight.' They also loudly demanded the vindication of President Roosevelt by the election of every candidate on their list.

"Inasmuch as the majorities received by Republican candidates who were elected were the smallest since the presidential election of 1896, Democrats may take warm comfort from the Oregon outcome and gird themselves for fighting a winning battle for the control of the next house of representatives."

The Republican side of the situation is most forcibly illustrated by the state convention in Pennsylvania. The platform adopted there is saturated with Rooseveltism.

FORMER SENATOR JONES DECLARES FOR BRYAN.

Washington, June 9.—Former Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, two times chairman of the Democratic national committee and one of the closest friends of William J. Bryan, called on the president today. Afterward he declared for Bryan's nomination by the Democracy for the presidency.

BOOKMAKER CONVICTED

Of Recording Bets on a Horse Race in Missouri.

Kansas City, June 9.—In the criminal court here today, Charles Oldham, a bookmaker, was convicted of violating the law passed by the last Missouri legislature prohibiting the registering or recording of bets on a horse race and was fined $500. He immediately took an appeal. Dr. J. S. Gardner, president of the Elm Ridge Jockey club of Kansas City, at whose track the races were run in order to test the law, and who was indicted jointly with Oldham, was found not guilty. The judge had instructed the jury to discharge President Garner on the ground that the law does not prohibit horse racing nor betting on horses but simply prohibits the register or recording of bets.

POOR REBATERS!

Everybody is going for them these days! Just now the persecuted innocent little meat packers are getting their hide full—not for giving rebates, but for accepting them from the Burlington railroad. Even that is now considered a crime and the government is after them for it.

But there is no law to force a retailer to be honest with his customers—at least "not yet." Early this week a young man (whom we can name) went into a clothing store on Superior street, not far from Second avenue west, and picked out a suit of clothes. "I understand that you give a ten per cent rebate to employees of Marshall-Wells," said he before paying. "Yes, certainly, we do," answered the clerk and took 10 per cent off the young man's bill, misunderstanding that he was in the employ of the wholesale house. But he is not, nor did he say so. Had it not been for this remark, he would have had to pay two dollars more for his suit. The next customer did.

Fine way of doing business, isn't it? But everybody ought to know now how it is done. Our campaign against this rotten and unfair old Rebate Custom is bearing fruit. People are growing wise, when every editorial writer and every statesman, from President Roosevelt down to President Phelps, is developing into a preacher and fighter against this particular iniquity that has taken such a deep root in the business system of our day.

We say it again: To be sure of getting your money's worth, trade at One-Price stores.

COSTLY SHAKESPEARE.

Follies of Science: Seven years after the death of Shakespeare, his collected works were published in a large folio volume, now known as "The First Folio Shakespeare." This was in the year 1622. The price at which the volume was originally sold was £1, but perhaps we ought to take into consideration the fact that at that time money had a value, or purchasing power, at least eight times that which it has at present; Halliwell-Phillips estimates it at from twelve to twenty times its present value. For this circumstance, however, full allowance may be made by multiplying the ultimate result by the proper number.

This folio is regarded as the most valuable printed book in the English language—the last copy that was offered for sale, in good condition, having brought the record price of nearly $9,000, so that it is safe to assume that a perfect copy, in the condition in which it left the publisher's hands, would readily command $10,000, and the question now arises: What would be the comparative value of the present price, $10,000, and of the original price (£1) placed at interest and compounded every year since 1623?

Over and over again I have heard it said that the purchaser of the "First Folio" had made a splendid investment, and the remark is frequently used in reference to the purchase of books in general, irrespective of the present intellectual use that may be made of them. Let us make the comparison.

Money placed at compound interest at 6 per cent a little more than doubles itself in twelve years. At the present time, and for a few years back, 6 per cent is a high rate, but it is a very low rate for the average. During a large part of the time money brought 8, 10 and 12 per cent per annum, and even within the half century just past it brought 7 per cent during a large portion of the time. Now, between 1623 and 1899 there are twenty-three periods of twelve years each, and at double progression the twenty-third term, beginning with unity, would be 8,388,608. In dollars it would be $40,794,878.88. An article which costs $40,000,000, and sells for $10,000, cannot be called a very good financial investment.

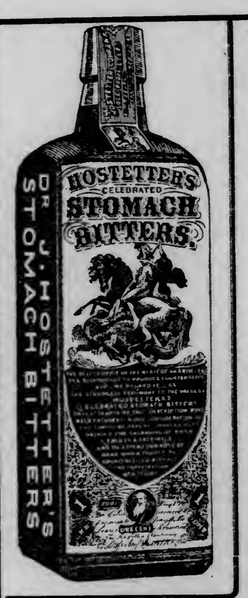

From a literary or intellectual standpoint, however, the subject presents an entirely different aspect.

Some time ago I asked one of the foremost Shakespearean scholars in the world if he had a copy of the "First Folio." His reply was that he could not afford it; that it would not be wise for him to lose $400 to $500 per year for the mere sake of ownership, when for a very slight expenditure for time and railway fare he could consult any one of half a dozen copies whenever he required to do so.

A TORNADO IN ONTARIO

Terrific Wind Does Great Damage for Many Miles.

Wires Are Down and But Little Information Obtainable.

Detroit, June 9.—Eastern Ontario was swept by a terrific wind and rain storm yesterday afternoon, and as a result all wire communication between this city and Canadian points, east of Chatham, about 60 miles from here, was cut off. Chatham suffered severe property loss from the storm, which unroofed houses, blew down trees, felled wires, and filled the streets with debris, but no loss of life resulted and no one was seriously hurt. Considerable property damage is reported from small towns and farms between here and Chatham.

A torrential rainstorm, accompanied by a 40-mile wind, swept the district about 6 o'clock in the evening. The rainfall in less than an hour measured 1.36 inches, and the wind in five minutes sprang from a gentle six-mile breeze to forty miles an hour. Trees were felled all over the city, causing severe damage to wires, and putting several hundred telephones out of communication. Several street car lines were held up by broken trolley wires for a time during the busiest hour of the evening.

Unconfirmed reports of loss of life on the river were current. One of these reports was that eight lives were lost on the river near Wolfe, a pleasure resort on the Canadian shore. Another was that a child had been picked up by the wind and swept off the Belle Isle bridge.

Both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies were making desperate, but unsuccessful, efforts tonight to reach interior points. Long distance telephone service east of Chatham is also cut off. Efforts to reach Canadian points by way of the Grand Trunk's wires along its Sarnia branch were also unsuccessful owing to storm damage. Both telegraph companies reported that the prospects of reaching Canadian points were poor.

Reports from the eastern half of the state tell of a severe storm with considerable property damage, but no loss of life.

Hamilton, Ont., June 9.—A terrific wind and rain storm swept over Ontario from one end of the Southern peninsula to the other, demolishing buildings, uprooting trees and leaving the telegraph and telephone lines a tangled mass of wires. Linemen who were sent out immediately after the storm, got as far as Dundas, five miles west of here. They report that miles of poles are down and that it will take several days to restore anything like normal conditions.

Nothing like an accurate estimate of the damage caused by the storm can be given. The storm struck this city at 4:45 yesterday afternoon and for twenty minutes the wind tore through the streets at the rate of eighty-five miles an hour. Immense oak and maple trees were cut off at the base as cleanly as though a saw had been used; buildings were demolished and electric wires of all kinds prostrated. The street car service was suspended four hours. Forty buildings in course of construction and some that had been finished were blown down. The roof of the warehouse of the Deering Agricultural Implement company was blown off and some of the smaller buildings of the plant were wrecked. Plate glass windows along King street were shattered. The roof was blown off the Hamilton Vinegar works and a wing of the Hamilton club was razed. The steeple of St. Paul's church was badly damaged. Reports from fruit farms in the valley east and west of Hamilton state the damage to fruit trees will reach many thousand dollars.

Yesterday was ladies' day at the race track and the grandstand was crowded with women when the storm broke. The horses were parading past the stand for the second race, but they were sent back to the paddock. When the wind reached such a velocity that it threatened to wreck the stand, a panic seized the crowd. The women screamed and huddled together and many of the men climbed over the fence into the infield, where they laid flat on the ground in the drenching rain.

Nothing has been heard of Paris, Woodstock and Louden, west of here in the direct path of the storm. Several passenger steamers which reached port last night, report having trying experiences on Lake Ontario.

A large number of people in the city sustained slight injuries, but so far as known no one was killed.

BAD WASHOUTS ON CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Winnipeg, June 9.—All eastbound trains on the Canadian Pacific are being held at Medicine Hat because of bad washouts at Walsh and Kincorth. The place has been without railroad communication with the East since Thursday. Recent heavy rains have caused freshets in all streams. Bridges were carried away at Kincorth, while at Walsh hundreds of yards of track are under water. It is impossible to tell when the blockade will be lifted, as repairs to the roadbed cannot be made until the water subsides.

MAGNIFICENT PRESENTATION

Of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by Virginia High School.

Virginia, Minn., June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—The senior class of the Virginia high school won many laurels, and is certainly deserving of much praise, for the magnificent presentation of Shakespeare's sparkling drama, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Performances of the beautiful comedy were given on Friday night, June 1, and Tuesday night, June 5, fully a thousand people enjoying the bright and pleasing spectacle.

The features of the play were observed in the distinctness and definiteness of the scenes and characters, and in the richness of the costumes and general setting. Everything was done with a definite aim and with precision. The acts moved off with a pleasing smoothness, and the actors handled themselves in a manner that brought the play well up to the standard of professional attainments. The humor, all through the play, was well done—rollicking and hearty, but never commonplace. Every scene had its own charm and fascination, as was shown by the generous and frank applause sprinkled throughout both evenings. The stage resembled a woodland bower, as real branches and even whole trees were used in the decorations. The scenes fairly sparkled at times with twinkling feet and glimmering arms; and the fairy music gave a subdued attraction, like an undertone to the forest pictures.

Where all the parts were so well played, it is a difficult matter to single out particular ones for special mention. The characterizations of the leading personages, the hard-handed men of Athens, and the leading fairies were indeed delightful. Henry Sincock as Theseus was stately and dominant. Sigvert Dahl's Lysander was fiery and aggressive. Sigvert never looked better in his life than in this character. Leighton Simons as Demetrius was convincing in his fervency, even when reproving. The Hermia of Mary Rooney was well taken and attractive, as was the gentle, appealing Helena of Emma Duffalo. Harry Neff made a good Egeus, and with much force called "the law" down upon the head of the "scornful Lysander." Philostrate, played by John Bonner as "Master of the Revels," was satisfactory. Lulu Martin, as Hippolyta, was effective, even beautiful, and her attendants, Eugene McCarthy and Edwin Tornquist, were as fine a pair of darkeys as ever came out of the dark continent.

The hard-handed men of Athens—mirth-provoking sons of toil—were a distinct success. With hammer and tongs they upon their way to the hearts of all. The moon was a marvel of mellow light; the wall a "chesty" pillar of support to the whole performance, and the lion a roaring success. Leslie Reid as Quince, the carpenter, was all right, and it is certain that he could saw his way to success through any play. Starveling, the tailor, cast a shadow of the light of his own moon-lantern that was pale with emaciation, while Flute, the bellows-mender, when playing Thisby, had a voice that would charm the pollywogs from the banks of Silver Lake and his strides were somewhat less than a mile in length. When this "sweet, bully" crowd got the center of the stage it was time for the audience to get happy, which was done every time. The leading character of these devotees of Thespis, was Nick Bottom, the weaver. Nick was the wonder of his hearers. His voice and versatility were amazing and he was flawlessly consistent from start to finish. In facial expression he showed himself a true actor, and he did his "stunt" so well, that all in the audience were ready to take his word for it, that he could do any part from Thisby to the Lion. Nick Bottom, as acted by James Baille, was a distinct triumph in high school dramatics and he is entitled to a place among the comedy stars that will shine in the memory of those who listen to class plays year after year.

The fairies were dainty, sprightly, and attractive. Harold Wasson as Puck was exceedingly clever. His was a star part, and it was well brought out. Oberon, impersonated by Axel Dahl, struck an effective climax in his "I'll meet by moonlight proud Titania." His enunciation was excellent and his acting all that could be desired. Titania, the fairy queen, was very gracefully cast by Ruth Trimble, whose natural gentleness, smiling manner and ease of carriage made her a charming performer. The other special fairies were as pretty as a picture, and very good to look upon. This was particularly so of "the little changeling boy," played by little Kate Lipman.

The singing fairies, twenty-five in number, made a very sparkling and lovely impression. Their choruses, "Over Hill, Over Dale," and "I Know a Bank," were harmonious and charming. The dancing fairies, fifteen in all, were pretty in the extreme. The flower dance in "four, four time" was done with rare precision.

The Athenian soldiers were a glorious cavalcade with their red tunicas, breastplates, and long spears. The boys have all the "setting up" exercises in the manual of arms down pat except perhaps "left face." Their drill was perfect the second night, and they were rewarded by an encore.

The play was produced under the direction of Supt. Bliss, who selected the actors, conducted the rehearsals and taught all the speakers how to express their lines and act their parts. He was ably assisted by Miss Headsten and Miss Chappell. Mr. Passer drilled the soldiers. The fairies were in charge of Misses Lorenz, West, Lebels, Rockwell, Devany, and Mahoney. The costuming of the leading characters and the working out of the color scheme was done by Mrs. L. Bliss, whose work added much beauty and charm to the general effect.

All who took part in the play were enthusiastic and very industrious in their efforts to do a meritorious piece of work. The drudgery of rehearsals that are necessary to produce a good play is seldom understood by those who take part. All the actors in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" were good natured, teachable and obedient. It is only such that can succeed with a play of any merit. Supt. Bliss and the Class of 1906 are to be congratulated on the remarkably smooth and convincing presentation of one of Shakespeare's best plays.

The music of the play was classic and appropriate, being Mendelssohn's famous compositions for the drama. The overture was rendered by Willson's orchestra, and Miss Josephine Sterle played the piano for the fairies' march, the flower dance, the wedding march, and other incidental music. Quite a number of visitors from out of town came to see the play. All were enthusiastic in their praise. The total receipts were $260, which will be used for the purchase of a class memorial.

Give your family the purity and healthfulness of Schlitz beer.

We spend more than all the ordinary costs of brewing to be sure that it is pure and good.

Our barley is selected by one of the partners in our business. We go down 1400 feet to rock for water—to Bohemia for hops. The brewing is done in absolute cleanliness—the beer is even cooled in filtered air.

Then Schlitz is aged for months so that it cannot cause biliousness and finally every bottle is sterilized.

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.

NEILL ENJOYS THE INQUIRY

Being Made by Agricultural Committee Into His Report.

Washington, June 9.—Labor Commissioner Charles P. Neill, who assisted in making the investigation of the Western packing houses for the president, was one of the first callers at the White House yesterday. After a brief conference with the president, he declined to talk for publication about the beef inspection question. He would not say whether an additional report would be made to congress or not.

"How long will the inquiry now being made by the agricultural committee of the house be continued?"

"I have not the remotest idea," he replied. "So far as I am concerned the members of the committee may continue the inquiry so long as they see fit. I am rather enjoying it. You see I am descended from Irish ancestry, one of the diversions of which is supposed to have been the killing of landlords. This inquiry, therefore, comes in my line, and really is fine entertainment."

It is well understood that an inquiry into packing house conditions is being continued at the instance of the president. This report has not been made to the president yet, but probably will be in a few days. Whether it will be used in a public way remains yet to be determined.

The president yesterday received the following telegram:

Spokane, June 7.—The President, Washington: The Washington state grange, in eighteenth annual session, repudiates the reported attempt of the attorney for certain corporations to speak for the farmers of this country in opposition to your efforts to remedy conditions of meat packers or meat packing.

The telegram is signed by C. B. Keegley, master of state grange, and Ed Campbell, secretary.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Current Distribution of Merchandise Dependent on Weather.

New York, June 9.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Current distribution of merchandise is largely dependent upon the weather, which varies widely according to locality. On the whole the week's results were encouraging, and monthly reports for May show splendid gains over last year's figures. Prices of commodities rose to the highest point in twenty years. Railway earnings in May were 11.2 per cent heavier than in 1905, and foreign commerce at this port for the last week showed a gain of $1,346,180 in exports and a loss of $11,508 in imports, as compared with the corresponding week last year.

In the iron and steel industry there is not only little idle machinery at the present time, but little prospect of any shut down in the near future, unless repairs necessitate such action.

Official and other indications of a large cotton crop, and the further decline in price of that staple produced no definite effect upon the primary markets for manufactured goods. The weakest feature of the cotton goods industry at the present time is the utter absence of export demand. China is out of the market, and a heavy accumulation of goods is noted at Shanghai, while the outlook for their absorption is far from promising. As to woolen goods, the future is uncertain.

Footwear factories receive only a fair volume of new fall business. Leather is steady at the recent advance. Hides are nominally unchanged, yet an easier tone is in evidence.

Failures this week in the United States are 206 against 174 last week, 188 the preceding week and 216 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number 18, against 13 last week, 8 the preceding week and 20 last year.

NOTHING VERY SENSATIONAL

In Deposition Made by Cassie Chadwick, According to Report.

Columbus, O., June 9.—According to report the deposition of Cassie L. Chadwick, now in the Ohio penitentiary, which was taken in May in the suit brought by the Jutte heirs of Pittsburg against Messrs. Friend and Hoffstatt of that city, is not as sensational as was anticipated. It was expected that Mrs. Chadwick would tell something of her early life, but this she carefully refrained from doing, and refused to answer any questions along that line. She said she first met Banker Friend in 1901, and since that time she visited him at Atlantic City, New York and Pittsburg. She says she told Friend of her deposit of $5,000,000 worth of securities with Ira Reynolds of Cleveland and exhibited to him a certificate showing that the deposit had been made. It was arranged that Friend was to act as her trustee and dispose of the securities. He loaned her at divers times money amounting in all to $181,000, but he took her note. The securities deposited with Reynolds were to be turned over to Friend, who was to allow Mrs. Chadwick from $30,000 to $40,000 per annum for living expenses and was then to reimburse himself for the money advanced.

Mrs. Chadwick claimed that Friend frequently referred to Jutte, the Pittsburg millionaire, who took his own life at Atlantic City. There is nothing in the deposition showing where Mrs. Chadwick got the securities.

She turned over to the attorneys for the Jutte heirs, copies of letters sent to her by Friend and memoranda of all her financial transactions with him.

Mrs. Chadwick has prepared a statement which she claims she will give to the public when the Jutte-Friend case is ended.

How to Break Up a Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Indianapolis News: Archbishop Messmer's disagreement with the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league serves to call attention to the fact that the fame of Milwaukee is not to be wantonly trifled with.

New York Tribune: The worldly amusement clause has been stricken from the discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Is worldly amusement becoming less harmful or the church more tolerant?

Portland Oregonian: The Presbyterian assembly side-steps the debate on the color line and refers it to the session of 1907. The reason, no doubt, is their uncertainty as to whether the color line is to be drawn in the hereafter.

Washington Post: A Richmond minister is of the opinion that more men would attend services on Sunday if the women would not wear their hats in church. But has he thought of the falling off in attendance among the women?

St. Louis Republic: Bishop Fellows, in Philadelphia, gave the preachers good advice in admonishing them to study the newspapers for sharp, short, pungent and cogent style of discourse for turning down the sinners and exalting the righteous. He truly said that the press has been the faithful ally of the pulpit in favoring humanitarian reforms and advocating the rights of all. No mistake is made when a clergyman of such clear perceptions and sound views is promoted to be a bishop.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Menominee Man Kills Himself in a Most Horrible Manner.

Menominee—Joseph Hanrahan, a Menominee man employed by the Sagoia Lumber company at Sagola, committed suicide in a most horrible manner yesterday. After slashing his throat and nearly severing his windpipe, he seized an axe and brought it down three times on his head and face, and died within a few moments.

Attorney L. D. Eastman of Menominee has received a pen of twenty-five fine standard-bred Buff Leghorn chicks only one day old. The chicks were hatched at Beloit, Wis., and were shipped to Menominee the same day. Only two of the chicks died during the 200-mile journey. It is considered remarkable to ship such young chicks so great a distance.

Ontonagon—The Zenith Dredging company of Duluth is engaged on a dredging contract at Ontonagon. Operations are in charge of Alex McDonald, who is the principal stockholder of the Zenith company. A channel sixty feet in width and between twelve and thirteen feet in depth is being opened, which will require the removal of about 24,000 yards of earth. It is expected that it will require about six weeks to complete the job.

Ishpeming—Thomas Lynn, well known throughout the upper peninsula as a ball player, and for several years pitcher for the Ishpeming team, died Thursday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lynn, North First street. He had been in poor health about a year, the greater part of the last few months being confined to his bed. Besides his parents, he is survived by four brothers, all residing here. His age was about 32 years.

The Duluth Typographical union succeeded in having the Federated Trades assembly start a movement last night to fight the new city directory because it is to be printed in what is termed a "scab" shop. The directory, it is understood is to be printed in the shop of J. J. LeTourneau & Co., as Mr. LeTourneau is vice president of the directory company, and the printers who are fighting the non-union shops on the eight-hour day asked that each union instruct its members not to give their correct names, but to give the name of John Johnson to the directory canvassers, thus endeavoring to make the directory a farce and useless as an advertising medium. A motion to this effect was passed and it was also decided to appoint a committee of one to act with the business agent of the printers in notifying business men that if they advertise in the directory they do not need to expect the trade of Duluth union men. C. W. F. Hegg was appointed for this work.

The matter of the unions of the city acquiring picnic grounds of their own was brought up again and the committee having the matter in charge reported that they have secured options on five lots, each 25 by 125 feet near Fairmount Park, West Duluth, with a view to purchasing them for picnic grounds. These lots can be acquired for the total sum of $700 and it is planned to put a $2,500 building on it to be used for dancing and public meetings and to be rented when wanted, but no liquor is to be allowed on the grounds or in the building. The plan is, further, that each union contributing $250 or more toward the purchase and building fund is to have one director on the board of government. The matter was referred to the individual unions last night for a referendum vote on the matter.

State Labor Commissioner W. H. Williams was a visitor at the trades assembly, and just before adjournment made a short talk which was principally advice to the union men of Duluth to unite on political candidates without regard for party; and to inquire into their records with a view to what they will do for unions.

This evening at Labor World hall, Thomas Wilson, fourth vice president of the Machinists International union, will give an address. The meeting will be an open one, and all union men and others interested in the matter are urged to attend. Mr. Wilson is regarded as one of the brightest men in the union movement on the continent, and it is expected that his address will be very interesting.

President William Templemen of the state federation of labor was in the city yesterday for a few hours, having come in from Port Arthur and being on his way to St. Paul. For some months he has been special organizer for the typographical union in Northwestern Canada, and will be at the work for some time yet. He returned yesterday to be present at the state federation meeting, which will open in Stillwater next week.

Secretary-Treasurer W. E. McEwen of the state federation of labor, accompanied by his wife, went to the Twin Cities and Stillwater yesterday to begin arrangements for the opening of the convention.

TRIES TO SECURE LAND FOR OUTSIDE INDIANS.

Washington, June 9.—Representative Buckman is wrestling with the problem of how to secure allotments for some of his Indian constituents who are entitled to land in the White Earth reservation, but not residing there. Under the construction placed on the White Earth allotment act, the interior department holds that residence is mandatory. The question did not cut any figure with non-resident Indians until congress passed the act providing that mixed-blood Indians on the White Earth reservation should have fee patents for their allotments, enabling them to sell immediately. Since that enactment, however, the non-resident Indians have asked for legislation permitting them to receive allotments. Buckman says that there is no chance to do anything this year, but he will try to have a provision put in the next Indian appropriation bill giving the non-resident Indians land.

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM AT DULUTH HIGH SCHOOL

Class of 1906, Numbering Seventy-Four, Completes Course.

Five Young Women and Men Are Heard in Exercises.

At the commencement night exercises held in the assembly hall last evening, the class of 1906 of the Duluth Central high school, passed into history, and while the commencement exercises naturally are of interest to a much smaller number than the class night program, every seat in the hall was occupied and the late comers were forced to stand.

The attractiveness of the class night dresses of the young women with their varying colors, cannot compare with the simple beauty of the assembled class on commencement night, with the snowy whiteness of the gowns contrasting with the dark background of the boy's suits, and when the class of '06 filed up on the flower bedecked stage, it formed as handsome a group of young men and women as one might wish to see.

Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., delivered the invocation, and the first number on the program was a beautiful rendition of Batiste's "Vesper Hour," by the class, under the direction of Prof. Custance. Great credit is due to Mr. Custance for the unusually fine musical programs which were features of both the class and commencement night exercises, and he had a still harder task in arranging and training the 600 Eighth grade graduates for the music of Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

It is on commencement night that the five young people who represent the best literary and oratorical talent in the class deliver original essays, and the members of '06 who took part last evening, acquitted themselves in fine style.

Miss Elsie Crassweller was the first to speak, the title of her essay being, "The Order of the Red Cross." Miss Crasweller has not a very strong voice, but she spoke with remarkable clearness so that she made herself easily audible throughout the hall. Her paper, dealing with the history of the Red Cross society from its earliest beginnings to the present day, was very interesting. A synopsis follows:

"Nearly sixteen centuries have rolled by since the banner of the Cross appeared to Constantine the Great, bearing these four words, 'In Hoc Singno Vinces,' and the red cross was imprinted forever on the banner under which he became the first Christian monarch of the world. It was the same red cross with its inspiring motto that ended the persecutions of Christianity in the dark ages. This cross shone on the breastplates and banners of those who gave up their lives on the scorching sands of Tunis. First it was the sign of the Order of the Cross, then the badge of the Geneva Masonry, and lastly the star of the hospital, the armlet of the nurse, and a sign of help to the wounded soldier.

"This confederation of the red cross was brought about largely through the efforts of a Swiss gentleman, a Monsieur Durant, who set forth the horrors of the battlefield in a book entitled 'Le Souvenir de Sioferno,' which, published both at home and abroad, stirred deeply the hearts of all who read it. The result was a conference held at Geneva for the purpose of considering ways of mitigating the horrors of war. The colors of Switzerland were fixed up as a badge of neutrality, and was to be worn upon the left arm by all persons connected with or acting under the association.

"In every battle deeds of bravery and daring have been inspired by this simple flag. In considering all that is most beautiful, good and self-sacrificing in this world we cannot think of anything that surpasses the aim of the Red Cross, for there is nothing this side of heaven that is nobler. Florence Nightingale, whose devotion to sufferers can never can be forgotten, marched under this banner. Early in her life she took up philanthropic work with such success that when from Crimea there came a great cry about the deplorable condition under which the sick and wounded were dying from want of simple care, it was to her that the British government turned with the request that she would organize a band of nurses to go to the seat of war. Of the ability and devotion which she exhibited in her great work all know, and nothing illustrates the greatness of herself and her work better than when at a dinner given to the military and naval officers who had served in the Crimean war it was suggested that each guest write on a slip of paper the name of the person whose services during the Crimean war would be longest remembered. Upon the examination of the slips each was found to bear the name of Florence Nightingale.

"If England had her Florence Nightingale, America has her Clara Barton. She it was who introduced the Red Cross into America and who procured the acceptance of the Geneva Red Cross treaty by this government. In addition to work on the battlefield, Miss Barton included relief to the suffering after great disasters in the work of the society, and for examples of the great good done in this line by the society we need only refer to the Texas famine, the yellow fever in Florida, the Johnstown flood, the Russian famine, the war in Cuba and the great flood in Galveston.

"The Red Cross banner today bears the message of heaven—faith, hope and charity—and wherever it has floated from the temples of peace, its message conveys the one glad tiding of good will to all men, bidding them love their enemies, to do good to them that despitefully use them, to return kindness for evil, to bear malice toward none, and to practice that religion which is mindful of the widow and the fatherless."

Miss Florence Howe chose for a subject the life and works of "Elizabeth Parrett Browning." The composition showed a careful study of the life of Mrs. Browning, and Miss Howe made the audience feel her own sincere admiration for the greatest of women poets. Her essay was as follows:

"The name of Elizabeth Barrett Browning has become so familiar to us that were she still living we might fancy ourselves seated by her side, listening to the story of her life from her own lips.

"Perhaps she would first tell us of her girlhood home in Herefordshire, England, where, the idol of wealthy parents, she grew up in an atmosphere of refinement and culture to the development of her remarkable gifts.

"We might search in vain through the pages of history to find a more beautiful picture than the fifteen-year-old Elizabeth, seated at the feet of her blind tutor, Hugh Stuart Bond, as they wandered together through the broad fields of Grecian and Latin literature, and in those early years laid the foundations for her career as a writer.

"Soon after the publication of her first successful work 'The Seraphim and Other Poems,' Miss Barrett's health became so poor that she was sent to Torquay, in the care of her favorite brother, Edward, where her health was regained to a great extent. The following summer, however, the drowning of Edward almost witnin sight of her window prostrated her and for months her life was hanging by a thread.

"For the next five years her life was that of a confirmed invalid. Her increasing mental vigor at this time seems most remarkable, when we think of these years of suffering and extreme weakness. She established her fame permanently in 1844 when she published two volumes of poetry containing some of her most popular poems, among them, 'The Drama of the Exile', 'A Vision of Poets', 'The Dead Pan' and 'The Sleep'.

"In her most famous poem, 'Lady Geraldine's Courtship', Miss Barrett made a reference to Mr. Browning which lead to their acquaintance. Their friendship grew into love and they were secretly married against the wishes of Miss Barrett's father, who never forgave her. Mrs. Browning's married life was almost ideally happy from the beginning and no cloud seems to have marred this happiness during the fifteen years of her husband's watchful care.

"Immediately after their marriage the poet pair started for Italy. Here Mrs. Browning's health was partially regained and some of her most popular, though not her best work, was written.

"Had Mrs. Browning's creative ability equalled her capacity to feel, and had her brilliant imagination not been lacking in clearness, there is nothing that she might not have accomplished. Her whole being was rythmic and she was able to give voice to the expression of her inmost soul. Through her broad humanity and religion, her tender knowledge of the hearts of children, and her faith and hope, she was most beloved as a woman and a poet. The highest place among women poets is generously accorded her, and although realizing her defects, we must agree with Steadman who called her 'the most inspired woman of all those who have composed in ancient and modern tongues, or flourished in any land or time.

"At the close of June, 1861, Mrs. Browning lay dying in Florence, the City of Flowers. As she lay in her husband's arms she seemed to have some vision of heavenly glory for she murmured, 'It is beautiful'. With these words on her lips, one of the earth's rarest women passed into the world beyond.

"Placed upon Casaquidi, the old palace which was her home, the traveller may find a white marble slab on which is inscribed with letters of gold, these words:

"'Here wrote and died Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who in her woman's heart united the wisdom of a sage and the eloquence of a poet, with her golden verses liking Italy to England. Grateful Florence placed this memorial.'"

Miss Frances Woodbridge contributed much to the enjoyment of the program by her beautiful rendition of German's "Cupid at the Ferry." Miss Woodbridge received an enthusiastic encore and gave De Koven's "The Naughty Little Clock."

Freeman H. Randall showed fine oratorical ability, as well as a thorough grasp of the subject in his oration, "Graft in the Public Service." He said in part:

"What is the meaning of these headlines we see in large red type on the front page of our daily papers? 'Graft Revelations,' 'Boodlers Apprehended.' Can this be news of our country's interest? Reluctantly we must admit that it is of vital importance to every citizen. Our nation is crying out in anger, our people, fully awakened, are clamoring with a thunderous voice. But against what, against whom? Against corrupt practices, against those who have betrayed their trust and sold their honor, those whom we in a good solid American term, call Grafters.

"First, what is graft? From its original meaning, the propagation of plant life by inserting in another stock, it has come to mean the obtaining of something for nothing through collusion—not a new disease, but simply a larger and more respectable form of an old political habit.

"Where is it? It is in nearly every political body in the United States, in our councils, in our legislatures, in nearly every governing body from that of a small town to the senate of the United States.

"Who are those grafters? They are from the ranks of the most respected and promising men of our nation. These men have been held up as examples to our young men, they have given advice to rising politicians, and have been held in the highest respect by our millions of citizens.

"There must be powerful causes to pull these men of great ability down. The chief cause of this is that many in competition fail to secure honestly, due reward for their labor. The rewards of dishonesty are so enormous that many of the ablest and shrewdest minds make it the sphere of their operation.

"The worst result of this dishonesty, is not that the people are robbed of their money, but that their rights are being lost. The conditions are such that the fundamental principle of our government the equality of all men before the law, has ceased to exist. The senate of the United States once contained some of our most honorable statesmen, but a study of the character of some of the senators of the present day will explain in part why the senate has disregarded the evident purpose of our constitution. The intention of our ancestors was for the house to predominate, but this has been changed and the senate, which has almost ceased to represent the people, has the greater power.

"When calling the roll they read, 'The Senator from New York,' 'The Senator from Rhode Island,' when everyone knows they mean the 'Senator from the New York Central,' and the 'Senator from the Standard Oil.' These senators should be tried for treason, not graft, for they have become slaves to the enemies of the republic.

"Consider the absolute power of the Tammany ring, and of the Standard Oil company. These organizations show the power of the almighty dollar in our modern life. Freedom, equity, the making of our laws, the decisions of our judicial bodies, and all the things which go to make up this boasted American freedom of ours, are controlled by dollars.

"But this state of affairs cannot endure much longer. In our senate is working a minority of honest and high minded men. By the reports of investigations, and the general indignation all over the country we see that the people are at last fully awake to the state of affairs and with their noble leader, the president, are taking their stand for clean politics. Through the haze we can see a great future for our nation, and, with the careful carrying out of official duty, with fidelity, justice and patriotism we shall keep the hard earned place which we now hold as being truly the greatest nation on the earth."

Miss Nellie Gamble's contribution to the program was an original story, and she delivered it with a vividness and feeling which could have been brought out only by the author. She was, perhaps, the most perfectly at ease of any of the speakers, and was warmly applauded.

Miss Gamble's story, entitled "A Glimmer of Hope," is a tale of a Western cattle ranch, and the vivid and beautiful descriptions of the country, with its lofty gorgeously colored cliffs and flowering plans, with which the story abounds, showed evidence of a close acquaintance with the things of which she wrote.

The story opens with a description of how Jenkins, a cowboy, while half drunk, marries an Indian girl. When he sobers up and realizes what he has done, he proves to be too much of a man to desert her, but the incident changes his whole life, and from a wild cowboy he settles down to steady work and soon becomes one of the leading ranch owners of the country. Two children, both boys, are born to them, and one of them inherits the strong-willed, thoroughly civilized nature of his father, while the other early shows evidences of his Indian blood in his wild, reckless nature. Both are sent to college, but while John, the strong-willed, finishes his course with honors, Monte, the savage, is expelled before his junior year and is never heard from until he unexpectedly turns up just as his father is dying.

At his father's deathbed he promises him to mend his ways, and, after a struggle, succeeds and becomes one of the cowpunchers on his brother's ranch.

A college friend of John's appears and brings his sister to spend a summer on his chum's ranch. To the Western men the girl's delicate beauty is a revelation, and both John and Monte fall in love with her. Monte's wild, half-savage life, has, however, made him rough and decidedly repellant to a girl of Miss Browning's careful education, and while she is pleased with his attentions, she finally marries John.

Monte is thoroughly awakened to his unfitness for civilized life, and the story closes with the prodigal son leading the life of a hermit, making his living by trapping, and whose light in his hut, far up the mountain side, causes much inquiry among travelers.

Arthur Dunning was prominent on both graduating nights of the class, taking a leading part in the class play, and being one of the five honored with the privilege of delivering their essays on commencement night. He proved fully equal to both parts, however, and his essay, "The Independent Man," was highly appreciated. The substance of the essay was as follows:

"Independence is not a new thing in this country. It has been here ever since the Pilgrims landed on the shores of Massachusetts and in fact it was the very cause of their coming. Since then it has been the very watchword of the nation. But let us take it up in the individual and see what it means to him.

"It is the independent man whom the people of today would place in the foremost rank of all public men. In order to be truly independent, he must be honest and upright, fair minded and strong willed, level headed and courageous in every particular. He must not be governed by precedent, but must sift out the good and bad from precedent and substitute new ideas for those precedents which he does not consider best. The man in politics who is governed strictly by party lines is not the independent man. It is generally admitted that the moral standard in politics is being lowered. The only safe tribunal is the conscience and reason of the independent voter who considers the question from two points of view, that of personal and that of national interest. It is the independent men of today who determine nearly every election, yet it is almost impossible to elect an independent candidate because of the cost.

"President Roosevelt is a very good example of the independent man. His actions in the canal case and other live questions of the day show clearly his independence. Ex-President Cleveland is also a fine example of the independent man. The use of his veto power while mayor of Buffalo, as governor of New York, and as president, furnishes a good example of his independence. In his election for governor, Cleveland commanded the independent vote of both parties, as he did later when running for the presidency.

"The same call for independent men is heard in nearly every line of business. In every profession the independent men are the ones that will come out ahead of the goal. The judge on the bench, the lawyer at the bar and the juryman in the box should all strive to make themselves types of independent men. The independent laborers and tradesmen are also important factors in political and social life. James J. Hill, who started life as a poor working boy, has, by sticking to his own ideas and maintaining his independence, placed himself in the foremost ranks of the financiers and promoters of the West.

"In religion, also, the independents of today persecute you and punish you less for individual beliefs on serious questions than any other set of religious people. Their general principle is that Christians ought to strive by study and honest criticism to get back to the original Christianity in thought and spirit. A good type of the independent religious man is Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook. He has his own views on religion and is not at all afraid of expressing them, and he really feels the sentiments which he is expressing.

"Thus we see that everywhere the independent man is wanted, in politics, in business and commercial life, and in religion. He is the man for whom the people of today are looking, and whom they will reward when he is found. And everywhere, 'Reform your ways or take the consequences,' is the slogan of the independent man."

In introducing the class, Principal Smith announced that the graduates would number seventy-four, and told of the good records made by the members of '06 in scholarship and character. Then, addressing the class, he said:

"Young people, the four years that you have been here have passed with unexpected rapidity. Three classes which were here when you entered have graduated, and now your hour has struck. The time seems incredibly short to me, and I am sure it must to you. The ties formed during those four years, short as they may have seemed, cannot, however, be easily broken, and now that the time is at hand I feel sure that you feel with me that you would like to put off the hour of graduation a little longer.

"You are soon to realize that this is really to be a commencement. You are doubtless rejoicing that your examinations are finally over, but you will have others just as hard in the future. You will be asked what you know, what you can do and how you can do it, before you have been many years in the world. We can certify that you know something, but the aim of this school is not to impart knowledge, but to give you, if we can, the power to do things, to accomplish something in life. Every day of your life will be an examination, by your neighbor, your employer and society at large, and while they may not actually mark you as we do here, they will none the less decide your grade in life, and will decide whether you belong in the rank in which you are, or in some higher one. I have the greatest confidence in what you will accomplish in life, and I extend to you my congratulations at having so successfully attained this happy period, and my best wishes for the highest success for each and every one of you in the future. I am sure that if you go into life with the same spirit that you have shown here, this success will inevitably come to you."

Before presenting the diplomas to the class, Supt. Denfeld stated that, as it was usually expected of the individual who presents the diplomas to give a little advice, he would proceed to do so. All he could say to them was, he said, summed up in the following quotation from Van Dyke: "Turn not your back on the morning, and walk not in your own shadow." He then gave the coveted sheepskin to the seventy-four eager seniors, Principal Smith introducing each member as the diplomas were presented. The program ended with Custance's "Alma Mater," sung by the class.

After the exercises the boys of the school, led by the Seniors, bearing President Ed Borgen on their shoulders, marched down Superior street to Huot's, and then back to the city hall, where a number of the police appeared and ordered them to break up. The entire crowd then adjourned to the high school, where they established themselves on the front steps, and sang college songs, much to the terror of the night watchman, and the wonder of the passers by.

LOCAL CHOIR TO ASSIST.

First Norwegian Lutheran Church Choir Goes to Northfield.

The First Norwegian Lutheran church choir, under the direction of John Olsen, will leave this evening over the Great Northern road for Northfield, Minn., where it will participate in the annual singing festival at that place next week. This is the second invitation that the choir has had to participate in the rendition of the great oratorio, "Messiah," which is to be sung Tuesday evening. It will be sung by a choir of 300 voices, accompanied by Danz's symphony orchestra of forty-five pieces from Minneapolis.

Among those who will leave for Northfield are the following: Mr. and Mrs. John Olsen, Ruth Ringsred, Clara Ringsred, Olive Ovre, Julie Gunderson, Anna Hovdal, Sophie Hovdal, Rebecca Hovdal, Hilda Jarstad, Anna Frost, Anna Amundson, Annie Anderson, Albert Dysland, Iver Iverson, Sigvert Johnson, George Persgard, Carl Olsen, Arthur Ringsred, Paul Snide.

Award is Raised.

Judge Cant has filed an order directing an award of $400 to the Fidtlity Trust company and others for a strip of land sixty-six feet wide through their property within the city limits. The land was appropriated by the board of public works for a roadway, the owners being awarded 36 cents damages. The board maintained that this amount was sufficient as the abbutting property would be benefited by the road. Other property owners donated a right of way.

The Fidelity Trust company and a few of the other lot owners were dissatisfied with the award and appealed.

City Attorney Bert Fesler, who represented the board of public works, has entered a motion for a new trial.

ANOTHER ADVANCE

Price of the Trinity Mining Stock Going Up Again

The phenomenal sales of the stock of the Trinity Mining Co., Sonora, Mexico, which I am offering, indicate that as soon as the necessary additional machinery (such as we contemplate adding to the present equipment), is installed, then the profits to the stockholders should be almost immediately available. I shall leave the prices open on the remaining shares, which were allotted to readers of this paper, a few days longer, but reserve the right to advance them without further notice. If you want reservations made for you at present prices, namely: 50c per share cash, or 55c per share on time (par value $1.00 per share, fully paid and non-assessable; estimated value in six months from $1.50 to $2.00 per share; estimated value in two years' time from $2.00 to $6.00 per share.)

Jay Gould's Advice

The time to buy mining stock is when it is low, not after it has gone to par. That was Jay Gould's advice and he always acted on it.

If you decide the stock is worth buying, get in on the bottom price, and wait for the rise, which in this case will surely come.

THE PROPERTY.

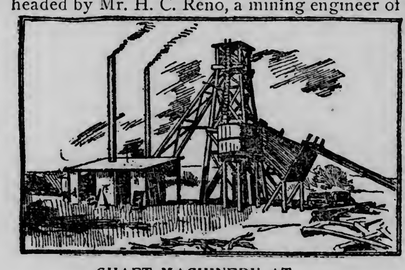

The property is improved with two new Huntington Mills, each of about twenty tons capacity, with amalgamating plates and appliances, Hoisting Machinery, Buildings for Offices, Mess House, Shaft Machinery, Engines, Boilers, Blacksmith Shop, etc., etc., and the Company will operate a large Company Store, which in itself should be a great dividend producer.

From this, the man who is seeking a good, safe and profitable investment, can see that when I say that this stock is dirt cheap at 50c on the dollar, I am well within the bounds of conservatism.

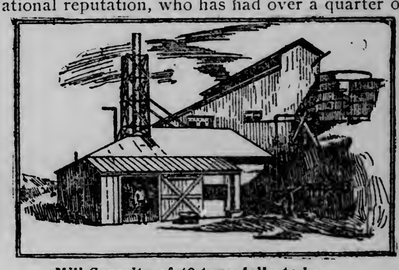

Many a "prospect" mine has sold its stock for more. Over $40,000 has gone into this property, and at that only two out of the dozen mines known as the "La Jojoba" group, owned by this Company, are opened up—the San Miguel and the Cleopatra. Many of these other mines have been sufficiently developed to prove that they contain rich ore bodies.

WE HAVE AMPLE FUEL AND WATER.

Two very necessary attributes to successful and economical mining are fuel and water. Both are available for all the needs of all of the mines. We need co-operation of investors to make this magnificent group of mines, which is in the midst of the richest mineral district of Sonora, Mexico, develop into a great producing property. It deserves your co-operation. The management is headed by Mr. H. C. Reno, a mining engineer of national reputation, who has had over a quarter of These men are firm believers in the Open Door policies regarding mining investments. If any prejudice or misconception exists in your mind regarding the substantial character of this stock, or of the men who are responsible for the complete reorganization of the mines, then I ask you either to write them or call and talk with them. You will find that they will be more than ready and willing to answer all questions bearing on the prospects of this magnificent property. None of them could afford to connect themselves with the Trinity Mining Co. unless they felt reasonably sure of results. Your investment will be in safe hands.

WHAT THE COMPANY NEEDS.

The present mill has a capacity of twenty-five to forty tons per day. We must increase our mill capacity to 150 tons per day, which can be done at a very slight increase in the fixed charges. A tram road should be built so that the ore can be delivered from the mines to the mill for 15c a ton instead of 60c, which it costs at the present time. A Cyanide plant must be built. As soon as it is installed it will pay for itself twice over in profits from the tailings of the present mill. These are some of the things that the Company is in the greatest need of and which must be provided.

You can buy this stock today at 50c per share cash or 55c on time payments. It should be worth from $2.00 to $4.00 per share within six months.

The original allotment to this paper was 40,000 shares. These have been going rapidly, and when these are gone no more can be had, in all probability, at any price less than par.

YOU MAY BUY ON EASY PAYMENTS.

THE CONVENTION.

On the eve of the Republican state convention the outcome of the governorship fight is quite as much of a puzzle as it ever was.

When anybody tells you that any particular candidate has a mortgage on the nomination his statement is either the production of guesswork or of a wish that is father to the thought. The clouds of doubt that surround the situation may be cleared away when the delegates begin to gather here about Tuesday, but just now they are impenetrable.

On the face of the situation J. F. Jacobson of Madison has a strong lead. He has at least 300 votes, apparently, and perhaps a few more; but it takes 545 to nominate, and there is a question whether the present showing is not the fullest possible strength of the man from Lac Qui Parle.

Cole and Block, in the order named, follow Jacobson in positive strength, with Lord, Stephens, Somerville and Diment showing smaller bunches of delegates than they were expected to have.

Still, this order may not mean nearly so much as it seems to mean. Many things may happen between now and Wednesday, for it looks very much as though this were going to be what is known as a "trading convention", and in the mass of uninstructed delegates there are opportunities innumerable for framing up "deals" that might clear the situation in a moment.

All of which makes it very interesting, and indicates that Duluth will not only have the pleasure of entertaining a large number of representative citizens of other parts of the state, but that it will also have the diversion of witnessing an uncommonly exciting and interesting convention.

The candidates will begin arriving tomorrow, in all probability, and the delegates will be straggling in from then on to Wednesday morning. Tuesday evening a great many delegates will be here and the political pot will be boiling furiously. Possibly by that time somebody may have a foot within the door of success, but at this time, so far as The Herald can see, no candidate has anything like a certainty, and it would not be safe to risk a reputation as a prophet on the statement that any one of the seven candidates, or any one of several brunette horses, like Hanson, Dunn or Staples, would not be nominated.

In other words, it is anybody's fight; but it is a warm fight and a merry one, and Duluth will be the theater of its final scenes.

DECORATE.

Duluth people can kill two birds with one stone by putting up their decorations in honor of the Republican state convention, which gathers June 13, and by leaving them up to observe Flag day, which is June 14.

In all probability the convention will run over into the second day, so the decorations would naturally be left up anyway, and Flag day will receive in Duluth a greeting that it might not have had otherwise.

Here are two strong reasons for putting up every decoration there is in town. Flags should fly from every flagstaff; bunting and colors should drape every store front, and windows should carry abundant testimony that the owners know that there is something unusual in the wind.

It is not a common thing for Duluth to get a politcal state convention. Two years ago it entertained a Democratic state convention to select delegates to the national convention, but this will be the first time a nominating state convention has ever been held here. Before this the Twin Cities have had a monopoly of entertaining them, and having arranged that one should be held here, it is up to the citizens to prove that it was no mistake. So flying colors in profusion should flap to the breezes a cheerful welcome to the candidates and the delegates, assuring them that Duluth is glad they came and hopes they will come again.

Not less strong is the Flag Day reason for decorating. In these times of high finance and low morals, of special privilege and of the effort to secure fair play, patriotism is at a premium and everything that can be done to promote it is worth while. Inculcating respect to the flag is one way, and a very good way indeed, so it is proper and wholesome that its birthday should be duly and suitably celebrated. It can be done in no better way than that of setting afloat the red, white and blue glories of the Stars and Stripes.

Therefore, in welcome to the state convention and in celebration of the flag's birthday, let everybody decorate to the extent of his capacity for decoration.

AN UNFAIR CONDITION.

President Roosevelt would make more remarks about race suicide if he heard the experiences of a woman in Chicago who took up the work of school census enumeration recently and was assigned to a fashionable apartment house.

Her pay was to be based upon results, and she was to receive 1 cent for each child she enumerated. It took her two hours to go through this fashionable apartment house, and in all its twenty-four apartments she found not one single child of school age. Finally the janitor saved the day for her. He has a child which she enumerated, and at the end of the two hours' work she found that she had earned 1 cent.

The story adds that she promptly threw up her position, and sought more remunerative employment.

As to the success of those enumerators who were assigned to the tenement districts nothing is said, but it is easy to imagine that they made money hand over fist at the rate of 1 cent per child. The children are not found in the fashionable apartments, since it appears not to be fashionable to have children. Doubtless if she had been enumerating parrots and poodle dogs the results would have been more encouraging. But in the tenements, where poverty reigns supreme, there are lots of children, three, five and even a dozen to a family.

This is the old story; those who are able to rear children in comfort and educate them to be useful citizens do not have them, while those who find it hard work to supply themselves with the necessaries of life keep the stork working overtime. While the children of the fashionable apartment houses, if any happen to come, are surrounded by luxury and given every advantage, those of the tenements are in great luck if they get any schooling at all, and they are forced out to earn their own livings at a very tender age.

Of course, this is not right. It is positively discouraging. But what are you going to do about it? It would do no good to pass a law designed to maintain an average size of families, and imposing penalties upon those who fall beneath a certain standard in fecundity.

How would it be to compel such people as those of the Chicago apartment house visited by this enumerator, when they have no children of their own, to become responsible for the expense of educating say two children to each family, to be selected from the families of those who are rich in offspring but too poor in worldly goods to be able to properly educate them to become good and useful citizens?

AN UNPLEASANT EXHIBIT.

Not long ago a young Italian girl was being tried in New York for the murder of her aunt and uncle. She had turned upon them and killed them both after suffering for years from treatment too hideous to be speakable.

The circumstances of the case made it evident that the testimony was going to be extremely salacious. It was. It was so horrible that even the yellowest of the yellow journals passed it over in silence, filling their columns with descriptions of the crime and of the demeanor of the girl-murderer upon the stand.

But all through that trial, according to the newspaper reports, in the large audience that attended daily a conspicuous feature was the presence of many women, some of whom were evidently possessed of refinement, at least in appearance.

These women were constant attendants. They did not miss a word of the testimony, and it is reported that they listened to hideous details with an eagerness that was more discomforting and discouraging than the crime itself. Evidence that made men turn pale, and that caused a woman reporter to faint, they heard without blushing, and waited for more.

It is hard to understand this. It is not characteristic of womankind, and it would be unfair to argue anything against women in general out of the conduct of these sensation-seekers. Yet the disposition of these women was a disgrace to womanhood.

If this were the only instance of such things it would not be so bad; but it isn't. Even in the Duluth courts, at times, women have been constant attendants upon unpleasant trials, and greedy listeners to the distasteful evidence.

It is a curious manifestation of abnormal tastes. If they were not abnormal, the prospects for humanity would be dismal indeed. It is true that in some cases women attend these trials, where a woman is the defendant or the complaining witness, in order to give the woman principals in the case the comfort of womanly company in the court room. But even to do this takes an amount of courage that is uncommon, and worthy as the motive may be, few men would consent to let their wives or daughters perform such an errand.

A VANISHING CUSTOM.

In the days gone by it was often the custom of wholesalers, when their country customers came to town, to see that they were "shown a good time." This meant that if they were at all inclined that way—and many were so inclined in town who walked most uprightly at home—they were to be wined and dined and put through a course of sprouts which involved the eye-reddening process known as "seeing the town".

This practice is on the wane, according to a man who is in a position to know. It may prevail to some extent still, but it is getting out of fashion, like many other customs of the day when getting drunk was a more general habit than it is now.

According to a wholesale man, it has been found that the practice does not pay, which is a good enough business reason for dropping it, without bothering about any ethical reasons. The custom was to take the country customer out immediately upon his arrival, with the idea of getting him into such good humor with himself and his host that on the morrow his order for goods might be large and generous. But it was found that very often the "cold, gray dawn of the morning after" found the country customer in no mood for business. Instead, he was afflicted with sundry disagreeable symptoms, including headaches, bad tastes in his mouth, and a soul generally disgruntled and hateful and sour on the world.

Often, too, the man that felt this way in the morning had anything but pleasant thoughts of the fellow that was responsible for his condition, and when the wholesale man, more used to dissipation than his country customer, showed up bright and cheerful in the morning, the afflicted and depressed victim of last night's good time found it hard not to positively hate him. And neither party was clearheaded or in fit condition to transact business.

So the old fashion of getting the country customer drunk before getting his order is going out. It is a good riddance, indeed. The time when men could compete with their fellows when their own heads were clouded and their dispositions soured by the reaction from a debauch is gone. So many business men nowadays try to live normal lives and keep their wits clean and free for business, that the man who befouls his life with dissipation stands little show in competition with them.

The man whose interview suggested these reflections has a new way of entertaining his country guests. He takes the country customer and his wife and daughters, if he has any, to dinner, and then afterwards to the theater and "so home to bed" at a decently early hour. Next morning both are in fine fettle for business, their heads are clear and their natures kindly disposed toward the world, and they can do more business and do it better than they possibly could weighed down by that "next morning" load of gloom.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Tomorrow the large and handsome new church building of the Boston First Church of Christ, Scientist, will be dedicated, and a large gathering of Christian Scientists from all over the country will mark the event. This church, the "Mother church" of the faith, cost $2,000,000, and its completion directs attention forcibly to the remarkable growth in strength and numbers of a sect that is forty years old as a "discovery", and only thirty years old as an associated body of believers.

Boston is crowded with strangers from all parts of the country; indeed, from all parts of the world, though as yet Christian Science is largely an American institution. Duluth is represented there, and there will hardly be an important community in the nation without its representation.

The New York World gives some figures about the growth enjoyed by the sect founded by Mrs. Eddy forty years ago. In 1876 there was one church and but seven communicants. Now there are 657 chartered churches, 277 organized missions, 42,000 communicants and 1,000,000 adherents, according to the church figures.

In 1889 New York had three recognized practitoners of the Christian Science faith, and now it has 137. Chicago has 232, Boston 149, London 39, and San Francisco—before the earthquake—had 39. The World says that New York has six Christian Science churches, one of which cost more than $1,000,000, and another more than $250,000. Chicago has four churches, and Buffalo and Kansas City have two each. Duluth has one neat little church edifice, with several hundred adherents, including many of the leading citizens. Every Christian Science church is paid for in cash as it is built. There are no "church debts".

This is no place for a discussion of the merits of the Christian Science cult, but it must be said that there are probably no more cheerful, complacent and contented people in the country than those that adhere to it. It is not a creed that has drawn the ignorant and superstitious; on the contrary the membership is marked by a high degree of intelligence. Its growth has been one of the most remarkable religious manifestations of recent years.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"The Beltrami Electric Light & Power company will have its development work on the upper Mississippi river well along by next fall," said W. G. Schroeder of Bemidji, president of the company, at the McKay. "We will be able to develop a large power by damming the river a few miles below Bemidji, where we will be able to get a 29-foot head. At first, however, we will have only a 24-foot head, which will furnish us with all the power required for the time being.

"We expect to furnish Bemidji with all her electric power, and later on will probably have a line to Cass Lake, which is only a few miles farther down the river. The dam will result in a flowage that will, according to the estimates of the engineers, cover an area of about 420 acre. This will of course do away with the rapids between the lake and the dam, and will afford a fine place for boating. Some of the land necessary has not yet been purchased, and we will have to get it by condemnation proceedings, unless the owners come to a more reasonable frame of mind. As soon as any improvement is contemplated the property needed always increases in price at a remarkable rate.

"Some of the machinery we are going to use is naturally very heavy, and we will be unable to get it at the dam site before winter, for the ground will have to be frozen before we can transport it down the river. The stream at that point isn't large enough to allow the use of scows in moving the machinery.

Minnesota hotels are sanitary and well provided with fire escapes, according to State Hotel Inspector Ryan, who recently returned to St. Paul from a tour of the state. He says that, with one exception, the hotels were all provided with adequate means of escape in case of fire.

"Hotel keepers of this state are exceedingly conscientious regarding safety appliances, and every precaution is taken to guard against loss of life," he is quoted as saying. "During my last trip I came across only one hotel which was not provided with a proper means of escape in case of fire. The hotels, as a rule, are run on a sanitary basis, and I find little trouble along this line. In fact, proprietors find it to their advantage to have clean, wholesome places, as the traveling public are quick to detect unsavory conditions. Of course, in the smaller towns where there is but one hotel, possibly two, the traveling public is not permitted much of a choice, but as a rule the conditions are all that can be expected. In some vicinities there has been a certain laxity regarding these matters, but it has now passed away to a great extent. The proprietor of a hotel, no matter what may be his views on the question, is willing to comply with the law.

"A matter which I have advocated, and which I am pleased to say is beginning to bear fruit, is cleanliness among the servants and neatness in the dining room. A good many hotelkeepers seemed to fail to realize that a dinner, no matter how well cooked, may not create a favorable impression on the guests if it is served by a girl with a dirty apron or tangled locks. Neatness among the dining room girls, I think, is greatly appreciated by everyone who travels and cancels a good many minor defects. The same rule applies to the house girls and in fact to everyone who is connected with the establishment. I have frequently known traveling men to patronize a hotel where the meals were acknowledged to be poor because the hotel was clean.

"For a time many of the proprietors failed to realiez this, but they are now beginning to wake up, and as a result the hotels are doing a better business."

A Duluth minister was invited out to dinner by one of his parishioners. At the table was the 3-year-old son of the host. He was a quiet little chap, and din't have much to say. The minister soon became interested in him, and began plying him with questions. He remarked that he would like to have the bringing up of Johnnie, saying he was sure the boy would make a good minister.

"Wouldn't you like to be a minister when you grow up?" asked the guest.

"Naw," said Johnnie.

"Is that so? And why not, pray?"

"Because I don't wanter."

"What are you going to be when you grow up?"

"I'm going to be a man," said Johnnie, soberly sticking his fork into a potatoe.

"Fishing must be good in the Northern Minnesota lakes this season, judging by the strings of fish that are being brought into the Twin Cities," said Harry Belcher of Minneapolis, at the Spalding. "I was down at the depot the other evening, and every incoming train from the North had its full quota of fishermen, and all of them seemed to have met with fine luck, for they had about all they could carry.

"About this time last year I was camping one one of the Northern Wisconsin pretty lakes, and was enjoying some fine bass fishing. We were fifteen or twenty miles from a railroad station, and in a region seldom visited by men from the city. I never had better sport. There were also some trout streams in the neighborhood, but I only made one or two attempts at getting trout. I am not an experienced fisherman in this line, and met with poor success."

THE WEATHER.

June seems to be in a tearful mood these days. The day that brings no rain is surely that rare day in June the poet talked about. "The rain it raineth every day," and everything is drenched and sodden and sad. Part of the day the sun shines, and part of the day the sun's face is hidden by clouds that pour down sudden showers and violent. This morning it was cloudy and foggy, though warm.

Last night's lowest temperature was 48 degs. and yesterday's highest was 66 degs. The weather man says it will be partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow, with moderate temperature and westerly winds, but he says nothing about rain.

A year ago today there was a northeast wind, fog, drizzle and rain.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The North Dakota disturbance has shifted its center to Lake Superior, but the barometer is only moderately low. It caused light to heavy rains Friday or last night in Western Canada, Northern Montana, North Dakota, Northern Minnesota, the lake region, Iowa, Eastern Missouri, Georgia and New England states. A depression developing in the Far West is causing some rain in North Pacific districts. The barometer continues high over Wyoming and Gulf states. Conditions favor partly cloudy weather and fresh southwest to northwest winds in this locality tonight and Sunday."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It seems to some of us that reform is mighty billous.

It would be awful easy to get money if it was like the smallpox.

Either times are good and a man is worked to death, or they are hard and he starves to death.

It takes half a dozen different qualities to make money; it takes only sense to keep it; but that is the one we don't have.

Chicago Tribune: Rich Uncle—Leonard, have you ever succeeded in carrying out one single purpose in all your life?

Spendthrift Nephew (deeply hurt)—Uncle, I have. Six years ago I formed a resolution that I would cut loose and have a good time, and today I owe $13,000.

Yonkers Statesman: Redd—He holds his head high since he bought an automobile.

Greene—Don't know why he should; he's only been fined four times.

Philadelphia Press: "Now, Edith," said the dear girl's mother, "your father doesn't approve of Mr. Kraft's attentions to you. He considers him what he calls 'a very smooth' fellow."

"So he is generally," replied Edith, dreamily, "but once or twice when he called he hadn't time to get shaved."

Chicago Tribune: A big sea turtle was sprawling around in the tank in front of the restaurant.

"Look, papa!" exclaimed the little boy. "Let's go in and have some real green turtle soup!"

"Not yet, Geordie," said the father. "Wait till some day when you see this tank empty."

Saturday Night Talk

The Tyranny of Things.

Sometimes we go into a house so cluttered up with things that the persons who dwell there are thrust completely into the background. Pretty enough are the draperies, vases and knick-knacks and all tastefully enough arranged. But they seem to exercise a kind of domination over the people who have to dust them and watch out against the children's sticky fingers, and when they get shabby replace them with other pieces of bric-a-brac of a more approved and later fashion.

Again we enter a somewhat scantily furnished home. The pictures on the walls do not crowd one another, and the tiger skins on the floors are not abundant, but you soon feel the influence of a vivid, vital personality, the master of the house or quite as likely its mistress, to whom the surroundings do obeisance.

Now the difference between these two types of homes is not chiefly or invariably a difference in wealth, but in the underlying conception of what things are good for and where the proper place for them is and about how many we ought to have at any given point in time. The blessed compensation for many a fire is that it destroys a lot of things that have ceased to be serviceable to their owners, that have become a burden and that ought long ago to have been passed along to some one else or put in the dump heap. What a man has not courage to do in this particular, a fire or sometimes a moving compels him to do. After all some of those San Franciscans are not to be pitied altogether if they have gotten rid of certain things which, in their secret hearts, they had long ago come to despise.

Anything, however, beguiling in its appearance, is always liable to become a tyrant. It may be as small as an opal or as big as an automobile, but certain circumstances may elevate it into a position of superiority to the human spirit. There is one unfailing criterion in this matter. When you take into your home or your wardrobe anything which you really cannot afford to own, it will soon begin to lord it over you.

Another test of the goodness or badness of things is their power or lack of power to minister unto your best life. Has that new Morris chair in your parlor or the multiplying of the dainty china on the table or the numerous and rather expensive additions to your stock of clothing fostered in you pride or sloth, or selfishness? I know a woman who wears a regulation dress of substantial material and unobtrusive color, and when it is nearly worn out she goes to her dressmaker and orders another of precisely the same sort. The problem of clothes is considerably simplified in her case—too much so, most of my women readers would justly think. At the same timo I admire her more than I do the women who spend long golden hours, day after day, week after week, at the dressmakers and milliners.

Things have their proper uses, it is true, but we should seek those things that enrich and which do not enslave our lives. The lovely, though often inexpensive etching, the wholesome book a bit of choice ware now and then—such things as these by their presence beckon us along the right path. Certain things, too, have a symbolic character. They stir the fountains of memory, of patriotism, of religion. I honor that father who carries all day and every day in his pocket a small ordinary white stone, that his little girl long gone to heaven now, used to cherish in her treasure drawer.

We are not disembodied spirits yet, and we need, therefore, outward, tangible subjects on which our eyes and hands may rest in fondness and appreciation. Only let us not have too many, let us choose them wisely, keep them carefully, and make them our servants, and never let them become our tyrants.

The Meanest Man.

Kansas City Star: This time the Meanest Man has been located in Montgomery county, Kansas. He sent an editor a photograph of a very fine box of strawberries.

While it may not be as famed as the aerial bridge or the incline, there is a little red bridge crossing the Duluth & Iron Range tracks near the junction of Superior street and London road that is one of Duluth's institutions—and they say that it will have to go when the city takes over that part of the lake shore for a park. But there is the consolation that the establishment of the park will be a furtherance of the cause which the bridge that has been supporting for lo, these many years.

It is probable that there is not a person in the East end between the ages of 15 and 40 not familiar with the bridge and its purpose. The Duluth & Iron Range tracks go through a deep cut at that place and the bridge permits the foot passenger to gain the rocky beach from the sidewalk. Wags have called it "the bridge of sighs."

"The bridge of sighs."

This structure differs from its namesake in Venice in that the sighs heard on its premise are those of bliss.

The Duluth bridge of sighs is an interesting place to visit in more ways than one. If you happen to have some one young and pretty with you and all the room is not taken up, you can sit there and gaze in admiration at the lake for many pleasnt hours—that is, on pleasnt evenings. And if you do not happen to have anyone answering the above description along, you can make interesting studies of human nature.

It must be said, however, that the bridge does not reach the height of its popularity at this season of the year. It is in July, August and September that it is the Mecca of those young Duluthians who have a fondness for the lake shore. Only the very brave and the fair, whom the brave deserve, visit the bridge during the early part of the summer. The blasts are too chilly and the entire place too damp.

The historical interest of the bridge and its admirable location were pointed out to the writer of these sketches and he carefully selected one of the few fairly decent evenings that have been handed to the Head of the Lakes since the last of April, and hied forth to gather local color in large, interesting daubs.

Having nothing to do during the early part of the evenig, as well as any other part thereof, the writer strolled out to London road for a preliminary survey. The location and genral outlines of the bridge were just as advertised.

The dimness of evening had not come yet and no one was on hand at the bridge except a youngster and its nurse. The Highways man surmised that it was the children's hour so did not tarry. He might have done so and attempted to negotiate a flirtation with the nurse, but she did not look at all interesting. He decided that it would be more fun to wait and study human nature, which presented a more pleasing exterior.

He walked a long way before it occurred to him to turn back. The evening was so pleasant—that kind is so rare in June, as some one else has said—and his cigar so pleasing that he had no inclination until the growing dusk warned hi mthat it was getting late. warned him that it was getting late. bridge, it did not present the scene of lonesomeness it had earlier in the evening—except to those who were not quartered on its broad steps or on the rocks at the very water's edge. These can be reached by crossing the bridge you know.

Little groups of two were scattered all over the place, on the bridge itself, on the approach to the bridge from both sides and on the beach. These people did not seem aware of the existence of anyone else. They exchanged conversational ambrosia and looked far off toward the Wisconsin shore, at the castles there. If you want to see these castles in Spain, go to the little bridge on some pleasant evening, but don't go alone.

As human nature was so obvious, it needed no studying, so the Highways man went back to the office. And how sordid and unromantic the place seemed. As for the little bridge—maybe a Robert W. Chambers will write something about it some day.

Is it always cold and forbidding in Duluth?" asked the man from Moline, Ill.

The man wearing the Elks' emblem sniffed contemptuously.

"Well, I should say not," he said. "You just ought to be here on some of the hot days we have during the summer. But one thing about Duluth's hot days is that it always cools off at night, so that a fellow can sleep.

"I remember one morning last summer, my wife left an old pewter spoon she had been used to put salt into the ice cream freezer with, on the back porch and by afternoon, the thing had melted."

The narrator of this looked around as if to convince doubting minds but it was unnecessary. No one made disparaging comment.

"My son had quite an experience during one of our hot days last year, or maybe it was two years ago," said the fat man. "He stood on the corner in the sun waiting for a car and by the time it came along, the heat from the sidewalk had burned two holes in his tennis shoes."

The man from Moline seemed delighted.

"I am glad to hear it," he said. "That is just the kind of weather I like, hot days and cool nights. I shall have to come up here with my family later in the summer. I had been thinking of making my headquarters at Minneapolis, but I guess I won't."

"I should say not," said the slim man. "It gets beastly hot down there sometimes. While we have warm days in Duluth all summer long, they are not of the death-dealing sort that infest Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, St. Louis, and some of these cities once in a while."

"I saw one of the strangest hot weather sights I ever witnessed right in our sister city of Minneapolis. And no longer ago than three years—" here the speaker paused to look at his audience.

"My wife and I were going to church

"The old man was the limit."

one Sunday and we walked by a house with a spacious yard, the shady part of which was filled with blocks of ice, and on top of these blocks of ice sat the family. The woman was sitting there, chipping off bits of ice and eating them, and the kids were asleep on one big cake of ice.

"But the old man was the limit. He was sitting on a cake of ice bareheaded and without a coat. He had his feet in a boiler full of ice water. It was a sad case, and some of the neighbors were discussing it a little farther down the street.

"'Did the heat put them to the bad?' I asked.

"The neighbors nodded their heads sadly. 'The old gentleman imagines he is a walrus,' said one of them.'

Well, sir, I had quite a hot weather experience while camping one year, near Chicago," said a third man. "Myself and two others were campin' on a little island in the south end of a lake, and the place was exposed to the fierest kind of sunlight and hot breezes.

"We had a very thin tent and finally, the sun's rays parched the blamed thing so that a hot wind blew it away, like charred paper. One of the fellows was wearing a phoney diamond in his shirt. You might know it was phoney, because anyone that would wear a diamond out camping would wear one made of glass. And he had to quit wearing this piece because the sun's rays were so intense that, striking against this here imitation they burned holes in his shirt. He ruined a couple of shirts before he would leave off wearing that blame thing. But we had to give up camping and go back to town."

"How was that?" asked the man from Moline. "I should certainly have preferred to remain rather than go back to the hot city."

"We would a liked to," returned the other, "but you see after our tent was blown away, we dug holes in the grounds and slept in them, but the moisture from the earth scalded us so bad one night that we had to be carried to the train the next day by some fellows from St. Louis, who could stand the heat better, and was camping near us.

"Well, I guess it's time for a little drink. What'll you have?"

J. S. CAMPBELL'S DEATH.

Former Duluthian Passes Away in Spokane Where He Sought Health.

Mrs. John S. Campbell, formerly of Duluth and more recently of Spokane, Wash., is in Duluth again, having been called back here because of the death of her mother, Mrs. Laura Barager. Since leaving Duluth, Mrs. Campbell has suffered the very great loss of her husband, Mr. Campbell having died last March in Spokane, where he had gone in an effort to regain his health. The death was noticed in The Herald at the time it occurred but nothing much of it was known.

Mr. Campbell was one of Duluth's oldest residents, having lived here

twenty-six years previous to his departure for Spokane in an effort to benefit his health. At the time of his death he was 56 years of age and a young man in spirit. He died on March 18, of this year and was buried in Spokane three days later, Rev. W. H. Forsyth, pastor of the Grace Methodist church of Spokane, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, in their short stay in Spokane had become quite well known and very popular; and the attention given Mr. Campbell in his last illness and the sympathy given his widow in her bereavement was such that Mrs. Campbell says she can never adequately repay.

The last sad rites over Mr. Campbell's body were attended by a large number of people, many of whom followed the remains to the Mount Pleasant cemetery, where interment was had. Mr. Campbell was a member of the Modern Samaritans of Duluth.

PERISH ON PRAIRIES.

Two Sisters Meet Horrible Death In Canadian Wilds.

Winnipeg, June 9.—Two little girls, aged 10 and 12 years, daughters of a rancher, J. A. Hoffman, at Wood Mountain, Sask., have perished on the prairies. They left home in the evening to drive in a horse during the absence of their father. At 9 o'clock the next morning the mother gave the alarm to the mounted police, who with a searching party spent the week, finding the bodies cold in death on a bluff, scantily clothed, locked in each other's arms. It has rained almost every day since they left home. Their sufferings must have been terrible.

BOY IN GUTTER IN A DRUNKEN STUPOR.

Muskegon, Mich., June 9.—Sixteen-year-old George Penny was picked up in a red-light district gutter, drunk and apparently dying, with one hand clutching a half-emptied bottle of whisky. Physicians worked over him all night and he will live.

Yesterday officers forced him to tell where he procured the whisky, and he accused Mrs. Rosa Eckerman, proprietress of a drug store. She is a member of the Methodist church, prominent socially, a stanch temperance worker and active in G. A. R. circles. She has been arrested.

DROWNED IN MILL SLIP.

Bayfield, Wis., June 9.—Alonzo Stevens, an employe of the R. D. Pike Lumber company, was drowned here yesterday morning while working on the logs in the mill slip.

CANVASS IS MEETING WITH GREAT FAVOR

ODIN HALDEN OF DULUTH.
Candidate for Republican Nomination for State Auditor.

Odin Halden's candidacy for state auditor is being received with good feeling all over the state. At the St. Louis county man's headquarters in the Providence building, no claim is made that Mr. Halden will sweep the whole state clean, but from the reports already received his friends feel they can safely predict a comfortable majority for him when the vote for state auditor is taken at the state convention next week.

Headquarters have been established only twenty-four hours, a time which is hardly sufficient for much in the way of news to develop. Assurances of support are coming in right along, however, even from as far south as the Iowa state line, and everything appears to be working favorably to Mr. Halden. Reports of a most encouraging nature are being received from the Red River valley and other upper counties, and matters at present stand in the best possible shape.

Locally the feeling is one of optimism over the county auditor's chances, and those who at first looked doubtful when they learned he was in the field, are now among the most enthusiastic of the men who are predicting a victory for him.

"Mr. Halden is making a clean, but aggressive campaign," said W. E. Culkin, manager of Mr. Halden's campaign, "and his friends may rely on it that he will be well in the lead on the roll call. We can furnish no figures just now. It is too early for that, but you can say that we feel entirely confident of success."

Washington, June 9.—Representative Steenerson has introduced a bill which provides that the secretary of agriculture be authorized and required to investigate and report to congress on the following subjects:

The location and area of lands in the United States that are swamp and overflowed and susceptible of being drained and made fit for agriculture.

Value and effect of drainage on such land on public health and upon agriculture.

Existing legislation of different states and localities subject to drainage and operations thereunder.

Foreign drainage policies and their result and relation of federal government to local authorities and legislation on said subject.

The sum of $25,000 is appropriated.

WAS ABANDONED ON A DERELICT

Sea Captain Sues Florida Transportation Company for Damages.

New York, June 9.—Visions of phantom ships loaded with provisions sailing to his rescue and of voices calling from the sea for him to join them while he lay abandoned and suffering from hunger on a deserted barge off the Florida reefs, is a part of the story told by John Munrad, 32 years old, a Norwegian sailor, in an affidavit filed in the United States district court in a suit for $2,500 damages against the Florida East Coast Railway company. Munrad, who was a captain in charge of three empty barges towed from Mobile by the tugboat Dauntless on their way to the extension work of the railway company from Homestead to Key West, was discharged from the Norwegian hospital in Brooklyn, April 20, where he had been taken on his arrival in this city from Florida.

Munrad charges the company with gross negligence and disregard of life, in that he was left for eleven days without sufficient food and water, in constant danger of being swamped. All this occurred in January, when the little flotilla, of which he was captain and sole crew, was dropped fifteen miles from Key West by the Dauntless, because the tugboat was too deep of draught to take her tow in the shallow water of the Florida keys.

For food Munrad alleges he had half a pint of flour, two potatoes and a piece of pork. When this ran out he boiled a flour sack and ate the thin gruel it made. He was rescued by Capt. Malachi Bethel, of the little fishing schooner White Sand.

QUEER CONDITION IN GIFT BY MILLIONAIRE.

Chicago, June 9.—If Harry Hill, of Chicago, takes a drink or uses drugs in any form, he will forfeit the apartment building at 4950 Vincennes avenue, which has been deeded to him by his brother, Napoleon Hill, a Memphis millionaire. Harry Hill, who is a lawyer, came to Chicago a few years ago, and is said to have been wayward. Recently his brother heard he had reformed and decided to aid him. The deed provides that Harry Hill shall receive the income from the property only so long as he shall abstain from the use of all vinous or intoxicating drinks, likewise the use of all narcotics and drugs.

IN POLITICS.

Next week is the week of the big show, to use the expression of a local political leader. The Republican state convention is scheduled to be called to order at the Armory at 10 o'clock next Wednesday morning, June 13.

This means that the week of June 10 will be a very busy one in Duluth. Candidates, delegates and politicians, who are neither one nor the other, will probably begin arriving in the city tomorrow or Monday, and from that time on to Wednesday morning every train will add to their ranks. Probably about 2,000 people will be here from outside points, because of the convention, and the hotels will have all they can do to handle the crowds.

Most of the best rooms in all the leading hotels have already been engaged. Some of the candidates will have headquarters at both the Spalding and the St. Louis. It is believed that little difficulty will be met with in providing accommodations for all who attend the meeting. If the hotels should overflow, there are scores of first-class boarding and rooming houses that can readily take care of the surplus.

The Armory has seen some lively gatherings in the past, but probably none of them was so interesting, from the standpoint of the spectator, as will be the big convention of next week. The lower floor will be provided with from 1,600 to 1,750 chairs, and probably 500 or 600 more will be placed in the gallery. With all the delegates on hand, the total number in attendance at the convention will be 1,089. Some of the delegations are instructed, and some are not. The unit rule will govern some, and others it will not. Prominent among the latter is the big Hennepin county delegation. The St. Louis county delegation is instructed to vote as a unit for Halden, and to use every honorable means to secure him the nomination, but further than this the members aro uninstructed. They will vote as a unit on all matters that come up, the majority deciding which way the vote shall go.

Roland D. Haven has charge of all the arrangements relating to the hall and provisions for seating the delegates, and he has been kept mighty busy ever since appointed, hustling up enough chairs to fill the Armory. He has been successful in his efforts, however, and all the seating space will be occupied by chairs. J. B. Sutphin will act as sergeant-at-arms of the convention, and the address of welcome on behalf of the city will be delivered by E. L. Millar. The committee appointed by President T. H. Martin to look after the wants of the visiting delegates, and act generally as a reception committee, is made up as follows:

T. W. Hugo, chairman; W. B. Henderson, A. G. Halloway, E. R. Jefferson, C. A. McPherrin, C. B. Miller, M. J. Mullen, H. S. Clapp, F. W. Hargraves, E. M. Patterson, Ray T. Lewis, E. B. Hawkins, C. J. Dahl, T. H. Pressnell, E. C. Clemens, J. W. Wood, B. G. Segog, Richard Dinham, J. D. Holmes, John M. Oldham, W. F. McKay, John Hilliard and Gust Huesby.

Interest at the gathering will center around the nomination of governor and state auditor. Local interest will center in the auditorship nomination, because of the fact that Odin Halden, one of the candidates for the position, is a St. Louis county man. While it is believed the convention will be a much quieter event than many that have been held in the past, it is agreed that here is a chance for the development of very interesting, if not exciting situations.

It will be interesting to note whether any of the old feelings of antagonism between the Collins and Dunn forces of two years ago is in evidence, as some say it will be. If there is any such feeling, it is liable to mean some warm developments.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the convention is anxious that the city shall be prettily decorated in honor of the big meeting. Many business men and others have already announced their intention of displaying flags and bunting, and it is hoped by the committee that this disposition to decorate buildings will be very general.

"Every business man should take pride in making his place of business as attractive as possible convention week," said a Superior street business man yesterday. "It is quite an honor for Duluth to be selected as the place for holding the state convention, and we should do everything we can to show our appreciation of this honor, and to give the visiting delegates and their friends a good impression of the city."

Probably Odin Halden is today the most conspicuous figure in Minnesota political circles. For the time being the seven Republican candidates for governor, the eight or ten candidates for secretary of state, and the numerous willing candidates for other state offices, have taken a back seat, and Mr. Halden occupies a position on the front of the platform, with all eyes turned in his direction, and all tongues having something to say on his chances for success in his campaign to land the Republican nomination for state auditor.

Mr. Halden's announcement offers something new to talk about, and opens up a rich field for speculation. The other candidates have been in the field long enough for the general public to rather lose interest in the discussions concerning them and their records. The ground has been pretty well threshed over. But the St. Louis county man's entrance into the game develops a new and interesting speculation. It will make a big difference in the state convention, and will possibly, if not probably, mean the nomination of a diffrent man for governor than would have been the case if Mr. Halden had kept out of the field.

His announcement broughe him into immediate prominence all over the state, for, coming this late in the game, it was not generally expected, and it began to look as if S. G. Iverson, candidate for re-election, would land the nomination without opposition. The Duluth man's candidacy is meeting with marked favor, and his strength is shown to be even greater than his closest friends expected. It is conceded that Mr. Halden, who has the reputation of being one of the best posted men politically in Minnesota, would not have become a candidate unless he was reasonably sure of the nomination, and developments within the past two or three days seem to indicate that he had excellent grounds for this belief. The Princeton Union, Robert C. Dunn's paper, comments on his candidacy as follows:

"Odin Halden of St. Louis county, will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for state auditor. His home county and practically all of the Eighth congressional district is behind his candidacy; he has a large following in Ramsey and Hennepin, and he has pledges of support from every congressional district in the state. It is predicted that he will be nominated on the first ballot and have votes to spare. There is no better qualified man for the position in the state than Odin Halden. His name will strengthen the ticket in St. Louis and all the northern counties. He has enthusiastic friends in every county, and they believe him when he says: 'If nominated and elected, every interest in the state, great or small, and every citizen from the highest to the humblest, shall have a square deal.'"

Here is another clipping from the Princeton Union:

"S. G. Iverson, the present state auditor, is undoubtedly an efficient and honest official, but no more so than his competitor for the place, Odin Halden. Mr. Iverson has held office continuously in the state capitol for more than twenty years, and drawn from the state treasury salaries aggregating more than $50,000. He should be willing to step aside at the end of his present term as a state auditor and give another equally as honest and efficient as himself a chance.

As time advances the hold of Representative N. F. Hugo of Duluth on the speakership of the house seems to become stronger. His friends have believed all along that he would be successful in landing the position, and assurances of support are still being received from different parts of the state. Mr. Hugo says he has plenty of promises of support to guarantee him the speakership. The St. Paul Dispatch has the following to say of his platform, which was published in The Herald last week:

"N. F. Hugo of Duluth, the only active candidate for speaker of the next house, is out with a platform that would put a gubernatorial candidate to shame. He is right on railway legislation, wants an extension of the primary system to state officers, stands for an anti-pass bill and favors drainage. He also wants United States senators elected by popular vote. Hugo is alone in the race just now, but he is likely to have opposition in W. A. Nolan, of Grand Meadow, and possibly from Hennepin county."

W. E. Culkin still refuses to talk over the prospect of his becoming a candidate for congress from this district, in opposition to Congressman J. Adam Bede. The general opinion is that he will be a candidate, and that his announcement will be made in due time. Mr. Culkin is pretty busy just now acting as campaign manager for Odin Halden, and has not much time to devote to personal interests. He has friends all over the district who would like to see him get into the field and try conclusions with Congressman Bede. The latter's personal popularity is a good-sized obstacle for anyone to buck against, and, with Mr. Culkin in the game, would mean an interesting contest.

State Senator George R. Laybourn, Representative N. F. Hugo and John H. Norton, candidate for county attorney, were at Ely Thursday night attending the high school exercises there by special invitation. Ely is in their district.

A local man who keeps in touch with things political is of the opinion that Cole and Jacobson have a working agreement, according to the terms of which Cole is to throw his strength to Jacobson in case it is seen that the Walker man cannot land first place, and take the place of lieutenant governor in return, if it is in Jacobson's power to help him in getting it.

The Eveleth Star has the following complimentary words to say of Julius Schmahl, candidate for secretary of state:

"Julius Schmahl, than whom there is not a more competent candidate for the position of secretary of state, will likely be one of the happy men following the state convention in Duluth. Mr. Schmahl is a newspaper man and a good one. He is well acquainted with public duties, having made an efficient chief clerk of the house of representatives for some years. Otherwise he has not held office, not being a constant seeker after the plums that sometimes go to men in politics. By training he is thoroughly competent to fill the position, by instinct and action he is a gentleman, and if he is nominated for the high position he will receive the support of thousands outside of his own party who believe that he has earned recognition by his thoroughly upright course as a man and official. Mr. Schmahl has at all times been a consistent friend of Northern Minnesota, and if placed in this position of influence and trust will no doubt find it in his power to do more for our section of the state."

COMPANY ORGANIZES.

Will Place Doyle Malt Drying Machine on the Market.

James C. Doyle, a local marine engineer, whose inventive genius has been manifested along several lines, has perfected and patented a grain drying machine and furnace, and a company called the Doyle Dryer Manufacturing company has been organganized to place the invention on the market.

Articles of incorporation of the company were filed with the register of deeds this morning by James C. Doyle, Joseph Hayes and James Sullivan. Interested in the enterprise with them are H. W. Drake, Charles Evered and Joseph Sellwood.

The company is capitalized at $50,000 and its principal place of business will be Duluth.

Mr. Doyle's invention is a machine for drying out malt. It is said to be an important improvement over the old malt drying machines which operated on the principle of applying pressure to the malt and squeezed out a large percentage of the nutriment with the moisture. Mr. Doyle's machine, it is claimed, not only dries the malt without pressure, but it can be operated much more economically than the old machine.

RAILROADS

ARE LIVING HARD LIFE

Rain Makes Conditions Bad for Southeastern Station Men.

Living in Rude Shacks Along New Railroad Survey.

"How would you like to be a station man on the survey of the Lake Superior & Southeastern road?" asked a local railroad man this morning. "For myself, I would rather be anything else under the sun, almost. I use the term under the sun advisedly. If you could see the poor fellows camped along the proposed route of the new line, you would think they would feel like giving up their jobs right away and starting for some region where it is customary for the sun to shine once in a while, at least.

"Station men are individuals who contract to grade a piece of new roadbed at so much a yard. The more work they do the more money they earn, for they are not paid by the day, but by the amount of work they do. As they are continually moving forward, they do not depend upon any permanent camp for lodging and board, but live in improvised camps consisting of a roof of boards and tar paper, or a piece of canvas, most of which leak in a most discouraging manner. These shacks may be seen stretched all the way from Superior to the range on the south, and in them are men who despondently gaze at the falling water and wonder when they will be able to go to work again.

The survey is flooded, and in places the men have to wade in water nearly to the knees. They are covered with mud to their waists, and cannot venture out without wearing hip boots. Some of them are growing tired of waiting, and are quitting work, looking for more profitable employment elsewhere. Not many are doing this, however, for they have contracted to do certain work, and it will mean a financial loss to them if they do not do it. But with the other work, where the laborers are paid by the day, it is different, and the contractors are having all they can do to keep full crews. The men are paid only for the days they work, but htey have to pay board all the time, so you see it is a losing proposition with them."

MISSABE TRAIN WRECKED.

Two Passenger Coaches Are Pitched a Short Distance Above Proctor.

Missabe passenger train, No. 2, from Hibbing, due in Duluth at 10:30 o'clock this morning, met with an accident at Ellwood, the first station above Proctor, and the passengers were delayed fifty minutes in reaching the Union depot. Two coaches were derailed, and it is reported that one of them rolled into the ditch. None of the passengers were seriously injured, although one is said to have been quite badly bruised. Traffic was blocked for a time, but trains will be running over the line again before evening, it is expected. The accident is believed to have been caused by a faulty rail. The passengers were transferred to another train and brought to Duluth.

Reduces Cullen's Taxes.

Abating J. J. Cullen's personal property tax for 1905 from $810.66 to $361.90, Judge Dibell filed a decision this morning in which he held that the county board of equalization raised Mr. Cullen's assessed valuation from $9,313, which was the sum returned by the city assessor, to $22,400, without any warrant. The court finds that on the first of May, 1905, Mr. Cullen had taxable property in the county to the value of $11,000. The court also rebates the $73.70 penalty that has accrued since the date for paying the personal property tax for last year.

Local Knights of Pythias Will Work for Next Encampment.

This Year's Celebration Will Be Held at Litchfield.

The annual encampment of the Minnesota Brigade Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, will take place at Litchfield, Minn., July 3, 4, 5 and 6, and preparations are going forward by the Duluth bodies of the Uniformed Rank to attend the celebration in numbers.

The Duluth delegation will go to Litchfield with the intention of landing the next annual encampment for Duluth, and no efforts are to be spared in boosting for this city.

The annual encampments of the Minnesota brigade are notable affairs, and if the next one is held in Duluth, it will bring to the city several hundred visitors, who will remain here about a week.

The encampment held by the militia of the Knights of Pythias are everything that the name implies. Tents with board floors, cots and plenty of blankets are supplied, and camp discipline is maintained. There are many localities in Duluth that are splendidly adapted for an encampment, and the local members of the Uniform Rank are quite confident that they will be successful in bringing the next one here.

The Minnesota brigade is comprised of the First and Second regiments, each of which is made up of nine companies. Duluth, which has two companies of the Uniformed Rank, is headquarters for the First regiment and the Second battalion. Col. G. H. Nichols is in command of the First regiment, Capt. K. A. Franklin is adjutant and Capt. G. A. Terry is quartermaster. Capt. H. G. Giederman of Proctorknott is signal officer of the First regiment.

Maj. W. E. Wickes is commanding officer of the Second battalion, and Lieut. B. E. Baker is adjutant.

Col. J. L. Cromwell of this city has recently been commissioned aid-de-camp on the staff of Maj. Gen. A. J. Stobbart of St. Paul, the national commander of the Uniformed Rank.

The encampment will not be confined to the Minnesota members of the Pythian militia alone, but will be participated in by companies from the adjoining states.

Gen. Fred E. Wheaton, commanding officer of the Minnesota brigade, has been extended in its behalf a cordial invitation by Maj. W. D. Joubert of Litchfield.

Among those who are expected to be in attendance at the encampment are Governor John A. Johnson, Maj. Gen. A. J. Stoddart, Grand Chancellor Bartram and others.

Members of the Uniformed Rank are being urged to take their families to Litchfield to participate in the big reunion, notice having been given by those in charge of the local arrangements that the people of Litchfield will take care of them.

DOUBLE HEADER WITH CALUMET

Chance to See League Leaders at Bargain Counter Rates.

The first big bargain counter attraction offered by the Duluth ball team will take place on June 14, when a double header with Calumet will be played.

It was a disappointment to the fans that none of the three games scheduled with Calumet for the first three days of the week could be played, on accont of the rain. The Calumet team will be in Duluth on June 14, however, on the return trip from the West, and a double header will be played with the White Sox. The Duluth team was due to leave for Calumet to open a series of four games there on June 14, but the first of these games and one of the three postponed games will be played here instead. This will give the fans the first opportunity to see the league leaders perform. The two games will be played for one price of admission, the first one being called at 2 p. m. Owing to the presence of the delegates to the Republican state convention in the city, the attendance at these two games should prove to be a record breaker.

Is what prospective purchasers desire. We believe they should expect it and demand it. There are many good pianos on the market that will give complete satisfaction and good service, and if sold at the correct price would be a good investment.

It perplexes many people to decide, for there are so many cheap and inferior instruments on the market and so many irresponsible agents representing them that it is natural for cautious people to hesitate.

This store offers you absolute safety in buying a piano and our ONE PRICE SYSTEM guarantees the price. By conducting this Piano store in connection with our large Furniture and House-furnishing business it enables us to sell the highest grade and most reliable pianos at prices far below any competitor.

DEFENDANT WINS CASE

Rat Portage Lumber Company Gets Verdict of $7,692.61.

Sued by Stitt & Howe for $14,000 Damages—Counter-Claim.

A verdict of $7,692.61 in favor of the Rat Portage Lumber company and P. A. Smith against the contracting firm of Stitt & Howe was returned by the jury last evening and opened in court this morning.

Stitt & Howe brought the action against the Rat Portage company to recover something over $14,000, alleged to be due for stumpage cut by the latter company on lands which the supreme court has decided that Stitt & Howe hold the title.

To this claim the Rat Portage Lumber company set up a counter-claim of about $30,000, part of which represented taxes that it paid on Itasca county lands, and for which the verdict is awarded. The lumber company alleged that it took the timber off under an old contract with Stitt & Howe, made before litigation was started over the lands.

Stitt & Howe took a twenty-days' stay, and arrangements are being made to ask for a new trial, or take an appeal to the state supreme court.

The case was hard fought for a week, going to the jury late yesterday afternoon.

H. B. Fryberger represented Stitt & Howe and R. R. Briggs looked after the interests of the Rat Portage Lumber company and P. A. Smith.

CORTELYOU DEFIED BY BAUDETTE MAN.

Washington, June 9.—Dan Hyland, recently appointed postmaster at Baudette, Beltrami county, Minn., is having a hard time getting possession of the office. J. L. Williams, postmaster, was removed because he was acting as agent for a brewery. When Hyland went to take possession of the office, Williams refused to hand over the postal matter. Hyland appealed to the department and was instructed to demand possession in the presence of witnesses. He did that and Williams again refused to accommodate him.

In order to solve the difficulty the department has instructed an inspector to proceed to Baudette to take forcible possession.

Secretary Hitchcock has decided the famous Baudette township case, which has been before the land office and department for several years. There were three parties seeking possession. Thomas Cathcart, who has occupied the land for twenty years, and has put $8,000 worth of improvements on it, the townsite trustee and the Canadian Northern railroad, which claimed forty acres for terminal purposes under a special act of congress. The secretary has decided that the railroad company has the prior right of selection and patent will issue to it.

FEIGNED DEATH TO ELUDE A BURGLAR.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 9.—Mrs. Antonnette Converse Morrell of Greenwich, a daughter of E. C. Converse, vice president of the United States Steel corporation, told yesterday the criminal superior court the story of how she was shot at by a masked burglar in her home on Sept. 11, 1905. John Brown, who was the sweetheart of Kate Tierney, the cook at the Morrell house, was arrested for the same crime and is now being tried.

"I was awakened by a cry," said Mrs. Morrell, and thought it was my little boy. I got up and rushed out into the hall. I saw a man coming toward me. He shot me on the under side of the jaw on the left side of the face. Part of the bullet is still in there.

"When he shot me I fell, and then he shot me again. He struck me several times, and the last he struck me I threw myself back and feigned death, because I was afraid he meant to kill me. I knew all that was going on. I got up after a while and went to the bathroom, where I took out four broken teeth which had been hit by the bullet."

O'BRIEN TO HEAR CASE

Insurance Commissioner Cites Modern Samaritans to Appear.

Has Set June 23 as Date of Hearing—Other News.

The committee appointed by the West Duluth council of Modern Samaritans, it will be remembered, took the matter of governing the order up to the insurance commissioner and as he had a number of things before him at the time, he could do nothing at that then.

However, this morning, the committee received a letter from the insurance commissioner, T. D. O'Brien, that he has set June 23 for a hearing of the case and cites both the West Duluth committee and the members of the imperial council of the Modern Samaritans to appear.

The West Duluth members contend that the present system of the order does not give proper representation, and that is why they appealed to the insurance commissioner.

BUILDING BUNGALOW.

Dynamite Club Members Begin Work on Summer Home.

Several members of the Dynamite club went up the river this morning, to build the club's bungalow, which will be the summer rendezvous of the red rag adherents of West Duluth. The house will be portable, and as the Dynamiters are somewhat restless, will be kept moving. All possible modern conveniences will be installed and there will be a plentitude of bunks, in case any member of the club gets hung up in that part of the country over night. There will also be accommodation in a pinch for the whole club as it is expected that several big spreads will take place under the auspices of the club during the summer.

This morning Charles Gilger, chief dynamiter, Charles Lovelace and Peter Gilley started. They were to have gone up in Mr. Gilley's row boat, but when it was put in the water it sunk, and J. A. Curo, who was in it, sunk with it. There was a lot of excitement and a lot of moisture for Mr. Curo. Afterwards, a launch was chartered and the crowd proceeded up the river.

ORDINANCE PROTECTED

Court is Restrained From Ruling Upon Its Legality.

Assistant City Attorney Moves to Dismiss Wagner Case.

Duluth's peddling ordinance was probably saved from receiving a knockout blow in the municipal court this morning, when Assistant City Attorney McKeon moved to dismiss the case against Charles Wagner, who was arrested on the charge of peddling without a license.

Yesterday afternoon H. J. McClearn, the attorney for the prisoner, attacked the ordinance as being unconstitutional and at the conclusion of the argument the court notified the assistant city attorney that it was up to him to prepare some answer to the point raised. The assistant city attorney evidently did not care to undertake the defense of the ordinance, and this morning, rather than bring the affair to a head, he moved to dismiss the case. The motion was granted, and the court was not called upon to pass upon the validity of the ordinance.

Wagner was arrested on the charge of peddling potatoes from a car which had been brought in and left standing in the yards. The potatoes were sold at a trifle under the market price, to restaurant and hotel keepers, and the commission men complained that it was cutting into their business. They argued that they were compelled to pay high taxes, and that it was not fair to them to allow produce to be sold in this manner.

Under the ordinance, farmers are not prohibited from selling produce, but it is forbidden to buy any kind of farm produce and to resell it by peddling it about the city. Mr. McClearn argued that this was a violation of the constitution since it gave to one class of men rights which were denied to others. He read from decisions of the supreme court, a case which was almost identical with the one in question, and in which a state law similar to the city ordinance was declared unconstitutional and invalid.

Judge Windom intimated that the argument would carry some weight, and gave the assistant city attorney an opportunity to prepare an answer. The dismissal of the case, however, did away with the necessity for such an argument.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Young Woman Accidentally Kills Caller While Examining Pistol.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Anamoose—While examining a revolver, a young woman named Williams, living on a claim near McCluskey, shot and instantly killed George Cole, aged 23, who lived on an adjoining claim. Cole had gone over to the Williams claim and had with him a new 38-caliber revolver. Something was wrong with the trigger movement, and it would not work while he was showing the weapon to Miss Williams. She reached for it, saying she would show him how to work it. He tried to prevent her and the pistol was discharged. The bullet struck Cole in the left breast and he died in a few minutes. The young woman is hysterical over the affair and is said to be in a serious condition. Cole's parents live in Wisconsin, and his body was sent there for burial.

Minot—"Well, I saw him fall in and I jes thought I had oughter save him," said Willie Ziengenbein, 9 years old, in explaining how he came to jump into a pond and save 2-year-old Dudley Muhs from drowning.

The Muhs boy had been playing about a large pond and fell into a deep hole. Ziengenbein was close by and without a moment's hesitation jumped in and caught the little chap by the hair just as he was going down the last time.

Bathgate—Esaw Renwick and his driving horse were killed by lightning Thursday night. He had been to Bathgate on business and had started for home when a shower caught him, and he turned into a stable that belonged John Houston. He had but got into the stall when a bolt of lightning struck the barn and killed both Mr. Renwick and his horse instantly. Both Mr. Houston and a neighbor by the name of John Nevins were in the barn and within ten feet of him, but neither was hurt. Mr. Renwick was a very prosperous farmer and a prominent Mason.

Grand Forks—Torey Houghom, 85 five miles from Towner; Ole Erickson, 30, six miles west of Larlmore, and Roseau Renning, a Bathgate farmer, were killed by lightning during the storm.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Mystery surrounds the causes which led Mrs. Lucy Johnson, 17 years of age, a bride of only five months, to take her life at the home of herself and husband, in this city. In her dress was found a brief note, which read as follows:

"Hubbie, I could not stand it any longer after what you said to me last night. I wonder what you will say when you come home for dinner and find me dead. The love has been crushed out of my heart. Good-bye."

The mother of the girl, while physicians were endeavoring to bring her daughter back to life, attempted to destroy the note left by the daughter. She scouted the idea of suicide, and endeavored to convince the authorities and neighbors, who had hurried to the scene, that her daughter, whom she alleged had suffered with the toothache, had by accident taken an overdose of chloroform. A two-ounce bottle, which had contained chloroform, was found near the body of the young woman. Her parents conduct a boarding house, and it was there she first met her husband, who was a boarder. Marriage was proposed, and the girl appeared quite anxious to become the wife of Johnson, who has been working for the local water company and at street grading. The parents of the girl objected to the marriage, but this was of no avail. Trouble of some nature recently arose between the couple, and it was known that Johnson had threatened to enlist in the service of the United States. The immediate cause of the suicide is a mystery which only Johnson himself can reveal. It has been decided by Coroner Miller to hold an inquest. This may throw further light on the cause of the tragedy.

Yankton—Fire destroyed the W. T. Van Epps barn, with seven horses and many vehicles. A barn on the Loonan Lumber company's property was also burned, but the big lumber yards were saved. The Great Northern station was scorched at the freight end, and the whole town was deluged in smoke and live coals for an hour, and narrowly escaped the flames. The loss will reach $4,000, only partly covered by insurance.

Senator Robert J. Gamble, returning from the Sioux Falls convention, was met at the train by a reception committee and a band. A procession was formed. Mr. Gamble addressed his constituents and showed deep feeling at the cordial welcome given him.

WOULD FORECAST GRAIN MARKET

Astrologer Wants to Sell Advice to Board of Trade Members.

Not content with foretelling the rise and fall of kingdoms, the prospects of droughts and wet spells, the manner in which to locate iron mines, and other such trivial matters, an astrologer, who signs himself M. S. Gill of Chippewa Falls, has branched off from these tried and conservative lines of the astrology business, and is trying to forecast the grain market.

In this, according to the grain men, he has made the mistake of his life. He ought to stick to the well-trodden paths of astrology, and preserve his reputation. When he begins monkeying with the grain market he gets into a business where he is compelled to make good on his predictions promptly, and the chances are that as a prophet he would be one-two-three with Dowie in thirty-six hours.

Following is the letter which was received by the secretary of the board of trade this morning, and posted on the bulletin board:

"I have devoted Some time to the art of astrology, and if you have any men that trade in the wheat Market that wish to consult in regard to the future dealing in the Market, of a rise or a Strong market also of a decline in the market before the opening in the morning I have watched my System for six months very carefully and find it correct If some man wants to give me a trile and if Satisfaction is given would like to communicate with him on a business Proposition address M. S. Gill, Chippewa Falls, Wis."

The letter is innocent of any punctuation.

"We are suckers, but breathe through our noses and don't need gills," was the comment made by one of the members and inscribed on the bottom of the letter.

The funeral of Magnus Sampson will be held at 914 E. 5th St. Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment Park Hill cemetery.

Caused By Friday's Wind Storm In Southern Ontario.

Buffalo, June 9.—Following is a summary of the more serious property losses by yesterday's storm in Southern Ontario:

At Niagara Falls the walls of the two main gables of the new general hospital collapsed and tons of masonry crashed through the three floors to the basement.

St. Thomas was swept by the tornado. A portion of the roof of the Michigan Central railroads shops was blown away.

One man was crushed by a falling tree, near London, and may die. Two men are reported to be killed near Springfield. The 90-foot elevator tower at Port Stanley was blown down.

East of Windsor marks of the storm's devastation were everywhere in evidence. The tornado swept through Rodney, West Lorne, Dutton, Sheddon, and Fingel.

Damage was also done at Rodney, Sarnia and Chatham.

CANDIDATES JOCKEYING

In Position Preparatory to the Convention Next Week.

Cole and Eberhardt Said to Have Formed a Combination.

St. Paul, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Duluth may be the convention city, but St. Paul is the stamping ground for the candidates jockeying for position at the convention on the 13th. They are beginning to open headquarters here and already no less than five are ready for visitors.

A. L. Cole of Cass county, who is second in the race for governor, has had headquarters at the Ryan for several days and the space controlled by him has been enlarged to take in Senator Eberhardt of Mankato. Mr. Eberhardt, though never formally announcing his candidacy, wants to be lieutenant-governor and it is said that Cole and he have effected a combination, designed to swing both into office. How Senator Somerville, Clarence Dinehart and Louis Vogel, all candidates for places from the Second district, view the Eberhardt-Cole amalgamation can best be imagined.

Cole, it is said, has adopted modern methods in the shape of a corps of publicity promoters, who are in charge of a trained newspaper man, brought direct from Chicago. He also has a manager, C. H. Warner, of Aitkin. Mr. Warner is secretary of the Republican state committee.

The lobby of the Merchants hotel is Senator Lord's headquarters. The senator is fighting his game all alone and seems to have as many callers as those with more pretentious headquarters. State Treasurer Block has his headquarters at the state capitol and at the Ryan hotel, where they have been ever since he got into the game. Stationed at the Frederic are A. E. Nelson and Julius Schmahl, both candidates for secretary of state.

Capt. Hunter has been in St. Paul since Thursday. He is a candidate for secretary of state and has headquarters at the Merchants hotel, where he meets his friends.

Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston, one of the gubernatorial candidates, slipped into St. Paul this morning. He was not open to interviewers and nothing was said as to his reported intention of opening headquarters in St. Paul.

Odin Halden of Duluth, who is warm on Sam Iverson's trail for the state auditorship, was among the St. Paul visitors today and it was noticeable that he sought the company of the Ramsey county leaders without delay. Mr. Halden also went to Minneapolis, where he consulted with the leaders. Ho seems to think his chances are good.

TEACHER MAKES BREAK.

She Gives Queer Piece of Advice to Her Pupils.

While trying to impress upon her pupils certain rules of spelling, one of the Duluth grade school teachers made a "break" yesterday that will not soon be forgotten by the scholars.

The "I" and "e" combinations had been troubling the pupils. "Remember," she said, "it is 'i' and 'ee.' Just keep those in your head."

A boy in the front seat began the laugh which gradually spread over the room, and the teacher herself joined when she finally realized what she had said.

Despite the fact that the weather has not been so very agreeable this year, several prospective settlers have looked over farm lands in St. Louis county and announced their intention of buying.

S. B. Tidd and his family have arrived at Meadowlands from Belgrade, Neb. They brought their household goods and farming implements and will settle on the Meadowlands farm bought last year by Mr. Tidd.

DEMAND FOR BUILDING LOANS IS A FEATURE

Money to Build More Sought After Than Real Estate at This Moment—Sales of Real Estate, However, Average Up to What They Have During the Year—Some of the Week's Transactions.

Although the demand for loans is said to be a little stronger than the demand for real estate at the present time, the realty market remains firm, and the fact that there are not more sales is claimed by the brokers to be due to the fact that owners are not anxious to sell, and are holding out for prices that are higher than the buyer would pay. The sales for the week have not been heavy, but they would aggregate pretty well up to the average of the preceding weeks, excepting the recent transfers of business property to the Wisconsin Central Railway company interests. Many of the people who have lots are seeking loans, for the purpose of improvment, and for that reason the rates are said to have stiffened a little.

W. M. Prindle & Co. report a good inquiry for real estate, with a stronger demand for loans. Among the sales reported are the following: A house and lot in the West end for $750, a centrally located residence property for $4,000, two West Duluth lots for $600, an East Superior street lot for $2,200, a residence on West Fourth street for $3,000, the purchaser being represented by E. H. Hawkins.

The N. J. Upham company reports an excellent week's business, especially in residence properties. Among the sales through this office were the following: A residence at 101 South Nineteenth avenue east, from R. B. Shannon to James McMartin, for $3,500; a residence at 522 Lake avenue, to Benjamin P. White, for $2,300; a residence at 1517 East Fourth street, from French & Bassett to N. McPhee, for $5,500.

B. N. Wheeler reports the sale of two lots in the Bryant addition this week. There has been a very active building movement in this addition during the past few months, and a number of homes are in the process of construction.

H. J. Barnes has sold Kate Barnes, for $2,000, a residence property, described at lot 8, block 16, Lester Park.

Robert M. White has trasferred to Elcey H. Cole the title of an East end lot, described as lot 13, block 71, Endion, for $2,250.

Joseph Sosnovsky has purchased from S. G. Gudeen, for $3,200, the property described at the northerly 100 feet of lot 94, block 33, Duluth proper, Third division.

G. A. Wieland has purchased from S. A. Miller, for $1,608, the southerly 90 feet of lots 84 and 82, on East Sixth street, First division.

C. A. Britts has sold Grace E. Love a residence property in Helm's addition, block 3, and a fractionaul block in Duluth proper, Second division, for $1,200.

Jacob Fawcett has sold John McAlpine, for $1,000, the Park Point property described as lot 100, St. Louis avenue, Upper Duluth.

The Minneapolis Real Estate board has opened a headquarters for real estate men in that city, the purpose being to advertise the city of Minneapolis, to gather statisics for the use of the real estate board, and for individual real estate owners, and to enter upon a systematic campaign of advertising of the city in general. Ten thousand dollars has been raised by subscription among the members of the board, and it is expected that as a result of the movement from $15,000 to $50,000 per year will be raised, covering a period of at least five years to exploit the advantages of Minneapolis as a commercial center.

The deed was recorded last week transferring the title of a portion of lot 32, East Fifth street, First division from J. A. Watterworth to B. L. Tessman. The property is to be improved with a flat building.

Margaret Wood has purchased from S. H. Cramp, for $7,533, the property described as lot 10, block 60, Endion. The property includes a residence.

Bids will be opened Saturday, June 16, for the two additional stories to the Lenox hotel, and the four-story addition that will be built at the rear of the hotel. The plans were made by J. J. Wangenstein, the architect.

Architect A. Terryberry is preparing plans for a 4-flat building to be erected on Fourteenth avenue east for Edward Mettner, the contractor.

H. C. Brown, the contractor, has under way the construction of a concrete block residence at Proctorknott for P. C. Mitchell. The house will be modern in every respect, and will cost about $3,000.

F. L. Young & Company, the architects, are getting out plans for a fine business block of brick and stone to be erected at Aitkin, Minn., for the First National Bank of Aitkin. The building will be 50 by 100 feet, two stories, and will be modern in every respect. The ground floor will be arranged for two stores and the bank business, and the upper floor will be given up to the Masons and for general offices. The interior of the bank will be finished with mahogany, with tiled floors. The supporting columns will be of polished granite. A. D. McRae of this city is interested in the bank.

The same architects are getting out plans for a seven-room frame residence to be erected on Tioga street, between Forty-ninth and Fiftieth avenues east for Fred Hanson, of the local postoffice force. Plans are being prepared for a three-flat building on West Fourth street for local parties.

One of the most important steps taken by the local real estate men at the meeting of their exchange this week was the passage of a resolution that all leases of business property will contain a clause, hereafter, to the effect that all signs used on the front of the buildings must be approved by the owner. The idea of the real estate men and rental agents is to cut out all the cloth and cheap signs that have been used across the front of buildings advertising fire and bankrupt sales. This practice on the part of certain tenants is said to cheapen the city in the eyes of visitors.

Bids have been opened for the foundation work for the new Y. M. C. A. building at the corner of Third avenue west and Second street, but the contract has not yet been awarded. It is understood that the directors are seeking additional information relative to the work before taking any action on the bids.

Transfers for the week were as follows:

M. J. Russell to Walter Blacktop, lot 102, block 40, Rice's Point	650
M. L. Parker et ux to G. D. Swift, lot 5, block 1, Longview addition	8,200
Henry Nolte et ux to same, lots 3 and 4, same	2,500

Fairclough, Latin, Leland Stanford, Jr., University; Prof. Edward J. Lake, art and design, University of Illinois; Prof. Thomas K. Urdahl, political and social science, Colorado college; Prof. Claude H. Van Tyne, American history, University of Michigan; Prof. William H. Williams, mathematics, Platteville Normal school. Besides the non-resident professors a large number of the regular members of the university faculty will give courses in the summer session, including Profs. Munro, Bardeen, Ely, Harper, Hohfeld, Pyre, Showerman, Trowbridge, Voss, Kahlenberg, Daniels, Elliott, C. E. Allen, Laird, Lathrop, Frost, McGilvary, Slichter and Tressler.

The program is also complete of the public lectures of a more or less popular nature given daily throughout the session by the various resident and non-resident professors. Dr. Jane Addams will talk on "The Newer Ideals of Peace," tracing the gradual development of the newer humanitarianism in the movement for the betterment of themasses. The labor movement, social settlement work, the crusade against child labor, and protective legislation for working classes, are among the topics that Miss Addams will present. Prof. Fairclough of Stanford University has a course of illustrated lectures on Latin literature, and Prof. Showerman will present in a series of illustrated lectures the results of his two years' study in the field of "Historical, Literary and Artistic Aspects of Historic Sites in Greece and Italy." Prof. Snow will give a series of thirty lectures on mechanics and heat, electricity and magnetism, acoustics and optics, illustrdated by the latest experiments with apparatus especially designed for the purpose.

Preparations have likewise been completed for the week-end scientific excursions to points of geological and physiographic interest in Southern Wissin, Devils Lake, the Dells Blue Mounds, the Baraboo ranges, the driftless area and other portions of physiographic interest are included in the program just arranged. These trips are to be in charge of Prof. Albert Perry Brigham, author of a standard text book in physical geography, and a well-known authority on physiography, whose experience in United States geological survey work all over the country makes him well qualified to direct the field work. The schedule also includes excursions to points of biological interest for the study of biology and botany in the field, and for collecting the material.

By a new regulation just adopted, provision is made for teachers and other college graduates who desire to secure the master's degree without interruption in the pursuit of their professions. It provides that students who perform stated work in three summer sessions, and pursue a regular course of study at home during the intervening months, may obtain this higher degree. The purpose of the university is to encourage teachers and graduates to carry on advanced work, and thus equip themselves more thoroughly for their professions. All departments offer special courses for teachers. Emphasis is to be laid upon work especially required by ambitious high school teachers, who desire to broaden their scholarships, or to increase their inspiration for the important work they have to do in the community.

RALLIES AT THE CLOSE

Selling Lower Early in Day, Wheat Finally Closes Higher.

Flax is Dull and Closes Weaker in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 9.—After opening weak on prospects of improved weather conditions, the price of wheat went up again just before the close today, passing yesterday's closing prices in most of the American markets. New York, where the market closes an hour earlier than Duluth on Saturdays, and St. Louis, where the July option was unchanged, but the September option was considerably stronger, were the exceptions. The rally was caused by a rather sensational report by King of Toledo, giving the condition of the Kansas crop as .70. In April, the condition was .80 and in June a year ago .77. Coupled with this came more rain in the Northwest and bullish reports from Nebraska, parts of which are sorely in need of rain. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d higher; Berlin, ⅛c higher, and Budapest, ¾c lower for October wheat.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat this week at 10,464,000 bus., of which Europe will take about 9,600,000 bus. The actual shipments last week were 9,968,000 bus., and those of a year ago 11,200,000 bus.

The July option closed ⅜c higher in Duluth, ¼c in Chicago, unchanged in New York, ⅛c in Minneapolis, ⅛-¼c in Kansas City and ⅝c in Winnipeg. The September option closed ½c higher in Duluth, ¼-⅜c in Chicago, unchanged in New York, a shade up in Minneapolis, ⅝c up in St. Louis and ⅝-¾c in Kansas City. The October option closed ⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

Corn was stronger in Chicago, the July option closing ⅛c up. It closed ½d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed unchanged in Chicago.

Car receipts were 18 against 4 last year and at Minneapolis 183 against 184 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 201 against 188 last year. Chicago received 10 against 4 last year. Winnipeg received 68 against 52 last year.

Wheat was active during the entire session of the Duluth market, but was weak during the early part of the session. At the close, the market became very firm, however, on unfavorable weather reports and the closing prices were higher than on yesterday. July wheat opened ⅝c lower at 84¾c, advanced to 84⅝c at 9:30, fell off to 84⅜c at 10:50, rallied to 85⅝c at 11:40 and closed at 85½c, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. September wheat opened ⅜c lower at 83¼c, fell off to 82⅝c, rallied to 84c and closed at 83¾c, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday.

Flax was dull all day and closed weaker. Hull was unchanged and Antwerp closed 1½c lower. July flax opened ½c lower at $1.14¾, fell off to $1.14½ and rallied to $1.14¾, closing at that price. September flax opened unchanged at $1.15¾, fell to $1.15 and rallied at the close to $1.15¼, a loss of ½c from yesterday. October flax opened ⅜c lower at $1.14¼, advanced to $1.14½ and ranged between that and $1.14¼ during the rest of the session. The closing price was $1.14¼, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday.

July oats closed ¼c off, oats to arrive and on track, ½c off and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Improved Weather in the Northwest Causes Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, June 9.—The wheat market opened weak today, chiefly because of improved weather in the Northwest. Commission houses were the principal sellers and buying was scattered. Trading on the whole, was very light. July opened ¼c to ⅜c lower at 83⅝@83⅞c and declined to 82½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 211 cars against 212 cars last week and 12 cars one year ago.

The low point for July was 83½c. Late in the day the market rallied on the Kansas state crop report which gave the condition of fall sown wheat as .70 against .89 on April 1. On active buying by shorts the July option advanced to 85c. Some of the advance was lost in the last ten minutes of the day on realizing sales. The close was steady with July ¼c up at 84¾c.

The corn market was weak. There was considerable selling by cash houses and elevator interests based upon rains in Illinois. July opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 51⅜ to 51⅝c and declined to 61c. Local receipts were 401 cars with 208 of contract grade.

Prices advanced along with wheat, and July went up to 51⅞c. There was a considerable amount of profit-taking just prior to the close, which was steady with July off ⅛c at 51½c.

The oats market was weak in sympathy with other grains. The improved weather conditions were also a bearish factor. July opened ⅛c to ⅝c lower at 37⅝c and sold at 37c. Local receipts were 157 cars.

Provisions were steady. Offerings were light and trading extremely small. July pork was unchanged at $16.85. Lard and ribs were each unchanged at $8.80 and $8.95 respectively.

Grain Gossip.

Chicago Record-Herald: Nebraska yesterday entered the list of states having complaints about crop conditions. Updike of Omaha, who has been sending good reports on crops heretofore, had numerous advices from his country agents reporting the need of rain for wheat and oats. These advices were corroborated from many other sources. Some of the Nebraska messages went so far as to claim that hot winds were damaging small grains. There was nothing in the temperatures yesterday forenoon as officially reported to the government to indicate a serious condition of affairs in that state.

Lincoln, Neb., wires Mr. Shannon, manager for Ferguson, saying they need rain very badly, wheat already damaged. Mr. Foster, the Foster elevator man, says wheat ins in critical condition, damaged more by cut worms up to date than from drought. Oats very poor stand and very short straw. All the Lincoln papers comment editorially this morning on the serious outlook for the crops in Nebraska. It is clear, with no rain reported anywhere in the state.

FIGHT ON EASY DIVORCE BADGER CAMPAIGN ISSUE.

Milwaukee, June 9.—State Senator Ernst Merton, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, has issued his platform. Senator Merton believes that he ought to have a constructive policy, and not be simply an opposition candidate. There are three things which he says he is opposed to—government by commission, a civil service law and the present divorce laws. He favors a business administration, the primary election, an income tax, regulation of all public corporations by the state, a new coemployee law, which will be better for employes, and laws preventing combinations in restraint of trade. Mr. Merton is the first candidate for office that has taken up the subject of divorce and placed himself squarely on no divorce except on scriptural grounds.

"I am opposed to the present easy divorce laws upon our statute books," said he, "which break up the homes of this state whenever a husband or wife imagine they would be happier divorced. There ought to be no absolute divorce except upon scriptural grounds. If parties cannot live together, and have to be separated, let that be done, but do not permit them to remarry, or at least do not permit the party adjudged at fault to remarry. Laws should be enacted along these lines so as to protect the home, the places to which we must look for our men in public life and to carry on the affairs of state and nation."

Senator Merton is opposed to civil service on the ground that it is un-American, and not for the best interests of the people at large. The senator says of commissions that they should be rearranged so that the necessary ones can be created into departments, with a head elected by the people, by whom they can be held responsible for the conduct of their department.

W. F. VILAS ENDORSES BRYAN FOR PRESIDENT

Milwaukee, June 9.—The Milwaukee Journal today prints an interview with former United States Senator William F. Vilas, who also was a member of President Cleveland's cabinet during his first administration, endorsing William J. Bryan for the nomination of president at the next national Democratic convention. Mr. Vilas was one of the foremost supporters of the Palmer-Buckner ticket in 1896.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Most Leading Stocks Yielded Readily When Pressure Began.

After Appearance of Bank Statement, Prices Fell Further.

New York, June 9.—Prices of stocks at the opening of the market today pursued a downward course with only a few exceptions, the most conspicuous of which was Delaware & Hudson with a rise of a point. The declines generally were small, except in some of the prominent speculative favorites. Anaconda ran off 1¾; Great Northern preferred and Smelting, 1½; Consolidated Gas, a point, and Union Pacific, Colorado Fuel and General Electric, large fractions.

The pressure against the market was increased when the bears discovered that the decline was not bringing in buying orders of consequence. The weakness was not centralized, most of the representative stocks yielding readily when pressure began. Colorado Fuel preferred dropped 5; Linseed, 1¼; Colorado Fuel, 1¾, and Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Illinois Central, Delaware & Hudson, Locomotive and Sloss-Sheffield Steel, 1.

There was some covering of shorts before the appearance of the bank statement, but afterwards prices fell lower than before. Reading fell 2½. Federal Mining sold at a decline of 8¾. Hocking Valley lost 2; Colorado Fuel, 1¾; Pressed Steel Car, 1½; and Amalgamated Copper, Sugar, St. Paul, Louisville & Nashville, Erie first preferred and Northwestern, 1. The closing was easy.

Copper Gossip.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The Boston News Bureau says: "The Copper Range Consolidated production and net earnings for May were by far the largest of any month in its career. More important is the better results secured from the Trimountain, where a material return of productiveness is noted in the lower levels between Nos. 1 and 2 shafts, and also in the ground north of the former. The May earnings of the company mines and railroads should be at the rate of about $8 per share per annum. This week will witness the starting of production of the new No. 2 shaft of the Baltic, which will result in the permanent increase in the mine output of about 20 per cent."

The Cotton Market.

New York, June 9.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 2 points and ruled very quiet, but rather steady as to tone, owing to reports that rain was badly needed in the Southwest, while the forecast called for continued good weather. Prices held about unchanged to 2 points higher during the middle of the morning with about the only business in the absence of cables, the evening up of room professionals.

Cotton futures closed very steady; closing bid: June, 10.60; July, 10.65; August, 10.53; September, 10.45; October, 10.42; November, 10.42; December, 10.46; January, 10.50; February, 10.52; March, 10.57. Spot closed quiet; prices unchanged on basis of 11.25 for middling uplands and 11.45 for middling gulf; sales, 1,300 bales.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

The Consolidated is the feature again today selling as high as $20.00 with large buying orders in the market at $20, $20.25 and $20.50. The others are all well taken and show considerable signs of immediate advance, at least, I think, further decline is improbable under present general excellent conditions.

The Neglect of Private Diseases

A Stitch in Time Saves Nine.

Many men have been made miserable by the unfortunate contracting of some poisonous special disease which, through neglect or improper treatment, has completely undermined and shattered the physical strength and mental faculties. No greater mistake can be made than to consider lightly the first evidence of the introduction of any private disease into your system, or to neglect the first symptoms of Nervous Debility, caused by improper and unnatural habits, excesses, dissipation, etc.

Such indifferences and neglect of the first symptoms are responsible for thousands of human wrecks, failures in life and business. Men! why take such desperate chances? The manifestations of the first symptoms of any disease or weakness should be a warning for you to take prompt steps to safeguard your future life and happiness. You should carefully avoid all uncertain, experimental, dangerous or half-way treatment, for upon the first treatment depends whether you will be promptly restored to health again, with all taint of the poisonous disease removed from your system, or whether your disease will be allowed to become chronic and subject you to future recurrences of the disease, with the various resulting complications, etc.

One consultation with us may change your whole life. Delays are dangerous.

If we could but see and treat all men when the first symptoms show themselves there would soon be little need for specialists in chronic diseases, and there would be few men seeking a rejuvenating of their physical, mental and sexual powers, and there would be none marked with the indelible stamp of constitutional Syphilis; and the sufferers from Prostatitis, Varicocele, Gleet, Kidney and Bladder Diseases, would be reduced to a minimum.

The Progressive Medical Association offers every afflicted man the care and attention of a skilled specialist in men's diseases, and a sure cure. Consultation free and confidential. Office hours 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. If you cannot call write Dept. A.

Largest Class in History of Institution is Turned Out.

The largest class in the history of the Sacred Heart Institute was graduated from that educational institution, with appropriate exercises, last evening.

The program opened with a song by the graduating class and the pupils of the Eighth grade. Miss Katherine McCrea gave an oration on "The Evolution of Advertising." This was well received, for Miss McCrea went deep and interestingly into her subject. Miss Marie Craig gave a piano solo and little Ruth Crowley a humorous recitation. Both were rewarded with loud applause by the large audience which was present.

Miss Agnes Kinkele gave an oration on "Ideal Education" and Miss Mary Williams contributed a piano solo, which was followed by two choruses by the entire class. Miss Nellie Reau of the Juniors gave the class prophecy, which was amusing and interesting. She mentioned the fact that the next graduating class at the Institute will probably hold its exercises in the new building.

In response, the class sang a farewell song, and Rev. Father J. Frignon, chaplain of the institution, delivered a short address to the graduates and presented the diplomas.

Rewards were distributed to the pupils as follows:

The gold medal of honor and diploma of graduate from the scientific course: Miss eGnevieve Moran, Miss Margaret Pierce, Miss Mary Williams, Miss Mary Ryan.

SWEDEN WILL NOT BE REPRESENTED

At the Coronation of King Haakon of Norway, June 22.

Christiania, June 9.—Sweden will not be represented at the coronation of King Haakon VII, on June 22. The Swedish government desires that it be understood that this decision is not the result of ill will or as a breach of friendly intercourse, but is dictated out of regard for King Oscar's personal feelings. The situation has no historic parallel, but it is considered here as quite natural that King Oscar should not permit a member of his dynasty to assist at the coronation of his successor in the society of a portion of his former kingdom. The governmental Verdans Gang comments on the incident in this spirit, saying that Sweden's absence in the circumstances is not a symptom that she is unwilling to retain cordial relations with Norway.

PINCKNEY WHYTE

Appointed by Governor Warfield to Succeed Late Senator Gorman.

Baltimore, June 9.—Governor Edwin Warfield last night announced from the executive mansion that he appointed William Pinckney Whyte to fill the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of Arthur Pue Gorman.

Ex-Governor and ex-Senator Whyte will enter the United States senate for the third time, and for the second time by appointment to fill an unexpired term, he having been named by Governor Swann to fill out the term of the late Senator Johnson upon the appointment of the latter as United States minister to England in 1896.

Mr. Whyte was born in Baltimore August 9, 1824. He is a graduate of Harvard law school, and was admitted to the bar of Baltimore in 1846. In 1867 he was elected to the Maryland house of delegates, this being his first public office.

In 1871 he was elected governor of Maryland, and in 1874 United States senator. He declined re-election as senator in 1880, and in the following year was elected mayor of Baltimore.

WEEPS AT BIER OF CHILD HE CUT OFF.

New York, June 9.—Beside the coffin of his daughter, upon whose face he gazed for the first time in eight years, Dr. S. Andral Kilmer mourns today and will not be comforted. His grief is the greater because he cannot forget the look of determination in her eyes as she had left home, a girl of 16, with his parting injunction: "You must make your own way."

Edith Kilmer had enjoyed all the luxuries and advantages of a millionaire's daughter. Dr. Kilmer is owner of a proprietary medicine. The family home is one of the most beautiful in Binghamton.

When Miss Kilmer left the parental roof she went to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kilmer, in Jamaica, L. I., where the latter's son, Prof. C. J. Kilmer, conducts a sanatorium for the treatment of cancer. Miss Kilmer became a nurse.

It was a case of cancer which she was called upon to undertake last Saturday. In moving a screen she received a tiny prick on a finger of her right hand. The punctured finger came in contact with the virus of cancer. Two hours later the right hand and arm began to swell and Miss Kilmer told of the wound on her finger. Eminent specialists failed to save her life.

BIG WATER TANK FALLS IN BUILDING.

Pittsburg, June 9.—A 10,000-gallon water tank crashed down through the three-story brick building at 537-545 Liberty avenue late yesterday afternoon, causing the rear wall to fall out and injuring seven persons so that they had to be taken to hospitals.

The crash came with a few moments' warning, which accounts for the small list of injured. There are about fifty employed in the building and the majority were enabled to escape before the huge tank had done its greatest damage.

The total damage to the building is estimated at $5,000.

POPE GIVES FARLEY LARGE GOLD MEDAL.

Rome, June 9.—Archbishop Farley of New York was received in private audience yesterday by Pope Pius. The Pontiff listened with interest to the prelate's report of conditions in the arch diocese of New York, and at its conclusion expressed his appreciation of the zeal for the faith demonstrated by the results shown by the efforts of the Roman Catholic clergy and laity of New York.

"You are," said the pope, "next door to us. New York has become one of the nearest dioceses to Rome through fast steamers."

The pope gave Archbishop Farley a large gold medal bearing his likeness.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

St. Louis, June 9.—Joseph Szelig, a refugee from San Francisco, last night shot and killed his wife and then himself in the presence of their two children. Szelig had been separated from his wife for two years when he returned here after having his home burned in the San Francisco fire. He had made no attempt at reconciliation, but last night visited his wife's boarding house and without warning killed her.

TWO MINERS KILLED.

Webb City, Mo., June 9.—Two men were killed and two injured in a double accident near here yesterday. P. L. McKoy and Chester Ogle, miners, were blown to atoms in a shaft by the premature explosion of shots set off by themselves in the mine near Carterville and a call for an ambulance was sent to this city. Scott Alfrey and H. K. Bishop, who answered the call, were injured when a freight train backed into the ambulance, tearing it to splinters.

CHATFIELD MAN KILLS SELF.

Chatfield, Minn., June 9.—John Pavelka killed himself with a shotgun while despondent over ill health. He was 56 years of age and lived alone near the outskirts of West Chatfield.

PRESIDENT IS WARMLY SCORED

By Chicago Business Associations for Publishing Stockyards Report.

Chicago, June 9.—The Illinois Manufacturers' association and the Chicago Commercial association, at separate meetings last night, denounced the Neill-Reynolds report of sanitary conditions at the stock yards as highly colored, and scored President Roosevelt for sending it to congress. These two associations constitute the commercial and business voices of Chicago.

President Orendoff of the Manufacturers' association appointed a committee to make a thorough investigation of the stockyards, with the aid of the most eminent experts obtainable. The purpose of this investigation is to transmit their findings to President Roosevelt, in addition to publishing them for the benefit of meat buyers in all parts of the world.

The action of the directors of the Chicago Commercial association was as determined as that of the manufacturers. A committee of investigators was appointed, and resolutions adopted asking the public to suspend judgment.

MICHIGAN IRON FIELDS

More Diamond Drills in Commission on Menominee Range Than Ever Before---Great Field for Exploration is Presented.

Iron Mountain, Mich., June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Never in the history of the region have more diamond drills been in commission on the Menominee iron range than are in operation at the present time. Especially is this the case in the Crystal Falls and Iron River-Stambaugh districts of Iron county, in which more work of the kind is in progress than in any other field. Physically, the Menominee is the largest of the Michigan ranges, its ore measures stretching over a greater area than either of the others; it presents a larger field for exploration in fact, than the Marquette or Gogebic districts combined, yet there is more work in that line on either of the latter ranges than will be accomplished for decades to come.

In any of the Michigan iron fields it cannot be stated positively that ore does not exist in any given area until after the land has been punched full of diamond drill holes sunk to the underlying country rock, below which sedimentary ore deposits may not reasonably be looked for. Properties that have been explored for decades occasionally develop into good mines under the fortunate touch of some explorer with better ideas or better luck than those who have preceded him. There was a time when the diamond drill was not in favor on the Menominee. Test-pitting was considered the best and cheapest method. Now the drill is supreme, and but little test-pitting is in evidence. There is reason for the change. In the days of the test pits only properties were attacked which possessed but little overburden. Options were not in demand on others, and in consequence not much of the ore-bearing area was explored. Now the explorers are attacking the ground in which the ore lies deep, and the cheapest and quickest way of doing this is by diamond drilling. Had it not been for the drill, the new finds in the Stambaugh district, for instance, would doubtless never have been made; it is not likely, however, that shafts such as put down on the Baker and Baltic properties would have been sunk except with certain knowledge that ore bodies would have been opened.

The Menimonee range, lying approximately east and west, stretches from Waucedah to some distance west of Iron river, as far as developed, a distance of upwards of fifty miles as the crow flies. There are more spurs or outlying districts than on the other ranges, and the iron formation is so extensive that many new and large mines are certain to be opened in the future. The geological formation is not unlike that of the Marquette range, the principal exception being that the limestones of the Menominee take the place of the diorites of the Marquette, and are commonly found in the same close connection with the ore. The deposits of silicious ores are of enormous extent and of common occurrence, affording a guarantee of active mining operations at a period when the bodies of higher grade ore now being mined are exhausted. The Lake Superior ranges are now being skimmed of their cream, and the time will come, and within the present generation, when many millions of tons of ore ranging in the forties in metallic iron must be mined annually. England had her rich ores at one time, yet today is mining Cronstone containing 30 to 40 per cent iron and importing the richer ores. Germany and France, too, have exhausted their richer deposits, and must mine ore of the lower grade and secure better qualities from Spain and Sweden. Lake Superior iron mining is mainly devoted to depleting the reserves of concentrated ores supplied by natire. In time it must get down to depending mainly on the original ore measures, and these are much leaner in units of iron.

LAKE SUPERIOR COPPER MINES

Exploratory Work to be Resumed on Old Carp Lake Mine in Porcupine Mountain District—King Philip Shaft Now in the Rock.

Calumet, Mich., June 9.—The diamond drill, which the Rhode Island company is operating on the Kearsarge amygdaloid belt is driving a hole on the incline of the formation. The results of the work or the depth which the drill has attained are not divulged by the Rhode Island officials.

There is continued improvement in the ground being opened in the drifts north from No. 1 shaft at the Mohawk mine. No. 2 shaft also is penetrating a better grade of copper rock than was found in the upper levels. In the openings on the levels south from No. 5 shaft, the southernmost opening, the ground is uniformly productive. The work of remodeling the Mohawk's stamps at its mill on Traverse Bay is progressing steadily. The mine will be able to supply the heads their full quota of rock, 2,500 to 2,800 tons daily, when the work is finished.

Work on the Medora tract of the Keweenaw Copper company will be watched with interest, as it is likely to be the scene of the first extensive operations of this corporation. The showing in the bottom of the old shaft which was recently unwatered is good. A test pit a short distance away has cut the lode and exposed a copper showing. The shaft is being provided with the equipment necessary for more extended investigation of the lode. Diamond drill work continues.

Exploratory work will be started in a few days on the old Carp Lake mine in the Porcupine Mountain copper range of Ontonagon county. E. E. Boalt of Cleveland, Ohio, will have charge of the operations. He arrived a few days ago and left for the mine with a crew of men. H. L. Payne of Cleveland, who is interested in the property, will arrive at the mine in a few weeks. The Carp Lake property is in the same section as the Nonesuch, which has recently passed into the control of the Calumet & Hecla Mining company. Arrangements are being made by the big corporation for the exploration of the property by means of diamond drills, a contract for the work having been let to Cole & McDonald of Duluth, extensive operators in the Michigan copper district and on the Iron ranges of Lake Superior.

Like the other properties of the Porcupine Mountain district, the Carp Lake is opened on a conglomerate sandstone, and the copper is exceedingly fine, and found freely disseminated through the rock. Estimates of the copper contents run as high as 1 per cent. The metal is in exceedingly thin flakes, being akin to the flour gold, which gives the Western miners so much trouble. The flakes are so thin that they float on water, and it is the belief of the present owners of the Carp Lake property that they cannot be saved by any ordinary process of concentration. The lode is seven feet wide, practically the same as at the Nonesuch, and very flat, dipping at an average of only twenty-six degrees. One shaft has been opened to a depth of 350 feet.

Alfred Meads of Marquette, one of the best informed men regarding the history, geology and mines of Ontonagon county and a resident of that section for many years, is of the belief that the Carp Lake copper is not too fine to save by the machinery now in general use. It is his belief that the same machinery, skill and care employed at the Calumet & Hecla, Atlantic and other active mines in the Lake Superior district, would make the Carp Lake a highly remunerative property. He says the copper is very fine indeed, but not flake copper. He maintains that it is granular in form and will not float, though easily carried away by a strong stream of water. Mr. Meads is of the opinion that a mistake has been made in sending much of this rock to the mill, as some of it runs as high as 40 per cent copper, and should go direct to a smelter.

Whatever may be the ultimate result of the Calumet & Hecla's work on the Nonesuch, one may rest assured that it will receive an efficient test at the hands of the big corporation. The solution of the problem of saving the Nonesuch's copper values would mean equally as important results to the Carp Lake, as the two properties are very similar in the nature of their copper deposits. There are mines in the lake district which are operating on lower-grade copper formations than the one traversing the Nonesuch and Carp Lake properties, and they are earning excellent profits. There is no question about the copper values of the Porcupine Mountain district mines, it is simply a question of recovering them. More difficult problems than this have been solved in copper mining practice, and some day the wealth in that section will be made available.

Rapid progress is being made in the erection of the new steel shaft and rock house at No. 3 shaft of the Wolverine mine. The frame work of the structure is all up now and the sides being placed. In the meantime advantage is being taken of the idleness of the shaft. The skip road is being improved and rebuilt like a railroad track. Cross ties are being used, instead of stringers, as formerly.

Work on the lode underground in the Rhode Island mine is confined to operations in the drift that is being driven north on the west lode at the tenth level. This drift is 625 feet and is penetrating a fairly good vein matter. The lode averages six feet in width and shows a small amount of copper. At the eighth level, which is 1,000 feet below the surface, drifting north was stopped some time ago, after penetrating 1,336 feet. Test stoping was carried forward there for some time, but the copper values were not regular enough to warrant the continuance of the work. The tenth level drift is now penetrating the ground in which the best results were secured in the eighth level.

At No. 1 shaft of the North Kearsarge branch of the Osceola Consolidated mine work is under way on the installation of a new type of skip, which is expected to eliminate the trouble that has existed there. As the preparations for the installation of the skip were all completed it is not expected that production will be delayed more than ten days. During that period rock shipments from the other openings will be increased so that there will be no change in the mine's total yield.

Automatic dumping steel mineral cars are now in use for shipment of the mineral from the Mohawk and Wolverine stamp mills on Traverse bay to the plant of the Michigan Smelting company on the south shore of Portage lake. These cars recently went into commission and succeeded the method of packing the mineral in box cars, which in turn succeeded the more antiquated method of packing it in barrels.

At the King Philip property, located on the line dividing Houghton and Ontonagon counties and adjoining the Winona on the south, sinking in the shaft has passed through the overburden and is in the rock. The shaft is 14x25 feet, and around the collar the earth has caved to a depth of twenty feet. It is planned to drive vertical

THE BISBEE DISTRICT

Strike at the Denn, the Most Interesting Topic---Tramway From Shattuck Progressing Rapidly ---Indications at the Cochise.

Bisbee, Ariz., June 9.—Work in the north drift of the Denn-Arizona last week furnished the Warren district with its most interesting topic. The strike of a low-grade sulphide ore, averaging from 5 to 6 per cent, sent the stock soaring, and it was eagerly sought by the public The ore was encountered at about ninety-five feet from the shaft, and every shot is expected to uncover a rich body of the ore. That the Denn-Arizona should soon open up a paying body is conceded by nearly all those conversant with the mining situation in the district.

The new pumping plant at this property, recently installed under the supervision of Supt. Pattison, is all ready for operation, but as yet no water has been encountered.

The southeast drift, which was started in the direction of the diamond drill hole, is now in 200 feet. With 350 feet more to go before the drill hole is encountered, it is not entirely out of the question that ore will be encountered sooner. They are still in the conglomerate in the southeast drift.

Sinking to the 1,100-foot level began this week. Stockholders in Denn are elated with the showing being made, while the effect of Denn's good fortune has been to cause a rise of confidence in other of the unproven properties on the north side of the gulch.

At the Shattuck & Arizona they are finishing the upraise which will enlarge the shaft. Timbering is nearing completion. This week will find development work started in the ground from the 700 to the 800 level. Stoping will begin, and it is hoped that Shattuck ore will find its way to the smelter in a steady output by August.

The tramway from the Shattuck to the railroad is progressing rapidly, all the timber for the trestle being on the ground and distributed along the route, July 15 will find the rope carrier in operation.

The foundation for the new hoist is now in readiness for the machinery. Installation has been started, and it is hoped by the management that hoisting will begin in early July.

At the Cochise, where the encountering of small pockets of ore created a flurry in local circles last week, the shaft and drift are both undergoing a decided change in formation. They have passed through the hard quartz and porphyry into ledge matter, which is well mineralized and shows a considerable amount of low-grade sulphide ore. There is every indication that Cochise will sooner or later encounter a permanent ore body of high value.

The Cochise shaft is already down 490 feet, and it is expected that another station will be cut at either the 600 or 700 feet level.

The recent strikes, both in the Denn and Cochise, coupled with the proximity of the latter to the Copper Queen ground have drawn much attention toward the north side of the canyon. Cochise stockholders taking a profit on their holdings as a result.

The new 150-horse power boiler for the Cochise arrived in the yards Thursday, and is being unloaded now. The air pipe recently ordered for ventilation purposes has not yet arrived,

NEVADA GOLD DIGGERS

Antelope and Red Top Companies Divide a Rich Find ---Peaceful Division Until Property Has Been Thoroughly Developed.

Manhattan, Nev., June 7.—What promised to result in a hot fight on Round Mountain, fourteen miles north of here, as a result of the big strike made on the Antelope claim of the Antelope Mining company, has been turned into a happy family gathering, through the coolheadedness and spirit of fairness that characterized the negotiations for peace between the representatives of the Antelope and Red Top companies, the latter the owner of the Edith claim, adjoining the Antelope. The question was whether the strike had been made on one claim or the other, and the line finally decided upon cut through the spot where the rich gold ore had been uncovered, with both sides waiving any claim to extralateral rights, pending the thorough development of the ground. This is the property from which came the great slab of gold covered quartz which is now being exhibited in the East.

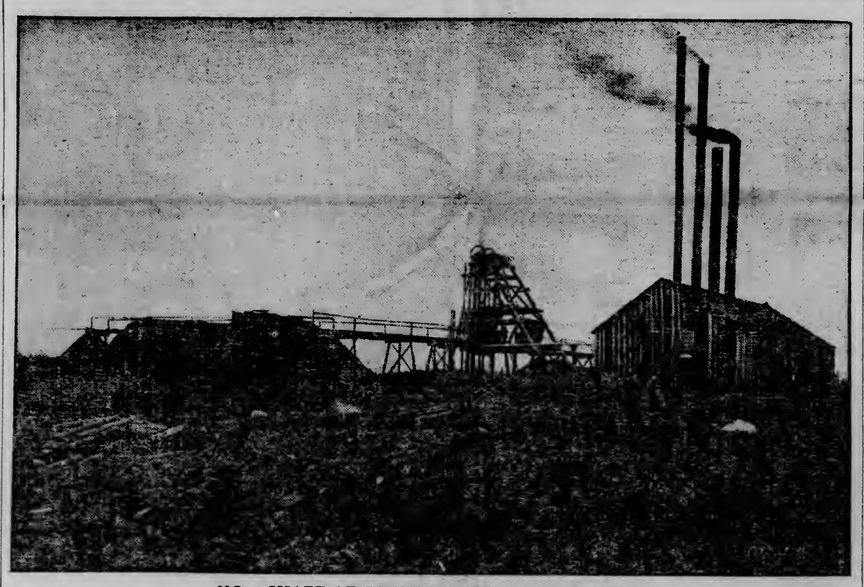

The management of the Spainx company's property on Round Mountain has done a great deal of development work on its property, and this week began the sacking of $300 gold ore. In addition to the rich streaks the company is developing some large bodies of milling ore, and it will not be long till provision is made for treating it.

At the Round Mountain Central property the management reports having struck a four-inch stringer at a depth of six feet that assays $1,000 to $1,500 a ton. Nine leases have been awarded on this property, and as soon as supplies can be got to the ground the hill will be alive with miners.

Development on the Stray Dog claim of the Manhattan Stray Dog Mining company is being pushed under the supervision of John. D. Campbell, the man who mined $500,000 worth of ore in ten days from the famous Reilly lease on the Florence property at Goldfield. Mr. Campbell is confident that he will very soon record another success on the Stray Dog, and the mineral indications are certainly in his favor. At a depth of 135 feet, drifts are being extended to the north and south, on a well defined ledge, five and a half feet in width, all of which is an excellent grade of milling ore. In the north drift, sixteen inches of the vein matter yields an average assay of $225 per ton.

The company shaft on the Indian Camp claim, one of the promising holdings of the Manhattan Indian Camp Mining company, is down sixty feet, and has been in ore from grass-roots. The entire ledge carries a good grade of mill rock, and last Saturday Manager Campbell opened up a 12-inch streak along the foot-wall that yields an average assay of $50 per ton. Future development is to be facilitated by

NO. 2 SHAFT AT CANISTEO MINE, BOVEY, MINN.

BUTTE MINING DISTRICT

New Copper Company in Heart of Ore Zone, Adjoining North Butte---Giant Merger Completed With Heinze In It.

Butte, Mont., June 9.—The Tuolumne mine, formerly owned by Edward Hickey, John O'Rourke, David Shields and N. J. Biedenberg, has been incorporated, and the process of sinking a three-compartment shaft will begin during the next twenty days. But a short time ago the owners refused $600,000 for this property, which is located between the Speculator and Jessie mines and within a stone's throw of either claim. As is well known, both of these last mentioned mines are now the property and heavy producers of the North Butte Mining company. The Tuolumne has been incorporated for 500,000 shares at a par value of $1 per share. The owners have deeded the mine to the new company in consideration of 400,000 shares of stock. It has been decided to place a limited amount of stock, 100,000 shares, on the market, the remaining 300,000 shares to be known as treasury stock. The 100,000 shares will be sold at $1 per share, and the revenue derived will be used for development purposes only. The incorporators of the company, who are all well-known business men of Montana, are as follows: Edward Hickey, capitalist and mining man; John W. Pratt, manager Red Boot Shoe company; Patrick Sheehan, mine superintendent; H. Diestel, merchant; N. J. Biedenberg, capitalist and cattle man.

The largest and most important new copper project this year is the Davis-Daly Estate Copper company, incorporated under the Maine laws, with $10,000,000 in 670,000 shares par value $15, the issue price, less a small discount to underwriters. This price represents actual cost of the property. The strength of this company lies in the location of its properties, about four hundred acres in the heart of the Butte camp. Its directors are mostly mining men of wealth and experience. It starts off with $2,000,000 cash in its treasury. The directors include F. Augustus Heinze and Henry Mueller of Butte; Clarence K. McCormick of Salt Lake; Charles R. Leonard, M. S. Largey, L. S. Gillette, John Macginnis and C. W. Davis, all of Butte; Karl G. Roebling, of Trenton, N. J.; N. W. Bunsted of Boston; S. S. Rossenstain of New York and J. A. Coram.

The Davis-Daly company possesses the largest mining territory gathered together on the Butte mountain since Marcus Daly sold the Anaconda mine. The company owns, in full or in part, the following properties: Great Republic, the Baltic, the Broker, the Charlotte, the Centerville, the Pawn-Broker, the New Era, the Mount Moriah, the Hibernia, the Last Chance, and the Maximillian quartz lode mining claims; the Owsley ranch and water rights; also, the Butte & Iowa Mining company, and its interest in the Yellow Jack mining claim and the Colorado mining claim. The properties bought by Marcus Daly, and transferred to the Daly Mining company comprise interests in the Lizzie, the Red Chief, the Hesperus, the Yellow Jack, the Eureka mining and other claims. MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Eastern Capitalists Buy Old Holy Terror---Keystone Group of Mines and Property Will be Reopened This Summer.

Keystone, S. D., June 9.—The most important transaction made in Keystone for many years was consummated Monday, when the famous old Holy Terror-Keystone group of mines was sold to Charles Morgan of South Orange, N. J. Morgan also bought the Egyptian group of claims and will make other purchases. It is the intention of the new owner to operate both the low-grade ore, which occurs in immense bodies, and the stringers of high-grade on an immense scale, and to make out of this group of mines the Homestake of the Southern Hills.

A payment of one-fourth price was made at the Penington County bank, the second payment to be made in one year, the third in two and the fourth in three. The officers of the new company are as follows:

President, Charles Morgan of South Orange, N. J.; secretary and treasurer, W. A. Bobson of New York; general manager, W. F. Collins; superintendent, P. O'Keefe.

Extensive repairs will be made and work on reopening this old property will begin within two months' time. It has already been well developed, and as there are two stamp mills located thereon the prospects are that it can be put upon a working basis in a comparatively short time.

Deadwood, S. D., June 9.—Work is going along well on the property of the Homestake South Extension on Whitewood Gulch. When the shaft had reached a depth of 165 feet drifts were started east and west for the purpose of cutting off the water, which was becoming troublesome. The east drift is in forty feet and the west drift thirty-five feet. Drifting will continue another month before sinking will be resumed. Manager Olson thinks that good ledges of ore are likely to be encountered in these drifts, but he is not concerned about the matter, as he is positive that with greater depth in the shaft the large ore body for which they are exploring is sure to be encountered.

Spearfish, S. D., June 9.—It now seems probable that the project for building a smelter in this city in connection with the opening up of the large coal deposits in Northeast Wyoming will be put through. The decision of the people interested in the scheme was awaiting that of the Burlington railroad, as in order to make the smelter a success it will be necessary to have a railroad from here to the coal fields. The recent visit of W. H. Manss, the industrial commissioner of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, was for the purpose of reporting on this scheme and also upon the possibilities in the tin regions southwest of this city at Nigger Hill. It is stated that Mr. Manss's report will be favorable and will include not only building the spur to the coal fields, but also through the Tinton regions, to facilitate opening up tin deposits there. It is considered that this point is unusually favorable for the location of a smelter, as it lies midway between the gold producing regions and the coal district and also can be put into close communication with the Western states from which it will be necessary to draw the supply of fluxing ore.

Paul Danekwardt, who has been for some years associated with the Golden Reward company and the smelter in Deadwood, is pushing this project and has behind him a number of New York capitalists who will put up funds for the establishment of such a plant.

Hill City, S. D. June 9.—After experiments extending over a number of years, E. C. Johnson of this city has at last succeeded in producing pig tin of the very purest quality. The following letter has been received by Mr. Johnson from the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company:

"Dear Sir: I have your letter of May 18 in regard to tin. The samples which you sent have been tested, with the following results: Tin, 99.9 per cent; antimony, a trace. From this you will note that it is very good material. I am sending you an order herewith for the balance you have on hand as stated, etc."

The price offered to Mr. Johnson is equivalent to the New York market price plus the freights to the Western shops of the railway company where the tin is to be used. This netted the Gertie company at the mine 4 cents a pound above the New York quotation. This is especially gratifying, as people have been inclined to look askance upon Mr. Johnson's project, thinking it would be impossible for him to do so with so small an equipment what the old Harney Peak company years ago could not do with millions behind it.

The Gertie company is equipped with a good mining plant and rented this spring a one-stamp mill for tests. The ore used was taken from the 500-foot level of the Gertie mine, crushed by a Blake crusher, pulverized in a one-stamp mill, concentrated on a Willfy concentrator and smelted in a smelter resembling the reverberatory pattern. Mr. Johnson acquired a large tin acreage in the Southern Hills about ten years ago, when the price of tin was 12 cents a pound, the lowest ever known.

WORK ON VERMILION RANGE

Fine Reports From the Section 30 Property Which the Shagawa Company is Developing—Work on Many Vermilion Range Lands Progressing—Stripping Operations on Mesaba.

Excellent reports come from the famous Section 30 property, three miles east of Ely. Vermillion range, where A. M. Chisholm and Edward Lynch of Duluth, operating under the name of the Shagawa Iron company, are developing the Shagawa mine. The parties interested, the lessees and George Lonstorf of Milwaukee and associates, the latter the fee owners, are already certain of a mine, and with the improvement constantly shown the property gives evidence of being a large proposition. The main shaft has been going down at the rate of about three feet a day, exceptionally good work considering the formation of hard ore and jasper, and a depth of 300 feet has been attained. Diamond drilling had shown ore 138 feet below the surface, yet at a depth of 118 feet, clean, hard ore, largely bessemer, was encountered and was cut through for a distance of sixty feet. Following this the shaft penetrated a formation of mixed ore and jasper and continued in it until at a depth of about 165 feet another lens of clean ore of high grade was met with, assays from this deposit showing as high as 69.95 per cent in metallic iron. At a depth of 290 feet, a drift to the north has been started for the purpose of cutting the continuation of the upper lens. Considerable drifting was done on this upper lens, at a depth of about 120 feet, drifts being run in all four directions, 300 feet in all, and when this work was discontinued the north and south openings were still in ore. The drifting now in progress, from the bottom of the shaft, will give a good idea of the extent of the property; but as previously stated enough ore has already been shown to assure a mine. Since ore was first encountered, some 2,000 tons have been taken out in the course of the development work, an dhas been stockpiled on surface. All of this ore is of very good grade, samples taken at random from the pile running all the way from 62 to 69 per cent in iron, or about as fine as mined anywhere on either the Mesaba or Vermilion ranges. A force of forty miners is employed, and more men will be taken on as room is made for them. It is not likely that ore will be shipped this season, but next year should see Shagawa ore on the market, with a possibility, faint as yet, that it will be taken out over an extension which rumor has it may be built by the Great Northern road. A postoffice has been established at the location, named in honor of Joseph Sellwood of Duluth, and the erection of a schoolhouse has been started. Operations at the Shagawa are in charge of Capt. Samuel Hoar, an old Marquette range mining man.

Ever since last fall things have been shaping themselves for an expenditure of large amounts on the Vermilion range for development work and much drilling and test-pitting has been and is being accomplished. The results obtained are as yet as a closed book but it is expected that before the summer has passed, fruits of the exploratory work will be noticeable on several of the properties.

Beginning at Soudan work has been progressing for a year or more on lands which bid fair to prove of much importance.

On the Roy and LaChance properties on sections 4 and 5, 61-15, drills have been worked with results satisfactory to the owners.

East of this and south of Jasper Peak, ten forties were optioned late last fall to a concern, at 25 cents per ton with a minimum annual output of 100,000 tons.

On section 5, 62-14, north of Mud lake on the John Semer lands, the Oliver people did considerable drilling under a lease carrying a 25 cent royalty.

A large amount of drilling was done last fall and winter by interests whose identity is not known, on lands near Robinson lake station in 62-14. At the time the property was leased some interesting history was made public. Sig Levy owns 160 acres in 16; Mr. Bisbee owns lands in 7; Dr. Goetchius in 8; the Robinson Lake Iron company in 18.

Alois Ebmer has lands in section 15, 62-14, near the old McComber workings upon which a company will soon begin drilling.

The Oliver company has had drills working on the lands leased from Jno. Smith on section 9, 62-13. The lease was made on a 25 cent royalty with a minimum output of 35,000 tons.

Robert Whiteside will soon start a drill on section 36, 63-12, where test-pitting has recently been done.

Contractor McCarthy has a drill running on lands north of Ely on lands owned by Mr. Nelson of Taylor Falls.

Cole & McDonald are drilling the Cyrille Fortier claim on 29, 63-11. It is considered one of the best appearing properties in this neighborhood. J. S. Lutes, of Biwabik is the prime mover in this work.

The White Iron Lake Iron company discontinued its drill work on section 2, 63-12 last week pending the sinking of an exploratory shaft.

The conditions at section 30, 63-11, where the Shagawa company have opened a mine, are too wellknown to need further coment.

Max Shapiro and others who control 24 forties in 61-15, it is said will soon begin work on their lands with two diamond drills.

It is expected that the Swallow & Hopkins people who have an option on the Anderson south of Tower will begin work shortly to prove up a deposit known to exist there. Considerable

UTAH'S COPPER CAMPS

Railroad to Develop the Alta District---Continental Company to Connect Mills and Smelters With the Mines.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 9.—One of the most important enterprises connected with mining in Utah is that now being rounded into shape by Henry M. Crowther, manager of the Continental company's properties in the flourishing camp of Alta, Little Cottonwood mining district. It is the construction of twelve to fifteen miles of broad gauge railroad from the sampling mills and smelters of the valley below to a connection with the Continental company's aerial tramway, five miles below the town of Alta. With the completion of this road, which is destined to play an important part in the production of the mines of the district, the camp will jump right to the front and deliver an enormous tonnage of ore that cannot now be touched owing to the excessive cost of transportation.

The Continental company's mines contains hundreds of thousands of tons of ore that will be made available by the new road. The City Rocks company's property, adjoining, is in the same condition, and the same is true of the Albion, a short distance below and on the opposite side of the canon. Then come the famous Emma and Flagstaff mines, the Pittsburg Consolidated, Pioneer, Alta-Quincy, South Columbus and the rich Columbus Consolidated, while a year hence the Columbus Extension will be in trim to make the money.

Preparations are now being made for the construction of the connecting road and the expectation is that it will be in operation by fall. Within a year after its completion the road should be handling from 1,000 to 1,500 tons of ore a day.

Samuel Newhouse has returned from his ten day's prospecting trip through the region north of Ely, Nevada. With Cherry Creek as headquarters, Mr. Newhouse made numerous pilgrimages into the surrounding camps and returned to Salt Lake after having tied up two or three pieces of property and put men at work upon them. His engineer, M. M. Johnson, was left in the field to make final arrangements for the acquisition of other properties, and it now seems certain that Utah's most aggressive operator is planning to become a factor in the development of that region, that he is planning to make of Cherry Creek another Ely, except that silver, gold, lead and copper will all be mined for rather than copper alone. Mr. Newhouse returns enthusiastic over the possibilities of the camps visited, though he pleads that he is not yet ready to discuss the details of the program that he has been preparing.

Five four-horse teams are now hauling ore from the Little Bell company's Park City property to the sampling mills at the railroad loading station, and the expectation is that an average of two carloads of ore a day will now be coming regularly to market. There is no reason to doubt that the company will be able to market close to $100,000 worth of ore a month.

The Kearns-Keith company's property in the same camp is also making a fine record, and the management has just decided to add a lot of new equipment, including its own electric lighting plant for mine, mill and company buildings. The company has also been acquiring additional ground during the past few days.

THE ENGLISH TRANSLATION

By Maud Winifred Spence.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The sophomore was drawing his hands leisurely out of the pockets of his trousers, and reluctantly stowing away under his arm a small Greek lexicon, a textbook of Aristotle, and an English translation.

The books had been lying on the window sill for over a week, unheeded, save when the maid flicked the dust off them in the early morning.

The sophomore lingered beside the open window. It was a fatal mistake, for presently a young girl came from over the fields across his line of vision, footing the daisies lightly in her passage.

She swung open the low gate carelessly and tripped into the rose garden among the butterflies.

"Hello!" she cried, catching sight of the face at the window. "Thought you were studying, Ralph."

"So I am," replied the sophomore, "or rather, so I'm intending. What's it like out, Mollie?"

She came close to the window and looked in upon him.

"It's hot in the sun, and everything seems sleepy; but it's nice in the garden—quite cool with a breeze, and the birds are talking—but, of course, you are studying."

"Yes, of course, I'm—studying," he answered.

"And you like studying, don't you?"

"Yes—awfully."

"It's very good of you, then, to have denied yourself such a great pleasure for over a week."

"Don't mention it."

The girl took up the text book which had fallen from Ralph's arm onto the window ledge.

"It's odd stuff to like so immensely. Who made it?" she queried, turning aimlessly.

"Aristotle."

"Who's he?"

"A great philosopher."

"Oh!"

She moved away among the rose beds. She was pleasant to look at in her white summer dress. Even at the distance of the rose garden he could see how blue her eyes looked in the twinkling sunlight as he stood watching her.

Again the young man took up the lexicon, the text-book, and the English translation. Sitting down, he opened the text-book. It smelt of tobacco, and showed pencil markings on the margin at intervals. For awhile he interested himself with turning over the pages, noting these.

Half an hour later a servant handed him a thin, orange-colored envelope. When Ralph had read the twelve brief words, he placed the books upon the window sill and went into the garden and round by the outbuildings.

On the shadiest side a rude see-saw had been put together. Mollie was sitting on the further end of the slanting beam, a book in her lap.

Ralph approached the see-saw cautiously on the side Mollie was backing. Then he threw his weight upon the raised end of the beam.

"Hold on tight!" he called out.

Instantly the position of the beam began to reverse. Mollie went swinging up gently into mid-air. Ralph sat on the other end firmly, his arms folded, his feet resting among the daisies and buttercups that bestrewed the field.

The girl uttered a little cry of surprise as the see-saw was put in motion, and the open book fell from her lap, crushing the grass.

"What are you up to, Ralph? Let me down!" she called from her lofty throne.

"Not until you agree to fulfill your promise of last night," he answered from the buttercups and daisies.

"Why are you so persistent," she asked.

"Because I am going away this evening. I have had a telegram. It is my last chance."

"It is very cool and pleasant up here," said Mollie, settling herself bird-like upon her perch. "I'm enjoying it so much."

"Awfully glad to hear it," Ralph answered.

"What a pity you didn't bring your Aristotle with you!" the girl said presently. "You could have read such a lot of it."

"I'm quite content with my present position," said the voice from the daisies.

"Hem! it's very lowly. You're easily satisfied," said the voice from the cloudless blue.

"You're going to fulfill your promise?" asked the voice from the earth.

"I can't hear. I'm too high up," called back the treble voice.

A long silence followed, broken only by the varied sounds that help to make the summer.

Presently the young scholar caught sight of the book Mollie had been so intent upon. It was an old Greek grammar—one of his own. He recognized it at once.

"Why, little Mollie!" he cried, giving a start that nearly resulted in a catastrophe to the girl poised above him, "what are you doing with Greek?"

"I thought I would take it up," she answered, with a grand air, "as you seem to consider it so nice."

"Is that a recommendation?" he asked. She was silent.

"Why didn't you ask me to teach you Greek?" There was just a touch of earnestness in his tone.

"I did not like to disturb you," she answered, turning away her head demurely. "But I have not really done any work since I came down here; you know that quite as well as I do. Mollie, look at me."

"I can't; my neck aches on that side."

"Mollie, I am going away this evening."

"I've heard that before."

"Mollie, why won't you be kind to me?"

"I am kind. I leave you to your studies in peace."

"But I don't like studying while I'm here."

"Then why did you say so this afternoon?"

"I was trying to think that I liked it."

Mollie turned her head and looked down upon him from her exalted position.

"But you like Aristotle—awfully, don't you?"

"Not when you are near," he said, digging his heel into the daisies.

"Oh! So you are trying to be a good boy this afternoon?"

"I found it harder than I thought," he answered, somewhat dejectedly.

"Poor boy!" she murmured consolingly from full, red lips.

Another silence ensued.

"Couldn't you teach me some Greek now?" asked the girl. "Say something to me in Greek. It would help to pass the time away, you know."

He looked up with thoughtful eyes.

"Zoe mou sas agapo," he said, repeating the line slowly from Byron's "Maid of Athens." He knew his Byron better than his Aristotle. "That's a very short sentence, but it means a lot."

"What does it mean?" she asked, leaning towards him.

"Something very nice."

"Say the funny sentence again," she demanded.

"Zoe mou sas agapo," he murmured, as before.

"Do translate it," she urged.

"Some day I will come back and translate it to you," Ralph said, avoiding her gaze.

"Thank you," she answered curtly; "you need not take the trouble. Greek is not so very interesting to me; and, after all, I don't pretend to be wise. I am only a—butterfly. Oh, sit still, Ralph! Remember, we are on a see-saw!"

"Mollie, I want to tell you something—I am going to be wise for once, or rather, I am going to try to be wise."

"Is it very hard?"

"Yes, dreadfully."

"Yet you read Aristotle; and he was a very wise man."

"Oh, yes, he was all that; but he didn't understand this sort of thing, you know."

"What sort of thing?"

"This see-sawing sort of thing."

"Wasn't that funny sentence from Aristotle?"

"Oh, no. An amused smile passed over the young man's face. "Aristotle never wrote anything so nice as that."

"Tell me what the sentence means, and then—and then—and then you can let me down from the see-saw. But you'll do it gently, won't you?"

"You understand what you are saying, Mollie? You understand the whole of it?"

She nodded her head.

He fixed his gaze upon her and began translating slowly.

"Zoe means 'life'—mou, 'of me'—agapo means—sas agapo means—"

"What does it mean?"

"What do you think?"

"I can't think; it's all Greek to me."

He looked away into the shadows.

"Ralph, what does sas agapos mean?"

He slid dexterously nearer the center of the plank, allowing it to balance till they were on a level.

In a moment he was at her side.

"It means 'you—I love.'"

"Now, Mollie, he cried, putting his arm about her, "give me the kiss you promised me last night."

Meanwhile, around a latticed window, gay roses nodded knowingly at a small Greek lexicon, a text-book of Aristotle, and an English translation, lying on the window sill. They shook their beautiful heads knowingly, especially at the English translation.

Doings in New York Society

New York, June 9.—Many members of society who are still in the city are to be seen in the fashionable restaurants consulting railroad time tables between courses. For those at nearby country houses the thing to do these days is to come into the city for the day or evening in one's own touring car, and thus avoid the annoyance of mixing with the hot pollot on train or boat.

There are certain drawbacks to this plan, as for instance, accidents, which mean delay, sometimes serious delay. But more and more society people are coming to realize that they are no longer bound down by set rules as regards time. The hours for lunching and dining are being changed about, and it is natural the time for everything should also be altered to suit the change. The dinner hour is set a half-hour later each season, and nine is now quite early enough to dine in the country.

It is quite unusual to have a fashionable wedding in New York as late as June 11, but it is safe to say very few society members who have received invitations will fail to be present at the marriage of Miss Cynthia Roche and Mr. Arthur Burden when it is celebrated at Grace church on Monday.

The service will be fully choral and will be held at half-past twelve. Rev. Dr. Welham R. Huntington will officiate.

Miss Roche, who returned from Europe with her mother two weeks ago, has chosen for her bridesmaids, Miss Norah Iselin and Miss Therese Iselin, who are cousins and daughters respectively of Messrs. C. Oliver and Adrian Iselin; Miss Evelyn Parsons, Miss Natica Rives, Miss Mollie Moran and Miss Sadie Jones, all of whom have been her companions in Newport.

It has been decided to hold the wedding breakfast, which will be limited to relatives and most intimate friends, at Sherry's. With the exception of Miss Sadie Jones, the other bridesmaids chosen by Miss Roche, have frequently served in that capacity, and in fact have been much in demand.

Miss Jones was a debutante of last summer in Newport, and is one of the great favorites in society. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, have recently purchased the Havemeyer villa Freidheim, in Bellevue avenue, and can now be counted on as permanaent summer residents of Newport.

One of the prettiest weddings New York has seen for some time was that of Miss Olga Townsend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Samuel Townsend, with George Pratt Cutter, which took place last Monday in the Collegiate church, on West End avenue. Mrs. Thomas Tone Hopper, sister of Miss Townsend, was the matron of honor, and Miss Florence Nugent was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were: Miss Katherine Blood, Miss Viola Martin, Miss Emma Tregessor and Miss Janet Wildey. The best man was Mr. Lorraine Conklin and the ushers Schnyler Imbrie, Edward Stephens, Edward Conklin, Arthur Randolph, Kent Swift and Edward Conger. A reception followed at the St. Regis.

It was a violet wedding. Flowers of this hue were massed in the chancel and clustered on standards on the middle aisle pews, and the bride's attendants were all arrayed in violet. The bride wore a marquise lace costume built on white satin and trimmed with rose point lace and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Apparently most of the couples recently married, or about to be wedded, are bent on passing their honeymoon abroad. George P. Cutter sailed with his bride on the Campania the day after the wedding. Amedee Valle Reyburn, who had the same bridal date, Miss Florence Adele Kelly being the bride, has taken passage for June 12.

Dr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Van Beuren, who were married ten days ago, are on a preliminary bridal jaunt before sailing on June 16. Garret Hobart and his bride, who was Miss Driggs, were married on June 6, and will sail on June 16 for a summer's trip. Arthur Burden and his bride will sail soon after the wedding.

Newport is said to be looking its best. There are no events of great social importance ever chronicled so early in the season, and really it is the simple life that will be led there for the next two weeks. As one after another arrives and opens his or her cottage, he or she is received with enthusiasm and with open arms. Everything is ideally friendly for the time being, before the rush of the season and the consequent excitement over who shall or shall not be admitted into the inner circle.

House warmings may be expected from Mrs. John Nicholas Brown and Louis Bruguere, whose new homes will soon be completed. Mr. Bruguere's new place on Miantonomi avenue, overlooking the bay and the country, and Mrs. Brown's villa on Halldon Hill, facing the harbor, will be most attractive to lovers of perfectly appointed homes.

The Countess Delia Gherardesca and her family arrived this week, and, contrary to all expectations, she is not to spend the summer at her father's summer home on Annadale road, but has taken apartments at the Halcyon. The count is expected later on.

"Belcourt," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, will be opened again this summer. Mrs. Belmont is one of the large entertainers, and her affairs are always enjoyable.

Miss Helen M. Gould has gone abroad this summer for the first time since the marriage of her younger sister, Miss Anna Gould, to Count Boni de Castellane. She usually passes the heated term at her country place in the Catskills, and otherwise makes her rural residence at Irvington her headquarters Miss Gould took a great liking to her little French Castellane nephews when they were over with their mother, a few winters ago. She will meet the countess in Paris within a day or two.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish will go to their summer home at Garrison on the Hudson on June 10, and at the end of the month will go to Crossways, their Newport place.

The Atmosphere That Breeds Success.

Analysis of the Silent Forces That Produce Store Prosperity.

You can tell a store by its atmosphere.

Its moral character expresses itself in the very air you breathe, and moral character is the greatest force in merchandizing.

Take the Silberstein & Bondy Company in Duluth. You see their beautiful windows and they tempt you to try the store. Even they have a moral force that fascinates, something more than mere beauty.

You enter the store.

Once inside you feel the overwhelming force of silent salesmanship — that powerful, but invisible thing that makes us want to do business with a store — breeds confidence — opens hearts and pocketbooks because it is the expression of the methods and merits of the store.

You see a hand-bag.

"Five dollars."

You take that handbag.

A woman's Hat.

"Ten dollars."

You buy it, and upstairs a courteous and efficient saleswoman shows you a forty-five dollar suit or coat and you order it sent home—high though the price may seem.

Why?

Because the store has won your confidence.

Had the hand-bag been one of the $1 kind, the hat of the $5 lot, and the suit or coat $15 or $25, you'd know it would be the same—you'd know the guarantee of "bestness" would still be there—newness, fashion's latest ,and suited to you—if they said so.

Confidence Winning? Yes, That's It.

Making people pay their money over just as they'd bank it—and as easy to draw out.

Take back anything you don't like and the money comes cheerfully forward to greet you—not a shadow of reluctance.

Why?

Because that store system says, "The whole aim in business is to please people. Profits don't count. Nothing counts but permanent patronage."

And that's the success of the store.

Employes Interested In Building Business.

And employes are trained to have the welfare of the purchaser always first.

Courteous, obliging, their entire aim is to serve customers with all of the ability and effort to please they possess, conscious of the appreciation of their employers and their ultimate reward in good salaries, this store having the reputation of paying the highest salaries to their employes of any store hereabouts.

So the store and the staff work together in the perfect salesmanship which wins a customer the first time and holds her for all time.

Organized honesty is in every transaction. The policy of the firm is expressed in every article and its character is the character of every employe.

A Well Pleased Customer Is the Best Advertisement.

That's the slogan at Silberstein & Bondy Company's.

Below is published one of many kind comments constantly received by the firm through the mails from "satisfied customers." It is just such friends that have made this store what it is today, the leading and "best" store at the Head of the Lakes.

Fitting Snug and Tight is Practical for Tennis.

A Favorite as its easy to Slip on and off.

Well Liked for Golfing

Practical Styles in the Popular Sweater

Not since sweaters first came into fashion has there been such a demand for them among women as at present and while in appearance they are less ornate than formerly, the practical element enters largely into their construction. For motoring, golfing, tennis, for steamer traveling or almost any occasion during the summer when a wrap is necessary, these garments are invaluable.

Some of the more exclusive houses are getting them out, hand knit, and while they are considerably more expensive and frequently in exclusive styles, those found at the counters of the regular shops are quite as pretty and in every way as durable as the hand wrought article.

White takes precedence over any color in the construction of the sweater although brown and gray are occasionally used and frequently a pretty blue will form the yoke, collar and sleeves of one specially designed, but the colored garments are in the minority and all white are the best liked for general wear.

In the matter of style there are fewer freak fashions developed in the new sweaters this year than was the case several seasons ago, the idea of practicability entering solely into the making. It is merely a question of the survival of the fittest and utility rather than beauty that has been considered. For in all the wide range of women's wearing apparel, there is no one garment that fills so many and various needs as the sweater and another not unimportant feature is that it can be tucked away in any corner of the trunk, or wardrobe without danger of being either crumpled or mussed.

The coat sweater is proving its own popularity in that it can be readily slipped on and off. It sometimes goes by the name of the pony sweater, named after the new style coat recently introduced. There are two small pockets just below the waist line, either side of the front, sufficiently large to tuck away a handkerchief or some other important accessory of the feminine toilet. Made without a collar, a V-shaped neck and simply a straight ribbed cuff, it forms a decidedly practical garment for golfing or motoring.

For tennis the short bolero or Eton effect is best liked, also made collarless and either with turned back cuffs or not, according to the taste of the wearer. "Turtle" necks are sometimes seen, but generally speaking they have been practically abandoned in favor of the collarless blouse, along with the abolishment of the high collar on the new athletic shirts for summer wear.

Still a third style is after the popular Norfolk model with a belt, which is quite popular with women for golfing. None of the sweaters are knitted plain, all of them showing a pretty pattern in a ribbed design, with some motif carried out through the entire garment. While the brown and the gray show soil less easily, the white can be readily cleansed, even laundered by using some good white soap, though perhaps the cleansing with gasoline is the easiest method and there is less likelihood of the garments shrinking by the process.

While the hand made garments run anywhere in price from $12 up to $25, those of machine manufacture may be purchased for from $2.50 up, and the latter are as well qualified in every way for practical wear as the hand made ones in the perhaps more exclusive designs.

Black Taffeta Eton and Checked Skirt Popular

Black Taffeta and Checked Silk, Favorite Combination.

One of the favorite combinations for a street suit this season is that of the black silk eton coat and checked silk skirt which has become justly popular. One of the many advantages it possesses is the fact that the little eton can be worn with other gowns, and is therefore invaluable, and besides this the combination is not only smart and becoming, but eminently practical for wear upon many occasions. Frequently the skirt is composed of wool material, though in the illustration it is of accordion pleated silk. The hat worn with this costume shows a style of trimming which also bids fair to be popular, that of covering the entire crown of the hat with flowers, preferably roses, with a pompom or aigrette effect obtained by a stiff spray of foliage.

China Menu Cards Among Novelties in Table Ware

Women who delight in artistic and serviceable chinaware novelties for their tables will be delighted with many of the new designs this season. Among them there is a relish dish made of a series of compartments of glass, cut or plain, as desired; a new style asparagus dish and a dainty menu card that has already been adopted by those who entertain extensively.

Nothing like the relish dish has ever before been used on tables in this country, for, bsides being practical, it simplifies the manner of serving, as radishes, horse-radish, etc., can be passed at once. It is quite a pretty looking dish, too, when the various compartments of which it is formed are filled with the different colored foods. In shape it is round, for about a circular glass cup in the center the other pieces are fitted so that unless a person looks closely it is not apparent that all the dishes are not made in a solid piece. There is another advantage in having them separate, for they can be used individually on the table when only one or two relishes are desired. Of course, a tray to set them on, the same size as the dishes, is necessary, and it can be either of glass or silver.

While especially made asparagus dishes are not entirely new, the new design gotten out this season is quite unlike those that have been previously used. There is a pretty scalloped platter with a flat bottom, and on it, raised several inches by two curved pillars, is a small semi-circular piece with a number of small holes through which the water from the vegetable can drain off the platter beneath, leaving the asparagus dry when served.

Being such a pronounced novelty and so useful, the china menu cards have quickly won a place on the luncheon and dinner tables of the smart set. They seem to fill admirably a want that has long been felt by many hostesses who usually had a variety of choices for the meal and no way of letting their guests know about them in time to make a selection. Now these really decorative pieces of china have all the foods to be served written in courses by the mistress, who uses red, black or blue ink. There can be one or two menu cards on the table the number being regulated entirely by the guests who will be present.

In appearance they look quite like the ones made of paper, but instead of lying flat on the table they have small standards at the back, so that they are kept in an upright position. Most of them are of very fine china, with the portion for the written words left unglazed so that the letters will show up better. They are decorated with fine gold lines or pretty floral or scroll designs, and a few of the more expensive cards have a pastoral scene in one corner daintily done in light colors.

Though not particularly new, the guests' night sets have recently become most popular, especially in country homes. They are decidedly practical, too, and help in the decoration of a sleeping apartment. They consist of a china tray, ornamented the same as the dishes; a match box, with a scratcher on one side; a candlestick of the old-fashioned type, with a round handle, and a good sized pitcher for ice water.

When filled ready for the night the tray is placed beside the bed, within easy reach of the occupant, and is undoubtedly of service to guests, particularly those who have never stayed in the apartment before and would not know where to find either a light or a drink if wanted in the middle of the night.

There are few sets that can be used for a greater number of purposes than the so-called invalid sets. For they consist of just enough pieces to make them convenient for the sick room, for a breakfast served in bed, or for use on a small tea table where a woman wishes to have a meal alone in her room.

Placed on a china tray like the night set, there is a pot with a convenient side handle for coffee, tea or chocolate, large enough to hold at least two cupfuls; a small pitcher, with a metal or china lid, for hot water or milk; a small one for cream, a sugar bowl, egg cup and saucer, a bread and butter plate and a small platter with a cover for keeping foods hot; also an open salt dish with a tiny spoon and a regulation pepper shaker with a china top. These are made in the plain china and in the simplest kind of shapes or on fancy lines with small floral or scroll decorations.

Delicious Hot Weather Dishes

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Hot Weather Dishes.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly publish a few different sauces to be served with puddings; also a few hot weather desserts. Your recipes have always proven so helpful and successful to me. Thanking you in advance.

YOUNG HOUSEWIFE.

It is pleasant to hear that the household column has been of service to you. That is its object. And now for some sauces suitable to the season. Just now strawberry sauce is the thing to conjure appetite with.

Strawberry Sauce.

Rinse an earthen bowl out with hot water and dry it; then put in one tablespoonful of butter and beat to a cream; add a cupful and a half of powdered sugar and the beaten white of an egg and whip together until very light and as white as snow; mash with a silver fork one or two cupfuls of berries, add them to the sauce and serve with the pudding, which may be a cottage, strawberry, rice, tapioca, farina or cornstarch, as you will.

For Cottage Pudding.

An easily made sauce for cottage pudding is simply butter and sugar creamed together, with plenty of blackberry or raspberry jam stirred in to give flavor. Long sections of peaches may also be added to the butter and sugar sauce.

Cocoa Sauce.

This, too, is good with cottage pudding, with steamed apple dumpling or Dutch apple cake. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, then add two tablespoonfuls of flour and the same amount of cocoa mixed together. Before adding have ready one cupful of boiling water and add gradually, stirring and beating until thoroughly mixed and thickened. Just before serving add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

Hot Chocolate Sauce for Ice Cream.

Cook together slowly one cupful of boiling water, one square chocolate grated, one-half cupful sugar and a pinch of salt. When syrupy flavor with vanilla or cinnamon.

Caramel Sauce.

Put one-half cupful sugar over the fire in a clean, smooth saucepan and stir until a light brown color; pour in a half cupfull boiling water, simmer ten minutes, and a tablespoonful of butter, and serve with waffles, fritters or batter pudding.

Cream Sauce.

This is especially good served with bread, tapioca or sago pudding. Put a pint of milk to boil over the fire; break into a bowl two whole eggs; add a heaping tablespoonful of flour, a tablespoonful of cornstarch and a quarter cupful of sugar; beat these ingredients together until thoroughly mixed, then pour the boiling milk over them, stirring constantly for two or three minutes until well blended. Return the mixture to the saucepan and stir until it boils and thickens. Strain through a wire sieve, flavor with vanilla and serve.

Lemon Sauce.

Beat to a cream two level tablespoonfuls butter and one-half cupful powdered sugar; beat one egg very light and add gradually to the butter and sugar mixture, together with the grated rind and juice of one lemon, a few gratings of nutmeg and a half cupful boiling water; beat thoroughly, put into a double boiler and stir constantly until very hot, but do not allow it to boil.

Fruit Syrup Sauce.

Put into a saucepan a cupful of any kind of fruit juice left over from canning; mix a teaspoonful of cornstarch with a half cupful sugar (more if the juice is quite acid) and stir into the hot juice; cook five minutes, strain if not perfectly smooth and serve with batter pudding.

Peach Sauce.

Take the peach juice from canned peaches and add to it an equal quantity of water, enough sugar to make quite sweet, and ten or twelve raisins; cook ten minutes, strain, and just before serving add a few drops extract bitter almond. For hot weather desserts try junket and Devonshire cream.

Junket and Devonshire Cream.

To make the junket, stir into one quart of warm milk a junket tablet or a tablespoonful of rennet; add two tablespoonfuls sugar and one of vanilla; let this stand two or three hours until the curd forms, then set away to chill. Before serving sprinkle with sugar and grate a little nutmeg over the top. Serve with Devonshire cream.

Devonshire Cream.

Strain fresh milk into a shallow large sized pan and let it stand undisturbed for twelve hours. In winter it will require twice that time. Place the pan as gently as possible so as not to disturb the milk more than necessary over a kettle of boiling water and let it come to a scald, but do not boil. The slower the scalding is done the richer and thicker the cream. Put away again for eight or twelve hours in a cool place, then skim off the cream. Needless to say, the cream has to be started the day before it is to be used. This is delicious served with raspberries or strawberries.

Strawberry Cream.

Mash a quart of ripe, sweet strawberries with a cupful powdered sugar, and strain through a hair sieve; soak an ounce and a half of gelatine in a cupful of cold milk, then add a cupful of hot milk to dissolve it; strain, add the berry juice and a pint of whipped cream; pour into a wet mould and set on the ice to cool and stiffen. When ready to serve turn out and surround with a border of ripe berries.

Gooseberry Pie.

Line a deep pie tin with good pastry; "top and tail" as many tart gooseberries as are required to fill the pie tin; allow a cupful of sugar to every two cupfuls of berries and fill the tin, mounding it up in the centre; dust a little flour or cornstarch over the berries and cover with a rich crust, binding the rim with a strip of muslin wet in cold water to prevent the juice from running out; dredge with powdered sugar and chill. This may be served with whipped cream.

Sago Cream.

Put two cupfuls of milk in the double boiler; add a half cupful sago and a pinch of salt and cook until clear; add three tablespoonfuls sugar, the whites of three eggs beaten stiff and cook for three minutes, no longer. When slightly cooled flavor with lemon and fold in lightly one cupful whipped cream. Pour into a mould wet with cold water and set on ice. Serve with a sauce of any fresh fruit crushed and sweetened.

English Pressed Fruit Pudding.

Take a basin, preferably a plain one, spread with cold butter and line it closely with slices of bread from which the crusts have been removed. This lining must be close, so that the filling will not ooze through. Fill with any kind of stewed fruit, berries, currants, gooseberries, plums, etc., sweetened to taste, and then cover over the top with more bread. Put a plate with a heavy weight on top and set away to chill and stiffen. Serve with cream. Another English recipe from the vicarage at Bury is simply known as rice with cream and preserve.

Rice With Cream and Preserves.

Take four tablespoonfuls of best whole rice, wash thoroughly and cook gently in a quart of new milk until quite soft; then add sifted sugar to taste. Arrange in a glass dish, leaving a hollow in the centre. Fill this hollow with preserves or fresh strawberries or raspberries crushed and sweetened. Pour over all some rich cream, then chill.

SOME CHINESE JOKES.

Grand Magazine: If there is any truth in what expert jesters tell us, the world's stock of good, original jokes is ludicrously small—a dozen or two at the very outside. An early investigator into this momentous question, a certain Hierocles, who lived some 1,500 years ago, put the number in his day at exactly twenty-one. The researches of Hierocles probably did not extend so far eastward as China, so there is no impropriety in asking now whether some of the jokes which abound in the literature of the Celestial Empire are entitled to the honor of originality or not. Here are three specimens:

A careless barber, trimming a customer's ears—Chinese barbers pay particular attention to this part of the human anatomy—put his patient to great pain and uneasiness. "Are you doing my left ear now?" asked the victim. "No, sir; I've not quite finished the right ear yet." "Ah! I fancied you were trying to pass through to the left without going around."

A portrait painter without clients was advised by a friend to paint a likeness of himself and his wife and hang it in some conspicuous place, so that would-be customers might judge of his skill. He did so, and his father-in-law the next time he called immediately saw the picture. "Pray," asked the visitor, "what woman have you represented there?" "Why, sir, do you not recognize your own daughter?" "My daughter!" was the indignant answer. "If you intend that to represent my daughter, how dare you paint her sitting thus intimately with a man whom I have never seen before, and who must be an entire stranger to her?" The painter's feelings need not be described.

The gibes at doctors are innumerable. The following is a typical example:

One of the judges in the nether regions despatched an imp to this world of ours to seek out and bring back a good doctor. "When," the imp was instructed, "you come to the house of a doctor before which you descry no complaining ghosts you will know you have found a man of the kind wanted." The messenger set out, but in front of every doctor's door he came to there was an immense throng of angry spirits proclaiming the wrongs they had suffered when in the flesh at the hands of the medicine man. Finally, however, he reached a house where there was but one solitary ghost flitting backward and forward. "This is my man," he said to himself; "he must surely be a clever fellow." When the imp came to make inquries, however, he learned that the practitioner had barely been in practice for a day!

Girls' Simple Lingerie Hat

One of the simplest models for a child's lingerie hat is made from two yards and a half of embroidery edging, four or five inches wide, the same amount of white taffeta ribbon and a small bunch of pink moss rosebuds. A wire frame should first be covered with thin lawn, the piece for the brim being cut to fit. Before sewing the brim lining in place about four rows or narrow Valenciennes edging should be sewed, overlapping, around the outside of one part of the circle, allowing the first row to protrude beyond the material. When the two pieces of lining are sewed together on the wrong side and about the outer edge, they are turned right side out, and the material fitted over the brim. The lace goes on the under side. Next sew a row of Valenciennes, fulled on, about the upper edge of the brim, the under and upper rows just even. Either gather or pleat one yard and a quarter of the embroidery so that it will cover the brim easily.

Cut two pieces of the embroidery sufficiently large to make a crush crown, sew them together at their embroidered edges and pleat above the crown. Tie the ribbon with three full loops at the left front, with the flowers tacked on at the right side.

Fabrics of Flax Favorite for Summer Gowns

By A. T. ASHMORE.

Linen in its many qualities and colorings is at present to be seen made up in such a variety of models that it is apparently the most popular of material for the coming summer. In the city linen has rather taken the place of silk for shirt waist dress, while for out of town it is seen simply fashioned for the tennis court or made up in a costume sufficiently elaborate for a garden fete. In white, linen is always attractive, but in the new fashionable shadings it is very sweet. For mornings there is nothing prettier than a white linen gown, made with a little square of the Irish or Cluny lace and with lace cuffs to the elbow, while the short skirt is trimmed simply with plaits or tucks. Whether there are to be short sleeves or long must depend upon individual taste, as both styles are considered correct for a morning dress.

If the gown is to be worn in town or for traveling a separate yoke or guimpe is excellent. White lace looks cool and becoming against the face, particularly with a dark linen, but it soils readily, so that when used it must be so attached that it can be easily taken out and laundried. Many of the guimpe dresses have, as well as the yoke, large white lace sleeves. The first illustration shows an exceptionally pretty shirt waist gown of dark blue linen. The guimpe is of all-over Valenciennes, fastened in front beneath a full jabot of lace. In the jabot are laid five tiny bow knots of the linen. The sleeves also are caught in at the elbow by loops and bow knots of linen. The material of the waist is slashed open on the shoulders, so as to show the lace, and is caught together by narrow linen straps fastened beneath small rhinestone buttons. The belt is of blue taffeta.

The skirt, which is laid in box plaits over the hip, is full and flares well at the feet.

Embroidered linen robes are still much in demand, but while some forms are literally a mass of hand embroidery, there are others again which are embroidered in the simplest manner. The second form shown is of white linen, this one also worn with a Valenciennes lace guimpe. The pelerine on the bodice is embroidered, while the overskirt is bordered in the same design, the main part or underskirt being quite plain, but full at the hem. The all-over lace guimpe is seen a great deal this year—rather more than that trimmed with bands of lace entire deux and embroidered.

Taffeta batiste is one of the new linens, but seems to have some silk in its weave, so that it shows up well under elaborate embroidery or lace trimmings.

Figure 3 is a form of pale pink taffeta batiste trimmed with wide bands of Valenciennes, entre deux, bordered with heavy Irish point. The waist is so made that it can be worn with or without the long Empire lace coat. A lace jacket of this sort is most serviceable, as it can be worn with a number of gowns which it will render doubly smart. The coat here illustrated is very beautiful, being entirely of lace, Valenciennes bordered with Irish point. Among the long coats of all materials the Empire model is where style predominates. This coat is not lined, so that the good cut of the gown will not be lost. This last gown and the two described above are all models from La Nouvelle Mode.

Artistic roof garden arrangement

Roof Garden Substitute for Vacation

A comfortable den on a roof or porch is the next best thing to spending the summer in the country or the mountains, for the woman who is fortunate enough to have access to either can fit them out as artistically as desired and make them practical for a living room during the day and a bedroom at night, and in this way live out of doors quite as much as if staying at a summer resort. With the wicker or bamboo furniture now procurable, the awnings or slat curtains that can be so adjusted that the room will be entirely enclosed when necessary, the furnishing of such a room is not a difficult matter.

An ideal den or living apartment, made on the roof or by enclosing an upstairs porch, can be arranged with weatherproof chairs, settees, pillows, rugs and damp-proof boxes for protecting the clothing. There should be small tables for serving tea or holding books or a lamp to read by at night, footstools and jardinieres with flowers, window boxes and hanging vines arranged so that they drop from the top. For convenience and to avoid giving the appearance of a sleeping room a swinging seat with an adjustable folding back, suspended from the upright pieces of iron, does service as a bench, filled with pillows to make it comfortable during the day, and when opened out is sufficiently large and comfortably as a cot at night.

Weathered wicker chairs, benches, stools are of course practically proof against dampness and intense sunshine, and for that reason are preferable to bamboo, or any other materials except the Madagascar pieces which withstand the changeable atmospheric conditions equally well. Bright colored pillows of this grass made perfectly should be piled high on settees and chairs to give the appearance of comfort always desired in a summer home. Ordinary plain wooden boxes covered with this grass and placed in an enameled wooden frame like those for shirtwaists, that are so popular now, will also be found decidedly serviceable.

One of the newest and prettiest ways of raising a partition when one is desired, and particularly for use at night, is accomplished by placing bamboo gates that are about four and a half feet high, made on square or round lines, around the enclosure. This is especially effective because the gates that swing in and out can be used as entrances or exits. They are fitted with plain flat squares of boards so that they set securely on the roof or porch, or if there are pillars they are placed between them and are held more firmly in place.

For a roof a large piece of canvas or duck, such as is used in army tents, a tarpaulin or a large rubber robe will be practical. Before it can be used, provided there is no cover over the roof garden, supports of gas pipe must be set up at the corners of the room, with connecting pieces, to form a substantial frame weave. Either canvas or slat curtains can be arranged for the roof, which can be rolled back when not needed. China jardinieres make a room particularly artistic if placed in wicker or wistaria baskets and allowed to hang low from the gas pipe supports. This framework makes it also possible to attach quaint looking shields, armor, etc., to further add to the conventional idea of a den and gives an ornamentation that would otherwise be lacking.

Girl's Summer Outfit Complete For $100

By a careful selection of summer frocks, gloves, hats and accessories a girl can purchase for $100 a most complete and even extensive wardrobe, that will be appropriate for wear in the country, at the seashore or in the mountains. Of course, to do this the expenditure of every cent must be well considered, and if bargains are not sought, extended shopping will be necessary to secure the very lowest prices on materials that are desired. If the young woman with this sum to spend has good taste and a knack of buying becoming things, she will have an attractive wardrobe, with every dress in it new and made in the prevailing styles.

To begin with, there must be a smart tailor suit for street use. It should be of material that is correct for both morning and afternoon, and the skirt should be made in such a fashion that it can be worn with plain morning waists or fancy lingerie ones for afternoon and evening. The cost of this most important of all the gowns, because it can be worn on the greatest number of occasions, should not exceed $25.

Shirt waists, both of plain pique, linen, or in sheer lawn, trimmed with lace, French hand made embroidery, etc., to wear with this costume should be kept within the sum of $12.

A pretty spotted mull or muslin made with a low neck and elbow sleeves with ruffles or tucks or the material is necessary for afternoon wear or for dinner use. It should be in any delicate shade that is becoming to the wearer, a light blue, delicate pink or soft yellow, the color to be determined by the complexion, eyes and hair of the purchaser. Including the making of this frock, the entire cost should not be more than $15, and if possible the sum should be cut down to $15.

One of the prettiest gowns a girl could desire might be made of crepe de Chine for parties or regulation evening wear. It could be fashioned in some effective, but simple style, the Empire, for instance, that would be girlish and at the same time unmistakably a frock for dress occasions. The trimmings might be of the same material, in ribbon to correspond, or in lace, but if the latter is used it should be real, for any imitation on such a costume would cheapen and detract from the effectiveness of the dress. Like the muslin or mull frock it should be bought and made for $15.

A simple white linen shirt waist suit or one in some pretty striped or checked material should be purchased for from $5 to $10 for morning wear, and made in the very plainest style. Such a dress would be particularly appropriate for picnics and tramps through the woods.

If the summer or vacation is to be spent at the seashore or in any spot where there is water, a bathing suit must be purchased, and a very pretty one in imitation or mercerized silk made in the most approved style can be secured for from $6 upward.

As to hats, two are absolutely necessary, and three would make the wardrobe much more complete, for a frequent change in the headdress gives an entirely different appearance to the dresses constantly used. A plain sailor, if becoming, would be a good choice for morning wear, in white, black or blue straw, and a desirable one could be bought for $3. Then a lingerie hat, either small or large, for afternoon or street use should be included at the sum of $5 or $6. One for dress, that would be in harmony with any one of the better gowns could be secured for $8.

At least two pairs of gloves should be included in the outfit, a white or natural colored chamois pair for hard wear, and a long pair in either black or white. Four dollars should cover the expense of both pairs.

Three pairs of shoes are absolutely necessary, white canvas ones that can be bought for from $1.50 to $3, a pair of fine kid or patent leather oxford ties for dress, at $3, and a pair of heavy boots with thick soles, either button or lace, at a cost of from $3 to $4.

With the choice of these things the wardrobe should be satisfactorily complete and cost but $100.

PENALTY FOR LAW-BREAKING TRUSTS

By D. A. PETRE.

Agitation against trusts has been one of the salient planks in the platforms of the Democratic party, more particularly advertised to the world during the great meeting of the National Anti-Trust league's gathering in Chicago on the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday, in 1900. No one present at the several meetings on that occasion could gainsay the fact that the speakers expressed not only their own views, but those which are now before the public, and forcing the opposite party to take warning, that the voices of the minority—yet the majority for people's rule—must eventually win the battle of equal justice.

Subsequent events have proved the force of these contentions, when the present administration is conducting a warfare against illegitimate combinations in restraint of free competition. Where did it get the impetus except through the common people? We will give all credit to the present administration for what they are trying to accomplish, as they are supposed to represent the popular voice.

There is a war now being waged against the "trusts," many of which have been flagrantly convicted of defeating the ends of public betterment. Under the law they are ordinarily fined in a sum of money.

How does a fine punish the Standard Oil company or the various components of the meat trust, the railroad and coal trusts. They simply laugh back in the quietude of their sanctuaries, and say to themselves, "we don't pay the fine; the common people pay it, as all we have to do is to advance the price of our products a few cents and we are then ahead of the game."

The remedy as a punishment rests in a law which would not only fine, but put the convicted in jail. It is easy to have the public pay the fine, but these wilful spoilers of the people would hesitate long before they would wear the stripes. Distinction between small thefts and plunder is fundamentally wrong, and tends to create an aristocratic thought in the minds of too many, not necessarily those from Europe. In Canada, Great Britain, France, Germany and many of the smaller states in Europe, and the British colonies in Australia and New Zealand, such toleration of big frauds is unheard of. Not that they are necessarily different people from ourselves, but because they know that swift punishment is sure to follow, and dread the jail more than they do paying a fine. If money is going to continue to rule justice in this country, it is up to the people to not only study its effects on themselves, but to exercise their rights at the polls, and try every man running for judge, governor, and other high offices.

Various Ways That Eggs Can be Cooked

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Eggs in Various Ways.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you please give me a few recipes how to use eggs in various ways? I live in the country, and have more eggs than I know how to use, and would like them to replace meat. Would also be grateful for a recipe how to bake rusk. MRS. J. S. W.

I think you are very fortunate in having so many eggs at your disposal, and, as you suggest, they make an excellent substitute for meat, especially in summer. Here are a number of ways of preparing them:

Spanish Omelet.

Chop fine one quarter pound of streaky bacon, a good sized onion and half a green pepper, freed from seeds. Place in a small frying pan over the fire, and toss and stir until the onion begins to take on color. Add one cupful stewed tomatoes and cook until the mixture is quite thick. Stand one side while the omelet is preparing. Beat four eggs enough to mix well, then add a tablespoonful of warm water. Have the omelet pan hot, put in a full teaspoonful of butter and stir around so as to grease sides as well as the bottom of the pan. Turn in the omelet, then tilt and cook, lifting the cooked egg with a fork from the center and allowing the uncooked to run under. As soon as the eggs are set, without being hard, spread with the bacon and onion filling, slip a knife under the portion of omelet nearest the handle of the pan and carefully fold over and roll until it reaches the opposite side of the pan. Turn out on a hot platter, pouring the remainder of the filling around the omelet. Three or four mushrooms are frequently chopped and added to the bacon after it has begun to cook, and olive oil is used in place of butter.

Eggs Fried in Olive Oil.

There is no comparison between eggs toughened and blackened, as they too often are, when cooked in butter or lard and the delicate wholesomeness of eggs fried in pure olive oil. Put into the frying pan two tablespoonfuls sweet oil. As soon as hot and smoking, break into it three fresh eggs, giving each plenty of room to turn. With a table knife fold the right side of the egg over the yolk and cook a moment. Turn with a cake turner, and cook a moment longer on the other side; then slip on to a hot plate. If cooked longer they will be overdone.

Eggs and Mushrooms.

Allow a quarter pound of mushrooms to ten eggs. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in the omelet pan, or preferably use olive oil. Have ready the mushrooms peeled and trimmed. Put in the hot oil, together with a teaspoonful of salt, a sprinkling of pepper and a few drops of lemon juice. Cover the pan and let the mushrooms simmer gently eight minutes over a gentle heat. Add three tablespoonfuls of cream, cook a moment longer, then dish in the center of a hot platter, surrounding with the eggs poached so as to keep their form. Pour the liquid over and around them and garnish with cress or parsley.

Eggs Baked in Tomato Sauce.

Strain one pint of tomatoes, season with salt, pepper and a little onion juice and cook until hot and smooth. Pour on to a buttered baking dish. Carefully break six eggs into the sauce and bake in the oven until the eggs are set.

Baked Eggs.

Put two tablespoonfus each butter and flour in a saucepan and when well blended stir in two cups hot milk. Stir until smooth and thickened, then season with a level teaspoonful salt and a salt spoonful of pepper. Cover the bottom of a baking dish with one-half this sauce and then break into it six or eight raw eggs. Cover with the remaining half of the sauce. Dust thickly with grated cheese, set in a shallow pan of hot water and then put in the oven to bake ten or twelve minutes.

Eggs a la Caracas.

Put a tablespoonful oil or butter in a frying pan and when hot add a quarter pound finely shaved dried beef and a tablespoonful grated cheese. Toss lightly until the beef is slightly frizzled, then add one cupful stewed tomatoes, a few drops onion juice, salt and pepper to season and four eggs beaten light without separating. Stir and cook gently until of a creamy consistency and serve.

French Omelette.

Beat four eggs slightly, just enough so that you can lift them up by the spoonful. Add four tablespoonfuls of cream, a teaspoonful cold butter, a scant teaspoonsful salt, and paprika or white pepper to season. Put a heaping teaspoonful butter in a hot omelette pan and when hissing hot turn in the egg mixture. Then with a fork pick up the cooked egg from the centre, letting the uncooked run under. Continue in this way until the whole is of a soft creamy consistency. Place over a hotter portion of the fire to set and brown, then fold and turn on to a heated platter. Sprinkle with fine minced parsley.

Japanese Eggs.

Spread a layer of hot boiled rice on a buttered platter, then season well with melted butter, lemon juice and fine minced parsley. Poach half a dozen eggs so that they are perfectly shaped, arrange on the rice and sprinkle with parsley.

Scrambled Eggs with Green Peppers.

Break four eggs in a bowl and add to them four tablespoonfuls cold water, salt and pepper to season and two tablespoonfuls sweet peppers cut in thin ribbons. Put a tablespoonful of olive oil or butter in the frying pan, and when hot turn in the egg and pepper mixture. Stir lightly with a fork until creamy, then serve on slices of delicately browned toast dipped in hot salted water or on a hot dish without the toast.

Home Made Rusk.

If the rusks are required for supper set the sponge in the morning, mix at noon and mould into biscuit about four o'clock. Dissolve one-half compressed yeast cake in a half cup tepid water, add to one pint of milk, then stir in flour to make a thin batter. Beat thoroughly, then cover with a clean cloth and set out of a draught to rise. As soon as the sponge is light add to it two beaten eggs, half a cup softened butter, three-quarters cup sugar and enough flour to make a very stiff batter, but not quite stiff enough to knead. Cover again and let rise until double its bulk. Then with floured hands form the dough into biscuit and place upon tins. Let them rise until light and bake in a moderately hot oven. Glaze the rusks by brushing over with powdered sugar, dissolved in milk.

SOME CUNNING USES OF RIBBONS

Clever Little Touches and Things That Are Different—Many Revivals of Old-timey Fashions—The Individual the Keynote—Summer Fans Are Larger—The Spanish Mantilla Reasserts Itself—Filmy, Misty Malinette Ruches and Bons—Some Clever Trimming Effects.

Fashions, after all, are made by, rather than for, the fastidious in dress. It is just the desire to be dressed according to one's own individuality that brings to light those charming little touches which make for so much in the success of a gown, a hat, a little trimming effect; lifts it out of the ordinary, and oftentimes starts a new fashion arolling.

Some of us are born with a talent for dress; others of us achieve it, and it is only the small minority that have it thrust upon them—by a very clever dressmaker.

To be gowned in the very latest expression of the mode, to accord in all things with the reigning fashion—and yet to be dressed differently from every other woman in her set—that is the task that the average society woman sets her dressmaker, be she a Yankee or a Parisienne. Paradoxical enough, it seems, and yet it is truth.

The woman of average purse and slender means resigns herself as contentedly as may be to see duplications of most of her possessions upon the backs of her neighbors or fellow town dwellers unless she be gifted with the double talent, one for designing her own clothes, and another for making them after that design.

Once upon a time—and it is not so very long ago—the women upon this side of the ocean were content—yea, and even anxious—to dress in what amounted almost to a uniform. Did Mrs. A. walk up the avenue on Sunday after church with a Swiss pointed belt as a part of her costume, and all the other women of that set were anxious until they, too, could parade and display a Swiss belt. Mrs. B.'s feather boa and Miss C.'s sailor hat must likewise be duplicated. Let any woman of taste or prominence wear anything that savored of novelty, and at once it was proclaimed the latest fashion, and blindly followed according.

Nowadays, however, quite the opposite reigns. Individuality and exclusiveness are what is demanded in even the most modest costumes. Woe be to the dressmaker that turns out a duplicate of even the least expensive frock or blouse in her stock for any two customers within a hundred miles of each other; each demands something designed especially and exclusively for her, and expects that her limitations, as well as her good points, be kept in clear view by the designer.

Lucky the woman who can put the stamp of her own individuality upon her clothes. She it is whom the dressmakers love to work for, and for whom they will take infinite pains without grumbling, or "taking it out in the bill," as one clever apprentice used to say after a particularly trying seance with a difficult customer.

The rise of the ready-made costume has given an impetus to the establishment of just the same individuality in dress, contradictory though the statement may seem at first glance. One can find in the shops today made-up gowns, cut by first-class tailors, put together with skilled workmanship, and price well under the fifty-dollar mark, too.

A delightful example of the possibilities of developing some individuality in one of those ready-made costumes appeared the other day. The woman—and she was not so very young, either—just what the French term "past her first youth"—found a tailor-made costume of a fine French henrietta in one of those new amber-brown shades that are so wonderfully becoming to the brown-eyed, nut-brown maid. The coat was of excellent cut, daintily lined, and the skirt displayed equally correct lines. It was spoiled for the fastidious, however, by the presence of large brass bullet buttons, a cheap gulmp and still cheaper lingerie collar and cuffs. Nevertheless, the woman bought it, recognizing its best points at a glance. The fronts, originally double breasted, were cut away to roll back in revers, and a double-breasted waistcoat of white whipcord was inserted. The bullet buttons disappeared, as also did the cheap gulmp. In their place were buttons covered with a soft brown ooze calf, with an Indian design in fine beads decorating the center. The same material make collar and cuffs, and a fine braid in one of the radium weaves applied to the seams and in an intricate pattern above the hem of the skirt altered its appearance completely. The sleeves were cut off just at the bend of the elbow, the skirt provided with a little haircloth, thin and flexible, in the hem, and, presto! the gown looked as though at least a check for twice its cost had been written in payment. And yet the woman had only the assistance of an inexpensive seamstress to accomplish the slight alterations that led to such happy results.

Linen envelopes to fit the purse are the latest fad at the fancy-work shops. You take the purse or bag there, the clever designer at once takes the measurements and cuts the pieces to fit. They are then stamped with whatever design the owner chooses and worked in fine linen threads, white or colored, just as caprice dictates. For use with the white linen and lingerie frocks of the summertime these covers for bags and portemonnaies are quite the correct thing, and so far the ready-made and machine-wrought article in this one item has yet to appear upon the department-store counters. The little envelope idea has much to commend it for summer use. For one thing, it not only preserves the smart bag or pocketbook from soil in hands that may be went to be too warm, but it also fits into the present scheme of things that demands that all the items of the toilette shall match together.

Parasols to match each and every gown of the summer wardrobe is another dictum of fashion, and those are preferably in linen, wrought in colors to correspond with the gown. The daintiest designs are displayed in the shops, already made up, but at prices that make them prohibitive to the woman of moderate means. However, we all of us have an old parasol or two the handle of which is in good style, and the fancy-work shop or fancy-work departments of the great stores will provide the stamped material, which, when finished, may be mounted upon one's own frame for a trifle or so.

Incidentally, some of the new parasol handles are so nearly being Directoire canes in length that they are likely to prove somewhat awkward for general use. A certain length to the stick is wont to make a good impression; but here too much of it is likely to spoil the pretty effect.

Another fancy-work fad is the embroidering of laces. Preferably for this work the finer net-top laces are used, and the machine-made design is gone over in rather coarse silk floss. A skilful blending of colors in this work will afford all of the effect of a handsome hand-made embroidery for trimming purposes, since after the design is worked over the net can be cut away. One charming little linen gown in blue butchers' linen is made highly effective after this wise: The lace shows a floral design which is worked over in dull blue and old Pompeiian reds. Then it is tacked flat to the goods, the raised parts carefully appliqued, and then the net is cut away. The result is all that could be desired, and serves to bring what would otherwise be rather a plain little frock right into the realm of the expensive hand-made productions.

The reverse of the medal, though, may be shown here, and a smile ensue. At a recent musical—they take place periodically at one of the smart hotels of New York, are followed by a "breakfast" and permission to subscribe for the series places one indisputably among the socially elect—a most amusing contretemps declared itself. The soloist of the occasion, an American grand opera prima donna with aspirations to social recognition, appeared on the platform gowned in a Parisian creation of white satin, with a broad and well-defined Paisley stripe. The gown was princess in effect, with a guimpe of hand-painted mousseline de soie—white, with roses and humming birds—and the sleeves of the material of the guimpe, rather than that of the gown. The singer's devotion to the Parisian couturier is well known, and a ripple of amusement went through the audience when it was noticed that there were no less than five replicas of the same gown on the other side of the stage. Each one showed some trifling little difference in detail, such as one had golden brown velvet bows dotting the sleeves and strapping the skirt; another had turquoise blue and another peacock green. But they all displayed the same identical cut, the same painted roses and humming birds upon the musseline, and the very same unmistakable Paisley stripe. And doubtless each and every purchaser had been assured in Paris that she was the only American woman to whom the model had been, or would be, sold. So much for the professional faith of the dekle Frenchman.

The frailty of tulle and malines has kept many an admirer from indulging in trimmings—either for chapeau or the indispensable tour de cou—of this delightfully airy, fairy fabric. Now, however, there is an absolutely waterproof malline woven with a good body, which may be indulged in without in the least incurring the charge of extravagance. This does not mat when exposed to dampness, and even after a good summer shower may be shaken out as fresh and fine as originally. All this is of special interest, since one must use this dainty material on at least one chapeau this summer, and the very smartest Fifth avenue modistes use ruching of brown malinette on the back of bandeau of every hat sent out. Note the color—brown—to match the hair—no matter if the hat itself be a simple black and white pique sailor.

In spite of the measure of success that has attended the Empire gown, the little Empire fan has receded into the background. The favored fan of the summertime is of goodly proportions, although the fire screen that some enthusiasts attempted to push into the region of things modish is by no means suggested in the new arrivals.

Flower, spangles and little miniature panels are among the more charming designs, and real laces are in the highest vogue for borders. The sticks are of pearl, either plainly polished or carved; tortoise shells, clouded amber, bone or carved sandalwood that emits a haunting perfume of the Orient.

The Face Veil and the Wind Veil.

During the warm weather the fashion of wearing the face veil loosely, the lower border allowed to hang free below the face, instead of draped closely under the chin, is one that is bound to prove both becoming and comfortable. Where the veil is intended to hang free it were well to select some well-defined pattern, since any of the small and plain meshes rather lose point when so worn. The wind veil of today is quite different from that of the past few seasons. The later ones are in the finest of grenadines, with silk-woven figures and velvet dots, quite after the fashion of that grenadine dress goods that was so much in fashionable esteem some few years ago. A plain ribbon border all around serves to weight the sheer stuff, and aids muchly in its draping. The correct fashion of wear calls for the veil draped all around the hat, with sufficient fulness to the folds to hang loosely all around, and so pinned that it may be thrown back off the face when desired without in the least interfering with the pretty set at the sides and back.

Shoe string Philosophy.

Philanthropy as a Buying Basis and Some Remarks on Trading Principles.

They were sitting around the lunch-counter, that delightfully uncomfortable place that suggests the haunts of Bohemia to the unitiated, at one of the quieter of smart restaurants in New York. Here one perches upon a high stool up against the counter, with its little shelf for one's purse and packages—would that we might bestow our perplexities there likewise, and forget to claim them afterwards—and a brass railing just above the floor to rest one's feet on.

The Girl in the Lingerie Blouse ordered another strawberry tart, and announced that this would positively be the last she could afford for oh!—and here she heaved a sigh—ever so long. She in the Leghorn hat, wreathed in hydrangeas, sympathetically inquired who had been getting married and why did she give such an expensive present. Surely, she could have chosen something that would look quite as big for a lesser price, and the bride would never know the difference.

"Oh, you do not understand at all. It is not a wedding, and I have not been giving presents. It is just those awful pumps!"

"Pumps?" queried the girl with blonde hair. "Whatever in the world have pumps to do with strawberry tarts, and why do you sigh as though really and truly a hydraulic pump were necessary to haul it up from the heels of your shoes?"

"'Tis pumps, and I mean it," responded the Lingerie Blouse. "Those wretched pumps, that look so deceitfully inviting in the shop window, and that feel so delightfully comfortable when the man fits them on, and you prance for a few steps up and down that strip of carpet—they are the cause of all my woe."

"You see, it is this way. Silk stockings I simply adore, and with a low-cut pump such as every self-respecting soul—no, that is not meant for a pun—is ordering in quantity this year, you really cannot wear anything but a sheer silk stocking. I tried gauze lisle for awhile, but somehow they looked like economy—they did not look in the least little bit smart; so, glad of the excuse, I changed back to silk."

"But where does that long sigh and heartbroken look come in in this tale of the pumps?" questioned the blonde, "and why don't you come to the point, if point there be?"

"Well, give me half a chance, and you shall hear. Whether it is that I have heels smaller than the ordinary, or the standard, or whatever it is that they make the heel part of shoes to fit, I don't know. But what I do know is that just as sure as I put on a new silk stocking in the morning, I take it off in the evening with the heel part absolutely missing. Just what has become of the piece of stocking that was there before the hole arrived to take its place I cannot even venture a guess; but the horrible fear always seizes me that I have been going around slip-slopping, with a bare heel showing itself above the back of my shoe at every step. To darn a hole of that size would mean a week's work and a visit to the oculist after. One cannot put in a patch right there, and there is nothing to patch with, and so it simply comes to this, that I wear out a dollar and a half pair of stockings pretty nearly every day. Surely, that's enough to sigh for, isn't it?" she asked, looking for sympathy.

"If that's the way you're running your spending money, I can see a positive dearth of strawberry tarts and ice-cream sodas, and a regular famine in matinee tickets, the Hydrangea-laden Hat ventured to remark. "But what are you going to do about it?"

"Why don't you give up the pumps?" sensibly asked the Blonde.

"Give up wearing pumps," ejaculated the Lingerie Blouse. "Why, I would be so far out of the fashion that I might just as well give up all my pretty frocks and take to wearing sackcloth and ashes. Why don't you suggest something feasible, and at the same time pleasant, if possible?"

"Well, it seems to have narrowed down to a choice between purse and pumps, and, since they are your purse and your pumps, the choice is altogether yours, I should imagine. Were it mine I should unhesitatingly take the purse, as, truth to tell, I have already done. In the conflict between the pump and the hosiery department it seemed I was getting the worst of it, and so I have renounced the fascinations of the low-cut shoe and 'verted back to the old standby, the oxford."

"But they are not half so smart or good looking," objected the pump devotee.

"Oh, but you can lace them with smart ribbons instead of the usual tape laces," put in the Blonde, "and if you fix a cunning little bow—quite a stiff, flat one at the lower row of eyelets, and quite a broad and splashing one at the top—I think the effect is far more stunning than the slipper appearance that the pump bestows."

"But I can't buy ribbons for my shoes," she pouted. "You know how awfully charitable auntie is, and she buys all of her shoelacings from an old man that stands on the street corner, and she has made me promise to do so, too. Auntie says that the old man ought to be encouraged, for he is always so polite and obliging; takes any amount of pains to give you just the right shade of tan silk laces to match your shoes, and just the right width for the eyelets; and she says, too, that when she goes into a store the notion counter is so crowded and the girls so rushed that half the time she does not get just exactly what she should. If one goes into a shoe shop and asks merely for laces the attendant is apt to look displeased at making out a check for only a quarter where he expected one for $5, at least. And so, since nobody seems to want to sell her shoe laces under a roof, she buys hers all out of doors from the old man on the street."

"Why, what a funny idea," chirped she of the hydrangea-laden leghorn. "I never thought of that before."

"Well," said she of the pumps, "there is one thing that simply charms me every time. He takes such pains and looks so pleasant over it that he makes you feel glad, too. And after he has wrapped up the little package—and, girls, he always uses silver tissue paper, so that no one would imagine that it was only shoe laces, after all—he always smiles and lifts his hat, and then says: 'God bless you, Missie, and send you a handsome husband.'"

"And the prayers of the righteous prevaileth much," quoted the Blonde, in conclusion.

THE MODISH FAN.

Fans for this season have assumed quite goodly proportions, and are, therefore, far more effective weapons in playing the game of social coquetry than are the tiny specimens heretofore in vogue. In spite of the succes d'estime that has attended the Empire gown, the Empire fan is not by any means prominent, and preference is given to those sizes that admit of a generous display of decoration. The dainty example in the picture shows a combination that is vastly modish. The mount is in a fine silk bolting cloth, painted with a long spray of Japanese iris, the flowers in lavender, yellow and purple, and the long, reed-like leaves displaying the soft, natural tints of green. The duchess lace border makes for a dainty relief, and the mounting sticks of lustrous mother of pearl are highly polished. Quite a fad it is to have one's monogram in gold or jewels on the outer stick of even a comparatively inexpensive fan, and the ring through which the chain or ribbon is run is likewise of gold, and jeweled, also, if circumstances permit. Recently, some London brides have received jeweled fan rings and monograms among their wedding presents, the latter being always that of the maiden rather than of the married name.

Even a Shower Does Not Affect It.

The charms of tulle—with all its witching becomingness to each and every woman—have usually had to be laid aside in the humid weather of midsummer. Nowadays, however, the damp and fogs of the seashore, the heavy dews of mountain and meadowland, are powerless to affect the latest production in this filmy, misty fabric. The new finish is absolutely waterproof; in fact, it may be thoroughly wet and shaken dry without in the least affecting its pretty freshness.

The revival of the poke bonnet is something that has been hanging fire for more than one season, but at last it seems sure of a fashionable acceptance and following. A quaint, old-timey effect is given in the steep bandeau that tilts the front, this trimmed with malinette, dotted with little moss rosebuds, quite after the way of our grandmother bonnets. The straw is a milk-white crin, the rose dotted malinette fashioned into a thick ruche around the crown, and two large white ostrich plumes are perched nid-nodding at one side. Dainty strings are tied quaintly under the chin.

The craze for malinette neck ruches is one that gains ground daily. Those short neckpieces that appeared at the early part of the season are already superseded by the longer boas. Their construction is easy enough, when one is accustomed to hand sewing. The malinette is simply taken in the broad fold, doubled and made into thick double box pleating, caught on the upper edge only, and then tacked in cascade fashion to the foundation of white satin ribbon that supports the filmy mass. Little moss rosebuds are tucked in at intervals through the maline, matching those on the chapeau, and its whole effect is as dainty and pretty as well may be imagined.

The Week in Stageland.

bearing the one word "Success" came to Charles Frohman's offices after the opening in Melbourne in Richard Harding Davis' farce, "The Dictator."

William Gillette's famous houseboat, the Aunt Polly, is now in commission. Mr. Gillette will cruise around until it is time for him to begin his season in his new comedy "Clarice."

Hattie Williams, who is to be starred next season in "The Little Cherub," is now in London. The piece is now having a great run at the Princes of Wales' theater. It is by the authors of "The Girl from Kays," in which Miss Williams achieved remarkable success.

"The Little Cherub" will be produced at the Criterion theater, New York, early in August.

Fay Davis, whose marriage to Gerald Lawrence was announced last week, has gone abroad on her honeymoon. Charles Frohman will present her next season in a dramatiaztion of "The House of Mirth," which is being made by Clyde Fitch and Edith Wharton, author of the novel.

Sam Bernard is to be seen next season in a new musical play by Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander. He will appear in a part similar to Hoggenheimer in which he made his greatest hit.

The two most talked about attractions in London and those enjoying the greatest popularity are Edna May at the Vaudeville and Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss at the Aldwyck. Charles Frohman produced new plays for these favorites and they were immediate successes. Miss May has repeated her London triumph in "The Belle of Mayfair," which is swelling the record of "The Catch of The Season" at the popular Strand theater. Mr. Hicks' new piece, "The Beauty of Bath," has proven to be one of his best. He and Miss Terriss are popular idols in London and in the new play they are said to have their best roles.

Harry Bulger, the rapid-fire comedian, who is the feature of the new Bangs-Fryan-Klein musical comedy, "The Man From New York," now at Tremont theater, Boston, tells the following story at the expense of a New York theatrical manager to whom he was under contract not so many seasons ago:

"We were engaged one morning testing voices for a summer production, the manager, musical director and myself. There was a rather long line and all looking for positions in the chorus, and nearly every voice was below the standard, which was very disappointing, and the manager got to be very irritable as we got to the last of the applicants, who was a very melancholy looking man. As he came to the piano he attempted to make some remark but was prompt cut short by the manager, who said:

"You will omit all preliminary remarks and get down to business! Try him," he added, turning to the director.

The latter began the accompaniment to a popular song, which, with some hesitancy, the applicant for a job, attempted with what voice he had. His effort was about as bad as it could have been.

"Look here!" cut in the manager, after the singer had cleared his throat for the second verse, "that will do! You actually have the nerve to ask me for a job?"

"Certainly," replied the sad one in an injured tone.

"Why, man, you can't sing a little bit!"

"I don't claim to be able to sing," calmly responded the man, "and I don't want to sing. I am a stage carpenter. I was only singing to please you people—you seemed so set on it."

Charles "Parson" Davis, who has been connected with the sporting fraternity and also interested in a number of Southern theaters, is to go into vaudeville with a new monologue of stories pertaining to his interesting career. Last winter Davies was forced to retire owing to failing eyesight, but a long stay at the Arkansas Hot Springs has almost entirely restored his failing sight and he will try vaudeville as a means of making a livelihood.

America will lose the buxom and jolly Marie Dressler for at least a year. She sailed this week for London to take a prominent role in a new musical comedy to be brought out soon by George Edwards. As Manager Joe Weber claims to have a contract for Miss Dressler's exclusive work in this country that runs for another year, it is likely she will stay abroad during that time before making any new arrangements for her return to America.

Blanche Ring is to replace Lulu Glaser in "Miss Dolly Dollars" next season. It develops in connection with this deal that Miss Ring has been under contract to the Shuberts for some time, but when she found an opportunity to better her relative position in stageland the managers cheerfully canceled her contract and a rival concern was permitted to book her.

David Warfield ended a record-breaking run for a straight dramatic production in New York when he brought his second season to a close at the Bijou theater. In all Mr. Warfield has played "The Music Master" exactly 536 times in New York City, the only place where the play has been seen. The popular actor sails soon for a long vacation in Europe. His first objective point is Stratford-on-Avon, where he will put in several weeks studying Shakespeare's plays, with a possible view of making a classical revival when he decides to lay aside his present success. Warfield will resume his season in New York next October, and after a considerable stay there will go on tour for a period that will carry his attraction to Boston, Philadelphia and possibly Chicago for the remainder of next year.

Neva Aymar, long connected with the Rogers Brothers' show, is to go into vaudeville soon with one of Ned Wayburn's spectacular acts called "The Rain Dears." It will be a mixture of music and spectacular effects.

Edward Abeles is a prospective star next season under the direction of Thompson and Dundy, the hippodrome magnates, who are figuring upon entering the dramatic fold. Abeles's new piece is a dramatic version of "Brewster's Millions," which was arranged for his use.

Miss Sara MacDonald the young actress, who is to star in her own melodrama, "Adrift in New York," will be handled by Cincinnati people. The P. Menger Amusement company has been organized to finance the tour, which will be under the direction of the veteran C. E. Broadwell, of Cincinnati. Miss MacDonald begins her season early in August at Blaney's theater, in Baltimore, and will play over the Stair and Havlin circuit.

Among the important engagements announced by Henry W. Savage is that of Susie Forester, who will support Raymond Hitchcock next season in "The Galloper," in the role of Sybil Schwartz, the Newark widow.

THE METROPOLITAN

Mahara's Minstrels Will Appear Saturday and Sunday.

Mahara's original Minstrel Carnival will open an engagement of two nights and matinee at the Metropolitan this evening. The company will give a matinee tomorrow afternoon.

The company has been on the road many seasons and its entertainment is said to compare favorably with any in the country given exclusively by colored people. An enthusiastic critic at Topeka, Kan., compared the organization to that of Williams & Walker, the famous colored comedians. Certain it is that the Mahara minstrel show is different from most others.

There is the favorite minstrel first part with such comedians as Tim Owsley, Morgan Price, Elmer Warner, George Taylor, James Marshall and John Singleton on the ends. Numbers are contributed by Daisy Smith, W. Henry Smythe, Bessie La Belle, and the Maharajah Harmony Four.

Then there is the olio, which starts off with an act by James and Leona Marshall, called "Crazy for the Stage." Billy Young and Tim Owsley each take a whack at the audience, and Wilson, Taylor and Bingley do comedy acrobatic turns. The olio and the performance concludes with a screamingly funny extravaganza called "The Belles and Beaux in Ragtime Opera."

The management of Mahara's Minstrels has not overlooked a single opportunity, it is said, to present a clean and wholesome entertainment, restraining all of the endeared features of minstrelsy and interpolating all the new welcomed ideas. The engagement in Duluth is limited to the performances thus evening, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night.

AT THE BIJOU

High-Class Vaudeville Will be the Bill During the Coming Week.

The vaudeville artists who are to appear at the Bijou next week are heralded as the best seen for some time. John Dunn and Wilhelma Francis and company head the bill and will present the clever one-act comedy entitled "The Hold-Up," which offers some clever dramatic situations and thrilling scenes.

The Campbells will offer an excellent comedy musical act playing upon a number of novelty and standard musical instruments interspersed with singing, dancing and comedy stunts.

Claud Austin, comedy juggler and plate spinner, will introduce something new in the juggling line which is original by himself.

A pleasing feature will be seen in Swor and Westbrook, who give a refined skit of singing, dancing and comedy numbers, which are said to be very good.

A special attraction will be Vardaman, known as the auburn-haired beauty, who is a high-class vocalist, and displays some elaborate wardrobe.

Morey Long will render the new song hit entitled "The Bell of the Ball," illustrated with beautiful colored views.

The moving pictures will be unusually interesting, showing "The Miniature Theater," in which a monkey's escape from the cage causes consternation, and also the big comedy film "What Will Happen When Madam Wears the Trousers."

Matinees are given daily at 2:45, and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Regular performance Sunday, matinee and night.

The engagement of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe at the Academy of Music will last for two weeks longer. This week they played "Much Ado About Nothing." Next week they present "Taming of the Shrew" and "The Merchant of Venice," while the concluding week will be devoted to "Twelfth Night" and "Hamlet."

With the close of the season the players are making arrangements for their vacations. Ethel Barrymore has taken a house in Maine. On the conclusion of her long run in "Peter Pan" at the Empire theater, Maud Adams will go to her country place in the mountains.

John Drew has gone abroad. William Gillette is also abroad, but will return shortly for the annual cruise in his houseboat.

E. H. Sothern has a country place in Jersey, and Miss Marlowe one in the Catskills. However, they may go abroad.

Edna May has made a big success in "The Belle of Mayfair" in London. Mr. Crane is in London, but will later join Mrs. Crane in Germany.

Sam Bernard is at Mt. Clemens. Later he will go to the Adirondacks with his family. Francis Wilson has completed a new home in the mountains. Otis Skinner has gone to Bryn Mawr, Pa., where he has a country estate. Joseph Wheelock, Jr., having recovered from an operation, will go West. William Collier and his company will play in Australia, and so it goes.

It is gratifying to know that the sudden illness of Ada Rehan, which interrupted her trip to Europe, is not serious. She soon will be well again, and will go abroad.

"The Governor's Son," George M. Cohan's first show, opened on the Aerial Roof Garden, atop the New Amsterdam theater, on Monday, June 4, where it is booked for a summer run.

The Shuberts will bring over next season Miss Lena Ashwell, one of the most highly thought of actresses on the other side. She has been leading lady with Sir Charles Wyndham, and has played many important roles.

Fuji-Ko, the Japanese actress, will present in London this season a one-act dream play, "The Love of a Geisha," in which is embodied the idea of the doctrine of Nirvana, reduced to popular form. She may come to this country later.

The production of "The Man From Now," at the Tremont theater, in Boston, on Memorial day, was received with enthusiasm and acclaim. This composition is the joint effort of John Kendrick Bangs and Vincent P. Bryan, and is the medium of placing Harry Bulger before the public as a star. "The Man From Now" is a bright entertainment of mirth and music, relating the adventures of a delicious tramp who is projected 1,000 years hence and of the people of 2995, whose methods of living and pleasures are told in a humorous and whimsical story. Mr. Savage has surrounded Harry Bulger in this production with a corps of clever comedians assisted by a bright, clever and beautiful chorus, who are giving Boston one of the best summer shows that it has ever seen. In the role of Steve Waffles, a tramp, Harry Bulger was cordially welcomed and made a distinctive hit, and his eccentric comedy was never more heartily appreciated at any time or place. With his three songs, "There Isn't Anything That Can't Be Cured," "College Chums" and "The Irresistible Tune," he talked, danced and sang himself into favor. Helen Hale repeated her tremendous success made in "Woodland."

The warm welcome accorded to Lina Abarfanell by Chicago music lovers besieaks as prosperous a career on the English lyric stage for this clever little artist as that achieved by her in the principal opera houses of Holland, Germany and Austria. As Ilsa the Tyrolian princess in the new romantic comic opera "The Student King" by DeKoven, Ranken and Stange, Miss Abarfanell shines to exceptional advantage and is a decided acquisition to the American comic opera field and will no doubt create a sensation when this opera goes on a tour of the principal cities next season. Versatile and accomplished in every way, a charming singer, a clever actress and a comedienne of marked personality in method, Miss Abarfanell's advent in "The Student King," marks the coming of a prima donna of unusual merit.

Joseph Cawthorn and his wife will remain at their home at Asbury Park until it is time to sail for London with Sousa's opera, "The Free Lance."

Adele Ritchie has set a new fashion which is hardly likely to become popular. She presented her mare Gloria, which she uses in her play, "The Social Whirl," a $3,500 diamond bracelet when she was 5 years old. When the mare came on the stage with her new ornament she created a sensation and seemed to enjoy it.

Grand opera by negroes is something unique. The Theodore Drury Grand Opera company have made a really creditable performance last week at the Fourteenth Street theater. "Aida" was given for the "premiere." Estelle Clough was the prima donna, while James H. Worsham essayed Radames. On Tuesday night "Carmen" was given, with Miss Mary Terrell in the title role and Franklin Brown as Don Jose. These two bills alternated during the week.

Herr Direktor Conreid does not propose to be caught napping by the chorus next season. He has established a school for choristers and proposes by the time for grand opera again to have a corps of musical strike-breakers which will make him secure.

Dr. Hans Richter, who directs the Wagner performances at Convent Garden opera house, London, has just conducted his four thousandth public performance, which was "die Walkure." His records include some 12,000 full rehearsals and 25,000 to 35,000 piano rehearsals. During his winter season the famous conductor appears at the Halle Concerta in Manchester. Dr. Richter, who is 63, came to England twenty-seven years ago.

Raymond Hitchcock, that capital comedian of ingratiating personality and agreeable methods, who is playing the role of "Rudolph," the king of Bohemia, in the new Dekoven, Ranken & Stange romantic comic opera, "The Student King," now at the Studebaker theater, Chicago, has a new wrinkle with which to rid himself of people of the bore type that talk you to death. At the hotel in Chicago where the comedian and several other members of the company is stopping there is an Englishman, an actor, who is one of the late arrivals in this country and who has all the other imperials for the "Dog Championship" beaten by a city block. The other evening after the performance there were seated in the cafe, Hitchcock, Weld, the musical director, W. C. Weedon, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Charles Shaw, the manager of the company. The session had progressed favorably when Weedon walked, "Here comes the 'P. C.'" as the Englishman advanced smilingly toward the group.

"Let's see if he will take a hint," said Hitchcock, in an undertone. The "P. C." started to tell of his troubles with the American public in general and especially actors and stage managers, when Hitchcock said: "Say, Parker, have you ever tried the new fortune telling device?"

"Never heard of it. Some blooming American game, I suppose," replied the Englishman.

"Well, try it, just for fun," said Hitchcock. "Select some number from 1 to 9."

"Right," said Parker, jotting down a figure.

"Add 1 to it, multiply by 9, cross out the left hand figure, add 14, add the first number you thought of and follow the advice implicitly."

Several of the group who had followed the game mentally with figures of their own, smiled broadly. "This is all rot," said he. "The answer is 23. How can anyone get advice out of that?" While the meeting broke up amid roars of laughter. Later he appealed to a bell boy who devoted half an hour to explaining the joke.

The Shakespearean festival inaugurated at the Academy, New York, by Charles Frohman, with E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe has opened most auspiciously. The opening bill was "Romeo and Juliet," and although the theater seats 3,000 persons, great crowds were unable to obtain admission. The engagement continues until June 23.

Maude Adams will reappear in New York in "Peter Pan" at the Empire theater early in December. The present has been the longest season Miss Adams has known in four or five years, having played continuously since October. Her business at the Empire warrants her continuing for some time, but Mr. Frohman has insisted by a cable that she take a rest.

John Drew has sailed for London to meet Charles Frohman and there talk over the cast for "His House in Order," the Pinero play which is now running with such great success at the St. James theater, London, and in which Mr. Drew begins his annual engagement at the Empire theater, New York, in September.

Joseph Wheelock, Jr., who since the close of his season in "Just Out of College," underwent an operation, has fully recovered and is now said to be in better health than ever. He goes out next season in the George Ade comedy.

Francis Wilson will not have to bother over a new part for next season. His hit in "The Mountain Climber" was one of the greatest of his career and he will continue in this. Mr. Wilson will spend the summer writing a book.

Otis Skinner will continue all next season in "The Duel." Mr. Skinner's brief tour after leaving the Hudson theater, New York, was the most successful he has ever had since he has been a star.

William H. Crane has sailed for London. He goes there to meet Charles Frohman and talk over his plans and a play for next season.

William Collier and company have begun their season in Australia. A cable

GREEK PLAY AT HARVARD

Classical Department of University to Produce the "Agamemnon" of Aeschylus, Greatest of Ancient Greek Tragedies---Will be Given Out of Doors.

Cambridge, Mass., June 9.—The famous Harvard Stadium, which has been known to the public chiefly on account of the football games which have taken place in it, is soon to be the scene of a more serious form of college activity, for on June 16th and 19th the classical department of Harvard university will produce in the Stadium the Agamemnon" of Aeschylus, one of the greatest, if not the greatest of the ancient Greek tragedies. The play will be given out of doors as it was in Athens in the year 458 B. C., when it was originally produced as one of a series of three connected tragedies, which together won the first prize in the dramatic contest. The stage, scenery, costumes, and all the other accessories will be accurate reproductions of what the Greek spectators saw almost 2,400 years ago, and everything that the research and learning of Harvard university could suggest has been done to make the performance correct in every detail. It is not exaggeration to say that this reproduction of the "Agamemnon" will be a really great event not only for those who are interested in the classics and archaeology, but also for the general public.

Just twenty-five years ago, in May, 1881, the teachers and students in the classical department of Harvard gave in Sanders theatre the "Oedipus Tyrannus" of Sophocles, which shares with the "Agamemnon" the distinction of being the greates of Greek tragedies. That production was the first of the kind in the United States, and it excited widespread interest not only in this country but also in Europe. The demand for tickets to the performances was far in excess of the number issued and the most extravagant prices were paid for them. The performance of the "Oedipus" was in every way a complete success. Many of the men who were in the cast are now well-known. The role of Oedipus was taken by George Riddle, who was then the instructor in elocution in the college and now has a national reputation as a reader. Mr. Riddle is assisting in the coaching of the actors in the "Agamemnon." Henry Norman was Creon in the "Oedipus." Hon. Curtis Guild, Jr., who is now governor of Massachusetts, was Teirsias; Gardner M. Lane, a member of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., of Boston, was the Shepherd of Louis; and Owen Wister, the author of "The Virginian and other successful novels, was the messenger. In the dramatic chorus were L. B. McClagg and Howard Lilienthal, who today are well known in New York, and were conspicuous singers in their undergraduate days; Dr. P. J. Eaton of Pittsburg; Charles S. Hamlin, who was assistant secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland and is now one of the prominent lawyers of Boston; Nat M. Brigham, whose reputation extends over the country; Dr. Sumner Coolidge, one of the physicians engaged by the national government for the Panama canal; and others who have achieved distinction in many different ways. Professor John K. Paine, who recently died, composed the music for the "Oedipus," and it is generally thought that he did some of his very best work in the choruses and orchestral numbers.

As it is a serious task to give an adequate production of one of the classical plays, in spite of the great success of "Oedipus" a long time elapsed before another attempt was made at Harvard, but in 1901 a memorable performance of the "Phormio" of Terence was given in Latin in Sanders theatre, and in 1901 members of the Classical club of Harvard university gave a spirited reproduction of the extravaganza of the old comedy of the Greeks in selected scenes from Aristophanes' "Birds." The music for this last-named performance also was composed by Prof. Paine and was one of its special features, and was one of the most successful. A considerable portion of Euripides's "Iphigenia Among the Taurians" was rendered by students of Radcliffe college, which, although not a regular department of, is closely connected with Harvard university.

Preparations for the production of the "Agamemnon" began a long time ago and rehearsals for the performance have been going on since the beginning of the current college year. The entire classical department of Harvard university has joined in the work but the general committee in charge consists of Prof. Herbert Weir Smyth, Prof. Charles Burton Gulick and Prof. William Fenwick Harris. A special libretto of the play, giving both the Greek text and the English translation, has been prepared by Prof. W. W. Goodwin, Eliot professor of Greek literature, emeritus, who has for many years made a special study of the "Agamemnon." The music for the performance has been composed by John Ellerton Lodge, a son of Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, United States senator from Massachusetts. J. E. Lodge has devoted an immense amount of time to the study of the music of the ancient Greeks. It seems certain from the rather defective knowledge of this music that all the choral odes were sung in unison; this style of composition has been retained to some extent by Mr. Lodge, but in order to avoid the monotony of unvaried unison singing he has arranged the formal choral stasima in harmony. The music is designedly simple in order to suggest an original accompaniment quite subordinate to the words of the poet. In the instrumental accompaniment, instead of the single flute or harp which were usual in ancient times, there will be three clarinets and one bassoon. A dummy flute player also will appear from time to time and pretend to accompany the chorus. Besides the chorals there will be a vocal duet between Clytaemnestra and the leader of the chorus, who has a very prominent part in the ancient Greek dramas. The chorus is composed of members of the University Glee club; they have been trained by G. B. Willard, instructor in public speaking. Mr. Willard and Mr. Riddle, assisted by A. S. Hills, instructor in public speaking, have coached the principals.

As has been said, the "Agamemnon" will be given out of doors in the Stadium. This immense structure is built in the form of an ellipse with one end open. The spectators of the play will be seated in the curve of the Stadium. Fronting them will be a simple structure representing the palace at Argos occupied by Queen Clytaemnestra during the absence of the king at Troy. This palace will serve also as a sounding board. The back scene will be of moderate height and its temporary character will recall the primitive Attic drama. On each side of the royal palace there will be a passage leading to the orchestra, located between the front row of seats and the palace, which, with it, will form practically a tangent. In this circular space, about sixty-five feet in diameter, with its periphery marked by an apparent curbstone, chorus and actors alike will perform on the natural earth their several parts. In the center of this circle will be erected the thymele or altar of Dionysos, under which—not near which as in ancient times—the musicians and the prompter (a personage unknown to the Greeks) will be stationed.

The costumes for the play are elaborate. The queen, Clytaemnestra, appears in purple and gold; Agammemnon, her husband, just home from the Trojan war, in the panoply of a Greek general; in his train follow Cassandra and other Trojan captives, both men and women, wearing Oriental dress which contrasts sharply with the simple costume of the Greeks. The old men of Argos, who make up the chorus, are in stately robes of white or subdued colors. The properties are equally costly and varied. They include sacrificial vessels, wands, wreaths, helmets, spears and shields, all specially prepared after designs based on Greek vase paintings of the best period. Finally, there are two chariots, constructed after much thought and experiment on the basis of the rather meagre evidence concerning practical details which the ancient monuments, especially the frieze of the Parthenon, furnish. These chariots will be drawn by small, cream-colored Norwegian horses with hogged manes. These animals, which closely resemble those used by the Greeks, will be provided by Warren Delano, Jr., of New York, a Harvard graduate, who breeds them. They have been trained to the yoke. The care and attention given to these details indicate the accuracy of the whole production.

The "Agamemnon" forms part of the trilogy on the fortunes of the house of Atreus. The Greek plays were always given with three separate plays, forming a continuous plot, the trilgy of which the "Agamemnon" forms a part is the only extant example of this.

At the beginning of the "Agamemnon," the first of the series of the trilgy, the hero's return from Troy is anxiously awaited at Argos. The play opens with a nocturnal vie wof the palace at Mycenae, from the roof of which a watchman detaails in picturesque prologue, the long weariness of his watch for the beacon light that should announce the fall of Troy. At length, seeing the beacon flash out, he shouts the good news to the people in the palace, but not without a dark word of foreboding for the future. Twelve old men of Mycenae, who form the chorus, now file through a side passage into the orchestra, chanting as they march.

During the song Clytaemnestra comes from the palace to make a thank-offering to the gods, and as the chorus concludes its chant, she describes in a magnificent passage, the progress of the beacon fires from peak to peak. Clytaemnestra then enters the palace, and the first episode comes to a close.

In the ode which follows, the chorus thanks the gods for the victory, whereby the crime of Paris is avenged. At the entrance of the dust-covered messenger, the elders resume their places by the altar, and the second pisode begins.

hTe messenger then bids them prepare a loyal welcome for Agamemnon. Clytaemnestra then appears and tells of her joy at the knowledge of her husband's victorious home-coming. After the departure of the messenger, who before leaving, recounts the storms that scattered the Greek fleet, the chorus sings the second stasima.

The third episode opens with the approach of Agamemnon and his train. The king, seated in his chariot, greets the gods of the land, and acknowledges the welcome given him by the chorus. Clytaemnestra appears, followed by attendants carrying rich clothes of purple. She describes the anxiety which she had felt for the king's safety and tells how she sent Orestes, the pledge and symbol of their plighted troth, to the home of a distant friend, that he might not be exposed to danger in case of a revolt in the land. Agamemnon, enjoining the queen to treat kindly the captive maiden Cassandra, descends from his charlot and enters the palace.

In the fourth episode Clytaemnestra roughly orders Cassandra, Priam's daughter, whom Agamemnon had chosen from the spoils of war, to enter the palace and begin her life of slavery. The captive remains silent in her charlot for a time. Resolving to meet death bravely, however, she finally enters the palace, from whence piercing cries are soon heard. The doors of the palace are suddenly thrown open, and the elders behold the body of Agamemnon lying near that of Cassandra, and Clytaemnestra still gazing upon her bloody work. She steps forward and calmly exults in what she has done, trusting to Aegisthus to defend her cause. The chorus advances upon the usurper, Aegisthus, who stands ready to fight. Clytaemnestra, however, intervenes and leads him away, saying that she and he will rule the palace.

THE DOWN-TRODDEN RICH

Diary of a Well-to-Do Member of the Middle Class of the English Population, Dated A. D. 1915.

By C. C. ROTHWELL in the London Mail.

Jan. 10—My wife telephoned to the office this morning begging me to return home at once. Found her at lunch with two housepainters and a paperhanger. They were quite affable with me. Tried hard not to cringe to them, but the habit is growing on me of late. They handed me a county council order requiring me, owing to general unemployment, to find work in my house and free quarters for the bearers, wages to be at the standard rate—2s. 4d. per hour. * * * My wife slightly hysterical. We must, however, learn to face the future with courage.

Jan. 15—Our guests have finished Wagner and one panel of the drawing room door. They start on Tschaikowsky and the other panel tomorrow. Paperhanger the poorest whistler of the three.

Jan. 24—Our maid-of-all-work, the Hon. Vera Vavasour, daughter of the pauper earl, whom we engaged out of the workhouse, is not giving entire satisfaction. Demoralized, my wife thinks, by the attentions of the paperhanger. She spoke seriously to the poor girl, pointing out that they could lead to nothing, and that any working man who married beneath him would be socially ruined.

Jan. 28—Unpleasant interview with our guests. They complained of the table we keep ,and pointed out that it was impossible to whistle five working hours a day on rice-pudding and lentil soup. Laid before me the day's menu of seven courses of the Municipal Free Food for Working Men Depot and urged me to keep pace with it. Threatened to report me. * * * Talked it over with my wife, and slipped out after dark. Eighteen shillings on the study clock.

Feb. 1—Third visit from the income tax people. They had picketed the back door and caught me on the way out. Polite but inexorable. Explained they had nothing to do with the levy of 7s 9d in the pound; all they wanted to do was to collect it. * * * Collected it.

Feb. 27—Wife in tears again about Willie's prospects. Says he ought to be able to read and write at 16. Certainly the boy should be at school; but what can we do? Private schools beyond an income of £400 nowadays. Tried last year to get him into a board school on the ground that my uncle's father had once done some bell-mending in his own house, and was therefore a working man within the meaning of the act. Claim disallowed.

March 1—Education rate just in—11s 2d. Gone up a shilling. Really monstrous that we should have to supply riding habits for girls on demand in the reformatory schools.

March 8—Drawing-room door almost finished. The younger of the two painters (excellent tenor whistler) seems rather attracted by Lucy. He has worked a good deal on the inside of the door when ever she has been sitting in the room. My wife and I have talked it over, but hardly dare to hope anything will come of it. If we could only marry into a working-class family all our difficulties would vanish, and we should rank among the Privileged Proletariat.

March 26—Wet, wretched night. Vera brought in a grimy begging book from Sir Charles Grandison; said he was at the door. I sent out sixpence. Wife suggested he should be brought in to dry himself, but our guests drew a line at tramps. Went out and saw him. Miserable object. To think that a once great landowner should be brought to this, not by intoxicants, but by taxation. Very thankful for some cold meat; took it to share with Lord Salop, who was watching at the corner for the police.

April 5—Found a demand note for the general municipal rate on my breakfast-table. Went back to bed again for an hour to ward off a strike; 23s. 10d in the pound—an advance of 2s. on last year to cover cost of the new Workhouse Trips on the Riviera.

April 17—Watched a procession of the Submerged Gentry passing along the Embankment, with banners inscribed, "Even Ratepayers have the Right to Live." A crowded meeting afterwards in Hyde park was addressed by several dvayed members of the old house of yords. Great enthusiasm among the poverty-stricken throng. Some buns thrown to them by a charitable workingman caused an ugly rush. A deputation was appointed to wait on Right Hon. Keir Hardie at 10, Downing street.

April 20—Mr. Robinson, the young painter's father, called on me after dark with reference to his son's "deplorable infatuation." Urged me to use all my influence with Lucy. I asked him, as between man and man, to try to rise above these mere class prejudices; but he refused to listen to my arguments, said his boy's whole future was at stake, and there had been far too many of these mixed marriages lately.

April 25—Drawing-room furniture seized for rates.

June 1—This day Sam and Lucy were privately married. The happy couple left later for Southend.

June 3—A threatening deputation from the Housepainters' union waited on me in the evening. After much bitter denunciation it was finally agreed that, for Sam's sake, we must be admitted into working-class society, and enrolled in some union.

Juno 5—Joyfully gave up my office in the city, and paid off the clerks. * * * Practiced some of the simpler passages from "Tannhauser" during the evening. Lips were stiff at first.

June 10—All our troubles over. I have been elected a member of the Waiters' union. My dear wife spent the day cutting down my frock-suit into dress-clothes, while I practised waiting round the dining room table in my shirt sleeves. Thank heaven, we are Privileged Proletarians at last!

COLORADO DISTRICTS

Portland Gold Mining Company to Add 400-Ton Cyanide Plant to Its Mill---Iowa Company's Properly Leased.

Colorado Springs, June 9.—The Portland Gold Mining and Milling company will build a 400 ton cyanide plant as an addition to its mill at Colorado City, at $75,000 probable cost. It will be built solely to treat the tailings from the chlorination mill, of which 400,000 tons have accumulated.

The Iowa Gold Mining company's property, near Silverton, Col., has been leased and bonded to Charles C. Hathaway and associates. The estate consists of twenty-seven acres of patented ground in Arastra Basin. A tunnel cuts the vein exposed in surface workings at 600 feet depth. Gold, silver and lead values secured from the surface run from $168 to $786 a ton. The bond is for $35,000.

Samuel Lesem of New York, is part owner of the Old Kentucky mine on Tip Top mountain, which Kentucky capitalists propose to buy.

The Little Clara mine is shipping 1,000 tons of ore monthly from one of the largest bodies recently opened in Cripple Creek.

Pittsburg, Pa., capitalists are working a property on the summit of Bull Hill, being now in a big eruptive dyke from yhich much is expected.

Allen B. Wrisley and John Cochrane of Chicago have sold the Little Mattie property at Idaho Springs, Col., to the Little Mattie Mining, Milling and Power company. The property has been under bond and lease for five years. It has a production record of nearly $250,000.

A lateral being driven west on the Shafter vein, from the central tunnel, Idaho Springs district, is in a four foot vein of ore carrying 3.08 ounces of gold and 1.6 ounces silver, a total of $62.68 per ton. About twenty-five tons of this ore is being broken down daily. The ore body is probably the same which proved to be 300 feet long in the fifth level. The ore is being treated at the Hudson mill by amalgamation.

The Key West lode is in ore assaying 2,458 ounces of silver and .212 ounces in gold per ton, a total of $6,000. The property is in the Gold Belt, Georgetown district. Alongside of this streak, which averages two inches, is a large streak of mineralized quartz from which much is expected. Early shipments from this mine have been rich in gold and silver values. Much development work is in progress in the district.

The Abe Lincoln on Gold Hill, American Eagle, Lucky Gus, Orpha May and Specimen on Bull Hill, and Deerhorn on Globe Hill, properties of the Stratton estate, are producing thirty-four cars of ore weekly. The fifteenth level of the Findley mine, which has been under water since early in 1903, has been drained and ore is being broken from a shoot 800 feet in length at this depth, with the heading 175 feet from the company's boundary line. The ore is carrying $40 value a ton. Shipments await the starting of the Golden Cycle mill in August.

planks down the inside of the shaft to the rock, in order to stop a further flow of the sand down the outside of the shaft, from whence it boils in beneath the timbers and up into the shaft. The new hoisting engine for No. 1 shaft has been delivered at the Winona mine spur of the Copper Range railroad, and it can be hauled the remaining mile by team any time it is deemed necessary.

The allotments of stock of the company which is to take over and reopen the old Hancock mine, were made Monday. The new concern is to be known as the Hancock Consolidated Mining Company, and will be capitalized at 100,000 shares, par value $25, of which $10 will be paid in, leaving a balance of $50,000 in the treasury after the lands have been paid for.

All the stock has been taken, in fact is oversubscribed. Three quarters of the stock was taken over by those from whom the lands to constitute the property of the company will be purchased. These comprise 860 acres altogether, including 140 of the old Hancock mine property, 120 acres of the Condon lands in west Hancock, and 80 acres of the St. Mary's Canal lands. The old Hancock property is represented by the Ryan and Cole interests.

The incorporation of the new company has not yet been perfected, nor have the plans for developing and working the property been worked out, but it can be stated that operations will be commenced at an early date, and they will be on a large scale. Report also has it that Capt. J. L. Harris will be in charge as superintendent.

The probabilities of the reopening of the Hancock mine have been discussed pretty generally for several months and rumors have been freely circulated. Until the present time, however, nothing definite has been made public by those interested in the project, and the certainty of the opening of the mine will be joyfully received by residents of Hancock, as the enterprise will mean much to Hancock, and will doubtless result in a marked boom to the city, the western end in particular. The fact that T. F. Cole and the Ryan interests are identified with the transaction gives it an added interest and importance.

The Hancock Mining company was organized in 1859 to operate 160 acres purchased from the Quincy Mining company and development was begun on the Hancock lode, which lies a short distance west of the Pewabic or Quincy lode. A shaft was sunk and and a drift was driven on the lode at a level of 218 feet above the water in Portage lake. The old company spent $248,356, raised from assessments, and there was never sufficient profit to pay a dividend.

In 1873 the company was reorganized and called the Summer Mining company, but only a limited amount of work was done by that organization.

In 1880, Edward Ryan bought the property and in the same year floated as the Hancock Copper Mining company. It operated until 1885 and has remained idle since that time. The lode is narrow but is said to show fair richness. The total yield on record is 2,584½ tons, which is a month's or two month's yield from any one of several lake mines today.

It had a stamp mill on the lake shore in Hancock, connected with the mine by a train road, but both of these went down before the growth of the town years ago. The shaft house still stands, a prominent land mark in Hancock. Much of the surface of the property is built over now with residences.

work was done on the Anderson years ago by Capt. James Bale and crew for the Lucky Mining Co.

The Jones & Laughlin Steel company of Pittsburg, which during recent years, has materially added to its ore reserves in the Lake Superior region, particularly in the Mesaba field, where under the name of the Interstate Mining company has acquired a number of valuable properties, has further added to its holdings on the latter range by taking over the Meadow mine near Aurora. The Meadow, operated by George A. St. Clair of Duluth and associates, has been in course of development for some time past and has been brought to the producing stage, a spur track over which the ore is to go out now being completed by the Duluth & Iron Range road. The deal for the transfer of the property was negotiated by Capt. Thomas Walters of Ishpeming, the Pittsburg corporation's manager of mines, and Capt. William White, who has been in charge of the company's Grant mine at Buhl, has been transferred to the superintendency of the Aurora acquisition. It is presumed that the development of the Meadow will be pushed and the mine will be operated steadily. A shaft has been opened to the ore body, and drifts extended from it. Outside of its Mesaba buildings, included among which is the Lincoln mine at Virginia, the principal Lake Superior possessions of Jones & Laughlin are located on the Marquette range. Its Lake Angeline mine, at Ishpeming, in the latter district, is one of the richest properties in the field and still an important producer despite its long years of operation. At Negaunee, on the Marquette range, it is opening the Rolling Mill mine, now sinking a shaft there to reach ore bodies previously tapped by diamond drills, and it is understood the company will take over Senator Alger's Volunteer mine, in the field south of that city. The Pittsburg corporation has some interests on the Gogebic range, but is not doing anything there at present. Its Jack Pot property, in that district, at one time gave promise of becoming an important producer, and its ore was of high grade, but later developments were not satisfactory and work was suspended. It is at Jones & Laughlin's Grant mine at Buhl that the Hoover & Mason grab system of mining and stripping recently went into commission. This is the first apparatus of its kind to be installed on the Mesaba, or in the entire Lake Superior region, for that matter, and there is great interest in the results achieved. The test has been fairly satisfactory, on one occasion 300 yards of earth being stripped in two and one-half hours, but pending the rectifying of certain adjustments found necessary the big machine has not had full opportunity of showing what it can do. In theory, the grab system is designed to effect a material saving over the steam shovel method, and if the plan so works out, as is believed, its adoption at other Mesaba properties will doubtless follow, although because of the initial cost these extensions will be confined to the larger class of producers.

Stripping operations are starting at the Steel corporation's Ohio and Norman properties at Virginia, and will soon be in progress on an extensive scale. The necessary track-laying has been in hand for some time past, and preparations are practically completed for a record-breaking season's work. The Pitt Iron Mining company is stripping the Wacoutah property, adjoining the Rhodes Mining company's Brunt mine near Mountain Iron. An unusual feature at the Wacoutah has been the fact that in order to secure water it has been necessary to extend a pipe line to the location from Mountain Iron. Excellent progress has been developing the Brunt, but because of delay in the arrival of the hoisting plant, now in place, shipments have been retarded. The new shaft of the Hector mine at Biwabik has been provided with railroad facilities, and that property will add its quota to Mesaba range shipments this season. Spur lines from the Great Northern road which has secured the contract for hauling the product of the properties, are being extended to the Nassau mine of the Rhodes Mining company and the Buffalo & Susquehanna proposition of Rogers, Brown & Co., both in the Hibbing district. The two mines are underground properties and are each expected to make a considerable shipment this season.

At its new mines in the Bovey field, on the Western Mesaba, the Steel corporation has adopted a system whereby the day and night shifts of men will each work two weeks before changing over with each other. The arrangement is much more satisfactory to the men than the former system of alternate weeks of day and night labor. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern's fifty-five mile extension to the district has now been completed to the Holman mine, the big bridge at the head of Lawrence lake having gone into commission, and locomotives and steam shovels for use in the stripping work at the Holman have been delivered at the property via the railroad line.

Forty per cent ores will then be as eagerly sought as 60 per cent ores are now looked for.

The bulk of the ore from the mines of the Crystal Falls district is of lower grade than the ore produced at Iron Mountain and Norway, to the east, but it is found in larger bodies, is easily mined as a rule and is in demand by ironmasters in any but the very worst seasons. Half a dozen or more drills are at work in this field. Deep holes are going down for the Buffalo & Susquehanna company on a forty adjoining the Armenia mine on the north, and for the Consumers' Ore company in the vicinity of the old Mastodon property. A drill is in commission for Corrigan, McKinney & Co., near its Tobin mine, and another is puncturing the ground at Swan lake, where the surface burden is exceptionally heavy. In the vicinity of the old Hollister mine, recently taken over under lease by the Consumers Ore people, a drill is at work for George Maas of Negaunee, and evidently with successful results, for its has been boring holes there for the past three years. It was George Maas who discovered the Maas mine, a Negaune (Marquette range) property named in his honor and now being developed by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, by which it was purchased. The Maas has already cost the Cleveland Cliffs people some hundreds of thousands of dollars, and is yet to produce its first pound of ore. However, it will be one of the big mines of the Marquette district. The ore lies at depth, but it is of good quality, and there is lots of it, as has been determined by Mr. Maas' systematic and extensive drilling. The opening of the mine was started about three years ago. Latterly, or ever since the ledge was encountered, excellent progress has been made, but the first portion of the work was tedious, difficult and decidedly expensive, the necessity of sinking through an overburden of 167 feet of quicksand offering one of the greatest enginering problems yet attacked in the Lake Superior region since the first discovery of ore sixty years ago, the scene of which discovery, it is of interest to note in this connection, was in the locality of the present Maas mine. Shaft sinking and drifting to the ore body are now in progress.

In the Iron River-Stambaugh district, in the western end of Iron county, diamond drilling is under way for Pickands, Mather & Co. in the vicinity of their Baltic mine. The Fogarty property, which this concern is testing, is one of the most promising explorations in Spring Valley. A similar showing has been made at the Tully, or Hooligan, tract, where drilling is in progress for Corrigan, McKinney & Co. A large body of ore is understood to have been cut. A drill is beh goperated underground in the Hiawatha mine for the Buffalo & Susquehanna company, which has an option to purchase the property, and two more are at work on surface in the field for the same concern. G. Walt Youngs of Iron River, who recently sold his section 12 mine to Eastern furnace interests, in whose employ he has engaged, is exploring the Weimer property, near the Iron River baseball field. He is operating a churn drill. In the vicinity of Stambaugh the Steel Corporation has a drill in commission at the edge of a swamp almost within the limits of the village. It is understood the company will also do considerable exploring in the Paint River country, eight or ten miles north of Iron River. The indications here are very favorable, and it would occasion little surprise should important finds be made.

The Mineral Mining company, interests in which are identical with those of the Pewabic Mining company, has suspended drill work at the Konwinski property, north of Iron River, and has transferred its exploratory operations to the old Sheridan mine tract within the limits of the village. Permission to use strets of the town in that connection has been granted by the municipal council. Little concerning what has been found at the Konwinski property has been imparted publicly, but it is believed a large body of ore has been tapped. The drill has determined the formation to be upwards of 200 feet in width, and now that the company intends to sink a shaft is taken to indicate that the prospects are considered entirely satisfactory. The Sheridan property, which is now to be tested, was opened by Escanaba men more than fifteen yars ago, but has been idle for some time past. It has produced about 120,000 tons of non-bessemer ore, all of which was taken from a depth not greater than 300 feet, and it is expected the drills will reveal something worth going after. The Sheridan, sometimes known as the Stegmiller, adjoins the Steel Corporation's Riverton mine. The Mineral company is installing machinery at the James property, out of town. The plant is entirely new and comprises two large boilers, an air compressor and a hoisting engine. The shaft will be unwatered as soon as possible, and the work of proving up the property will be pushed.

The Baker property, a new mine being opened in the Stambaugh valley by Corrigan, McKinney & Co., has been provided with one of the best plants of machinery in the district. The shaft and boiler house is large and substantially built structure. Included in the machinery are two large boilers, an air compressor and a large double hoisting plant. The shaft, three compartments in size, is now down in the ledge upwards of twenty feet, after having been put down through an overburden of sand and boulders, and ore will soon be coming to the surface through it. There is a large body of ore at the Baker, and predictions are made that the mine will become one of the best of the Corrigan-McKinney group. The property has previously been in the hands of other concerns, but although their drills were successful in finding ore, they permitted their rights to lapse, presumably because of the treacherous nature of the overburden. The nature of the ground considered, the work of opening the property has made good progress. Development henceforth will be rapid.

A new crushing plant is being installed at the Florence mine, which is one of the only two Wisconsin producers in Menominee range territory. It is a No. 7½ Gates machine of the latest pattern. The ore will be taken by means of a belt conveyor from the crusher to the pocket at the shaft, and there loaded into railroad cars, the process of handling the product being automatic from the time the ore is dumped into the skips underground for hoisting to the surface. The Pewabic Mining company's concentrating works, which recently resumed operations after a six years' idleness, is making a good output but has not yet reached the maximum set for it. About twenty-five men are employed in the mill, and about the same number in the mine.

New offices and a warehouse have been erected at the Steel Corporation's Aragon mine at Norway, and a contract has been made with the construction of the new shops, which also will be located near No. 5 shaft. This latter building, 48x170 feet in ground dimensions, will rest upon a stone foundation, its interior will be brick veneered, and its exterior sheathed with corrugated galvanized iron. It will contain blacksmith, carpenter and machine shops, and will be supplied wth modern equipment throughout.

For the better handling of its ore traffic, which from Channing, the junction point, goes to the docks at North Escanaba over the I. Stephenson Lumber company's Escanaba & Lake Superior railroad, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul is laying two additional sidings at Channing, one 1,450 feet and the other 1,600 feet in length. Shipments of ore have not yet reached their maximums for the season, but to date there have been received at Channing an average of 180 cars from the Crystal Falls district, and from Iron Mountain 200 cars daily. No shipments have yet been made from the Steel corporation's Michigan mine at Amasa, Iron county, or from the same company's Champion mine, Marquette range, via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul line, but 50,000 tons are expected from the former property and three times that amount from the latter. The bulk of the Champion ore will come from stockpile, for although the mine is to resume operations this season, the date of its resumption is still to be announced.

The last of the mules employed underground at the Cleveland Cliffs company's Negaunee mine, Marquette range, have been brought to the surface. All tramming in that property is now done by electrical power. The question of how the city is to expand to take care of its growing population is an interesting problem being discussed at Negaunee just now. It is not likely that any more platted additions to the city will be made for some years to come for the reason that there is no more land to be had for the purpose contiguous to the residence districts. About the only lots now to be had are owned by private individuals, and almost prohibitive prices are asked for these. No great hardship is felt as yet, but when the new mines now being developed are employing their full quota of miners, conditions will be different. The city will have to grow, but how and in what direction, circumscribed as it is by land owned by mining corporations, are vexing questions.

The big Champion mine, a Marquette range property of the Steel corporation, is to resume mining operations within a week or too. It has been idle for the past two and one-half years, having been closed down when still a possession of the Clarion Steel company in October, 1903, shortly after which the holdings of that concern were taken over by the bigger company. Three hundred miners will be employed at the start, and more will be added to the force as operations progress. The machinery has been overhauled or rebuilt during the past year, a large detail of machinists having been employed in this work, and the plant is now one of the best on the range. The Champion is an unusually deep mine, as far as iron properties go, its lowest level being down 2,266 feet. There were some 300,000 tons of ore in stock at the time of the suspension, the bulk of which has since been shipped.

The ore shipping record over the Chicago & Northwestern road from Ironwood to the Ashland docks was broken recently when in one day sixteen trainloads, 22,000 tons in all, were delivered at the lake port. This traffic was over a single track, and is considered somewhat remarkable considering the fact that on the day in question fifty-two trains of all classes were moved in each direction between the two points. Another achievement of the same nature was recorded at the Missabe docks at Duluth when in twenty-four hours there were loaded into boats a total of 103,275 tons of ore, an hourly rate of 4,300 tons, excelling all past records. The shipments from the Head of the Lakes up to the first of the present month aggregated for the three dock systems, those at Duluth, Two Harbors and Superior, 3,791,874 tons, compared with 3,787,073 for the same period in 1905. But for the marine strike earlier in the season the showing would have been materially better.

The Penn Mining company is making excellent progress with the work of harnessing Sturgeon Falls, Menominee river, for the purpose of generating electrical power for the operation of its group of mines at Norway, and it is expected the new plant will go into commission before snow flies. A start has been made with the installation of the machinery. The steam engines will remain in place for use in case of emergency.

not working in harmony. The company again finds itself in deep financial water, and the directors, who all reside in Columbus, have decided to permit the options on the Jennie Dell mines to go by default. The stockholders, however, especially those living in Butte and Anaconda, are determined to make another effort to take up the options and save something for the stockholders. To that end they have invited the old subscribers and outsiders to take another big block of stock, so that enough money may be raised to take up the options, which will expire on July 1. It is expected that the officers of the company will refuse to issue the stock. The Butte shareholders, however, are prepared for that, and they have sent an agent to Columbus to demand the issuance of the stock, or to apply to the court for the appointment of a receiver for the company. The Jennie Dell mines are well located in the Butte copper district, but have not yet become producers, and money is needed to develop them.

An annual statement of the East Butte Copper Mining company has been filed for record with the county clerk and recorder. The statement shows a capitalization of 300,000 shares of the per value of $10 a share, all paid in with property, consisting of the Oneida, Lassen, Dutton, Jackson, McDonald, Hancock, Wheeler, Hoy, Yankee Boy and Mary MacLane mines and 114 acres of ground in addition. It is stated that the cash value of the property is $3,000,000 and that the company has no debts or liabilities.

The machinery that enters into the make-up of the new engine for the East Butte Copper company has arrived and will be placed upon its foundation as soon as the latter is ready for it, which will be in a few days. The new boilers have been set, and a house is now building over them. The new engine will be placed at the Dutton shaft, which is the main opening of the company's possessions. The surface at this mine is a busy spot. While the surface work is going on sinking is in progress, and good headway is announced.

The Reins Copper company is not saying much at present, but is driving crosscuts with all the power at its command. The rock in the face of both openings is pretty hard, but good progress marks operations. The 1,200 foot level, on which the crosscut is going on, is giving up some water, the flow being nearly 500 gallons a minute, but the company has three pumps on the 1,200-foot station, two sinkers and one station and is taking care of it in good shape.

That Butte & London is making good progress is evidenced by the fact that its shaft is now 30 feet deep and is going down rapidly. Four new boilers which are to supply pressure for the new hoisting engine have been delivered at the shaft. The foundation for the bed of the engine is finished and the work of setting the plant has begun. Arrangements are under way for the delivery of city water at the plant and then continuing the streams to the property of the Butte Copper exploration company and thence to the Greenleaf. It is the intention to build a cement tank as far east of the Butte & London as the water will run by gravity and then install an electric engine to force it up to the Butte Copper exploration property. From there it will run to the Greenleaf by gravitation. The water coming from the earth in that section is not good for steaming purposes, because it leaves a coating of brown substance in the flues. Besides, it contains copper, and when the coating does not interfere with steam making, the copper corrodes the metal.

The shaft of the Greenleaf claim is in 300 feet deep and is to have another compartment from the 300 to the 1,000 foot mark, making three. Later on another compartment will be cut between the present depth and the surface. The enlargement has been found necessary by reason of the flow of water, which has increased materially during the last month. When the last round of holes that broke the 300-foot mark was fired a few days ago they opened up something, for in a short time the water had backed 40 feet up the shaft and the pumps at that time could make very little impression on it. That it was simply a little inland lake, however, is evidenced by the fact that as soon as the water had transferred itself to the shaft there was not much of it left in the place whence it came and the pumps began raising it to the surface.

a 15-horse power hoisting plant, which is now at Tonopah. As soon as it is installed, exploration of the acreage is to be taken up on a more extensive scale, and to that end the working force will be increased. Even the surface dirt on the Indian Camp carries good values, and Mr. Campbell now has under consideration two applications for leases on gulches that traverse the claim, the intention of the applicants being to work the ground with dry washers. As some sections of the acreage carry $15 worth of gold to the cubic yard at the surface, it is very apparent that the prospective leasers will make money out of their venture, once they get to work.

A depth of ninety feet has been attained in the main working shaft of the Manhattan Jumping Jack Mining company, and, on the Golden lease, ore having a gold grade in excess of $100 a ton is being mined and sacked. The rock is coming from the drift at the 35-foot level, and a shipping average is maintained without sorting. Operations on company account are to be furthered by means of a 25-horse power hoist, which will be installed within the next three weeks. As the shaft has been lowered, a number of stringers which show generous colors in the pan have been cut. At the surface, a vertical ledge which comes in from Gold Wedge ground, and which pans well, has been discovered, and this lead, when intersected by the crosscut from the 100-foot level, is expected to contain pay values in place. Several other veins will likewise be tapped by means of the drifts to be sent out from the 100-foot station, among them being the famous Stray Dog ledge, which passes through Jumping Jack ground to the west of the company shaft.

Goldfield, Nev., June 9.—Developments in the Mohawk company's property are proving the sensation of this camp, while the Great Bend is well up in the front of the procession of new money-makers. During the last week an average of 120 tons of ore a day was hoisted from the mine. The average value at the sampler is reported at $135 a ton. It costs $5 a ton to mine it, $1.50 a ton to haul it to the sampler, and the freight and treatment charges are $14 a ton. The net returns, therefore, were approximately $13,740 a day. On this account the leasers pay to the company a royalty of 22½ per cent, or $3,091.50 a day for the time stated. The ore body is sixty feet wide, and there is already more of it in sight than can be mined in eight months. During the week, on the 150 foot level, a body of oxidized quartz, something new, was broken into. There is six feet of it, and assays show it to carry from $800 to $1,200 a ton in free gold. Hayes & Monnette, the leasers, have reached the conclusion that they will never be able to mine out the ore discovered during the eight months they have left on their lease, and so they are beginning to sublease parts of their ground.

On the Great Bend the ledge originally found in the main workings has been cut on the 200-foot level, and ore is now being hoisted from that point. On the west end of the property the Kane lease is still taking out and sacking sylvanite ore rich in quality, and the preparations being made to do extensive cross-cutting from the main workings of the mine indicate that the company expects big results. A powerful hoisting plant is to be installed right away on the main working shaft to facilitate this work and permit of the raising of ore in larger quantities than heretofore attempted.

The news from the Bullfrog district this week indicates that the Rush company's development has the call on public attention. The winze from the north lateral has been connected with the crosscut tunnel after sinking forty-five feet. At the point of connection in the tunnel the ore averages $37.50 a ton in gold. According to survey this shoot of ore is all of forty-five feet in width. The crosscut has been sent out twenty feet beyond the point of intersection, and the face is still in good ore.

Reports from the Wolverine are of the effect that work on the drift at the 500 has been suspended.

The new Nordberg hoist for the Oliver is being put on its foundation. At the Oliver also the big turbine generator is being put in place. Tunneling on the surface for the big magazine is progressing rapidly. L. S. & P. foundation for another of the big hoists is nearly completed.

At the Briggs shaft, owned by the Calumet & Pittsburgh, a 250-horse Scotch marine boiler has been received and is being set up. This gives the Briggs an aggregate of nine boilers. A fifth oil tank with a capacity of 80,000 gallons is being erected. With a combined tankage of 375,000 gallons, the company is prepared to store sufficient oil to provide against any contingencies which may arise, such, for instance, as the eruption of shipments by the high water in Salton sea recently. The new tank is being built of boiler plate. Two large Prescott pumps are on hand to be put into commission in case it is found necessary to use them. Three regular shifts and a double-up shift are being worked.

The American Mining company has been operating a drill on its property about half a mile southeast of the Saginaw for the past three months. The drill has a capacity of 1,500 feet, and is now down 800 feet. Just what results have been accomplished that officials decline to state.

The Calumet & Arizona is maintaining its record in the production of high grade ore. The shafts are down 1,200 feet. The principal drifting is being done on the 1,000 foot level, where tunnels are being driven in several different directions. This is one of the best producing mines in the district and has been paying handsome profits for several years. Shipments of ore to the smelter of the company at Douglas are being made daily. There is but little variation in the monthly output.

ALASKA MINING.

Seattle, Wash., June 9.—Fairbanks had scarcely packed the last sack of the first shipment of $1,000,000 gold for the spring of 1906 before fire destroyed all but a few scattered buildings. A big fire in a city of 5,000 people is a severe blow, especially when it comes at the opening of a promising season. Replying to Seattle's generous offer of supplies, the citizens answered that they could stand it unless the threatening floods finished what the fires had missed.

The spring floods have set in with great force along all the streams flowing into the Yukon, which is also at high flood, and it is impossible to tell the amount of damage that is now being done.

At Seattle steamers are lined up at the docks receiving passengers from all parts of the country bound for Alaska. The great majority, apparently, hail from San Francisco. They outfit here and are taking supplies to last from six to eight months. Good reports continue to come from all the great copper and gold mines.

In the Copper River district, the strikes continue to increase, and miners who went in early are said to be reaping the richest harvest in the territory. The value of the ore in sight is computed at millions. The gold in the same districts, immense as the deposits are, cuts but a small figure in comparison to the copper deposits. Only one of these mines has a record among the shippers as yet. The copper ore is high grade, carrying gold and silver, and the ledges are immense.

IDAHO'S MINES.

Boise, Idaho, June 9.—The placer mines throughout the state are all being worked with a good supply of water and large cleanups have been made from the first runs, especially in Basin, one of the oldest placer camps in Idaho.

The wagon road from Long Valley to Thunder Mountain will be in shape so that wagons can be taken over it in about a month. Last fall deep snow fell much earlier than usual and consequently there is much machinery scattered along the route to be hauled in.

W. A. Magee of Pittsburgh, Pa., will resume active operations in his mines on Summit Flat, Boise county, in June. Mr. Magee has spent a large amount of money developing them during the last four years and has thousands of tons of good gold ore ready for extraction. Many crosscuts and drifts have been run on the 400 foot level.

NO FEAR OF CLASH WITH MEXICANS

H. C. Reno Returns From Gold Fields and Describes Situation.

H. C. Reno, president of the Trinity Mining company of Sonora, Mexico, returned yesterday from the Mexican gold fields. He declares that the stories of the recent uprisings in La Cananea, Mexico, are greatly over drawn. "The trouble was more in the nature of a barroom brawl, in which an American policeman and a saloonkeeper were the chief actors," said Mr. Reno. "I have seen worse 'uprisings' on a Saturday night in many of the mining camps in Colorado, but the outside would never hear of the fracas."

"The 'invasion' of Mexico by the American miners who were taken down to La Cananea by Col. Greene to replace the shiftless and unreliable Mexicans made Greene and his imported men very unpopular. The Mexicans made a demand upon Col. Greene for a raise in wages from $3.50 to $5.00 per day, which he refused to grant and fearing a general strike and further trouble from the Mexicans, he imported Mexican miners to replace them. That was all there was to the 'uprising.'

"President Diaz acted promptly and vigorously in dispatching troops to the scene immediately with orders to shoot to kill, but before they arrived the 'uprisers' had fled to the hills.

"Some timid people in this country thought that serious complications might arise between the two countries because of this affair, but their fears are groundless. There is too much of a money band between the two countries to admit of any misunderstanding going far enough to provoke war. American interests in Mexico are too vast for any such foolishness. Over $30,000,000 are invested in Mexican mines alone and more is going in every month. Business interests on both sides of the border are too great to permit of any but perfect understanding between both countries.

"The Trinity Mining company, of which I am president, owns a large property in the state of Sonora and we are entirely satisfied with the local conditions down there. American business methods, machinery and brains, backed by good American money are going to be large factors in the development of the Mexico of the future, and it is quite certain that no clash between a handful of drunken miners need cause any of us to worry as to the future of American enterprises in our sister republic."

PRESIDENT'S UNCLE; FATHER OF AMERICAN FISH CULTURE

Robert B. Roosevelt, in An Interview, Tells How He and Seth Green Established the First Fish Hatchery in America.

By DEXTER MARSHALL.

It was in 1865—perhaps a year earlier, perhaps a year later—that two men, one well along in the forties, the other note quite so far along in the thirties, met at the annual contest of the New York State Sportsmen's association. The older man looked like a countryman. He was of middle height, but so broad and burly as to seem almost short. He had a full brown beard and mustache and wore a broad brimmed hat. His face was marked by a continuously humorous expression which frequently expanded into a broad smile. He had as hearty a laugh as was ever heard by mortal ears. His name was Seth Green.

The younger man was taller and thinner and his heavy beard was almost black. He looked like an educated man of the world, and so he was. His name was Robert B. Roosevelt; he was a brother of the elder Theodore Roosevelt, and uncle of the boy of the same name who now sits in the presidental chair at Washington. Roosevelt's laugh was as hearty as Green's but apparently the men had little in common.

It was developed during their first meeting, however, that these two were the best fly easters present and this drew them together. For two or three years they met at each successive shoots of the Sportsmen's association and the acquaintance grew into close friendship. The result was the establishment of artificial fish culture in the United States. Fish had been propagated artificially in Europe more than a hundred years before, but not extensively, and Massachusetts established a state fish commission in 1853, but it had made no practical progress.

The work done by Roosevelt and Green was more important than of any who preceded them here or elsewhere, and the system of fish culture in the United States today is the most extensive in the world. It has led to the addition of millions of dollars' worth of fish foods to the resources of the country; operating under the United States fish commission there are now fifty-five stations (hatcheries) and sub-stations located in twenty-nine states and territories, besides the numerous state hatcheries. Last year the national commission distributed over a billion and three-quarters of eggs and young fish.

Seth Green has now been dead these ten or a dozen years. In his life time he was often termed "The Father of the Fishes. Robert B. Roosevelt is living at 77. Through all his many-sided life he has been known as "Fisherman Bob" from his fondness for angling, and he may quite properly be termed "The Father of American Fish Culture." For while it was Green who studied the habits of the fishes and discovered their secrets his efforts would have been comparatively ineffective without a practical man with money and influence at his command to help him. Roosevelt furnished these requisites.

Mr. Roosevelt's Own Story.

Surrounded by his books on the second floor of his old-fashioned Fifth avenue home in New York the other day, he modestly told the story of the beginning and early development of the work which they accomplished.

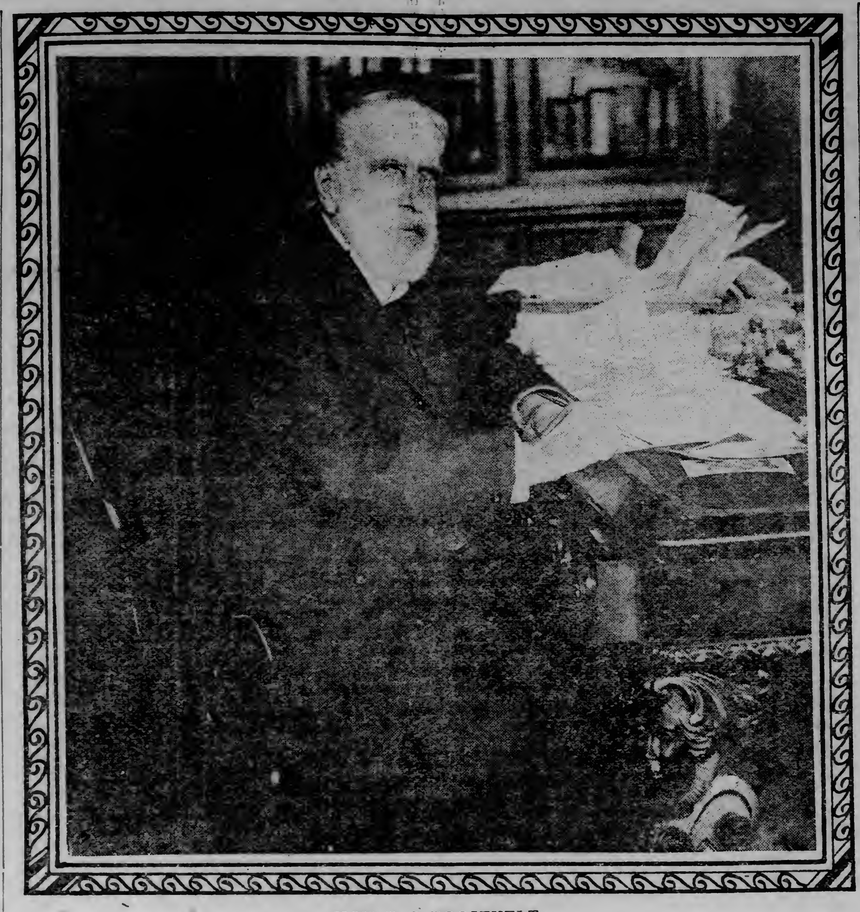

"When Green and I first met," said Mr. Roosevelt, "I was anxious to secure the adoption by the state of proper game protection laws. So was Green, and his enthusiasm in that direction, as well as his skill with the rod, made him very interesting to me. I had read and heard a good deal about what was being done in Europe in the way of fish culture, and when Green said he had succeeded in hatching brook trout artificially my interest in him increased. He thought the raising of brook trout could be made profitable. He had found an ideal place to establish a hatchery some miles south of Rochester in Caledonia, where the original New York state trout hatchery was located later.

"Ever been there? Then you know what a wonderful spring gushes out of the ground there; how clear the water is; cold in summer, but of such nearly changeless temperature that it never freezes in the winter, and clear as a crystal, and how it boils up out of the earth.

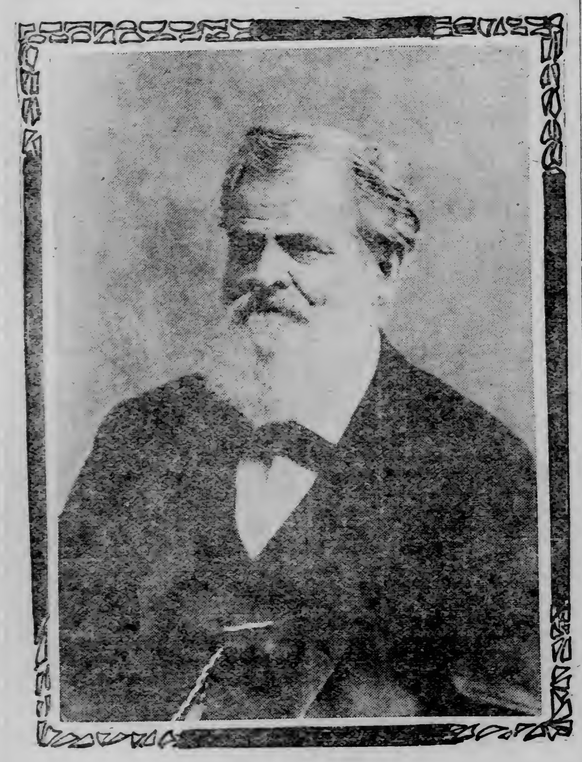

"The shyest, gamest brook trout in the world were found in that wonderful spring and in the strong, clear stream, almost a little river, flowing from it. Through studying the trout in that spring, Seth had discovered the secret that made fish culture on a large scale possible. It is the secret of aeration, or more properly speaking, oxygenization. Water, you know, carries oxygen in the form of a percentage of air. The eggs of all fish need plenty of oxygen while hatching. This is particularly true of trout ,and they can get it no other way than by being placed where there is constant but gentle change of water at just the right temperature.

"We didn't know that when we began, but the trout have always known it, and Green watched them patiently till he found it out and learned just what they did to secure results. The brook trout, though long thought to be, isn't really a trout proper, at all, but belongs to the rare 'char' fish family, and is native only in the streams of New England, New York, Pennsylvania and perhaps in some parts of the Alleghany mountain streams to the south of Pennsylvania. These streams are fed by springs, and the trout deposit their eggs just over the places where the springs gush out. Flat on his face, with his eyes close to the water, Green watched the fish pile up mounds of little stones over these places, saw them deposit their eggs in the chinks between the stones and watched the eggs hatch out.

"Then he fixed up artificial spawning places in which the circulation of water should be as free and gentle as in the places selected by the trout themselves. Then he deposited trout eggs by the thousands under just the right conditions and waited. After many failures the eggs hatched all right and the young fish were healthy and vigorous. When I was sure he knew what he was about I bought the property on which the spring was located and the first trout hatchery in the world was established. Not long afterward, through the efforts of the State Sportsmen's association, the State Fish commission was appointed. My friend, Governor Horatio Seymour, Seth Green and myself were the first members. Later the state took over the hatchery, and Green, resigning as a commissioner, was made superintendent. That was the real beginning of fish culture in this country, and that was the way Green got a chance to do his life work.

HON. R. B. ROOSEVELT,
The President's Uncle, and "Father of Fish Culture in the United States."

SETH GREEN,
The Father of the Fishes.

Learning the Secrets of the Fish.

"Not long afterward, Massachusetts wanted to borrow Green to carry on the work of establishing a shad hatchery at Holyoke. Though the Massachusetts commission was established fifteen years before it had accomplished little. We lent Green's services, of course, for our purpose was to help along fish culture in any way we could. Later a shad hatchery was establsired on the Hudson, but the conditions were not nearly so favorable as at Holyoke, and it was clear he could do pioneer shad hatching work to so much better advantage there.

"It took him quite a while to work out the problem—I don't remember just how long—but he kept at it till it was solved. He went right into the stream at the foot of the dam at Holyoke, standing waist deep for hours at a time, holding the sieve-like box containing the eggs in the water, as it bubbled and boiled below the dam, inclining the box first one way and then the other, and watching constantly, till at last he had found out just how the eggs should be deposited and just the conditions that should surround them while hatching.

"No, I didn't see him at this work; I had to stay at Caledonia and nurse the young trout there, but I shall never forget his story of how good he felt when, at last, after watching that box for days and weeks, he was satisfied that he had learned his lesson.

"I used to take Green to my Long Island home, in those days, and we would go cruising along the north shore in a queer little yacht I then had, looking for fish eggs of all sorts and experimenting with them. The north shore waters of Long Island are very shallow, but with the center board up the yacht didn't draw more than a foot of water, so we could go close in. We tried everything we found that looked in the least like eggs.

"Once we found some little globules fastened together in long festoons, exactly like small beads strung on thread.

"'They're eggs,' said Green. I agreed with him and we put them into our hatching boxes.

"These were made of wood with wire screen bottoms through which the eggs couldn't pass, but which would allow the free passage of water, and suspended from booms extending on either side of the yacht.

"I might say that we hatched cod in such boxes, in the sixties, as the folk at the Maine hatcheries have lately hatched them. That's a pretty big thing, by the way. It is only necessary to protect the eggs in hatching boxes in moderately quiet water from being eaten by the smaller fish, for the proper time. Now that the Maine hatchery people can raise young cod on a big scale, they can be distributed all along our Atlantic coast and there never need be any more short catches of cod.

"But to get back to the festooned strings of eggs which Green and I experimented with. After many failures we hatched them. They proved to be the eggs of a very common small fish found in great numbers along the shore and of no value. I looked them up carefully then and learned what their species is, but I've forgotten that, very vividly. They were important even if the fish we hatched out were not. All the experiments we made were important, for they all taught us something.

"I remember very well, too, that I was then especially impressed with Green's unquenchable curiosity about everything pertaining to fishes, and his everlasting patience. I tried as many experiments as he did, but I didn't get results.

"I told him one day that he kept me wondering how he did it. I was so infernally unlucky all the time that I sometimes felt almost discouraged, while all he had to do was to try and the result he looked for followed.

"'That's all very well,' growled Green in his deep gruff voice when I spoke about it; 'it's forty failures to one success with me.'

"Then I understood his methods better. He would try over and over and over. If one way didn't work, he'd take up another and keep everlastingly at it till he won success.

"Green had to exercise his patience to the full when it came to feeding the trout. They find their natural food in the streams in which they live, but, of course, it wouldn't be possible to furnish the thousands of young fish in a hatchery with the insects and other things they subsist on in the wild state. For some time after hatching they draw their sustenance from the egg sacks, but when these are exhausted the fish must be fed, and well fed, too, in every sense of the word. For, while trout are very voracious they are also the most delicate fish, with possibly one exception, that I know anything about.

"Well, Green tried food after food, with ailing and dead trout as the result, but finally he succeeded, of course. We both had a great scare soon after we began to experiment with the famous Rainbow trout of California—a real trout, by the way, and not of the same species as the brook trout.

"The Rainbow trout are as hardy as the brook trout are delicate, and as quarrelsome among themselves as the brook trout are quiet. In the spawning season they will fight with the utmost fury, and the first batch of the species we had to do with showed their disposition in that direction one day in a way that disheartened us.

"After the fight was over they were lying about in all conditions of exhaustion. Gills were torn, fins damaged and great patches of skin ripped off from many of the finest specimens we had. We thought the injured ones—and those unhurt were very few—were all as good as dead and we were quite disheartened for the moment. But, bless, you in a day or two they were clearly recovering and they all got well. They are as hardy as they are pugnacious.

"One of the things Green learned early was the necessity of maintaining perfect cleanliness with the fish. Dirt is as bad for them as it is for people, and not all the men who were employed by the commission could seem to learn that lesson. One result of dirt is a disorder which we called "the blue swelling" for lack of a better name. I remember the loss of 10,000 rainbow trout from that cause. The only treatment we knew of that would help blue swelling was to put a little salt in the water they were kept in, and it didn't work that time.

"It's curious about the development of fish. As I have said the finest brook trout in the world are to be found in the waters of the Caledonia creek, and its great spring source is the best place in the world to hatch them, but they do not grow as rapidly there as they do in the waters of Long Island. In the same time after they are hatched the fish will gain in weight at least a quarter more rapidly there. The water at Caledonia is hard—full of lime—while there is nolime in the Long Island waters; that is the only reason for the difference that I can think of, but I don't know that it has anything to do with it.

"The brook trout of the Long Island streams used to be the biggest I ever saw. When I wasonly a small boy—and that's a long time ago, now—I used to go fishing at Smithtown, to the North of our home. The best fishing ground was a big millpound owned by Aaron S. Vail. He used to charge well for the privilege, but it was worth it. In those days we never kept a brook trout that weighed less than a pound, and if you have ever cast a fly for trout you know from that the fishing is good.

"It isn't so good any more, even in Vail's old pond. That pond, by the way, is near the property of the Wyandanch Fishing club, famous today as a millionaire fishing resort. I don't fish any more, of course, but I go there sometimes in the auto to recall the old times. Daniel Webster used to fish in that pond nearly every spring, and he used to stay at the Vail house. Pretty nearly everybody who can remember those old days is gone now, but the fact that Webster used to fish there is kept in mind by a sign on the house.

"Now Vail is dead, and so are all the members of his family. The last time I was there I was grieved to see that the house is falling to pieces from sheer neglect. There's a hole in the roof just over the room where I saw Webster after a day's fishing many times when a boy. Under the hole in the roof there's a hole in the floor—the whole place is going down.

"No, I never fished with Webster—I was too small. Vail used to take him out in the boat and used to tell us how Webster would study his speeches while on the water. Later Vail used to take me out in the boat. He was a good fisherman. He taught me to fish and was the most enthusiastic admirer I ever had. He used to tell me how Webster fished.

"Webster was a gross fisherman—he used a big fly. The biggest part of his fishing was done in fifteen to thirty feet of water, and, curiously enough, the days of his fishing were about the last of the big trout at Smithtown.

"Vail has told me often how Webster liked to study his speeches while fishing. He used to do what Bourke Cockran does now, I believe—think up some strong sounding sentence, without any special reference to its application to any subject, and then polish it up, add a word here and substitute another there till it was just right. When he was out on the Vail pond fishing he would rehearse such sentences—try them out and see how they sounded, and his big voice would roll over the water as he declaimed.

"After he had tried out such a sentence he would pack it away in the back of his head ready for use in whatever speech it would fit into as a sort of climax. Sometimes a trout would take his fly just when he was in the midst of rehearsing a long speech on some great question—for he used to practice on complete addresses as well as specially constructed sentences—and then there would be fun.

"I often fished with grasshoppers when I was a boy—yes, and I used sometimes to use the old-fashioned short horsehair lines, made by twisting the horsehairs together with two quills. Sometimes I fished in clear, shallow, narrow brooks, where I had to sneak up crawling, for fear that the fish would see me, and drop the wriggling grasshopper in just the right spot. Maybe I'd take a walk along the stream one day and see a big trout lying quietly in the cool, clear water between two clumps of weeds. The fish would see me as soon as I'd see him and be away in a twinkling. It would be no use to try for him then—he'd had his scare. But the next day he'd be pretty sure to be in his favorite spot and I'd sneak up, get in between the two clumps of weeds without scaring him, and get him.

The United States Fish Commission.

"But that isn't the story of the development of fish culture. Our work at the Caledonia and the other hatcheries of the New York fish commission attracted attention all over the country, and laws establishing similar commissions have been passed in nearly half the states. I was invited to appear before the various legislatures and to furnish the records of our work to others. We sent Green all over the country to study all sorts of fish, and the good work went on rapidly.

"In 1872, while I was a member of congress, Garfield introduced a bill for the establishment of the national fish commission, and it went through with a rush. Immediately after its passage Spencer F. Baird was made the head of the commission, which commission, now of far-reaching importance, in the right way. With its wider field and greater resources, the United States fish commission has been able to do many things, of course, that no state commission could do."

"The initial fish cultural operations of Roosevelt and Green were devoted mainly to the brook trout, but it occupies a minor place in the operations of the government fish commission, the lake trout, the cisco, perch, bass, pollock and lobster receiving the greater amount of attention. Yet about ten millions and a half brook trout fry, "fingerlings," yearlings and adult fish were distributed last year, including 200,000 eggs for Argentina, so that brook trout may be eventually found in the streams of South America.

The habitat of the brook trout in this country has been extended by the commission also, notably in Colorado. Its mountain streams were long believed to be especially adapted to the brook trout. It is now widely distributed over the state, and it exists there in greater numbers perhaps than in any other state. The Colorado streams, in fact, have become the chief sources of supply for wild brook trout.

Shad and striped bass from the Atlantic seaboard have been introduced upon the Pacific coast in such numbers that more than 4,000,000 pounds of these two varieties of fish are now caught annually on the Western coast, the returns to the fishermen being about $200,000. The introduction of Pacific coast fish on the Atlantic seaboard, however, has not been equally successful, the attempt Eastern waters having failed completely. This year attempts are being made to introduce the silver salmon and the humpback salmon. On the other hand the steelhead trout of the Pacific coast streams and lakes introduced into Lake Superior have fared as well in their new home as the brook trout in Colorado. The introduction having been made later, however, the steelheads are not yet an important element in the Superior catch. More pike perch were distributed last year than fish of any variety, the number being only about a hundred thousand less than 400,000,000. Next came shad, of which about 320,000,000 of eggs and fry were distributed.

The grand total of 1,759,475,000 fry and fish distributed were divided among thirty-six varieties, most of them being fresh water fish, though sea fish are by no means neglected. Massachusetts leads in the distribution, having received more than 370,000,000; Ohio comes next with more than 362,000,000; Delaware with 2,350 stands last on the list, but every state and territory except Alaska was included in the distribution last year and this year Alaska also is being included.

Besides the brook trout eggs sent to Argentina nearly half a million eggs of other varieties were sent to that country, more than 1,300,000 to New Zealand and small quantities to individual applicants in France and Germany.

In 1905 the bureau's distribution cars were hauled 82,794 miles, while detached distribution messengers traveled nearly 300,000 miles, an increase of 26 per cent in car mileage and 188 in messenger mileage. The bureau's department of biological investigations and experiments is among its most important activities and the cordial co-operation of the Canadian fish commission with that of the United States is of great value in the fisheries of the Great Lakes, which is only one of the highly important results coming from the acquaintance between Robert B. Roosevelt and Seth Green, casually begun at a meeting of the New York State Sportsmen's association in the middle '60s.

CASTRO AT JAMESTOWN

Venezuela's Picturesque President to Visit Exposition in His Splendid Yacht.

By CHARLES FREDERICK STANSBURG.

Norfolk, Va., June 9.—Not the least picturesque character that will visit the Jamestown exposition near Norfolk Va., next year, is President Cipriano Castro of Venezuela, who has signified to a personal friend his intention of paying a visit to the Hampton Roads celebration in 1907.

President Castro will arrive in his famous yacht, the "Restaurador," which has cost up to date $3,000,000 and is surpassed in beauty and luxuriousness only by the royal yacht of Great Britain—the "Victoria and Albert," which is known to have cost $6,000,000 and is the finest yacht ever built. The history of the "Restaurador" is as follows: As the Atlanta" it was built by the late Jay Gould, being the most costly yacht on record with the exception of the one above mentioned. On the death of Mr. Gould, it passed to his son, George. By him it was sold to the United States government for use in the Spanish war. After the war was over, it was said to have been rebought by Mr. Gould who again sold it, this time to Venezuela, whereupon it was rechristened the "Restaurador," equipped with armament and war fittings and used during the rebellion of 1901-02. Nearly $1,000,000 was recently spent on refurnishing the yacht at the Cramp's yard at Philadelphia and the "Restaurador" is today a perfect dream of luxury and beauty. As such she will be in good company at Hampton Roads, where many of the most famous yachts of the world will congregate next year.

President Castro feels that he has earned a vacation for rest and recreation after years of arduous toil and struggle. Few public men have lived in such a state of turmoil as he. He believes that he has been much misrepresented and is anxious to get better acquainted with the American people and show them that he is something more than a mere disturber of the peace of nations. Having succeeded in holding his own on all propositions concerning his coutry, he thinks it is time to show to our people that he is a sincere and earnest statesman who has stood for the best interests of Venezuela.

Castro is a complex character, having a good deal of audacity and aggressiveness in his makeup. As president of Venezuela he has successfully withstood the attempted coercion of nearly all the great powers after which he turned his attention to the trusts which up to date appear to have been worsted by him. He is an ardent admirer of George Washington and erected a statue of him at Caracas. He has also erected a statue of President Diaz of Mexico, whom he regards as one of the foremost men of the age. Paradoxical as the combination may seem at first sight, there is much sound sense underlying Castro's choice of exemplars, for the ideal president of the South American republic should possess the combined qualities of a Washington and a Diaz.

Castro and his magnificent yacht will be made welcome in Hampton Roads next year, where he will have the opportunity to see the most famous yachts of the world and to be entertained in a friendly spirit on board of warships that at one time threatened the national existence of his country.

"The Wire Tappers," by Arthur Stringer—"The Spoilers," by Rex E. Beach—"The God of This World," by John B. Middleton—"The Voice of the Street," by Ernest Poole—"Luminous Bodies, Here and Hereafter," by Charles Hallock.

"The Wire-Tappers," by Arthur Stringer, is a dashing romance of love and the fascination of crime. The hero and heroine are both criminals, after a fashion. Both have been forced by circumstances into the illicit business of tapping wires to get racing and market information, and in pursuit of this object they encounter, naturally, numerous perils and exciting experiences. But the thread of the story is the effort of a woman in the case to rise above her environments and to drag the man up with her, rather against his will. The hero is an electrical inventor, and displays much ingenuity in his wire-tapping operations. Also, the author has displayed much ingenuity in spinning his story, which is certain to compel interest from first page to last. The book, which is acceptably illustrated by Arthur William Brown, is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Rex. E. Beach is a comparatively young author who, after having passed through a great many exciting experiences in a little-known quarter of the globe where life flows at full tide, now shows an ability to write stories of unusual vigor and freshness. His first novel, "The Spoilers," is taking everybody by surprise. He is one of those authors who write in that apparently easy, off-hand way which is only possible to the most original, and it is evident that he will soon be recognized as among the foremost novelists, for his stories are destined to be popular, and he has the skill of a born writer. Mr. Beach, who is now twenty-eight years old, was born on a farm in Michigan in 1877, but most of his youth was spent in Florida, where he attended college. He went to Chicago to study law, but was swept away in the great wave of excitement over the discovery of gold in the Klondike region, and, giving up his legal prospects, sailed for Alaska on four days' notice. That was in the late fall of the first season of gold-prospecting in the North, and the United States was filled with horror at the reports of famine and the scarcity of all kinds of things in Alaska. Mr. Beach had to travel with scant provisions, both for financial reasons and because of the necessity for making haste. Altogether he was in Alaska five years, and saw the game through from beginning to end. "The Spoilers" has its setting in the Far North—in the country beyond the line of Fifty-three, where there runs "never a law of God or man."

"The God of This World," by John B. Middleton, is an entertaining and withal instructive flight into the future on the wings of story. The writer imagines a time when Mammon shall be the only god, when there shall be but two classes, the privileged few and the downtrodden many, and when electricity has been developed by the hero of the tale into a force almost occult in its weird manifestations. It is the writer's idea of what the world is coming to, and while it is an English book, with its scenes laid in England, the United States is not forgotten, but is shown to be in the same condition as the rest of the world. The author dedicates it "to his disinherited fellow citizens, among whom he has labored for a lifetime, sharing in their heroic struggles for a bare subsistence under a system which, in a country politically free and abounding in wealth, binds them to degrading toil by fetters more irksome and enduring than those of the chattel slave." He hopes that by reading the book they will be induced to "strike an effective blow for economic freedom and the restoration of the natural order." The book is published by Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co., Ltd. Dryden House, Soho, London.

"Luminous Bodies, Here and Hereafter," by Charles Hallock, M.A., is described upon its title page as "an attempt to explain the interrelation of the intellectual, celestial and terrestrial kingdoms, and man's oneness with His Maker." For those who like to probe into the unknowable, and to float upon the wings of speculation far into the mists of the problematic, the book will have much interest, for it is an entertaining and ingenious work. Those who remain upon the surface, however, without plunging into the depths of mysticism, will find little of interest in it. It is published by the Metaphysical Publishing company, 500 Fifth avenue, New York.

"The Voice of the Street," by Ernest Poole, might be called a prose epic of the city without straining. It is the story of a voice, and incidentally of several human beings besides the owner of the voice. In strong, dramatic fashion the author relates the struggles of this voice, hampered by the call of the city street, with its temptations and difficulties. It is a story full of strong human interest, pulsing with the swarming life of the city. It is a remarkably vivid picture, drawn with great skill, evidently by one who knows the life he has attempted to bring into the printed page, and thus convey to the reader. There are several powerful illustrations by Joseph Stella. The book is published by A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

The new serial by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, "By the Light of the Soul," leads off the June 9 issue of Harper's Weekly. It is admirably illustrated, by Harold Matthews Brett. "America's New Silver City"—tells the romantic story of the Canadian town of Cobalt, which has been transformed into a sort of second Klondike by the discovery of the wonderfully rich silver veins in its neighborhood. Joseph W. Spencer, N. Y. A. C., manager of the American contestants at Athens, tells how the great Marathon race was won. Archibald R. Colquhoun writes entertainingly of the town of Ceuta, "The African Gibraltar." William Morton Payne contributes an informing and judicious appreciation of the late Henrik Ibsen; and there are other articles and numerous photographs reflecting the progress of current events throughout the world.

Collier's for June 9 predicts the nomination of William Jennings Bryan at the next Democratic national convention. Ray Stannard Baker, writing on the subject of "Railroads and Popular Unrest," deduces an interesting and suggestive interpretation of the abilities of the railroad king of the Northwest, James J. Hill.

Harper's Magazine for June opens with an illustrated article by Frederick Trevor Hill, entitled "Decisive Battles of the Law," giving the inside history of the "Scotch" verdict in the trial of Aaron Burr for treason. It is the first of a valuable group of similar papers by Mr. Hill which will appear in Harper's from time to time. H. W. Nevinson, whose recent articles on the African slave-trade have attracted world-wide attention, contributes a fascinating account of a journey through Africa in a native ox-wagon. It is illustrated with photographs. Leaving Africa, the reader is transported in imagination to the city of Philadelphia, of whose characteristics and lovely architecture the etcher, Charles Henry White, writes entertainingly, and illustrates with his own etchings, of which there are five. The president of the Association of American Geographers, Syrus C. Adams, writes about the still mysterious force of "Terrestrial Magnetism," and tells of the various expeditions now engaged in its study in various parts of the world. Mr. Howells takes his readers on another pleasant trip through an English town—that ancient Chester where remains of old Roman ruins are still found cropping up unexpectedly in its cellars and foundations.

Scribner's Magazine for June opens with a plea for "The Larger Training of the American Army," by Capt T. Bentley Mott, U. S. A., who was for six years military attache at Paris, and had during that time every opportunity to observe the armies of England, France, Germany and Russia. Capt. Mott shows that our army is scattered through more than one hundred small posts, and that no officer has an opportunity to command more than a regiment of men. Capt. Mott advocates the establishing of large concentration posts, after the manner of Aldershot, where 30,000 men are all the time under training. The article is in line with real recommendations of the president. A charming nature article by Frank M. Chapman, the well-known ornithologist, gives his impressions of "English Bird Life," with pictures from his own photographs. More of E. S. Curtis' wonderful collection of Indian photographs, which he has been six years in taking, are given in an article by him on "The Tribes of the Northwest Plains."

The May Indoors and Out is chiefly devoted to country houses and their gardens. "Of What Material Shall the House Be Built?" is the title of a series of articles in which practical architects discuss the advantages of building with wood, brick, rough-cast and stone. "A Small Garden in a Village," "The Decorative Value of Vines," "The Delights of Water Gardening" are papers full of useful suggestion to workers in gardens. The beautiful illustrations captivate even the casual reader. "The Moorings," a delightful summer home on one of those rocky islands in Boston harbor, is presented by fine photographic views and proves to be the estate of B. P. Cheney, who married the actress, Julia Arthur.

The June Century is a travel number. There is an account, by Wladyslaw T. Benda, of "Tatra," a mountainous region between Galicia and Hungary. There are word and picture memories of the charming river Marne from its source to Paris by Elizabeth Robins Pennell and Joseph Pennell. Harry Stillwell Edwards, the author of "The Two Runaways," writes of "The Negro and the South," an optimistic, and, for a Southerner, an unusual view of the black man in America. Another of Camille Gronkowski's papers on the historic palaces of Paris deals with the Elysee palace, the official home of the French president; and Ernst von Sesse Wartegg describes with interesting detail the wonderful Alpine trolley partly completed to the Jungfrau peak. In this number also begins the new serial by Anne Warner, creator of the inimitable Susan Clegg. "Seeing France With Uncle John" is the title; and the first chapters promise that Uncle John will prove to be a creation full of humor. Some of the short stories—there are several of them—also have the travel spirit.

The June number of Smith's Magazine opens with an article by Governor Folk that is sure to attract widespread attention. It is the first article that the governor of Missouri has ever written for any magazine. The fact that the writer is spoken of as a presidential possibility makes it of unusual importance to people who take any interest at all in public affairs. The rest of the magazine is full of charm and interest. There are the usual art studies of stage beauties, short stories by Edwin L. Sabin, Elmore Elliott Peake, and others; there are two serials, and there is an interesting special article showing what American pilgrims who visit the pope must go through when they visit the Vatican.

The June issue of Ainslee's contains a charming novelette by Vincent Harper, author of "A Mortgage on the Brain." The story deals with the old Creole life of New Orleans, and is entitled "Maide in Heaven." Another noteworthy feature is May Sinclair's "Mr. and Mrs. Nevill Tyson," Miss Sinclair's previous story, "The Divine Fire," good as it was, had many faults from which this story in Ainslee's is singularly free. There are other stories by W. A. Fraser, F. G. Bassett, Richard W. Child, Frances Wilson, N. E. S. Ely, Parker L. Walter, and Caroline Duer, and two remarkably the essays by Mary Manners and Robert Stewart. The usual departments devoted to theatrical matters and book reviews, and some unusually good poems, complete the number. The cover design is by Florence E. Nosworthy.

The June Popular Magazine contains a very striking novelette dealing with the experiences of a college man who becomes a professional baseball player. The name of the story is "The Game and the Lady," and the author is Charles Kroth Moser, who has made quite a name for himself during the past year as a contributor to leading magazines. Other features of note in this number are the serials by E. Phillips Oppenheim, Richard Marsh, and Louis Tracy, and short stories by Louis Joseph Vance, author of "The Private War;" B. Jenkins Haines, author of "The Black Barque," and "The Wind-Jammers;" B. M. Bower, author of "Chip of the 'Flying U;'" W. B. M. Ferguson, George Bronson Howard, Allan Taylor, Frank Richardson and others.

The June Wood Craft has a description of the furniture factory and selling system of Gustav Stickley at Syracuse. There are many other elaborately illustrated articles for the woodworker, patternmaker and cabinetmaker.

What is so sweet as a bride in June? Then, if ever, she is the center of interest and admiration and love. The Pilgrim, "a magazine for the home," makes the June bride the subject for its beautiful cover page for June, drawn by Allan, and then has a delightful and prettily illustrated article for her special benefit. The breath of early summer is evident on many pages. James McClelland Bailkey contributes a charming article, "From the Land of Legend," illustrated with some remarkable nature photographs. Reginald Wright Kauffman has the sixth of his clever short stories—love and burglar stories, this one entitled, "Cupid, Housebreaker." June 14 is flag day, and "Betsy's Battle Flag," by Minna Irving, is especially appropriate with the picture of the historic house in Philadelphia where Betsy Ross made the first "Old Glory." "The Most Wonderful Man in Alaska," by Katherine Louise Smith, tells of Father William Duncan and his work in this wonderfully interesting province of ours. The illustrations are striking.

"The Hesitation of Gisella," by Edith Macvane, is the title of the novelette which opens the June number of The Smart Set. It is a charming story, the scenes of which are laid in France; the period, however, is modern and the story is of an appealing character which will win for it many admirers. Mary Austin, so well known for her stories of the shepherds on the Western plains, contributes to this number one of her best tales, entitled "At Tlo Juan." It is a tragedy in miniature worked out with remarkable skill. Arthur Stanley Wheeler is again a contributor; "The Violin" is a ghost story, thoroughly fascinating. Amos De Lany is a new writer, but his contribution, "The Strength of His Arms," will cause his name to be remembered. Robert McDonald's "The Reformation of Billy Henderson," is a delightfully humorous tale.

Harper's Bazar for June contains two articles of exceeding interest to women. The first is a paper by Charles Wagner, entitled "The Destiny of Woman," in which the author of "The Simple Life" discusses, in his cheerful, philosophic way a topic of deep interest. The second notable article is by Charlotte Perkins Stetson Gilman, on "The Passing of Matrimony." Mrs. Gilman believes that the present prevalence of bachelor maids and the painful frequence of divorce are both due to the same cause: that the character of our women is changing faster than the character of matrimony.

"The Rebirth of the Corporation" by Judge Peter S. Grosscup in the American Magazine for June is a splendid example of constructive criticism in the treatment of current questions. Instead of exploiting evils, it sets forth a radical but sane remedy for the trust problem. Another important question—Franchises—is treated with cutting satire by John McAuley Palmer in "The Parable of the Pickpocket." A departure in magazine literature is the publication in this number of Charles Klein's successful drama, "The Lion and the Mouse," told in story form by Owen Johnson. Arthur Goodrich describes the picturesque career of Horace Fletcher and throws some new light on "Fletcherism."

The June number of Ten Story Book is out with a bright grassy green cover, very suggestive of spring. Dorothy Dix heads the list of authors, with one of her clever society stories. "The Dregs of Scandal," by Grace G. Bostwick, is an exceptionally strong story of human passion. "Sauce for the Goose," by J. A. Tiffany, is a clever satire. Other stories by Hays Blackman, Philip Martin, Robert Wilkes, Charles Sloan Reid, W. Crawford Sherlock, Helen Palmer.

The June Delineator is a most attractive number, containing the usual array of the latest styles, with the interesting fashion chronicles of Helen Berkeley-Loyd and Edouard La Fontaine, and literary features of the greatest excellence. Burton E. Stevenson contributes the first part of "The Rose of Sharon," a mystery tale that will tax the ingenuity of its readers to solve, and there are short stories by Kathryn Jarboe, and Wolf Von Schierbrand, the former a story of the new Japan, and the latter a Russian narrative. "The President of Quex" is continued.

Tales for June appears in a beautiful new cover and with a list of contents that shows even greater interest than usual. The complete novel in this issue is especially remarkable as being the work of a Danish author, Mathilda Malling. It is actually an American story in subject and spirit—a historical romance of the Revolutionary war. Familiar figures in the early history of the nation—Washington, Gen. Lee, Hamilton, Sir John Johnson and others—are important characters in the romance, which is primarily concerned with the lives of two brothers of Swedish descent, one a patriot and the other a Tory, and with the wife of the latter, whom they both love.

A leading article in the June Success Magazine is "The Tillman of the Armchair," by W. A. Lewis, a trenchant summing up of Senator Tillman. Mr. Tillman comes to the front amazingly in the past few months, and this character sketch is a strong and faithful portrait of this rugged intellectual giant. In "The Human Side of Business" Arthur Warren sketches in entertaining guise the peculiar conditions surrounding the conduct of a great corporation, and emphasizes the demand for the organizing talent, which is so rare in business men. A description of the more intimate side of the character of Miss Ethel Barrymore is given by Gertrude Vivian, in her story of an interview with that charming actress.

The New England Magazine for June is a big Boston number specially dedicated to the interests of the Hub city. Foremost among the articles is one by the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, mayor of Boston, in which he discourses on the "Duties of a Modern Mayor," telling some of the difficulties and discouragements of the situation but laying more stress on the hopeful side and the opportunities which an able and earnest official had to further the welfare of the city of which he is the chief magistrate. In "The National Lancers," John Stuart Barrows gives us a brief history of that body from the time of its organization seventy years ago down to the present date. Portraits of prominent members are given and the whole makes a finely illustrated article on this illustrious military organization.

The June Garden Magazine is an inspiring outdoor number which opens up with a comprehensive review of the gorgeous magnolias, the most beautiful of the early flowering trees. It tells the amateur just which ones he should buy, which locations they suit best, and where it is unsafe to plant the more tender kinds. The value of ornamental grasses as garden plants is ably treated and illustrated. It shows that in this luxe family there are a host of delightful plants which can be used to make all sorts of striking combinations for garden effect.

The June Country Life in America is the annual vacation number—beautifully illustrated and full of suggestive hints to prospective vacationists of both large and small means. "Fishing For the Golden Trout," by A. Radclyffe Dugmore, tells of angling for a unique fish that can be found in but one river in the world. "A Florida Key Cruise," by Vincent Gilpin describes the pleasures of sailing among the keys through the flashing blue of Biscayne bay, in a Long Island sharpie. Arthur Huntington Gleason tells us of the joy of "A Nine Weeks' English Trip for $125," the only unforgetable vacation is. "A Canal Boat Vacation," Ina Grace Tabor tells of a vacation in which each of the twelve people who took it got exactly the thing he went for.

June is not altogether a month of roses and poetry. The June number of Farming is intensely practical and its leading articles point out large money making possibilities in various departments of farm activities. "The Profits of Breeding Draft Horses" tells by actual facts and figures what is being accomplished by some Middle West farmers who are breeding horses from Percheron blood as a very profitable side line. A government expert in the bureau of forestry shows how the woodlot is one of the most important features of a farm.

The Housekeeper for June is preeminently a bride's number. Janet Gordon Ogilvie tells of the giving of gifts to the bride; Marjorie March contributes hints for pretty weddings and the decoration of the home; "A Rose Wedding in June" is by Elizabeth W. Morrison; and there are talks concerning the years to come in the bride's life by Millicent Moore. There is also an abundance of interesting fiction.

The June World's Work cover a wide range of subjects. The leading article is M. G. Cunniffs superbly illustrated description of "The New State of Oklahoma," with stories of life and work in the territories which will soon be a commonwealth. A. T. Prince, one of the engineers in charge, tells of a marvelous feat of engineering in "Bridging the Gorge of the Zambesi," with the aid of the unusual photographs. Another elaborately illustrated article is "The Scenic Marvel of Idaho," by William H. Kirkbride, which describes a thousand mile stream that flows through a land of wonders. In "A Mayor of all the People," Isaac F. Marcosson tells the picturesque human interest story of J. N. Adam of Buffalo, who is conducting the city government as a great business is conducted.

The June Lippincott's opens with "Two in a Fog," a complete novelette of compelling interest by William H. Babcock. This is a story of love and adventure around the oyster-beds of Chesapeake Bay, a bed which has not been overworked by the fictionist and which abounds in material ripe to his hand. "Two in a Fog" opens in a fog and closes in a fog—yet its quality of humor is bright enough to penetrate even the atmosphere that has made London famous. Mr. Babcock's books "The Tower of Wye" and "Fort Gent Manor" met with much success and their implied promise is amply fulfilled in this new novel.

Earthquakes, volcanoes and San Francisco are naturally the dominant notes of the June issue of The World Today, for these are subjects in which all the world is interested at the present time. As usual with this magazine, which gives so much value for fifteen cents, the illustrations, particularly those relating to the recent catastrophes, are very fine. Those on "Going Fishing," an appropriate topic for the vacation season, are also specially good. The lively discussions in congress over the railway rate bill make timely Judson W. Midgley's contribution on the subject of "Rate Regulation and Railway Pools." As one of those who have had a hand in fixing rates, he writes from the inside.

There is as much important and entertaining reading in McClure's for June as one would expect to find in a volume let alone a single number of a magazine. The leading story is "Buried Treasure" by Stewart Edward White, which combines romance and reality most suggestively and which goes with a swing reminiscent of Stevenson. Ray Stannard Baker contributes the sixth of his series "The Railroads on Trial," telling the astonishing story of how Danville, Virginia, has wrested between prosperity and ruin because of its struggle with the Southern railway. Burton J. Hendrick continues the story of life insurance with a resume of the work of Elizur Wright, the pioneer, who made the failure of a life-insurance company a mathematical impossibility, and who gave the Equitable, the New York Life and the Mutual, the strength to withstand the awful test of the last twelve months.

The Popular Science Monthly for June opens with an interesting and important article concerning varfiations in plants and animals by President David Starr Jordan of Stanford university. This subject is dominant in modern biology, and President Jordan is especially competent to discuss it. One of his general conclusions is that the inside of the animal tells us what it is, and the outside, where its ancestors have been. Dr. A. F. Chamberlain, of Clark university, discusses the human side of the Indian, with which he has had intimate experience. Prof. C. H. Eigenmann gives an account of the fresh-water fishes of South and middle America with abundant illustrations.

The special features of the June number of the Review of Reviews are illustrated articles of the San Francisco fire and the city's future by ex-Mayor James D. Phelan. President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Dr. E. T. Devine and Samuel E. Moffett; a discussion of fire insurance problems by Louis Windmuller; a geologist's explanation of earthquake phenomena, by N. H. Darton; a forecast of the Pan-American conference to be held at Rio this summer, by Charles M. Pepper; a character sketch of George Clemenceau, "The Warwick of French Politics," by W. T. Stead; an account of the long and interesting career of Carl Schurz, by Fabian Franklin; an article on "The Indian of Today and Tomorrow," by Charles M. Harvey, illustrated with many photographs of prominent Indian personalities; a description of the successful methods of rice-culture adopted in Texas and Louisiana, by Robert S. Lanier; and "What the People Read in Canada," by P. T. McGrath.

National interests have the foremost place in the June Atlantic. The leading article is a vigorous and timely discussion of the questions that are certain to be brought to the front at the coming Hague conference. It is written by Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace society. The article on the "Distribution of Wealth" is a masterly exposition of the aristocratic, the Socialistic and the Democratic theories on this subject. Socialists will not like it. The Oregon experiment with an equal suffrage referendum, to be tried in June, is the subject of a suggestive article by Frank Foxcroft. He thinks we should "go slow" in tinkering with constitutional safeguards. A feature of special interest to Duluthians is a story, "A Writer of Words," by Margaret Cooper McGiffert of this city.

The cover design of the June number of Recreation, by Frank Tenney Johnson, is in full colors. The leading article, "With the Free in Arizona," by Julian A. Dimock, relates much of interest about Navajo Indians and is illustrated from remarkably good photographs. George Carling's article, "Trying Out a Motor Canoe," while instructive, is at the same time a good story. There are two illustrations from photographs.

The June number of The Four-Track News teems with articles and items of interest and value, from the leader, which is entitled "A Star in the Wilderness," and describes beautiful Star lake in the western edge of the Adirondacks, to the closing pages of dramatic notes and dates of many of the great conventions. In an article entitled, "By the 'River of the Vineyards,'" Mary Catherine Crowley tells the story of Monroe, Mich., and in "New Zealand's Yosemite," the wonders of that country, its mighty mountains and deep gashed fiords are portrayed by J. Cowan; Leila Weeks Wilson tells of Boston's "Literary Thoroughfare," and also of "The Paul Revere Birthplace;" "With the Birds," by George Wharton James, is a particularly interesting description of some of the California aviaries, and most satisfying to the reader will be "A Catskill Reverie," by Charles B. Wells; "Among the Lakes of Michigan," by L. F. Brown, breathes the joy of the camper.

The American Boy is bidding high for public favor when it runs, as it does in its June number, stories by Edward Stratemeyer, Horatio Alger, Jr., Clarence Hawkes, the blind naturalist, J. L. Harbour, Tudor Jenks, Ernest Gilmore, Will Lexington Comfort, Helen Leah Read and Fred Myron Colby. Among the matter of special interest in this number, outside of stories by the prominent writers named, are sketches of Senator Beveridge, Auguste Rodin, John Christian Watson, Prof. John Milne and the late Paul Laurance Dunbar; the story of a "Wild Elk Round-up;" instruction as to "How to Play Baseball," and "How to Select and Use Firearms with Safety."

Pen and camera have thoroughly acquainted the outside world with the material effects of the California earthquake. The mental effects of the experience have not hitherto been recorded. The Youth's Companion of June 7 is able to offer such a record in a contribution by Prof. William James, who, at the time of the earthquake, was lecturing at Leland Stanford university. The Harvard professor of philosophy evidently rejoiced that, if there must be an earthquake, he was in it, since he was enabled to confirm or readjust his preconceived theories at first hand.

The June number of the North American Review opens with a striking and impressive article, in which an anonymous writer makes "An Appeal to our Millionaires" to take measures to appease the discontent which prevails throughout the community at the present enormous accumulation of property in a few hands. Wayne MacVeagh insists upon the reasonableness of legislation providing for "The Graduated Taxation of Incomes and Inheritances." Dr. George Woodruff Johnston, in a thoughtful article, considers "The Effects of School Life Upon the Health of Children." Charles Waldstein examines existing "Social Ideals" in an article which he was moved to write after reading "The House of Mirth."

The Engineering Magazine for June, in a leading article by J. K. Freitag, C. E., points out the most striking and important lesson yet drawn from the San Francisco disaster. The totals of loss of life and property there—universally considered appalling, because concentrated in a single instance—Mr. Freitag shows are more than equaled by the average annual aggregates in the United States. The number has fine illustrated articles on "Transportation in the Philippines," on the "Machinery for the Panama Canal," on "Heavy Motable Vehicles," on "High-Speed Steel Tools," on "Economy in the Drafting Room" and on the new Cobalt Camp in Ontario, and a strong argument for the cause of the army engineer as an able and efficient director of government engineering work.

"Take it from me," writes Alfred Henry Lewis in the June number of Human Life, "that, if the magazines have turned muck-rakes, it is solely, wholly for the sake of private gain. Muck-raking as a spectacle is pleasant to the public. The public will buy the magazine; thereby a profit, both in circulation and in advertising, is assured. Why does the public like muck-raking as a performance? I don't know. If you who read, and the rest of the world, were all in the garden of Eden, the left of you would rush out to see a dog fight. I don't know why. I don't know why ten thousand people w... come to see you throw a building down, while ten won't come to see you build one. In short, for reasons known to Providence but not to me, destruction is popular. Folk will travel weary miles and waste a week, for the gruesome privilege of seeing some one hanged. By the same token, they will buy a magazine in which some rogue senator is being flayed. Briefly, muck-raking pays. Wherefore, wherever there is muck, there the muck-rake will go raking. And the reason of such raking will be the world-received reason of dollars and dimes."

That a people professedly Christian can make the cruel bull-fight its national pastime, and also indulge in the latter statedly on Sundays, is something which puzzles and shocks every civilized visitor to Spain. In the current number of Leslie's Weekly Eleanor Franklin, in a special letter from Madrid, graphically describes the desecration of Easter Sunday at the Spanish capital by exhibitions of this barbaric sport, which were witnessed by an immense crowd of persons of all classes. A page of photographs accompanies the story, which cannot fail to impress every reader. The great pictorial feature of this issue is a magnificent panorama of San Francisco's fire-swept area, a photograph taken by means of kites at an altitude of 1,000 feet, and showing six square miles of ruins. This remarkable aerial picture is forty-six inches long, occupies four full pages, and is in the form of a supplement.

Counterfeits.

Read what one of the GREATEST NEWSPAPERS IN AMERICA has to say on this subject:

"The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trademark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

BUSY MONTH FOR CREWS

Duluth Oarsmen Will Row in Three Regattas in July.

Big Event of Year Will be Held at Minnetonka.

July will be a busy month for the oarsmen of the Duluth Boat club, no less than three regattas being scheduled to take place between July 10 and July 28.

On July 10 the Duluth regatta will be held to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the formation of the club. Crews will be here from Fort William and Port Arthur. Fort William is planning to send a junior and senior four, the two fours combining to row in the eight-oared race against Duluth. Port Arthur will also send a four, making a three-cornered race for the four-oared crews.

On July 21 the Fort William club will hold its regatta, and Duluth has promised to send crews for a return race. Two fours will probably be sent, and the crews will combine to row in the eight, as the Fort William crews will do in Duluth. Port Arthur will also be represented in this regatta.

The big event of the year, however, will be the regatta which will be held by the Minnesota Boat club of St. Paul, at Lake Minnetonka. At least five clubs will be represented at this regatta, and possibly more. St. Paul, Winnipeg, Duluth, Rat Portage and Fort William will send crews. The program of races will include junior and senior fours, junior and senior eights and junior and senior doubles. It is not known as yet what crews Duluth will send down, but the club will probably be represented in all of the events. The number of crews sent depends largely on the showing made in the preliminary training, and the success met with in the regatta on July 10. The club is prepared to send as many crews as can be counted on to make a good showing.

The date of the regatta at Lake Minnetonka has not yet been definitely settled, but it will be some time between July 10 and July 30. It will be the biggest rowing event held in the Northwest in years, and will probably mark the revival of the old Northwestern Rowing association, with its annual regattas.

The first club regatta will probably be held two weeks from today, when the opening series of races for the medals will be rowed. There will be races between the junior and senior fours, and possibly an eight-oared race. The regatta will be followed by a dance in the evening.

The weather has been a little more favorable to the training work this week, but it still leaves much to be desired. The two new motor boats are being fitted up, and the coaches will use one of them next week in pacing the crews over the course, and instructing them. There are now two senior fours and two junior fours turning out regularly every evening, the senior eight-oared crew being picked largely from the two senior fours.

GOLF TOURNAMENT.

Play Will be Commenced in the Two Handicap Events.

Granted fine weather, the first round in the handicap events of the spring tournament of the Northland Country club, will be run off today.

Play will also be continued in the open event for the club championship, which is narrowing down to the finals.

SPORTING COMMENT

Things begin to look natural again, with Duluth up in the neighborhood of first place. The atmosphere is much clearer and more exhilarating, the higher you get.

The White Sox are now the only Western team in the first division, but we are getting along nicely, thank you, and enjoy it up in the higher altitudes.

If the White Sox play the kind of ball they put up yesterday the anvil chorus will die a peaceful and sudden death from want of nourishment.

Yesterday was ladies' day. "This would be a lovely game if the umpire was only fair," said one of the fans of the gentler sex. There's the proper spirit

It's all right for the Chicago Cubs to have a feeling of resentment against the New York Giants, but there is no humanity or even common decency, in carrying it as far as they did Thursday. The score of 19 to 0, made against Matthewson and McGinnity, shows a spirit that would be more suited to the bitter class wars of Russia than to a free American country. The previous score of 6 to 0 should have been revenge enough, and when the Cubs showed their vindictive spirit by such appalling slaughter, right-minded fans turned against them. Matthewson could find a job right here in Duluth, if needs it, so strong is this feeling of sympathy.

As compared with umpiring in the Three Eye league, lion taming is a mild form of parlor amusement. They eat 'em alive down in Iowa. One umpire got brained with a boulder down there the other day, and the others are quitting because they are receiving letters from fans who threaten to blow them off the face of nature with infernal machines if they dare show themselves again on the grounds. Nice people down in Iowa.

"Si" Bennett is making good down in Springfield, and the Chicago papers have been saying nice things about him. He won a game last week with a two-bagger in the ninth inning, and pulled off a circus catch. If "Si" only has some duplicate parts along to make repairs promptly, when he bangs himself up, he ought to last through the season, and end up in faster company next fall.

The Boston Nationals and the Boston Americans continue their mad race for the subway championship. The Americans made a record of twenty straight defeats, but the Nationals are coming back with an unbroken string of nineteen. The Nationals have won twelve games out of forty-seven, and the Americans thirteen out of forty-five. It's almost enough to make a Bostonian admit that Boston is not the center of the universe.

Those American assciation managers do love one another so. The friendly feeling of brotherhood was promoted by the row over the presidency, and yesterday Tebeau and Padden were arrested in Louisville for trying to mar one another's features. The eight of them might get together with Gatling guns at ten yards and fight it out.

The much discussed question of supremacy between the eastern and western teams of the Northern and Copper Country league would be satisfactorily settled if Duluth would only consent to being frozen out of the first division bunch. There's the rub. The Sox show a tendency to hang on, and even to climb.

Three regattas in one month should keep the Duluth Boat club oarsmen busy. It would seem quite like old times if the Duluth men could go down to Minnetonka again and walk away with the junk.

The members of the Duluth Yacht club, who own boats of their own, will have to fight the young ladies away with clubs this summer. It's pleasant enough at any time to own a young man with a sailboat, but the White City-sailboat combination opens up endless vistas of pleasure this summer.

Cornell again appears to have the fastest of the college crews, and Courtney is getting the reputation in the rowing world that Yost has in football. If Yale ever sheds her mantle of exclusiveness and rows Cornell, there should be an interesting race.

WILL NOT ALLOW GARRELS' RECORD.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 9.—Director Baird of the Michigan Athletic association has received notification from the managing committee of the conference that John Garrels' record of 15 1-5 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles has been disallowed.

The reason given is that two of the timers caught the time as 15 2-5, and only one as 15 1-5.

No explanation is given as to how it happened that the time was announced by the officials as 15 1-5. Garrels has been receiving congratulations for having tied Kranzlein's world's record in the high hurdles, but the amended time drops him back into the common run of hurdlers.

Garrels broke the world's record in the discus last year, but it was disallowed on a technicality.

COURTNEY PICKS CORNELL'S CREWS.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 9.—Coach Courtney has picked his four-oared crew after a week's competition. The following men were chosen to represent Cornell in that race on the Hudson: Bow, Walsh; 2, Gracey; 3, Acklin; stroke, Goodier.

The Cornell crews will leave for Poughkeepsie this afternoon and Courtney will take along the largest delegation of oarsmen that Cornell has ever sent to the big regatta. Besides the varsity, freshmen and four-oared crews, two additional combinations for four-oared crews will be taken, in the event that they beat out the regulars in the last minute. The crews had a long row Thursday night, after which the varsity and "fresh" engaged in one of the liveliest scraps of the season.

The freshman four, composed of McCutcheon, bow; McEllum, 2; Piellet, 3; Hamburg, stroke, has proved its worth in scraps on the lake and will also be taken along. The other men who will enjoy a few days' sojourn at the Oaks are as follows:

Varsity—Newman, bow; aBrton, 2; Stewell, 3; Dobbs, 4; Gavette, 5; Cox, 6; Lee, 7; Foote, stroke; Taylor, coxswain.

Freshmen—Bulle, bow; Wurst, 2; Clarke, 3; Simpson, 4; Comiant, 5; Waider, 6; Vall, 7; Weed, stroke; Sloan, coxswain.

AMERICAN SPORTSMEN LEADING THE WORLD.

New York, June 9.—The American sportsmen have the world beaten. The recent triumph of the Americans in the Olympic games was complete; Willie Hoppe has just established an absolute mastery over the billiard world; horsemen on the other side have their choice of getting American jockeys or losing their races; Travis holds the amateur golf championship of England! James J. Jeffries is far above any fighter the old world could produce; Frank Kramer has just defeated the pick of Europe's cyclists in the international matches in London; Jay Gould beat every court tennis player in England save only the champion, and Miss May Sutton outclasses the best women tennis players of England. Of the twenty-two Olympic records nineteen are now held in this country.

THE GIANTS MUST HURRY

When the Chicago Cubs Strike the East, Says Murnane.

Western Team is Much the Better on the Road.

Boston, June 9.—At this writing Boston is honored with the tail-end clubs of two major leagues, the Americans running away with the honors from the start, while the band of players handled by Fred Tenney made a game struggle before they were landed in the last hole on Decoration day as the result of P. Donovan's Brooklyn boys playing improved baseball. I look for both teams to take a brace—the Collins men a substantial one, while the Tenney boys will have trouble to beat out any of the other seven clubs for last place.

The New York Giants managed to get back from the West in a good position, but must keep moving, for the Chicago team is a fine road crowd and will hustle for some time yet. Grit and staying powers are bound to tell in both leagues more than ever this season. The old pitchers are due for some good work from this on, and batting averages will take a tumble for the young players.

The major leagues will scour the country as never before this season for the best of the young talent, and I look for the Tri-State league to receive a call from those looking for talent that has strayed from the straight path. Sooner or later open war must be declared between organized ball and this independent outlaw organization, who have defied even the major leagues and failed to hold sacred any law in baseball, and the only ones they dare discipline are the blacklisted men for contract jumping, who have no other league to go to. Every man under reserve to clubs under organized ball is considered the property of these clubs, no matter how many contracts he may have signed with the Pennsylvania league.

Red Donahue of the Detroit club, and Umpire Connor of the American league, are two men now in baseball who were with Mike Kelley during the siege of Allentown in 1894.

It was a strenuous campaign along independent lines, as Kelley was to have what he made out of the business, Al Johnson, the railroad man, getting his money out of the travel over the railroad that ran from the center of the town to the park about three miles out in the country. Milligan, George Wood and Joe Mulvey were also on Kelley's staff of players, and Mulvey was putting up a swell game at third base, just as clever as he did several years for the Philadelphia League club.

At that time Gus Schmelz was managing the Washington club. Schmelz was known far and wide as "Whiskers," from a luxurious growth of hair that covered the lower half of his face. Ban Johnson, who was then doing baseball for the Cincinnati Commercial, dubbed Schmelz "Feather Face." It seems that Harry Weldon and Ban Johnson were called on to interview the Washington manager one night at a hotel in Cincinnati, after the baseball man had retired. Mr. Schmelz gave the scribes a fearful roasting for daring to annoy him after he had retired for the night. Johnson and Weldon were no easy marks for managers, and from that on Schmelz's whiskers were advertised all over the circuit with cuts and comments, but still they grew. In fact, it was said at the time that Mr. Schmelz gave the signals to his players from the bench by using his whiskers.

The Washington club was short on a third baseman, and Manager Schmelz sent a long telegram to Manager Mike Kelley, saying he would pay a good price for the release of Joe Mulvey.

Kelley went to Mulvey and said: "I can get a nice piece of money from Washington for your release, and I will split the coin with you. What do you say?" Mulvey wouldn't listen to the proposition, saying that he was having the time of his life, and too well satisfied to look for trouble in the big league again. "All right, Joe," answered the king. "It's all off, and I will communicate the decision to headquarters in Washington."

It was the 3rd of July, and the telegram read:

"Manager Schmelz, Washington, D. C.: You can have Joe Mulvey on condition that at sunrise eomorrow you set off a bunch of firecrackers in your whiskers.—M. J. Kelley." Although the day named was the glorious Fourth of July, the Washington manager refused to disturb his whiskers, and the deal was off.

Although the boys had a heap of sport with Mr. Schmelz, he was nevertheless a fine fellow, and knew baseball from all angles. The trouble was that Gus was far ahead of the players he had under him, and he failed to get results, simply because his men were as a team below the standard of the times, and no man can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. Then, too, Mr. Schmelz failed to quite understand why the newspaper men should insist on running his business, and this brought down upon his head the clever squibs of the Fourth Estate.

The difference between Schmelz and men of the Frank Selee and Harry Wright stamp was that the two latter would be delighted to see a newspaper man at any time or place, and give him all the information they could, while Mr. Schmelz didn't quite see where the boys got off at.

Messrs. Wright and Selee would court ideas from the newspaper fraternity, and picked up many a good point from that source, for they were forever prying into things through player and reporter, and nothing escaped either man, while appearing to take no particular notice of what was going on around them.

Both Selee and Wright coached their teams from the bench, and insisted on playing with signals, but were under cover, while Gus Schmelz acted as if he wanted it known. I have seen Frank Selee signal plays with his score card, and Harry Wright with his little scorebook, and by the way, Harry Wright was perhaps the best scorer known to the game. His system has delighted the professional scorer, and his form is the popular one today, although under the name of the J. C. Morse book.

At the present time you will find most of the bench managers with a score card by way of sporting the game. Very few of these managers, however, care for the card, but it gives them something to do during the exciting time, and a chance to cool off while anxious to call down a player.

Yacht Races.

The regular weekly program of races will be held by the members of the Duluth Yacht club this afternoon. There will be a race for 22-foot catboats and one for 28-foot sloops. The courses will not be selected until just before the starting gun has been fired.

HELD A WORLD'S MARK AN HOUR

Sir Joseph Won Citizens' Stakes at Lexington in 1886.

Lexington, Ky., June 9.—De Mund, Paul J. Rainey's $45,000 Juvenile Stakes winner, on the dam side traces to No. 15 family of the Bruce Lowe figure system. Like imp. Sysonby, he is the first foal of his dam, Graciosity, a young mare now 7 years old, and she is the first foal of Gracioza, the dam of Grazilallo. The latter mare was out of Glendora, by imp. Glenelge, Glendora being a sister to Sir Joseph and a half sister to Ollie, the dam of Aloha. The latter horse once sold for $29,000 and is the sire of the American Derby winner, Robert Waddell.

Sir Joseph was a brilliant stake winner in 1886. He had the unique distinction of holding the world's record at a mile and a quarter, the distance of the Suburban, Brighton, Brooklyn and other big Eastern handicaps, for about an hour. In the fall of 1886 he won the Citizens' Stakes at Lexington, this distance, in 2:07¾, knocking off a quarter of a second from the previous best record, and the same afternoon La Sylphide beat his mark by a quarter of a second. Susie Linwood, the dam of Glendora, Sir Joseph and Ollie, was a granddaughter of Emma Wright, the dam of Mollie Jackson, the latter being the best mare of her day. She won at four miles in 7:33 and at three miles in 5:35½, 5:34¾ and 5:25½. The third heat of this race is still a world's record. Mollie Jackson is the great grandam of Foxhall, the most sensational American bred horse J. R. Keene ever raced abroad. He won the Grand Prix de Paris, Grand Duke Stakes, Ceaserwitch and Cambridgeshire Handicap and other races as a 3-year-old.

In the latter race he carried 129 pounds and defeated Lucy Glitters, Tristan, Peter, Ben d'Or and twenty-seven others. Rosebery won these two great handicaps in the same year previous to Foxhall, but he was a 4-year-old, and even an older horse than he was, he carried less weight than Keene's remarkable 3-year-old. From a family which has already given the turf as superior a horse as Foxhall, De Mund has license to prove a sensation. Graciosity, his dam, is by imp. Juvenal, while Gracioza, his grandam, is by Ben Ali, which son of Virgil won the Kentucky Derby for J. B. Haggin in 1888, Blue Wing's year. Imp. Glenelge got his third dam and his fourth dam, Susie Linwood, was by Judge Leonard, a son of Zero, by Boston. Lexington got his next dam and then came Emma Wright, a daughter of imp. Margrave, a Saint Leger winner.

ONLY A SINGLE NEW RECORD

Made in Eastern Intercollegiate Track and Field Season.

For the first time in many years the Eastern intercollegiate track and field season has closed with only a single new record set up and a very mediocre performances recorded in the various dual and other meets of the year. This is due, however, not to any lack of ability on the part of the athletes, but to a combination of circumstances over which they had no control. The first of these was a remarkably cool and backward spring, and the second the most inauspicious weather conditions at Cambridge, that ever marred an intercollegiate championship meet.

No athlete can become "fit" in cold and damp weather and this state of affairs was a continual handicap to Eastern men all year. But even this would have been forgotten had the weather conditions at Cambridge been even approximately ideal. They were, mowever, the very reverse of this.

A comparison of all the records made in the East this spring brings out the interesting fact that of the thirteen best records made during the spring season just two of them were made at the intercollegiate championships, all the others being credited to the dual meets. And, if Horr of Syracuse, is disqualified, the number of records credited to Cambridge will be reduced to just one. Yet the competition at Cambridge was very keen indeed in every race, a sufficient proof that the weather conditions are to be blamed for the poor records.

The following table gives the best records made during the year in the thirteen standard events by Eastern men:

The 100-Yard Dash—Whitham, Pennsylvania college; Dodge, Harvard college; record, 0:10.

The 220-Yard Dash—Whithman, Pennsylvania college; Dodge, Harvard college; record, 0:21 4-5.

The 440-Yard Dash—Dives, Harvard college; record, 0:21 4-5.

*The 880-Yard Run—Terry, Pennsylvania college; record, 1:58 2-5.

Mile Run—Haskins, Pennsylvania college; record, 4:28 3-5.

Two-mile Run—Stone, Harvard college; record, 9:49 4-5.

The 120-Yard Hurdles—Armstrong, Princeton college; record, 0:15 3-5.

The 220-Yard Hurdles—Hubbard, Amherst college; record, 0:24 3-5.

Broad Jump—Sheffield, Yale college; record, 23 feet 7¼ inches.

High Jump—Marshall, Yale college; record, 6 feet 1 inch.

Hammer Throw—Horr, Syracuse college; record, 147 feet 9½ inches.

Shot Put—Stephenson, Harvard college; record, 44 feet 9¼ inches.

Pole Vault—Jackson, Cornell college; Grant, Harvard college; record, 11 feet 10¾ inches.

ALL SWELLED UP.

Tommy Burns Now Aspires to be a Fashion Plate.

Chicago, June 9.—Tommy Burns is world's heavyweight champion by grace of the greatest good luck. He has become perhaps the most unpopular champion the ring has ever seen. But even that would be forgiven him if he had a little more realization of his real status in the game. But when he came to Chicago, after his Los Angeles fight, one would have thought that the prince of Wales was making another tour. Tommy dressed himself up in a silk hat. Prince Willy, gold-headed cane and strutted around the streets, telling everybody he was the heavyweight champion of the world, and could lick his weight in wild cats. Honestly, to look at him one would have thought that he was a great captain of finance instead of a fighter.

YOUNG CORBETT

Still Looking for Something That Does Not Require Training.

Chicago, June 9.—It seems that Young Corbett refused to learn his lesson and will continue to go along and engage in fights without paying any attention to his condition, until he becomes the joke of the ring. Corbett took on some fellow down East, the other night, and came near getting another trimming, being saved only by the fact that the other fellow was an awful dub, and didn't know when he had things coming his way. As long as Corbett confines his lickings to the top-notchers he can go along and get a little money as a trial horse, but when it gets so that the third and fourth raters trim him, it is hard to tell what he will get. It is too bad that such men get into prominent places in the game, for when they go their pace it hurts every honest fighter connected with the sport.

GOPHERS MAY PLAY AT DENVER NEXT FALL.

Appleton, Wis., June 9.—"Deacon" Koehler has received word from Manager Reid of the University of Minnesota football team that he is willing to take his team to Denver to play the University of Denver, which will be coached by Koehler next fall. Koehler believes a contract between the two schools will be agreed upon.

He has turned down Wisconsin, as the Badger manager asked $4,000 for the trip, saying "Wisconsin will need the money next year." Koehler asked Wisconsin for Nov. 24, but was informed the Madison eleven was to play Nebraska that day. He received a letter from Stagg today, however, saying the midway team was to play Nebraska Nov. 2.

When I first announced to the Duluth fans that the White Sox could beat the Giants, what happened? The people laughed at me. My own grasp of the situation had been obtained through a lifetime of patient study of baseball conditions, but the difficulty was to make the fans see it as I saw it. And now at the close of this, the first game of the series, I believe that I am fairly entitled to say that I have carried my point, and that the message I had to deliver to the fans of the city, was a true one.

But that is nothing to what I will show you in the two remaining games of the series. I have proved that my assertions were worthy of consideration. In the next issue of this Great Family Journal I will go further and show to the American people the condition as it actually exists, stripped bare of the mantle of deceit in which it has been enveloped by the System, and allow the naked facts to stand put for themselves.

Even while I write this message to the people, the second act in this drama is being enacted. The Giants and the White Sox are fighting out the second battle in this struggle for supremacy, and before the message can reach the hands of all the people, another link in the chain of my evidence will have been forged.

If you will remember the details of the league standing, which have been placed before you many times, you will recall that the Giants were standing second in the league race and the White Sox third. With these elements of the story before you, I will lift the curtain of the first scene at Athletic park. About the time of which I speak, there was a young pitcher on the Duluth team by the name of Treadway, otherwise known as "Tread." This young man was a pitcher with all the curves that are requisite for an expert slab artist—a man who has barrels of speed when he is in form, and one who is rarely downed.

This was the young man chosen to pitch against the Giants in the first game of the series at Athletic park, on that eventful seventh day of May, 1906. Opposing him was a pitcher named Beecher, equally young, equally speedy, and with an equal supply of curves.

The result can be guessed. With two such pitchers at each other's throats, it was war to the knife. No quarter was asked, and none was given.

But Beecher entered this fight handicapped. His support was weak, and at critical times when he relied upon it to pull him out of a hole, it fell down. Treadway, on the other hand, was backed up in splendid style, and rallied his forces about him at crucial points.

There you have the skeleton of the story, and the secret of the victory won by the White Sox.

In my summing up chapters, I now propose to show you how Treadway and his gang, after refusing to allow the Giants anything like a chance to win, went in and profiting by the weakness of Beecher's support, batted out a victory. Nothing will be concealed, and any statements I may make, I am prepared to back in the courts.

Treadway and his crowd did not even have the decency to wait until the game had progressed a little way, but in the open glare of the limelight, and after two men had been retired in the first inning, O'Dea was hit by a pitched ball. Barto hit a hot one which went through the center fielder to the fence, and O'Dea scored.

Not content with their ill-gotten gains, Treadway, O'Dea and their crowd came back for more in the seventh. McCormick was given a base on balls, and Lovett reached first on Brand's error. Krick forced McCormick at third, and Adams hit for two bases scoring Lovett. Krick scored on a fielder's choice, which failed to catch Treadway at first.

These are the facts of the case, set down as I saw them transpire, and I will allow the fans to pass upon them for themselves.

"Lawson," said O'Dea to me, as I left the grandstand, "we can beat them. I feel confident that we can beat them."

In the next installment of my story, I will endeavor to faithfully portray the events that are transpiring even as I give this story to the publishers. Beside those facts, the recital of these incidents will seem tame and insipid.

FARGO LOSES AGAIN.

Plays Ragged Field Game and is Outclassed by Hancock.

Fargo, June 9.—Special to The Herald.)—Hancock again administered a crushing defeat to Fargo here yesterday afternoon, taking the second game of the series by the score of 11 to 4. Fargo put up a ragged game in the field, and in the second inning errors by Mehl and Fitzgerald, together with a base on balls, a sacrifice and two hits, gave the visitors five runs. From that time on, Fargo never had a show to win out, and Hancock held the lead until the finish. Ferguson and Hopkins were both batted freely.

Louisville, Ky., June 9.—A vicious fistic encounter, which terminated in the arrest of President Tebeau of the Louisville club and Manager Padden of the St. Paul team, enlivened the game yesterday afternoon. The trouble originated over a decision by Pitcher Kenna of Louisville, who, with Drill, of the St. Paul club, was umpiring the game in the absence of Owens, the latter having been injured by a batted ball Thursday. Kenn's decision on a balk was followed by an exchange of blows with Padden. The police at first arrested Kenna, whereupon Tebeau interfered. The officers then arrested Tebeau on the charge of interfering with an officer and Padden on a charge of disorderly conduct. Both gave bonds. Kenna was released, Padden having struck the first blow. UNFITS HIM FOR PLAY

OLLIE ANDERSON,
Popular Umpire Says Ball Player Cannot Fight the Umpire and Play Ball at the Same Time.

"A ball player can't play ball and fight the umpire at the same time," said "Ollie" Anderson, who has been handing the indicator at the league games played in Duluth up to Thursday.

"When a ball player is holding a grudge against the umpire, part of his mind is on that. He can't concentrate his attention on the game, and he is constantly thinking of how to get even with the umps.

"There is nothing that will put a team to the bad quicker than to have three or four get sore at the umpire, and hold a grudge against him throughout the game.

"There are some things a man may be able to do better when he is angry than when he is self-possessed, but playing ball isn't one of them.

"The only way to do, is to leave all kicking to the captain of the team. If he makes his protest in a gentlemanly way, and does not try to take the game out of the umpire's hands and run it himself, he is in no danger of being fined. The players should keep their positions. They have no right to come running into the field, shaking their fists at the umpire. It is not fair to the spectators. It is not fair to the umpire, and it is not fair to the players themselves. They don't play as good ball as if they kept their places and their tempers, and let the captain do the kicking.

"You sometimes hear of a team becoming chronic kickers when they lose. I think there is something in the reverse proposition, that a team loses when the players develop into chronic kickers.

"The pitchers have every advantage nowadays. It is really quite a remarkable thing when a player makes a fair, clean hit, when you come to think of it. The chances are all against it, and the tendency is to draw the lines as tightly as possible on the pitcher in regard to balls and strikes, in order to increase the hitting. Where there is any doubt about a ball grazing the corner of the plate, the benefit should be given the batter.

"I believe that 99 per cent of the umpires intend to be honest in their decisions. They can't afford to be anything else. The fans and the players would get wise to them in a day, if they were not and the only capital an umpire has is his reputation. If he hopes to ever get into bigger leagues, the only way he can do it is by making a name for fairness and accuracy.

"I wish that the fines were lower this year. The lowest fine is $5. There are times when an umpire would impose a fine of $3 where he would not want to fine a player $5. The $3 fine might stop him from developing into a chronic kicker, while if he is allowed to go on unmolested, he can make all kinds of trouble for an umpire."

Anderson's work, so far in Duluth, has been of a high order. On bases and on points of fielding, he is without a peer among the umpires who have been seen in Duluth during the last two years, and dead-square Southern gentlemen in the Benning ring on the big days that no layer who becomes familiar with the countenances of them likes to take a chance on turning their down. The Clown finished third last year, my man with his Southern accent didn't settle within the period embraced by the book-makers' almanac, 24 hours. I asked about him at the desk of the leading Washington he had named, but they didn't know him. He sliced four other players for a thousand each—on the same race, I understand, taking a different horse with each man, but winning with none of them. There was less excuse for the others falling for his game than there was for me, for he had previously played less with them than he did with me.

"This was a very exceptional case, of course. In about nine cases out of ten the man who to avoid inconveniences in paying over large amounts of currency desires to become a credit bettor on the horses in the main ring, has got to be passed along and stood for by some moneyed regular at the game whose word is as good as his money. And even then the layer has to take a chance on standing for a welch. The sponsor for a new man in the ring holds himself officially responsible for the man he introduces only up to a certain point. After the new man has been doing business in the ring, taking down winnings and making good losses for a little while, he is then considered to be on his own footing, and his sponsor can't be looked to for a make-good in the case of a welch on the part of the man for whom he has originally stood.

"Of course, if the new man welches at once, a very rare thing—the sponsor feels himself bound to come to the front for the amount of the welch at settling-up time. The sponsors who hold themselves indefinitely responsible for the men they introduce in the ring are as scarce as rainy days in Death Valley, but, at that, I did business with one of this kind at Sheepshead Bay only last year.

"The sponsor was a very well-known man in the game, a broker of wealth, who has been racing horses of his own breeding for many years, and what is unusual among that class of owners, getting not only the fun, but the profit out of it. A while before the spring meeting at Sheepshead began last year this broker-owner introduced me to a young Colorado man whom he had in tow at an uptown hotel.

"'Make a mental Bertillon of this one,' the broker said to me, nodding in the direction of the young fellow with him. 'He's right. He's a couple of years of cadetship on the California tracks, and now he's alone this way to see some real racing. You can let him go as far as he likes.'

The broker-owner's say-so was just as good as a treasury order with me, particularly as it was a rare thing for him to give his oral vise to a new man on the horse market. The broker introduced the young Colorado chap to three or four others of the layers and they took him as a minted article, just as I had.

"The young Coloradoan bumped me for thousands in straight winnings from the go-off, and I never caught up with him. He prodded the other ring men with whom he was making finger bets just as hard. But his winnings, and a good deal more, all went at the faro bank, and it never was in the cornucopia for any one man to beat two games at one and the same time. On the day before that Sheepshead meeting closed the young chap from Colorado didn't emerge under the spotlight at setting-up time, but none of us was worried. He had got on the wrong side of my sheet about $3,000 worth on the day before, and he was into four of the other layers about the same amount each on the afternoon's play. He didn't appear at the track, but we figured that he was sleeping off a big head or something of that sort. But on the following day his name appeared among the bunch of those who had sailed to Europe on the previous afternoon.

"The five of us who had been stuck got together and fanned it over, but none of us even suggested the idea of bracing the broker-owner for a make-good on the welch of his protege. The young fellow had been doing business with us for a month on a very heavy scale, and by the end of that time, according to the unwritten rule, we were accepting him as a big operator on his own account. Before the races began that day the broker-owner came around to do some settling of his own.

"'I understand that you fellows threw the gaff into that Colorado youngster so hard that he had to take to the deep water yesterday to hide from you,' the broker said to us genially, and it was perfectly plain then that he didn't know anything about the welch of the man he had introduced.

"'Well,' I said then, 'I wouldn't mind having back what he's won from me during this meeting, to say nothing of a teenchy little $3,000 overlook of his that I've got folded away here.'

"The broker looked astonished and then the other four showed him their sheets, not, as I repeat, with any idea of even suggesting to the welcher's sponsor that it would be nice for him to skate to the center. But that is just what he did, and it set him back nearly $18,000 to do it.

"'I hadn't the remotest idea that the cub wasn't perfectly honest,' he said to us, all wrought up, after he had written his checks for the welcher's overlooks. 'I saw him off on the pier yesterday and he made no mention of being to the bad on any sheet. Observe me carefully, will you, and take note of how many other people I shall launch and stand for in the betting ring during the fiscal and lunar year to come?'

"The meanest kind of a welcher known to bookmakers is the fellow who takes advantage of a racing technicality to avoid getting out to the firing line and making good when the settling-up hour arrives. Several of the layers at Saratoga a couple of years ago were snaged for thousands by a chap of this sort on the day that Hermis was disqualified after winning a race along toward the middle of the meeting. What made it worse in this man's case was that he belonged to the clubhouse bunch—he's one of the kind that gets his name printed alongside of those people who eat their meals with babboons and such like for table mates at Newport.

"This side-stepper bet pretty close to $10,000 to win on the horse that finished second to Hermis in that race. Hermis strolled in all by himself. We all paid off on Hermis. Late in the afternoon, just before the close of the day's racing, it was announced that because the new partnership between the owners of Hermis hadn't yet been registered at the Jockey club, Hermis would have to stand for a disqualification. Well, it made no difference then, except to the owners of the disqualified horse and of the second horse, the latter profiting by the disqualification to the extent of getting the purse. And as all of the cash bets had been paid off on Hermis as the winner, all of the marker bettors who had wagered on other horses in the race settled on that basiss, too, even after the disqualification. But the clubhouse welcher didn't. He ducked to the tune of $10,000 that he had bet with his fingers on the horse that finished second to Hermis.

"The money follows the decision and the purse, was his way of edging around it, and the layers who had taken his finger bets simply had to charge his bets up to profit and loss. The betting does follow the decision and the purse, of course, as a general thing, but this was an exceptional case so recognized by all of the 15,000 people who were on the Saratoga grounds that day."

NEIL AND ATTELL

To Have a Fourth of July Battle at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 9.—McCarey has matched Frankie Neil and Abe Attell for the fourth of July afternoon. McCarey had the two little fellows matched for April, but the San Francisco disaster upset his plans and Neil went east. Neil is expected to do his best to win, as the victory will give him another chance at Jim Bowker, the English champion, who will be brought over to meet the winner. Bowker is the only one who holds a decision over Neil.

McCarey has another contest on hand. This is the Attell-Walsh match. Walsh has accepted McCarey's offer to meet Attell June 19, and is on his way here.

TRICKS OF WELCHERS

Bookmakers Have Hard Time Evading Attentions of Bad Ones.

ntroductions for Friends Not the Thing in Gambling.

In New York last week, says C. L. C. in the Washington Star, I heard Eddie Burke, the bookmaker, commenting upon that recent welching incident, in which a clubhouse commissioner is said to have deliberately laid down to the tune of $50,000.

"I don't know anything about the merits of that particular case," said Burke, "but I do know that there are not many of them gyrating around the ring or clubhouse nowadays that would be allowed to frame up and get away with a $50,000 welch. And that goes also as to the heavy players who operate from the ground. It must be remembered that one of the big players from the ground welched on a little party of bookmakers to the tune of nearly $100,000 less than two years ago, and I haven't heard that he's made good yet.

"I suppose that there will be a certain amount of welching as long as there is betting, but the welching business grows more infrequent all the time. I can remember when the welchers on both sides of the fence—that is to say the layers and the players—were as common as stogie smokers in Wheeling. But they're few and far between at this stage of it. The layers, on their side, are not now accepting, in lieu of the coin, the upturned fingers of every good fellow with whom they've happened to take a casual drink in a hotel cafe, as they used to. The man with the horse bug who aspires to be a digit player has got to be right, and he has to be known to be all right up and down the layers' line before he can twist up to a chalker's stool and get down on the thing he likes without passing over the sugar.

"But we all have to stand for a bit once in a while, nevertheless. I was clawed down at Benning this last spring, and it set my sheet back a pat thousand. A man with a fine Southern accent who had been making $200 and $500 bets in my book and generally losing them, for a couple of weeks, nudged up to my stool just as I'd finished fresco-ing the prices for the second running of the Washington Handicap. He was a man with a most engaging face and manner. He said he'd like to have $1,000 worth of credit on the Clown for the handicap.

"'I'm So-and-So, the proprietor of the Such-and-Such House in Baltimore,' this engaging man with the Southern accent said to me in his frank and agreeable way, 'and I believe they would tell you at the desk of the Blank Hotel,' naming one if the leading hotels in Washington, 'that I am all right,' cracking a smile as if even the thought of anything to the contrary amused him.

"Well there wasn't any decent way for me to turn this man down, seeing that he had been playing steadily in my book since the beginning of the meeting. I took him on for the thousand, laying him the top ring price against The Clown. There are always so many first-class and dead-square Southern gentlemen in the Benning ring on the big days that no layer who becomes familiar with the countenances of them likes to take a chance on turning their down. The Clown finished third last, my man with his Southern accent didn't settle within the period embraced by the book-makers' almanac, 24 hours. I asked about him at the desk of the leading Washington he had named, but they didn't know him. He sliced four other players for a thousand each—on the same race, I understand, taking a different horse with each man, but winning with none of them. There was less excuse for the others falling for his game than there was for me, for he had previously played less with them than he did with me.

"This was a very exceptional case, of course. In about nine cases out of ten the man who to avoid inconveniences in paying over large amounts of currency desires to become a credit bettor on the horses in the main ring, has got to be passed along and stood for by some moneyed regular at the game whose word is as good as his money. And even then the layer has to take a chance on standing for a welch. The sponsor for a new man in the ring holds himself officially responsible for the man he introduces only up to a certain point. After the new man has been doing business in the ring, taking down winnings and making good losses for a little while, he is then considered to be on his own footing, and his sponsor can't be looked to for a make-good in the case of a welch on the part of the man for whom he has originally stood.

"Of course, if the new man welches at once, a very rare thing—the sponsor feels himself bound to come to the front for the amount of the welch at settling-up time. The sponsors who hold themselves indefinitely responsible for the men they introduce in the ring are as scarce as rainy days in Death Valley, but, at that, I did business with one of this kind at Sheepshead Bay only last year.

"The sponsor was a very well-known man in the game, a broker of wealth, who has been racing horses of his own breeding for many years, and what is unusual among that class of owners, getting not only the fun, but the profit out of it. A while before the spring meeting at Sheepshead began last year this broker-owner introduced me to a young Colorado man whom he had in tow at an uptown hotel.

"'Make a mental Bertillon of this one,' the broker said to me, nodding in the direction of the young fellow with him. 'He's right. He's a couple of years of cadetship on the California tracks, and now he's alone this way to see some real racing. You can let him go as far as he likes.'

The broker-owner's say-so was just as good as a treasury order with me, particularly as it was a rare thing for him to give his oral vise to a new man on the horse market. The broker introduced the young Colorado chap to three or four others of the layers and they took him as a minted article, just as I had.

"The young Coloradoan bumped me for thousands in straight winnings from the go-off, and I never caught up with him. He prodded the other ring men with whom he was making finger bets just as hard. But his winnings, and a good deal more, all went at the faro bank, and it never was in the cornucopia for any one man to beat two games at one and the same time. On the day before that Sheepshead meeting closed the young chap from Colorado didn't emerge under the spotlight at setting-up time, but none of us was worried. He had got on the wrong side of my sheet about $3,000 worth on the day before, and he was into four of the other layers about the same amount each on the afternoon's play. He didn't appear at the track, but we figured that he was sleeping off a big head or something of that sort. But on the following day his name appeared among the bunch of those who had sailed to Europe on the previous afternoon.

"The five of us who had been stuck got together and fanned it over, but none of us even suggested the idea of bracing the broker-owner for a make-good on the welch of his protege. The young fellow had been doing business with us for a month on a very heavy scale, and by the end of that time, according to the unwritten rule, we were accepting him as a big operator on his own account. Before the races began that day the broker-owner came around to do some settling of his own.

"'I understand that you fellows threw the gaff into that Colorado youngster so hard that he had to take to the deep water yesterday to hide from you,' the broker said to us genially, and it was perfectly plain then that he didn't know anything about the welch of the man he had introduced.

"'Well,' I said then, 'I wouldn't mind having back what he's won from me during this meeting, to say nothing of a teenchy little $3,000 overlook of his that I've got folded away here.'

"The broker looked astonished and then the other four showed him their sheets, not, as I repeat, with any idea of even suggesting to the welcher's sponsor that it would be nice for him to skate to the center. But that is just what he did, and it set him back nearly $18,000 to do it.

"'I hadn't the remotest idea that the cub wasn't perfectly honest,' he said to us, all wrought up, after he had written his checks for the welcher's overlooks. 'I saw him off on the pier yesterday and he made no mention of being to the bad on any sheet. Observe me carefully, will you, and take note of how many other people I shall launch and stand for in the betting ring during the fiscal and lunar year to come?'

"The meanest kind of a welcher known to bookmakers is the fellow who takes advantage of a racing technicality to avoid getting out to the firing line and making good when the settling-up hour arrives. Several of the layers at Saratoga a couple of years ago were snaged for thousands by a chap of this sort on the day that Hermis was disqualified after winning a race along toward the middle of the meeting. What made it worse in this man's case was that he belonged to the clubhouse bunch—he's one of the kind that gets his name printed alongside of those people who eat their meals with babboons and such like for table mates at Newport.

"This side-stepper bet pretty close to $10,000 to win on the horse that finished second to Hermis in that race. Hermis strolled in all by himself. We all paid off on Hermis. Late in the afternoon, just before the close of the day's racing, it was announced that because the new partnership between the owners of Hermis hadn't yet been registered at the Jockey club, Hermis would have to stand for a disqualification. Well, it made no difference then, except to the owners of the disqualified horse and of the second horse, the latter profiting by the disqualification to the extent of getting the purse. And as all of the cash bets had been paid off on Hermis as the winner, all of the marker bettors who had wagered on other horses in the race settled on that basiss, too, even after the disqualification. But the clubhouse welcher didn't. He ducked to the tune of $10,000 that he had bet with his fingers on the horse that finished second to Hermis.

"The money follows the decision and the purse, was his way of edging around it, and the layers who had taken his finger bets simply had to charge his bets up to profit and loss. The betting does follow the decision and the purse, of course, as a general thing, but this was an exceptional case so recognized by all of the 15,000 people who were on the Saratoga grounds that day."

HERRERA TELLS HIS SIDE OF THE STORY.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 9.—Aurelio Herrera is seeking another match with Battling Nelson, and as a step to that end is explaining his conduct in the ring when he refused to weigh in. He says he was ready to weigh in at 6 o'clock, and was in the ring at 8:30 ready to fight or to weigh in. Continuing, he said:

"Had Nelson appeared soon after 8:30 there would have been no difficulty. I would have stepped on the scales willingly, and I assure you I would have weighed no more than Nelson did at that time.

"There is no getting around the fact that Nelson spent the time between 6:15 and 10 o'clock in a Turkish bath. He may have been sweating down weight and he may not have been.

"It is my belief Nolan kept Nelson in the baths that he should not gain sufficient weight to carry him over the 133-pound limit. If I had stepped on the scales at the time Nolan wanted me to I would naturally have been overweight, as, after starving for a 6 o'clock weighin, a man gains weight rapidly. Nelson's bath probably kept him within the limit."

FISTIC DOPE FROM FRISCO

Farmer Jeffries Has No Longing for the Roped Arena.

Big Fellow is Satisfied With Life on the Farm.

San Francisco, June 9.—I saw Farmer Jeffries in Los Angeles. He sat next to me at the ringside of the fight that fizzled. While those around were prattling of uppercuts and cross-wallops Jim regaled me with interesting chat about his life on the farm.

"You should see my alfalfa," said Jim. I did not feel called upon to tell Jeff that all the alfalfa I ever had seen was from the windows of flying trains. Instead I looked wise and waited for further information.

"It's the finest you ever laid eyes on," continued the retired champion. "I get $8 for it on the ground."

Feeling that the big fellow might carry me beyond my depth I suddenly asked, "What's all this about your getting back in the fighting game?"

"I haven't said anything," he replied.

"Well, this is the first chance I had to put to you the question. Are you likely to fight again?"

"Now, I'll tell you," said the big man. "When I quit the ring I quit it in good faith. I did not care if I ever set eyes on a boxing glove again. I nevr cared for fighting. When you came to my camp at Harbin Springs it didn't take you long to find out what part of the life there I liked best. It was the hunting and fishing and being out in the mountains. I'm the same still. I'd rather spend tonight on a range waiting for a shot at a deer at daylight than to walk into this ring before these thousands, even if sure victory awaited me. I'm as happy as can be out on my ranch and I want to stay there."

"Still that doesn't answer my question," I urged. "Is there any prospect, either immediate or remote, of your going back into the ring?"

"The best I can say is that there is no immediate prospect. I don't want any more of it, but I can't tell what's ahead of me. Lots of friends of mine lost every stick they possessed in the San Francisco fire. If I should meet with a disaster of that kind it may be that I would have to fight again. I sincerely hope that day will never come. Training is mighty hard work and when a fighter is out of the game a couple of years, as I have been, he doesn't improve. Say, let's talk of something else. I don't believe that fellow Herrera is going to fight."

From the foregoing it will be seen that "Big Jim" is not quite sure. So long as fortune smiles upon him and the alfalfa keeps coming up eight times a year, he will never dream of fighting. But if things go wrong—well, you can't always tell.

The Nelson-Herrera affair is a fruitful theme for sport critics and will continue to be for some time. There is a great opportunity for comment and castigation, and the unpleasant reflection that one opinion of the fiasco is as good as another. The truth about the thing will never be known until some one close in makes a confession. On the face of things, of course, the blame is with Herrera. He is even open to the charge of cowardice. But mightn't Nelson, even though he had the best of the argument from the standpoint of ethics and usage, have stretched a point. The Battler knows that Herrera is a lightweight. The Mexican has been before the public for maybe ten years and has been operating in the Eddie Hanlon-Kid Herman-"Crocky" Boyle class. When a fighter of that particular "number" gets to weighing over 133 pounds the surplus is in his opponent's favor, and, such being the case, it looks as though the Dane might have said: "Clear the ring and let's fight; what's the difference."

Apart from this particular weight wrangle, the present day system of arguing over a pound of flesh causes veteran ring followers who remember what pugilists had to give away in the matter of poundage in the old days.

One of the rumors in circulation in Los Angeles was that Nolan intended to pull out of the Herrera match because he had received a tempting offer for a Battling Nelson-Jimmy Britt go in New York. About the only thing that favored this suspicion was the way Britt and Nelson were talking about each other just about that time. Nelson, when I saw him at Lucky Baldwin's ranch a day or so before the day of the Herrera engagement, said:

"Yes, I've posted ten thousand as a forfeit for Britt. I don't believe he has the slightest intention of boxing me, and I want to show him up. If he is in earnest, though, he will find me there at the drop of the hat."

"Britt in New York, about the same date, said: "Nelson waited until I got a good long ways from San Francisco before he made his bluff. I have been chasing him for six months, begging him to fight, and he never came to time. He's a big 'four-flusher' and I'm afraid will never go into the ring with me again. I'll be ready for him as soon as I get through with McGovern."

When rival fighters talk this way about each other it is a fairly good sign they have been warned to prepare for a clash. It reminds one of the palmy days of Jim Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons. W. W. NAUGHTON.

FARMER BURNS TO WRESTLE BIG SWEDE.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 9.—As jealous of the victories of his protege, Champion Frank Gotch of the wrestling world, as a mother of the honors of her son, "Farmer" Burns will demand that before anyone may assume to take the laurels from his pupil, they must first put his back to the mat. Consequently he will meet here, June 11, Alexander Samson, the Stockholm, Sweden, policeman, who seeks a stepping stone to meet the American champion.

Samson will be the most formidable antagonist Burns has met in years. He is big, strong and clever, but, though Burns is 45, he is yet shrewd, tricky and agile. The one question which will determine the match is whether the Swede will be able to keep his head in the rapid fight which Burns will surely make. Burns himself is a cool general on the canvas. It was he who taught Gotch the formidable toe hold, with which he wrested the championship from Jenkins at Kans

SAVED HIS FIRST DIME

Albert C. Ribenack Has First Coin That Came to Him After Establishing Restaurant in Duluth Eighteen Years Ago--Jas. McDowell Made First Purchase.

To be able, after seventeen or eighteen years of successful business career to show the first piece of money received is something that probably very few persons are able to do, and Albert C. Ribenack, president of the Lenox Hotel company, one of the firm of Ribenack Bros., that has acquired a large amount of valuable Duluth business property, is among those few.

While talking to a party of his friends the other day, Mr. Ribenack, in the course of a conversation relative to the growth of various business enterprises in Duluth in the past fifteen years, mentioned the fact that he had kept in his possession the first piece of money taken in by him when he started up in business, about seventeen or eighteen years ago. To allay the curiosity of his friends, he explained the circumstances surrounding the 10-cent piece that he prizes so highly, as follows:

"Several years ago—seventeen or eighteen years if my memory serves me right—I decided to start in business, and opened up a little restaurant on Michigan street, opposite the Union depot. On the day the restaurant opened I had lunch ready promptly at 11 o'clock, and sat down at the end of the counter to await business. Half-past 11 came and nobody came in. The clock struck 12, and still nobody in sight. Just about that time I was beginning to have a feeling that perhaps I had made a mistake; that I must have been intended for some other calling. I had all my money tied up in that little business, however, and knowing that it was a case of sink or swim, I tried my best not to feel discouraged.

"About fifteen minutes to 1 o'clock the front door opened, and in walked my first customer. It was James McDowell, one of the veteran printers on The Herald force, who was connected with the same paper at that time. He was the first and only customer up to that time, but he looked pretty good to me. I remember exactly what Mr. McDowall ate on that occasion, and that, I fancy, is a great deal more than he can recollect. He ordered a piece of pie and and a cup of coffee. When he finished his lunch he paid me 10 cents, and walked out.

"I picked up the dime and, thinking to myself, 'Well, here is 10 cents toward the rent, anyway,' I placed it on the shelf back of the lunch counter.

"I shall always give Mr. McDowell the credit of breaking the spell, for shortly after he left two more customers came in. Hardly had I waited on them when in came four more, and from that time on until 3 o'clock in the afternoon they began coming in twos, threes and half a dozen lots at a time, until I had my hands full in attending to business. I worked long and hard that afternoon, but there was an immense amount of satisfaction about it, for I realized that the tide had turned, and that things were coming my way at last.

"Something, call it sentiment or anything else you like, has always prompted me to preserve that 10-cent piece. In my eyes it has a value far more than the intrinsic value of the money. I expect to keep that little piece of money with me as long as I live as a memento of the first business that I ever transacted."

VISIT THE JAPANESE

Mr. and Mrs. Burton St. John Witness Review of Triumphal Army, by the Emperor of Japan.

To the many missionary societies in this city, who have been studying Japan, and to the many others interested in this nation, the following account of the triumphal review by the emperor of Japan of the Japanese army witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Burton St. John, who left for the mission field from this city will be of interest. The St. Johns went from Duluth to China, but are at present in Tokio, Japan, identified with the Y. M. C. A. organization there. Their experience there is proving a most valuable one. Mr. St. John's account of the review follows:

"The big event was yesterday (April 30). It was the grand triumphal review of the Japanese army. Every regiment was represented at least by its colors, and a color guard. I am sure you will see great descriptions of the occasion, with photographs, in the illustrated papers at home. We were fortunate enough to secure invitations through the prestige of the Y. M. C. A., which has done such good work among the soldiers of the Japanese army. We enclose the ticket on which we were admitted to standing room, on the grand stand. There were no seats, except one row in the front of the section allotted to the "Patriotic Ladies' association." The tickets ask all guests to remember that the review is in the presence of the emperor, and that Japanese should dress in proper court costume, if they wear Japanese clothes, all other guests are requested to dress as for a formal reception, the gentlemen to wear frock coats and silk hats. It also says that the gates to the parade ground will be closed at 8 o'clock, and that there will be no admission after that hour. You will see that it was a very exclusive affair. I suppose that there were not over 50,000 guests, out of the 40,000,000 people who would have been glad to see the review. People came from all over the empire to attend it, there were very few Japanese or foreigners without position who were able to get admission, (though foreign guests were admitted much more freely than were Japanese). The Y. M. C. A. people here secured seventeen tickets from several sources, all, I think, granted out of respect for the association work in the army, and given by several officials who were familiar with it. We had to go in rickshas, because the street cars in the region of the parade ground, were stopped for the forenoon. Our rickshas were not allowed to take us to the gate even. We had to walk nearly a mile. We left home about 6 o'clock, and it was well we did for when we reached the grounds at about 7, a large majority of the guests and nearly all the troops had arrived. It was nearly 9:30 when the emperor's party arrived. Can you imagine me in my wedding coat, and a high hat. By mistake of one of the generals gave Mr. Fisher six tickets, they were all for the ladies' booth, and we men were promptly and most politely asked to decamp. When the mistake was explained, the officer in charge ushered us to the section next nearest the emperor's pavilion. The ladies went with us so as not to break up our little party.

"The section we were in was the one reserved for men of rank. We could not have had a better opportunity to see the review, and the emperor's party. It was a little tedious waiting for the parade to begin, but the crowd of people, the waiting troops, the orderlies dashing about the grounds, the maneuvering of the war chiefs, and all the rest of it kept us occupied until the emperor came. We could hear the arrival of that party from a long distance by the cheering of the people along the streets. When he arrived, he rode four times across the parade ground, in order to review all the troops, and then back in front of the grand stand where we were. It seemed curious that during this whole performance there was perfect silence. It is a new thing with the Japanese to cheer, and the dignified 'upper crust' do not seem to approve of it. Of course we all lifted our hats to the passing emperor, the crown prince, the former emperor of Korea, and a number of officials of highest rank. Their coaches were something gorgeous. The lackies were covered with gold trimmings till you could see nothing but braid. It did not take very long for this pageant to pass a given point, but it took just two hours for the troops to march past the reviewing stand. The cavalry and artillery went at a brisk trot. The cavalry marched twenty abreast, the artillery six guns abreast, the infantry fifty abreast. Many of the battle flags which were in line were nothing at all but a bit of 'later.' No one was allowed to leave the ground until the time set for the emperor to have gone.

"Many people tried to, but were turned back. The officers in charge said that it showed disrespect to the emperor to leave before he did. But he had not left yet when the gates were opened, only he was theoretically gone because the time set for him to go had passed and it was all right.

"In the Military parks near us here there was a 'several days' celebration going on. Among the decorations in the park are two obelisks about forty feet high, and probably twelve feet square at the base. These are covered on the outside with rifles captured from the Russians."

MISS BOOTH DEFENDS THE SALVATION ARMY

From Attacks Made by Manager Solenberger of the Associated Charities of Minneapolis.

New York, June 9.—Miss Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in America, has given out a reply to the attack recently made on the work of the Army by Mr. Solzenberger of Minneapolis, in a meeting of the Conference of Charities and Conventions held in Philadelphia. Miss Booth says:

The paper read by the general manager of the Associated Charities of Minneapolis, before the Thirty-third National Conference of Charities and Corrections in the city of Philadelphia on "The Salvation Army Work," and issued to the general press, has caused a great injustice to the Salvation Army on account of its errors and misstatements, "that the Salvation Army relief work as carried on through its homes, lodging houses and other agencies, is poorly organized and poorly administered, and that the so-called work of the Army is largely subservient to financial interest."

In justice to the general public, and especially to the friends and supporters of the Salvation Army, we feel it a duty to refute these unjust and uncalled for statements reported by the local press to have been made in Philadelphia by E. D. Solenberger.

It seems almost superfluous, at this late date of the Army's career, to have to defend its methods, its economical management, its results accomplished, its assistance to the authorities, its savings to the tax payers, while the great result for good accomplished through the self-denials and meagre salaries of its energetic workers, has received the encomiums of the highest state officials and dignitaries of the various countries in which it is operating.

Mr. Solenberger declared that the Salvation Army's social work was poorly organized and poorly administered. This is not true, as our social officers are specially trained and instructed for this particular branch. The work is thoroughly organized and carefully administered.

Our rescue homes are a model to the world, and of what can be accomplished by our self-sacrificing men and women engaged in this branch of the work. In many localities these rescue homes constantly care for cases handed over to them by the Associated Charities, as the records show; and in the city of New York its rescue homes have taken direct from the city hospitals, with the city ambulance, poor unfortunate mothers and their babies, and have looked after them with their infants without a single cent of financial grant from the city for their support.

If funds which once passed through other hands are today entrusted to us, is it not because a general conviction prevails that our economy is such that the cost of administration with us is reduced to a minimum, and that the Salvation army can produce a greater result for good at a minimum of expense.

The Salvation Army property accumulated in the various countries in which it conducts its religion and charitable work, is held under the laws of these various countries in indissoluble trust for such purposes; and no one, either leader or worker, could pervert any such property to their personal ends, or devise and bequeath it to others. In this country the Army is incorporated by a special act of the Empire state, as a religious and charitable organization.

These trusts are matters of public record, and before any real estate held by this corporation can be transferred or disposed of in any part of this country, application has to be made to the court by petition, in accordance with its laws, and to clearly and definitely state in such petition what is to be done with the proceeds of the sale of such property, and where and for what purposes the proceeds are to be invested.

Its financial reports and balance sheets are annually made for the public in accordance to law; a detailed statement of every branch of its work is filed at Albany with the secretary of state, while the books of its finances are open for the regular examination of a public accountant, who is in constant touch, and who has supervision over all of its financial accounts. His sworn statements as to the correctness of these accounts is annually made on his knowledge of the daily work of which he has oversight. The balance sheets are then issued.

The cleanliness of our lodging houses has received the praise of many health boards in various large cities and the fact that in summer, while many other lodging houses are running half full, the Salvation army shelters in the same cities are filled is not a mild testimony as to their value in the mind of the lodger looking for a clean and homelike place to rest.

In these shelters religious meetings are regularly held and to say that we do nothing to improve the morals of the men is too absurd a declaration to be considered; for all the world believes that we are religionists of the old-fashioned order, who always press home upon all the needs of the soul; on the street, in the hall, or within our social institutions.

The Salvation Army Industrial Home company, which received such severe criticisms at the hands of Mr. Solenberger, is the result of another scheme that was devised by our board of trustees for the purpose of helping men to help themselves. This is done by collecting waste in the homes of the well-to-do and using it for the benefit of the unemployed.

This business philanthropy, if I may so express it, was adopted for the purpose of obtaining capital to purchase, erect and furnish these homes. A stock company was formed, one-half of the stock of which was preferred, and of which the Army agreed a payment of 6 per cent, which it has previously paid for the loan of money used in such institutions. The other half "common stock" was all retained by the Army, so as to control the work of the corporation and keep it on the lines for which the enterprise was devised. The profits derived from the sales of the material put on the market by these otherwise unemployed, goes first, towards the maintenance of the home and the men, and the balance is used for the advancement of the industrial work by the purchasing or remodeling of properties needed for this purpose, and not one dollar goes for the personal gains of any officer or other individual.

The Reliance Trading company of the Salvation army was organized and created for the same purpose, viz., for more economically carrying on the Army's operations. Retaining all the common stock, being half the capital stock, the Army is able to use the profits accumulated from such trading company for the furtherance of its religious and charitable work, and it is most unjust to announce "that no statement of the amount of profits of these companies are made for the general public." On the contrary the exact amount in dollars and cents, outside of the department, is accounted for in the balance sheets that go to the public, which balance sheets are annually filed with the secretary of state at Albany.

The trustees of the Army are the directors of both the companies, and not one of them, personally, owns stock in either. It is absolutely untrue that Gen. Booth holds all property and funds of the Salvation army in trust in America. Gen. Booth is not even a trustee of the Salvation Army corporation. Over ten years ago, at the invitation of Gen. Booth, a special government commission in England thoroughly investigated all financial reports and accounts of the Salvation army, found them to be correct in every particular, and commended the work to the public for being so wisely directed.

In conclusion let me say the work achieved by the Salvation army, the economy with which it is performed, and the good that it has accomplished, through the honesty of its purpose, and the whole-hearted devotion of its officers, is its own defence; while its cosmopolitan character, in that it helps the helpless, irrespective of creed or race, relieves the taxpayer by rehabilitating the indigent, reforms the morals of the depraved by changing men and women from dependents to independents, is a direct answer to every charge that has been made against it by Mr. Solenberger, whose attack we cannot help but feel was a personal one and from purely a personal cause, as his letter of a recent date endorsing the work of the Salvation Army proves beyond doubt that he has not always held this opinion. That his action would not be approved by the Associated Charities seems manifest, as the perfect harmony with which the Salvation Army works with this society in the cities of this country goes to show we have no antagonism toward it.

SCHOOL TO BE BUILT AT COLERAINE

VIEW OF NEW JOHN C. GREENWAY SCHOOL, BEING BUILT AT COLERAINE.

Accompanying this is a perspective of the school which is about to be erected at the new mining town of Coleraine, on the Western Mesaba range. Coleraine is the place which the Steel corporation officials are going to make a model town, where vice will be kept at the lowest possible point, and the town built along ideal lines.

The first thing the Steel corporation did was to request of the school board in that district to build a substantial school, capable of accommodating the number of children such as would be found in a large community. The Steel corporation promised that the population to warrant this would be furnished. So the work is now under way on one of the finest public schools in the state.

It will be known as the John C. Greenway school, being named in honor of John C. Greenway, who is superintendent of the mining operations in that district, and who has done everything possible to help the board along in its work of getting the school.

The building will be a beauty, and will cost about $70,000, or a little more. Its location is considered ideal. The finest block in the proposed site of Coleraine has been chosen, and the school will be placed there, facing and overlooking Trout lake, one of the prettiest small bodies of water in Minnesota. The plateau on which the school will be placed is about forty feet above the level of Trout lake, and it is generally accepted that the school board has shown excellent taste and care in its selection.

Already a principal has been engaged for the school, who is one of the best known educators in Minnesota. This is Prof. J. J. Van Dyke, who has been principal of the schools of Fergus Falls for the past seven years. He has been president of the Minnesota Educational association.

The interest shown by Mr. Greenway and by the mining company officials has been great, and the school board has been helped out wonderfully, and much encouraged by it.

The building will be 84 by 112 feet, ground dimensions, and will be three stories and a basement in height. The boiler room, from which will be furnished steam heat, will be in a separate building. The whole affair will be constructed of brick and stone, and will be very substantial. The exterior will be faced with light French green colored pressed brick, and will be trimmed with Bedford stone. It is expected that it will present a very handsome appearance. One entrance to the building will be on the south side, and another will be on the east.

The first floor of the building will have five class rooms and offices for the school board, and the second floor will have five class rooms and the principal's office. The third floor will be used for high school purposes, and will contain an assembly room, which will seat 600 pupils, two laboratories and two recitation rooms. The stairways are placed in the north and south ends of the building, and run from the basement clear up to the third floor. The whole of the interior of the school is to be finished in oak; it will be equipped with steam heat, with thermostat heat regulation; and ventilation, with such up-to-date appliances as the vacuum system affords. The roof will be unfeatherly of slate. In general the building will not be an instant behind the times.

A GREAT HARVEST LITTLE KNOWN

Material for Shirt Collars, Cuffs and Patent Leather From a Plant---Duluth the World's Greatest Flax Market.

Washington, June 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Among the interesting experiments which the United States department of agriculture has been recently conducting are those looking to the discovery of a species of flax, which, while allowing the seed to ripen fully, would produce fibre of a quality suitable for spinning. Seed flax is short and branchy. As here, in America, the seed is separated by running the flax through ordinary threshing machines, the fibres become so broken and tangled as to be utterly useless. Even the paper mills find most of this tow unfit for pulp. It represenh no money value watever.

Noting this wate, the agricultural department began the investigations which have given highly encouraging results. Experts of the department believe that, if Yankee inventiveness can be drawn into the service of our flax growers, the Northwest will, in a few summers, be sending to our Eastern mills flax fiber suitable for all purposes for which hemp and jute are now employed. Millions of dollars would thus be added annually to our national wealth. Over 21,000 persons earn their daily bread in these mills. Yet, for the raw material used, we are compelled to pay enormous sums of money every year to Europe, flax being raised in this country chiefly for seed, which is a valuable article of commerce.

The government experts are studying a plant that has been of use to mankind since the early dawn of civilization. In the time of Christ everyone wore garments of linen, the well-known fabric made from flax, the strongest of the commercial basts. The towel with which Veronica wiped the sweat from the Saviour's face was a piece of linen. Cotton cloth was unknown in the Roman empire. Five centuries later, the emperor of China, On-Ti, ordered it to be recorded in the annals of his reign that he owned so unique an article of luxury as a cotton robe.

Long before the Christian era, however, the art of turning the flax plant's fibers into cloth was fully understood. In the British museum you may inspect a square of cloth unwound from a mummy embalmed when Onnos ascended the throne of Egypt, B. C. 3400. A microscope shows the cloth to be made of linen so fine that it contains 140 threads in the warp and 64 in the woof. This remarkable product of ancient Egyptian textile skill is at least fifty-three centuries old. Flax working, however, can be proved to be thousands of years older. Bundles of flax ready for the spinner, have been found in the lake dwellings of Switzerland, and there are abundant traces of the utilization of flax and hemp by various tribes of Europe's Stone Age. Unless prehistoric man had strong and flexible fibers for twisting into ropes, it is difficult to understand how he could have built those strange memorials of faita or superstition, the menhirs or holmens, found scattered throughout several Western European countries. The stones could not have been transported to the building sites without ropes.

In all ages linen seems to have been associated with religious ceremonies, with high office, and with cleanliness of person. Ancient Egypt's priesthood, the real rulers of their country, were required by law to wear garments of linen and to change them daily. Ezekiel warns the Hebrew priests to use only linen robes. Pharaoh honored Joseph by clothing him in vestures of fine linen. Pure white linen robed the seven angels seen by St. John to come out of the mystic temple.

Linen remained the world's chief textile until the last quarter of the 18th century. Then the labor-saving machines of Hargreaves, Arkwright and Crompton effected a revolution in cotton manufacture and made Great Britain the wealthiest nation on the globe. Eli Whitney's cotton-gin turned the South into a cotton plantation. Thereafter flax growing declined. The spinning-mule and the power loom could not be profitably employed in working up the longer inelastic flax fibers, and, before proper machinery could be devised, cotton cloth had captured the textile market. It is only in our own day and generation that the finer, stronger, cleaner fabric is beginning to win back its own. Yet it may be noticed that in all cases in which wear is the supreme test, linen has held its place undisturbed. For example, men's shirts have retained linen in the bosom, the collar and the cuffs, though the bodies of those indispensable garments have been surrendered to King Cotton.

Flax was a common field product in New England fifty years after the settlement of Plymouth. But as the British parliament had forbidden the colonies to engage in manufacturing, the flax grown could be utilized for domestic purposes only. British laws, however, kindly permitted colonial agricultural products to be exported, provided they were exported in British ships. Flax straw could not be sent to England, as it would heat and spoil on the long voyage. But flax-seed, being hard-shelled, would stand overseas transportation, and then, as well as now, linseed oil—lin was the Anglo-Saxon term for flax—was needed in various arts and trades. Before the revolution, flaxseed had become one of the staple exports of Boston, New York and Philadelphia. After the adoption of the Constitution our commerce rapidly increased and about 300,000 bushels of flaxseed were sold annually to European countries, until the war of 1812 destroyed the foreign trade.

At one time Kentucky was our chief flax raising state. Indiana passed Kentucky during the Civil war. Successive census reports show that Ohio had become the chief flaxseed state in 1869; Illinois in 1879; Minnesota in 1885; and North Dakota in 1899. The last named state seems likely to hold the championship for years to come. After North Dakota there follow, in order of present day production, South Dakota, Minnesota, Kansas, Iowa, Missouri and Idaho.

The bulk of all the flaxseed raised in the Northwest goes to Duluth for shipment to various cities of the United States and Europe, thus making the Minnesota city the world's chief flaxseed market. Most of the American oil mills are in the ports of the Great Lakes, the location of the mills having been determined by the fact that water-borne freight from Duluth means cheap transportation. The lion's share of the flaxseed export trade appears to the average city dweller, to "the man in the street," to be of but small value. He may be interested in learning that, last year, there were shipped from the wharves of Duluth 15,341,532 bushels of seed threshed from flax grown within a few hundred miles of that port. Duluth has long been one of the chief grain shipping centers of the United States; yet the bushels of flaxseed it handled in 1905 amounted to more than a quarter of the number of bushels of grain of all kinds, 59,676,330, shipped during the same year. Nor is the proportion of flaxseed likely to grow less. North Dakota's production of flaxseed increased during the decade, 1894-1904, over 4,000 per cent, and the state's flax acreage is still extending. South Dakota and Minnesota show gains nearly as great.

Flaxseeds are dark brown, glossly, oval and somewhat flattened. Northwestern seed yields about twenty-six pounds of oil to a bushel of the seed (fifty-six pounds). Three countries control the world's commercial output of both oil and seed, the United States, Russia and Argentina.

The first linseed-oil mill started in the United States began operations in 1791. Twenty years later there were 280 mills scattered over fourteen states, Pennsylvania having the largest number. One press, however, was often dignified with the title "mill" in those days. It was not until 1859 that a cargo of flaxseed was imported. It came from Russia. Indians send us yearly large supplies of the seed. In that home of the weird and the occult linseed oil, known from time immemorial as a medicament, is put to uses that seem strange indeed to the Occidental mind.

Last year the United States had forty-one mills engaged in crushing flaxseed. They manufactured over 72,000,000 gallons of oil and 1,000,000,000 pounds of oil cake, of flaxseed representing 35,000,000 bushels of seed. Six million dollars' worth of the oil cake was shipped to the Old World. There it is much used for fattening cattle. It is a superior food for that purpose—a fact not fully appreciated here.

Linseed oil is indispensable in various manufactures. It is an essential ingredient in paints and varnishes. No other oil equals it in drying qualities. Mixed with lime water, it forms the well known Carron oil, the best emollient on the druggist's shelves. Oil clothing, linoleum and oilcloth owe their waterproof capabilities to linseed oil. The varnish which produces patent leather has this same oil for its main component. Button enamel, toilet soaps and printer's ink are other manufactures in which this flaxseed product plays an important part.

The day, however, is not far distant when fiber flax enough to supply our needs—at present 12,000 tons a year—will be grown in that portion of the country where seed flax has found so congenial a home, our vast and fertile Northwest.

A runaway that was quite serious in its outcome, offered excitement to a large number of pedestrians on Wednesday afternoon, on Third avenue and Railroad street. The team was a fine and well bred pair of driving horses, and was attached to an elegant carriage. A man, who afterwards gave his name as William Johnson, was driving the horses at the time they became frightened by a moving train. The steeds dashed down the street toward the Hotel Hibbing, throwing the driver, Mr. Johnson, headlong from the seat. He landed on his shoulder and cut his arm and face in a terrible manner, but received no very serious injury, although the onlookers were very much surprised to see him come through the accident with so little injury to himself. While going down Third avenue at a terrific speed, one of the horses stumbled, and fell, being dragged by the other horse for a distance of nearly twenty-feet, before it regained a foot hold. The horse was very badly cut on its legs, and suffered considerably from loss of blood. This incident shortened the speed of the horses which gave one of the on-lookers, a young man of about 25 years, and of Herculean build, a chance to catch the bridle, and he finally succeeded, with the assistance of others, to bring the horses to a standstill. When Mr. Johnson recovered his horses, he was asked to whom the team belonged, and all the information he would give, was that the team belonged to his employer, and that his real name was not Johnson. It is supposed that the horses were the property of some man in Chisholm or Virginia. The horse that was injured the most, completely lost its harness, excepting the bridle, and it was necessary to obtain another harness before Johnson could proceed on his way.

A fatal accident occurred at the Monroe mine Tuesday morning, when Louis Amate was killed in the open pit of the mine. A COMPROMISE ON STATEHOOD

Has Been Submitted and is Said to be Acceptable.

Washington, June 9.—A basis of compromise, if not the exact form, which is said to be acceptable to a majority of the senate for the settlement of differences on the statehood question, has been submitted by Senator Carter. This provides for a vote at the next regular territorial elections of Arizona and New Mexico, to be held in November, for delegates to a constitutional convention, to frame a constitution for a proposed new state and a vote on the question of statehood, to be submitted in this form: "Shall Arizona and New Mexico be united as one state?"

If a majority in each of the territories votes in favor of joint statehood, then the delegates to a constitutional convention will be called together. If a majority in either territory is recorded against statehood, then the convention will not assemble. It eliminates the expense of holding a constitutional convention in the event the decision of either territory is against statehood, and avoids the confusion of the statehood question with an election for state officers.

Our Children's Corner

How Miss Mary Became Glad She Was a Doll

By Maud Walker.

Laura Ann had a great, huge doll. She was the largest doll in the town where Laura Ann lived, and she was named Miss May, after Laura Ann's mamma's youngest sister. Miss May could open and shut her eyes, and could say "Mamma" when Laura Ann pressed tightly against her back and breast. And a very, very stylish doll was Miss May, too, having as she did a trunkful of pretty clothes, made by the busy and loving hands of Laura Ann, her little "mother."

Then there were many other reasons why Miss May should be a perfectly happy doll. She was taken out daily in her go-cart for a turn in the big, grassy yard, sometimes Laura Ann taking her up town when her mamma sent her to the store on an errand. On such occasions everybody would stop and look at Miss May, sitting so proudly in her cart dressed in silk and lace, and say: "My, what a lovely doll! How big she is!"

And again Laura Ann would take Miss May to little picnic parties, where the wondering children would gather round Miss May and express the deepest admiration for her.

But for all this, Miss May was not happy. One morning as she lay on a big shelf in a closet belonging to Laura Ann's bedroom she became deeply discontented with her lot. She wanted to be a girl like Laura Ann: to come and go, to laugh and sing and talk; in short, Miss May wished to be alive. She did not fancy being a thing of rags, sawdust kid and bisque, with imitation hair. She wanted a body of bones, muscle, nerves, blood and flesh, neatly covered over with a soft, fair skin, just like Laura Ann's.

While Miss May was thus deploring her own sad existence she heard Laura Ann coming up the stairs very slowly. Into her little room she came, opened the closet door and lifted Miss May carefully down from the shelf. "Dear Miss May," said Laura Ann in a hoarse, unnatural voice, "I'm that sick! Really, dear daughter, I think if mamma were here she would put me to bed and send for the doctor. Ugh! Then I'd have to take nasty old medicine and keep very quiet. Oh, how my head aches and how tired I am! But your new blue frock isn't done yet, so I guess I'll finish that. Then I shall lie down."

So, placing Miss May beside her on the couch, Laura Ann got her work basket and took up a needle to thread. But either through carelessness or the nervousness resulting from her indisposition the little maid pricked her finger with the needle. "Oh, just see the blood!" cried Laura Ann, holding out her hurt finger and making a wry face from the pain. Then she grabbed a bit of rag and wrapped the wounded member up, giving exclamations of pain the while.

"Measles, my dear ma'am."

Miss May had been an interested observer of the accident, and somehow, when she saw the blood on her little "mother's" finger, she felt rejoiced that she had none of the crimson fluid inside herself, since the letting of it out could be done by the prick of a needle and was so very painful.

Just then Laura Ann's mamma came into the room, and after kissing her little daughter she exclaimed: "Why, dearest, you are burning with fever! Your face is flushed and your breath feverish! Do you feel ill?"

Then Laura Ann explained that she felt badly, "sort of burned like fire and her bones ached terribly—ached as they often did after she had ridden horseback."

"Well," said her mamma, very uneasy over her little daughter's alarming condition, "I shall put you right to bed and 'phone at once for the doctor."

Then Miss May, forgotten by Laura Ann, lay on the couch and saw Laura Ann's mamma undress her and put her to bed, after which the anxious woman ran downstairs and 'phoned for the doctor, who came very shortly and sat down on a chair beside Laura Ann's bed, held her pulse and looked at his watch in a very wise way. Then he shook his head gravely and spoke:

"Measles, my dear ma'm. Measles!"

Then he raised his eyebrows and looked at poor little Laura Ann as if to say: "What did you catch these horrid things for?" and Laura Ann began to cry very loudly.

"Be quiet, be quiet," said the doctor very solemnly, wagging his bald head at the little patient in the bed. Then he took some pills from his hand medicine case and told Laura Ann's mamma to give her one every hour, and, not satisfied with this punishment, he fixed up a bottle of horrid smelling stuff which he shook right before Laura Ann's eyes as he said to her mother: "And a dose of this every half hour till she breaks out all over."

Then, after telling Laura Ann's mamma to keep Laura Ann closely wrapped up and to give her a very light diet, the bustling, bald-headed, ball-shaped little doctor took his leave.

All that day Laura Ann cried at spells, slept at spells, complained of her aching bones and burning flesh at spells, and vainly begged to have some more light in the room, for her mamma had drawn down the window shades, which excluded the light and made the room gloomy enough, as Miss May thought.

And thus passed the time for two weary weeks, in which Miss May lay unmolested on the couch in a dark corner watching everything that transpired in the room of her little "mother," for although Laura Ann was able to sit up after the tenth day, the fat doctor (was it for meanness?) instructed Laura Ann's mamma to keep her in a dark room for a little longer. He insisted that this was for the sake of Laura Ann's eyes, but Miss May didn't believe him. She thought he was just wanting to prolong Laura Ann's imprisonment.

Then came a day when Laura Ann was pronounced entirely well, and was allowed to go out. She at once took Miss May from her long resting spell on the couch, dressed her in her gayest silk frock and sallied forth into the yard, where several of her little playmates were assembled to greet her.

"Oh, I had 'em terrible—t-e-r-r-i-b-l-e!" declared Laura Ann in what Miss May thought to be a very boastful voice, as she went over her recent attack of measles for the entertainment of her friends.

"And so did I have 'em t-e-r-r-i-b-l-e!" cried a little boy of the company. "I most a-died, I did. I had 'em on my insides, I did, for they jest wouldn't come out."

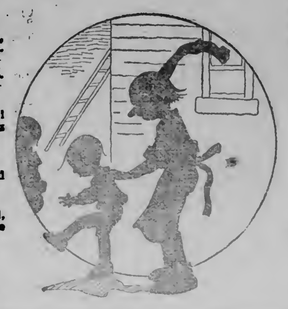

All the company said "Oh, goodness!" and another little boy, to Miss May's disgust, began to tell of how he had had measles and chickenpox and stomach ache all inside of one week, which brought about other emphatic exclamations of surprise and looks of admiration.

And Miss May, sitting there dressed in silk, with never a pain nor an ache, with never a tale of woe with which to astonish and shock her companions, felt joyously glad that after all she was made of rags, sawdust, kid and bisque and topped off with hemp for hair, instead of being composed of stuff like Laura Ann was built of; stuff which seemed heir to ailments that would make even Miss May's sawdust run cold to hear about. And from that day to this Miss May is the happiest little lady in Dolland and never again has she complained of her lot.

(There is a moral to this story. Can the little reader discover it?)

The Cobbler's Last.

Up on the housetop with little noise
Stealthily crept two mischievous boys.
They thought to cover the chimney top,
The chimney that smoked from the cobbler shop.
But the cobbler heard the sounds o'erhead,
And jumping sprightly up he said:
"Ah, ha! I know what you sinners be at!
So watch yer corners, fer I'll git yez pat."

Now 'gainst the eave a ladder stood;
And the cobbler knew the sinners would
Descend that way, if he'd but wait.
So he whistled softly, just as a bait.
The mischievous urchins heard the sound,
And, frightened, hastened toward the ground.
When almost down the cobbler burst
In view and cried: "I see you first!
But may ill luck my good luck blast,
If yez don't see and FEEL me last!"

MAUD WALKER.

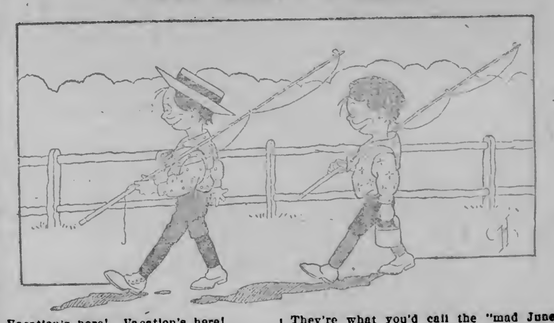

THEY FLOW SIDE BY SIDE.

The warm water of the Gulf Stream does not mix with the colder currents flowing from the Arctic regions, and the line of demarcation is so sharp that an instance is recorded where, between Halifax and Bermuda, a vessel had 70 degrees of temperature at the bow and 40 degrees at the stern, or a difference of 30 degrees in the sea surface temperature in a ship's length.

LAMP POSTS ARE FARE INDICATORS.

In Havana there is a device for protecting passengers from being overcharged by the cabmen. The lamp posts are painted various colors—red for the central district, blue for the second circle, green for the third, etc.—and thus the "fare" knows immediately when he has passed a legal boundary and pays the cabman accordingly.

Fun and Frolic.

Vacation's here! Vacation's here!
The gladdest time of all the year!
Off to the woods with line and hook
To catch the finnies in the brook.
Or, with our baskets full's can stick,
We're off to have a day's picnic.
From some tall tree's limb, spreading out,
We tie the swing rope firm about.
Then through the air we swiftly fly.
It seems our heels will scrape the sky!

Then down the valley, wide and deep,
To hunt for wild things, slow we creep.
We chase the rabbits in the glen
That, frightened, wildly scamper when
We come upon them unawares.
They're what you'd call the "mad June hares,"
And sometimes through the soft, deep grass
A snake is seen to quickly pass.
But we don't bother him, you know.
We're glad enough to see him go!

Up in the trees the squirrels leap,
And from their nests the wee birds peep.
The crickets chirp, the locusts sing,
Till all about the wild woods ring
With song of bird, with hum of bee,
With shouts of kids like you and me.
Oh, old vacation's here once more
For boys and girls the broad land o'er!

Bird Cities.

All along the coast of the Atlantic Ocean are little cities inhabited by birds alone. Gardners Island, at the extremity of Long Island, is the place where the fish hawks come during their breeding time, and owing to the friendly attitude of the family living on the island, the ospreys have become very tame, and build their nests upon the ground instead of in the high trees.

In the Indian River, Florida, is a small island called Pelican Island. It received its name through being one of the favorite settlements for the pelicans during their nesting season.

Away up in the mouth of the St. Lawrence River is the famous Bird Rock, "the greatest bird tenement-house in the world," as one naturalist expresses it. This rock rises abruptly from the water, and in its formidable clefts thousands and thousands of Northern seabirds dwell—the snowy-feathered gannets. On the crest of this rock rises a lighthouse, whose keeper is on the best of terms with his countless feathered neighbors.

These bird cities, or settlements, are under the protection of the American Onithological Union.

OLD CAMEL.

"Dear Old Rover."

By William Wallace, Jr.

"Dear old Rover! For the first time in our lives—yours and mine—we've got to part."

The above words were spoken by Sidney Bart as he fondly caressed a common-looking old dog who, not understanding his young master's remarks, wagged his shaggy tail and laid his nose affectionately against Sidney's shoulder.

"When I was only big enough to toddle," went on Sidney, "you came to our house one morning and whined at the door for admittance. I heard you and let you in. My, what a dear little rolly-polly fellow you were, to be sure! You were just the cutest baby pup! I have never since seen one half so cute. I took you right up into my arms and waddled to the kitchen with you. My dear mamma was fixing breakfast—I remember everything perfectly, though I was only two—and she dropped her work to look at you and tell me I might keep you, for you were a little cast-off."

Here Rover looked into his master's eyes as if asking the meaning of "cast-off." Sidney, seeming to understand his dumb playmate perfectly, said: "Now, of course, I have never told you before that you were a cast-off, for I thought it might make you feel badly; but such you were. There were certain families living in our district who would put all the little pups born on their farms into a big sack—just after the manner in which some people carry kittens away—and when it was night would take them secretly round to the farm houses and drop one at each door. Of course, they waited till the puppies were old enough to eat and whine. Well, you had been born at a place where you were not wanted, and your mother's master had disposed of you after the manner just described; that is to say, you had been dropped at our gate, where you remained cold and shivering till daylight, when you made your way to the door."

Rover drooped his ears and sat down, looking into his master's face with a pitiful expression as if recalling that very sad period of his early doghood. For a few minutes Sidney lapsed into silence; then, giving Rover another gentle and affectionate hug, he said:

"Well, dear old Rovie, from that day to this you and I have been chums. But now we have got to part. What worries me most is the fact of your age—I'm so afraid you'll be misused because you are old and slow and not so watchful as when you were young. And, come to think of it, Rovie, I'm two years older than you—ah, just 12—and am yet a kid, while you, at 10, are an old doggie. Now, isn't that strange?"

Rover looked very seriously into Sidney's eyes; bent his head forward and laid it wearily across his master's knees, as if saying: "What, will you now part from me in my poor old age? And we have been such true friends always—you and I—so true, for our sincerity has been tried."

But Sidney did not seem to be reading old Rover's questions now. He sat on the kitchen doorstep, with his own head bent forward in a dejected and melancholy way. He could hear voices in the house—voices of his uncle and aunt, who were superintending the private sale of the house's furnishings. "Let everything go for what it will bring," his aunt was saying. "My house is too full to hold any of this extra stuff. It is all old and no account."

"Old and no account!" repeated Sidney, in a whisper, tears filling his eyes. The things that his aunt called "old and no account" were very precious to him, having belonged to his dear parents, things in the way of furniture, bedding, clothing and hardware. But as there was no voice save Sidney's to plead for a few of the most sacred things to be kept, everything would go.

Sidney's parents had died of typhoid fever the week before, and his aunt and uncle, living as they did in the district, had come and nursed the poor sick man and woman in their last hours, promising them to look after their child Sidney.

"Sell everything and use the money to educate and care for our little boy," had been the dying father's orders. And now, one week after the funeral, the sale of all that was left to Sidney was under way.

Once the child had begged to be allowed to keep Rover. But his aunt had so emphatically refused, saying that "old dogs were nuisances," that he had not dared to ask for anything else. Not that his aunt and uncle were an unusually severe couple, for they were very good folk in their calm, practical way, but they were so different to Sidney's own affectionate parents, who took such pleasure in humoring their little son and making his boyhood a happy one, that Sidney, in his deep sorrow, drew himself away from the undemonstrative pair, and since the death of his parents had poured out his heart to only Rover. But to-day he and Rover must part. An old bachelor from a nearby township who owned several mangy curs, and who now seemed to have a weakness for canine flesh, had agreed to take Rover home with him. And thus, without asking Sidney's permission or consent, had dear old Rover been disposed of.

As Sidney and Rover sat together on the doorstep, both heavy-hearted—for even though he was a speechless thing, Rover understood that his dear old home was undergoing some terrible change, and that his old, fond master and mistress had so suddenly and mysteriously disappeared—there came from the house Sidney's little boy cousin, a child of three.

Sidney called to the little fellow who paid no heed, but went running down the yard toward a gate which opened directly over a high bluff-like bank, which dipped into a swiftly flowing river below. Sidney, supposing the gate to be latched, sat still, watching the lively little cousin without any concern. But when the child reached the gate he gave it a push with his two chubby hands and it readily flew open. Out ran the child, all unmindful of the danger before him. In another instant the edge of the soft clay bank gave way under the little one's weight, and to Sidney's consternation the child fell forward and disappeared.

With a scream of "Help! help! Totty's in the river!" Sidney ran wildly across the yard, followed by Rover. At the edge of the bank he looked over and saw the little figure of his cousin struggling in a fragile bunch of driftwood which was caught against some old tree roots in the water. Sidney saw a broken place in the bank, less steep than the place where he stood, and ran there, letting himself down just as the crowd from the house—brought by his wild cries of help—assembled.

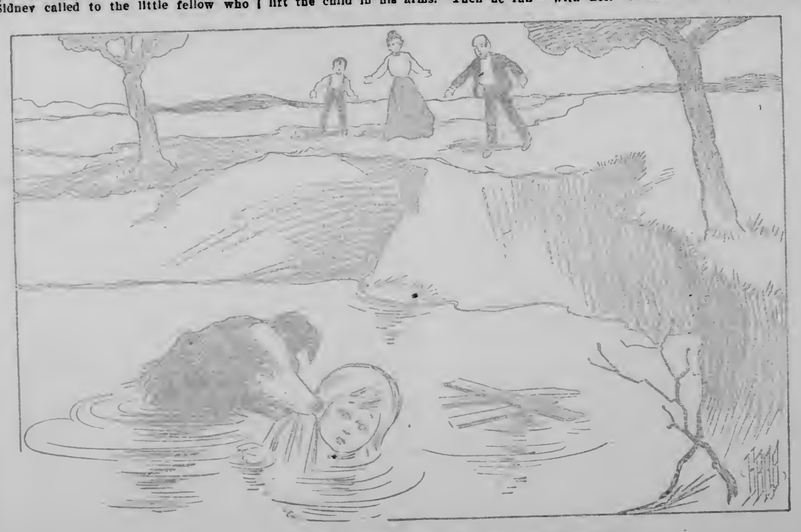

But fully several seconds before Sidney reached the edge of the river old Rover, seeing the child in distress in the driftwood, leaped from the high bank and dashed into the water, swimming rapidly toward him. And he was just in time, for at the very moment when he reached the little Totty the driftwood had fallen apart and the child, with screams to rent the air, went rolling into the whirling river. But scarcely had his body touched the water when Rover had hold of the little pink gingham frock, near the neck, and lifting his head with a desperate effort he put forth the best that was in him and swam to the shore.

The baby's father had thrown himself over the steep bank and reached the spot, where Rover swam to shore, in time to lift the child in his arms. Then he ran up the river till he came to a path which could be ascended and which led him up to the house. The little Totty's mother was almost wild with excitement, and clasped her little son to her breast, weeping over him. But no one just then thought of old Rover—save his young master. When the good old dog had been relieved of his burden at the water's edge he fell exhausted on the very verge of the bank. Sidney, having now reached him, dropped on his knees beside the beloved four-footed companion and began whispering words of praise and love in his ear as he drew the old, dripping body further up on the bank.

"Dear, dear, faithful old Rover," he murmured, his voice shaken with emotion. "You saved a life at the risk of your own; a life belonging in the family of those who, because of your helpless old age, are now going to cast you off. But, dear old lifelong friend, there's one who will never, never desert you. I have this moment made up my mind that unless you can go to my uncle's home I shall NOT go, either. While you live I shall care for you—and SHALL KEEP YOU ALWAYS!"

In the fervor of his emotion Sidney's voice had raised loud and clear, and fell on the ears of his uncle, who, on the bank above, had come to ascertain the whereabouts of his nephew and the dog. A flush of shame spread over his bronzed face and his heart throbbed with a new sympathy for the little nephew whom, till now, he had not fully understood. The child's silent grief over his parents' death, his withdrawal from those in whose hearts he felt he had no place, had caused the aunt and uncle both to think him sullen and ungrateful. But now the uncle understood—understood Sidney the better by remembering his own boyhood—and he returned to the house, where the sale of furniture was beginning. He called his wife aside (she had just finished dressing the baby in dry clothes and put him, still whimpering, on a bed) and had a few private words with her. A few minutes later Sidney heard his aunt's voice calling to him, calling from the bank above: "Come, dear child," she said, her face wearing a new expression, "come and bring your dear old Rover to the house. He is a grand old dog, and you shall take him to your new home—our house—where he will be made welcome and comfortably fed and housed during the remainder of his life. He saved our baby's life, and the least we can do for him is to care for him tenderly. So come to the house, dear Sid; there may be a few of your mother's things you wish to keep. Whatever you want can be taken with you to your new home."

Thus had the heroism of dear old Rover brought about a fuller understanding between aunt, uncle and nephew, and through the gloom of sadness which now hung over the boy's life there shone a bright star, shedding its light on a pathway which led to "home and love."

"Rover had hold of the little pink gingham frock."

Origin of Smoking Tobacco.

When Columbus discovered the island of Cuba, in 1492, he sent two of his sailors ashore to explore the new land. When they returned to the ship they reported that they saw many natives with lighted brands in their mouths, puffing hot smoke through their noses. This they supposed to be some barbaric method of perfuming themselves with sweet weeds. But afterward, when on the island again, they declared that they "saw the naked natives gather and twist large leaves together which they smoked like the devil."

That was the first lesson in smoking tobacco that those sailors from the Old World had ever received.

In 1503, when the Spaniards landed in Paraguay, South America, the natives came out to repulse them in great numbers. They "beat drums, chewed herbs, the juice of which they spurted from their mouths into the Spaniards' faces," etc.

The herb whose "juice they spurted" was no other weed than the one called tobacco. And it is to be supposed that the natives who put it to this filthy use understood the disastrous effect of the poisonous juice on the eyes, since they expectorated it in their enemies' faces, with, doubtless, the intention of blinding them.

The taking of snuff was also discovered among the savages of this continent upon the second visit of Columbus to America, in 1494. A member of the expedition described the custom as it then was indulged in among the Indians:

"After reducing the leaves to a fine powder they take it through a hollow cane a cubit long. One end of this they place in the nose and the other upon the powder and, draw it up, which purges them much."

Little Biographies of Big Men.

A Sketch of the Early Life of America's Greatest Novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Nathaniel Hawthorne came of a line of seafaring men who carried on their trade with the East Indies. Nathaniel was born on July 4, 1804, at Salem, Mass.

His father possessed strong Puritanical characteristics, but did not live to rear his son, dying when Nathaniel was very young. Nathaniel's mother was a sweet-mannered gentlewoman of deep intellect, but soon after her husband's death she withdrew herself from society and lived a veritable recluse in the bosom of her own household.

Nathaniel's education cannot be said to have been developed along the ordinary lines of training. An uncle, living at Raymond, Me., superintended the child's schooling, which was fitted to Nathaniel's own ideas mostly. As the boy did not like confinement or regular routine study, he devoted most of his time in desultory reading, which was frequently interrupted by a run in the woods in search of wild creatures or an hour on skates, for Nathaniel was passionately fond of outdoor sport and exercise.

When the season was propitious Nathaniel would go on an extended bear hunt, and would shoot small game and catch fish also. But during these years of leisure, study and work and play he was fitting himself for college, which he entered when in his seventeenth year.

After taking his degree he returned to be with his mother and sisters at Salem, where he lived a life of seclusion for 12 years, for the Hawthorne home was a little world within itself, the dwellers therein never entertaining company or being entertained. Much of the influence of that period shows itself in the morbidness of some of his novels—if the term morbidness be permissible when speaking of the strange melancholy which pervades parts of his even stranger tales.

In his childhood Nathaniel was full of fun and frolic, a healthy, well-developed boy for his years and possessed of strong personal charms. As a young man he was also of social turn, being an entertaining conversationalist and fond of bright companions. But the years of solitary life in his Salem home, with practically no companions save his mother and two sisters, changed his nature decidedly. But those years of seclusion meant much to the coming man, for they fostered and developed the genius in the boy and lifted it to its fullest. But for those 12 years of deep meditation, of dreams, of ideals which are born of solitude, the world would never have had "The Scarlet Letter" nor that sweetest of sweet, pathetic stories, "The House of Seven Gables."

DEMOCRATIC PARTY SHOULD BE FREE FROM ANY SUSPICION OF ALLIANCES WITH CORPORATIONS, SAYS BRYAN

Private Monopolies Must be Eliminated and Trusts Controlled.

Nebraskan Statesman Hears of Sentiment in His Favor.

Says It Is Too Early to Speak of Presidential Nomination.

Berlin, June 11.—"This is too sudden," said William J. Bryan with a laugh, when he was told today of the adoption by recent state Democratic conventions of resolutions favoring his nomination for the presidency of the United States in 1908. "This is the first announcement of this news to me," Mr. Bryan continued. "I have been off the main caravan route for some time, and have been absorbed in what I have been seeing and doing."

Mr. Bryan had been moving so rapidly since he left Vienna on Friday that letters and telegrams for him did not reach him until today. As to the possibility of his nomination he had little to say, declaring it is too early to speak of that question, but taking up the subject of the political requirements of the day, he said: "Before leaving home I tried to distinguish between Democracy and what can properly be called Socialism. Democracy recognizes competition as legitimate, and tries to protect the competitive principle from attack. Socialism sees competition as an evil to be eliminated by public ownership and operation of all means of production and distribution. While this distincton between Democracy and Socialism should not be overlooked, the Democratic platform must be one of progress and reform and not merely of opposition to Republican policies or Socialistic ideas. In our fight for the absolute elimination of private monopolies and for the regulation of corporations in general it is necessary that the party shall be free from any suspicion of alliance with the corporate interests that have been dominating American politics. To this end campaign contributions must be limited to those who have the public interest to advance. I trust that public sentiment will require all parties to keep their books open so that hereafter no party will be under private obligations to shield corporate offenders."

Alluding to conditions in the meat industry, Mr. Bryan said:

"The beef trust is not different in character and methods from other trusts. The inevitable tendency of a private monopoly is to increase the price of a product and to lower its quality. Why should anyone expect anything else from a trust than the lowering of quality when a monopoly is established. Observe, I have used the words "private monopoly," not public. In a private monopoly a private interest is set up against those of the whole people. Quite a different principle comes into operation when the interest of all is alone in view."

Herman Ridder of the New York Staats Zeitung, and Mr. Bryan, had a long talk today on the political situation in the United States. Mr. Bryan will leave here for St. Petersburg tomorrow, and from there will visit Sweden and Norway. He will arrive in England early in July, and will then visit France, Italy and Switzerland. He expects to sail on the steamship Princess Irene from Gibraltar on Aug. 22, and to arrive in New York on Aug. 29.

DREDGEMAN DROPS DEAD.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., June 11.—Joseph L. Rembley, a well-known dredgeman, dropped dead Saturday while conversing with a friend on board the tug Thomas Hood. A physician says the cause was heart trouble. Rembley recently came here from Port Arthur. He was 48 years old, and was employed by the Hubbell Dredging company.

SEVERAL DROWNED

Fierce Squall in New York Causes Loss of Life.

Sudden Thunder Storm the Most Severe of Season.

New York, June 11.—Three men were drowned in New York bay when the yacht Lottie, with a fishing party on board, capsized during a sudden storm.

The Lottie, in charge of Capt. Theodore Bownet, started out yesterday morning with a fishing party of eleven men. About 5 p. m., while off West Bay light, she was struck by a heavy squall and capsized. Three men, William Mormon, Paul Smith and George Gise, all of Brooklyn, were drowned. The rest of the crew climbed upon the side of the yacht and remained there until taken off by a tug.

The thunder squall which swept the harbor late in the day was the most severe of the season. Many small boats were turned topsy turvy, but in most instances the imperilled persons were quickly rescued. One of the municipal ferry boats running to Staten Island, picked up a party from a naphtha launch in distress off Robbins reef.

Six boys in a row boat were dashed against the sea wall of the Ellis Island emigrant station. Their craft was smashed to bits, but their cries for help brought rescuers. Eight badly scared men and boys were taken off the naphtha launch Gloria, when she went on a rock in Little Hell Gate. After the last of the party was taken off, the launch capsized and sank.

Charles Reilly and William Hughes were drowned while swimming in the North river, off Thirty-fifth street yesterday afternoon. Several other drownings are reported.

Members of the Ocean Yacht club, Stapleton, Staten Island, last night noticed a launch afire in the middle of the bay. A minute or two afterward a report was heard like an explosion. Men put out from the clubhouse in a small boat, but when they got to the place where they had seen the blaze they could find neither the boat nor anybody in the water. Whether anyone was aboard the launch is not konwn.

N. Cox, James Cockrill and James B. Marcum. Among other things, Jett is said to have confirmed the statement of B. J. Majority of Committee Thinks Smoot Should Leave Senate.

Minority Believes He Is Entitled to Retain His Seat.

Washington, June 11.—The reasons for the action of the senate committee on privileges and elections in declaring, by a majority vote, that Reed Smoot is not entitled to a seat in the senate as senator from Utah, are stated in a report submitted to the senate today by Chairman Burrows, and signed by Senators Burrows, Dolliver, Dubois, Pettus, Bailey, Overman and Frazier, to be as follows:

"That Mr. Smoot is one of a self-perpetuating body of men, known as the First Presidency and Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly known as the Mormon Church; that these men claim divine authority to control the members of said church in all things, temporal as well as spiritual; that this authority is, and has been for several years past, so exercised by the said first presidency and Twelve apostles, as to encourage the practice of polygamy and polygamous cohabitation in the state of Utah, and the law of the land; that the said first presidency and twelve apostles do now control, and for a long time past have controlled, the political affairs of the state of Utah and have thus brought about in said state

DELEGATES TO THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION SWARMING INTO THE ZENITH CITY BY EVERY TRAIN

Growing Sentiment for Lord Though Representation is Small.

Talk of First District Caucus But Diment Not Anxious.

Evening and Morning Trains Will Bring Many More Delegates.

Politically Duluth is today the most important city in the state. With the Republican state convention only two days distant, candidates and delegates are arriving on every train. Many of them are bringing their wives along, and all are coming with the evident intention of getting what enjoyment they can out of the trip, as well as to participate in the political battle.

The majority of candidates for state offices were in the city this morning, and the remainder will, it is expected, be here by tonight. Several individual delegates are here, but this morning no one of the entire delegations had arrived. Most of them will come in tomorrow, with a few stragglers probably on Wednesday morning.

Thus far during the campaign political headquarters of the state have been at St. Paul, but, beginning Saturday night and Sunday, they gradually began moving Duluthward, and today St. Paul and Minneapolis do not count very strong in a political way. All the leaders from Ramsey and Hennepin counties, and from other parts of the state as well, are enjoying the invigorating air from off Lake Superior, and wishing they were able to take a little of it back home with them.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether there will be enough contention to make the sessions lively and exciting ones. The general opinion rather inclines to the latter. The gathering will doubtless be more harmonious than was the last one, but there will be enough contention to make things interesting from the standpoint of delegate and spectator alike, although all the candidates for the several different positions display only feelings of friendship toward each other at present.

Who will be nominated for governor by the Republicans? Well, guess. There is a lot of talk around the hotels and political headquarters this morning, but nothing even remotely definite can be mentioned, for there are too few of the delegates and spouters here yet. Only the advance guard has arrived and even it is waiting. It is understood that there were a number of combinations attempted this morning, but because of the lack of attendance this early in the game, most of them were abandoned for the present.

To judge from the talk, it is admitted that there is a strong and growing Lord sentiment on the wing just now, but even that is problematical yet. But it is certain that with the coming of Senator Lord and his meeting with delegates about the hotels today, a growing sentiment in his favor has sprung up. It should not be understood, however, that other candidates and their friends are laying down their hands. Jacobson followers still claim an unbroken front with a good margin of over 300 votes to start on. Several said this morning that there would be over 400 Jacobson votes in the convention when it opened, but this is generally doubted.

The Cole sentiment, too is playing up, and so far as the talk about the lobbies is concerned it would seem that the Cole sentiment here at least is second only to that of Lord. Mr. Cole has evidently surprised a good many by the strength which he has mustered and his followers feel that his chances are much better.

But there is no ground for predictions and nobody is making any for the chances all around are too slim for them. Senator Somerville is here

ATTACK BY STRIKERS

Made on Check House of the M. A. Hanna Mine.

Fifty Shots Fired, But No One is Injured.

Dillonvale, Ohio, June 11.—An attack, presumably by strikers, was made early today on the check house of the M. A. Hanna Coal company, at Dillondale, when fifty shots were fired from a hill two hundred feet distant. There were four watchmen in the building but no one was injured. Officials of the company who were holding a conference with Mayor Eberle at the time of the attack, organized a party and went to the mine to protect their property. Not a shot was fired by the company men.

LAST DAY ON EARTH

Tucker Will Probably Go to Electric Chair Monday Night.

President Refuses to Interfere With Execution of Sentence.

Boston, June 11.—Governor Guild made public today a telegram received by him from President Roosevelt in which the president, after pointing out that he had been requested to interfere with the execution of Charles L. Tucker, declares that in his judgment, Governor Guild's decision not to interfere with the carrying out the sentence of Tucker, seemed to him entirely sound and commanded his hearty sympathy.

Tucker is under sentence of death this week, probably tonight, for the murder of Mabel Page at Weston, March 31, 1904. President Roosevelt's telegram follows:

"The White House, Washington, June 10, 1906.—Governor Curtis Guild, Boston, Mass.: Have been requested on behalf of certain parties in Boston to interfere with the execution of Tucker, it being alleged that it is my duty so to do, inasmuch as I have the power under the federal laws.

"No showing has been made to me that I have such power, but without regard to this I desire to state to you that, in my judgment, your decision not to interfere with the carrying out of the sentence of Tucker seems to me entirely sound and commands my hearty sympathy. It seems particularly a case in which there should be no interference with the carrying out of the sentence.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Tucker awoke in his cell at the Charlestown prison this morning with a realization that his last day on earth had arrived. He continued to demonstrate his remarkable nerve and informed the death watch that he had enjoyed a good night's sleep. Later the prisoner ate a hearty breakfast, after which he began preparations to receive the sacrament of baptism. It was for the purpose of administering this rite that Tucker's spirituala dviser, Rev. Thomas W. Bishop, secured a postponement of the death sentence, Tucker having consented at the last moment to become a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. It is the general belief that Tucker will be sent to the electric chair shortly after midnight tonight.

HIBBING WINS FROM CLOQUET

Losers Nearly Bat Out Victory in the Ninth Inning.

Hibbing, Minn., June 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hibbing took a fast game of ball here yesterday afternoon, from Cloquet by the score of 4 to 3, in the presence of about 900 fans. Cloquet made a garrison finish, scoring three runs in the ninth inning, tying the score, but Hibbing won out by timely batting in the last half of the ninth. Freeman was a complete mystery to Cloquet for the first eight innings, but the visitors began to find him in the ninth. Thompson also pitched good ball.

The score:

	R	H
Hibbing	0 0 1 1 0 1 0 0 1—4	7

Batteries—Freeman and Wegman; Thorson and Rosch. Umpire, McFadden. Attendance, 900.

WEATHER FORECAST—Cool; northeast winds.

"Good clothes give a man confidence in himself," Sherlock Holmes remarked with an air of finality. "If he is correctly dressed he looks the world fearlessly in the face. If poorly attired, he has an ashamed feeling. We cannot escape the fact that clothes do make the man, Sartor Resartus to the contrary notwithstanding."

If clothes do not actually make the man, they make OUR first IMPRESSION of him and it amounts to the same thing. No man who buys our clothes is ever obliged to apologize for them and, more than that, they earn good comment.

NEW NAVAL PROGRAM OF THE GREAT POWERS

"As Big as the Biggest" is the Motto for New Warships---United States Now Third in Tonnage But Lacks Heaviest Type of Battleship.

Washington, June 9.—New naval programs of European nations, just made public, show that there can be no pause, if the United States is to hold its position of third in rank among sea powers. To do this, the naval experts say, it is no longer sufficient to make a big showing in "aggregate tonnage." The United States must have war ships as big as the biggest, or fall back in the race.

This conviction was in the minds of members of the house naval committee when it framed this year's naval appropriation bill, calling for an expenditure of about $100,000,000, and including one battleship of 20,000 tons, to cost $10,060,000.

In comparison with the plans of Great Britain, Germany and Japan, this is a modest outlay. England's 18,000-ton "Dreadnought" started anew the race to build heavier warships. Now Japan is building a vessel which will outstrip the "Dreadnought" by several tons. Germany has recently increased the tonnage of some of her ships heretofore authorized to 18,000 tons, and a 20,000-ton warship is loudly demanded by the German Navy League, which usually gets what it wants.

The disposition of congress is now to build but one battleship a year in the future, and such minor and auxiliary craft as may be needed to keep the present complement intact. Secretary Bonaparte has joined—the "Big Shippers," by recommending that if congress should authorize but one battleship this year, "it shall be the largest and strongest battleship that is known to be afloat.

The secretary of the navy, naval officers and members of the naval committees of house and senate are aware of what other powers are doing in the upbuilding of their fleets. Elaborate reports have been gathered on this subject, and the new estimate of the naval strength of the principal nations, including the displacement of warships, built and building, of 1,000 or more tons, and of torpedo craft of more than 50 tons, shows these relative positions:

Nation	Tonnage.
Great Britain	1,907,998
France	890,958
United States	701,797
Germany	558,062
Japan	427,371
Russia	375,695
Italy	340,424
Austria	143,356

England, it appears, has no continuous policy of construction. It is pointed out that, however formidable foreign ship-building programs may appear on paper, England can always overtake them, in consequence of her resources and power of rapid construction. Her authorities claim that it is more desirable to complete a limited numebr of vessels than to spend the same money on a larger number building at slower rate. During the year 1905, thirty-seven vessels of an aggregate displacement of 173,550 tons, passed from the completing stage to the commissioned list. This represents, in the fewest possible words, the output of finished naval construction in England during the past twelve months. The vessels completed during the year were five battleships, five armored cruisers, seven scouts, three third-class cruisers, and seventeen destroyers. A total of 124 naval vessels, having a displacement of 275,000 tons, were removed from the effective sea force, and either sold or placed on the list for subsidiary purposes only.

The commission of the budget of the German Empire have voted the project for the increase of the fleet by a very large majority, and also, in spite of the opposition of the Socialists, have confirmed the project of the Government for the augumentation in tonnage of a certain number of vessels already in the program. The commission has also sanctioned the credits for the construction of three big vessels for 1906—two battleships, each of 18,000 tons, and an armored cruiser of 15,000 tons. The credits commission has further voted the credit demanded of $2,000,000 as a first installment towards the construction of two divisions of torpedo craft, and a credit of $600,000 for the building of submarines. The battleships, it is estimated, will come to the respectable sum of $10,000,000 each.

Before any of these new warships are built certain construction problems remain to be settled. The experts are still quarreling over the lessons of the Russian-Japaneso sea fights. Some claim that the results of the battle of the Sea of Japan show that the center-line bulkhead must go. This would mean a big change in naval design. The center-line bulkhead, its critics say, has a serious drawback in the fact that it renders a ship liable to a very serious list in case of puncture on one side, and unless the inrush of water is allowed to seek its level clear across the ship in the flooded section.

In some of the latest designs for battleships and cruisers in European navies, the center-line bulkhead has been cut out of the fire rooms, and the authorities responsible for these designs have recently determined to use the "Long-Arm" electric power doors on the bunkers to replace the safety in sub-division lost by the omission of this center-line bulkhead. These electric power doors, which are already in use on most of the latest vessels in the United States navy, are operated from a central station on the bridge. The officer in charge of the ship can by this means almost instantly close all the bulkhead doors necessary to keep the ship from sinking. That European authorities are coming around to the methods adopted by the United States naval constructors to make warships unsinkable is one of the greatest compliments ever paid to American designers.

In France the superior council has recommended that the naval force consist in 1919 of five squadrons of six battleships each, and four reserve units, making a total of 34 battleships, 18 armored cruisers, comprised in five divisions of 3 cruisers each, and 3 reserve units; 18 armored cruisers of the second class, 6 scouting vessels, 70 torpedo-boat destroyers, or one for each armor-clad, and 6 torpedo-boat destroyers for the Far East; also, 58 destroyers for torpedo-boat and submarine divisions, and 15 reserve units; or a total of 149 of this class. In addition, the program calls for 49 defensive submarines, 82 offensive submarines or submersibles, and 170 torpedo boats. The annual cost for new construction will be about $25,000,000. The estimates for 1906 provide for 3 battleships (first class, of about 18,000 tons), ten destroyers (of about 480 tons), 20 submersibles (a total of about 400,500 tons).

Japan, like England, has no continuous policy of construction. She is now building 4 battleships, 4 armored cruisers, a second-class cruiser, a dispatch boat, and 28 destroyers. These 38 ships will have an aggregate displacement of 144,120 tons.

Russia's program for the rebuilding of her navy, lately sanctioned by the czar, covers nine years, and involves an expenditure of $200,000,000 for construction alone. The vessels provided for include 12 battleships, 15 cruisers, 46 torpedo-boat destroyers, 18 torpedo boats, 10 submarines, 7 gunboats, 9 monitors, and 1 mining ship, or 118 vessels in all. The biggest battleships, nine of 16,500 tons each, are all allotted to the Baltic fleet.

MARINE.

START FOR LOWER LAKES.

Manila Leaves Port in Tow of the Steamer Bunsen.

After several weeks of preparation the Pittsburg Steamship company's barge Manila has started on her trip to the lower lakes and a dry dock. This craft was released several months ago from Encampment Island, the rocks on which she was thrust during the big storm of last November.

The barge started down the lakes yesterday in tow of the steamer Bunsen, and with the tugs Zenith and Boyington on each side of her. Despite the repairs made on her while she was lying in the harbor here, she is not seaworthy, and the pumps will be kept at work on her all the way to Lake Erie.

Capt. Alfred Beaupre and Engineer J. W. Greiner of the Pittsburg company's staff are in charge of the Manila. The Superior shipyards are so rushed with work and orders ahead that it was impossible for the Manila to be cared for there. The Mataafa awaits repairs at the Head of the Lakes, but it is understood that the Crescent City is to be towed down the lakes.

CRESCENT CITY TO GO SOON.

Wrecked Steamer Will be Towed Down Lakes This Week Some Time.

The steamer Crescent City, now released from the rocks at Lakewood and resting quietly at anchor in the harbor near the interstate bridge, is to be taken to some lower lake port the last of this week. Her destination has not been announced, nor the exact date of her sailing.

Workmen are busy preparing her for the trip. Although she is not in very good shape, it is thought she is better able to make the trip than the barge Manila, which started down the lakes yesterday.

NEW TRIAL AGAIN DENIED PATRICK

An Application Will Now be Made to Supreme Court.

New York, June 11.—Recorder Goff today denied a motion for a new trial in the case of Albert T. Patrick, the convicted murderer of William M. Rice.

Patrick's lawyers, it is said, were prepared for an adverse decision, and have the papers ready for an application to the United States supreme court for a writ of error and for a writ of habeas corpus. These applications would again delay the carrying out of the death sentence, and would make the fifth postponement for Patrick, who has now been in the death house in Sing Sing for more than four years.

The last report in the effort to save Patrick would be an application to Governor Higgins for a commutation of the death sentence.

ROSA'S CONQUEST

By Dorothea Deakin.

(Copyright, 1069, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Rose, as Pierrette, in a full, short white skirt dotted with scarlet pompons, with an absurd little perked hat perched rakishly on her brown hair, ran on with her usual prodigality of smiles, and sang to an adoring audience that she was the Rose of all the Riviera—a fact they were quite ready to believe.

It was not till she had finished her turn that Patrick awoke once more to the hopelessness of the whole thing. His was a gloomy nature. Three days ago he had been miserable, with the firm conviction that Rosa did not and never would love him. Today he was sure of her, but quite confident that never, never, would he get the old boy, as he called his grandfather, to approve of his engagement and allow him to marry her.

Next morning they were sitting on the sands half a mile beyond the promenade.

"What is there to be ashamed of in me?" Rosa asked, shortly.

"I thought I was rather nice."

"Nice?" he said. "Yes, you are very nice, Rosa, and no one could possibly be ashamed of you. But grandfather is archaic—antediluvian. He won't go to the theater now. He talks about the dull old burlesques as if they were the latest musical comedies, and as for the Irish melodies—"

Patrick left to her imagination the passion his grandfather entertained for the Irish melodies.

"Funny, sentimental old thing," Rosa said, with a laugh. "Granny used to sing one of those old things—'Still so gently o'er me stealing.' I learned it when I was a kiddy, and parodied it, 'Still the burglar softly stealing, creeps in through the pantry ceiling.' The parody was rather nice."

"Rosa, dearest," his voice was very earnest, "will you give the thing up and marry me? I've got to go back to town next week. I can't and won't go without you."

This time it was Rosa who was silent.

"I've been over the whole thing before," he said quickly. "Its no use my telling you again how much I care—"

"No," said Rosa, quietly. "But what about your grandfather-"

Patrick flushed.

"If we're once married," he said, hastily, "it would be all right. If we were once away from here, he need never know anything about the pavilion or that you—"

He broke off. Rosa's mouth was set hard. It was no rosebud now.

"That will do," said she. "No, no, no! I won't. Not unless you marry me openly here in Silverbeach, and ask the whole Pavilion crowd to the wedding."

"Rosa!"

Rosa laughed.

"It is my benefit on Monday," she said, "and I get 10 per cent of the profits. Bring your grandfather to the Pavilion to see me. I can wear what I like and sing what I like on Monday. I will do my best to make a good impression."

Patrick shook his head gloomily. He knew Rosa's repertoire too well.

"And now," said she, "I'm going down to the Pavilion to practice songs."

"I will be a new experience," suggested Patrick, mildly, "and very amusing."

"Experience I'd rather do without," grunted the grandfather. "Tomfools and minxes."

"I shall take tickets for both of us," said his grandson, hastily. "It's—it's for a charity tonight."

"A charity? For what?"

"For the benefit of a poor girl," was the young man's shameless reply.

"H'm," said his grandfather. "A charity. I suppose you will make me go whether I wish to or not."

At half past seven precisely the big wooden doors which shut in the brilliant little stage were opened wide by the refined humorist, and the ladies' orchestra struck up their selection from "Florodora."

"Ladies and gentlemen," the manager announced, "you have come tonight for Miss Rosa Carey's benefit. No doubt she will thank you for your generous support later on. For some reason, known only to herself, Miss Carey has chosen to sing to you tonight in the character of a lady of the year 1840. I hope you will receive her kindly."

The audience was puzzled, but it applauded vigorously. Patrick did not understand in the least.

A rose-colored vision drifted out on the stage, not with a hop, skip and a jump, as was Rosa's habit, but with a dexterous blending of a chasee and a glide, which ended in a low curtsy to the audience.

"Good gracious!" said Patrick's grandfather. "Good gracious!"

The audience laughed, and Rosa curtsied again and kissed her hand. She was so carefully made up that it was impossible to detect it with the naked eye, and the bloom on her round young cheek might have been all her own.

"Wonderful," said the old man. "Wonderful." Rosa began to sing, "Still so gently o'er me stealing."

The audience was surprised, but listened with kindly interest and obvious admiration.

She was encored, of course. The pianist had his instructions, and turned over one page. Patrick saw that the girl meant to go straight through her granny's old song book.

"Rich and rare were the gems she wore,
And a bright gold ring on her wand she bore."

And so on, and so on, till the last verse was finished, and the singer curtsied and disappeared.

"Song," yelled some one from the back. "Nother song."

Pinker than her flounced dress, smiling and hesitating, Rosa again returned, but the audience were not to be put off with a mere speech, or a curtsy sweep with antiquated grace.

What could she sing? She had sung all the songs in her granny's bound volume. She had nothing else—of the kind. She would curtsy again and go.

She took the topmost flounce of her gown between her fingers and swept her adorers a farewell.

The coronet from her hair fell at her feet. Half melancholy she picked it up, and, despite the frantic audience, turned to go. One had in the wreath—the largest—came loose in her hand to inspire her at the last moment, and with a half smile she ran to the pianist and threw a hasty whisper over his shoulder.

He had no notes, but the brilliancy of his vamping was equal to this or any demand. A few crashing, effective chords, and then: "The Last Rose of Summer."

Little witch! Well indeed was she playing her part. For the old boy she had chosen the song of songs. With ineffable sadness she went on, plucking and letting fall one by one the pink petals.

"No flower of her kindred,
No rosebud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes,
To give sigh for sigh."

Patrick glanced at his grandfather. He was blowing his nose with silent emotion, and the young man wondered whether he could see the little rose-colored figure on the stage at all, so thick was the mist of tears in his eyes.

Triumphant indeed was her success. When she finished, the old boy stamped with his stick on the floor, and shouted till Patrick grew almost ashamed of the attention he was attracting.

"Poor little girl! Poor little Rose! I haven't heard anything like that since I listened to the divine Jenny. What a shame that such a girl as that should be singing in such a place as this!"

"It is indeed a shame." Patrick trembled. He felt that this was the moment for him to tell his secret. "Grandfather," said he, "I love that girl."

The old boy did not grasp his meaning.

"I don't wonder," he said. "I'm in love with her myself. Charming! Charming!"

But Patrick had made his plunge.

"I am not speaking lightly," he said, eagerly. "I know her. I want to take her away from the stage and marry her."

The old man began to understand.

"The blazes you do!" said he.

"Yes," said Patrick boldly. "She is the only woman in the world for me. She is a good girl, grandfather—and a lady."

"I am sure of that," the old man responded heartily. "No girl could have sung those songs with such true feeling and marvelous expression if she had not been a pearl among women—a pearl, sir."

Patrick was thunderstruck. "Will you let me introduce you to her?" he asked.

His grandfather beamed. "Nothing would give me greater pleasure," said he.

The young man vanished.

Five minutes later Rosa, to the outward eyes all shyness and pretty respect, ran down the three steps to the left of the little glittering stage and curtsied to the old man.

He bowed with old-fashioned grace. "When I came here tonight," he said, gravely, "I little thought to have been dazzled and enchanted by a vision from my happy youth."

Rosa smiled up into his face with engaging simplicity.

"I am glad you liked my songs," she said, demurely.

The old boy lifted her hand to his lips.

"I have to thank you," he said, "for the happiest and the saddest evening I have spent in many years." He looked at Patrick and hesitated, but only for a moment.

"I hope," he said courteously, "that the last rose of summer will soon be transplanted to a more congenial soil."

He turned abruptly and walked slowly away from them down the empty room. Rosa looked up into her lover's face, touched and softened. Then, with a sudden impulse she tore the La France rose from the lace at her breast and ran after the old boy to touch his arm with a timid little hand.

"This is the last rose of summer," said she, "will you let me give it to you?"

REFORM FIGHT.

Boston Herald: Several years ago the Rev. Ashbel Chapman of Springfield instituted a series of reform measures against the local organization analogous to Tammany. He began his political campaign by sending to the boss of the district a card on which were written the number and chapter of a verse in the Bible. When the boss and his associates looked up the text they found it to be a fire-breathing threat against evildoers. The minister had hoped to awe them by the use of scripture.

One of the most objectionable places in the city was a place known as "The Firs." "The Firs" was the headquarters of the gang, and the clergyman preached against the place for two months preceding election. The evildoers, however, not only refused to tremble, but they won the election.

Some months afterward, when all was going at the lively pace of old, the reverend gentleman received a postal card which read thus:

"Dear Sir—We respectfully refer you to the 14th chapter of Isaiah, 8th verse.

"THE FIRS."

The "devil was quoting scripture," and the minister was curious. Upon looking up the text, he was amazed to read the following:

"Yea, the fir-trees rejoice at thee, and the cedars of Lebanon, saying, Since thou art laid down no feller is come up against us."

"Be busy about some rational thing—so that satan may always find theo occupied."—St. Jerome. To read Herald want ads. is a rational thing to do—and a thrifty.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

but is saying little while sawing wood to beat any old band and band wagon that may show up. Senator Somerville believes that he is going to make a showing on the first ballot to surprise some people.

So far the Halden sentiment is concerned there does not seem to be much else in Duluth—among the visitors, too. Whenever and wherever a Halden badge is seen, will be heard, "That's right."

It is understood that some offers were made this morning and not taken that Halden will be nominated for state auditor on the first ballot. In fact almost everybody expects to see the state auditorship settled by one ballot.

There is likely to be an interesting mix-up in the First district delegation if matters are not straightened out today. Those of the advance guard from the First district already here are Senator Lord of Hasson, who is a candidate for governor; J. M. Diment of Owatonna, who is also a candidate for governor; Representative W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow, who, if neither Lord or Diment land the gubernatorial nomination, is a candidate for lieutenant governor; Representative J. L. Morley of Owatonna, and Senator G. W. Peachey of Owatonna.

There has been some effort making today to hold a caucus of the First district delegates tomorrow, but this morning, without saying so, Candidate Diment seemed to be unfavorable. J. L. Morley of Owatonna said that Mr. Diment expects to go into the convention with about ninety delegates to start with, but could not say whether or not Mr. Diment favored a conference of the delegates. Mr. Diment, when asked about the matter, said he knew of no effort to have a caucus. Senator Lord said quite confidently this morning that he expects a caucus of the First district delegates to be held tomorrow, and believes that some understanding will be reached. The rest of the delegation will arrive tonight and tomorrow morning.

It is believed that Mr. Diment will not be able to prevent a caucus for the delegates in general, it is understood, realize that to go into the convention, each man for himself, will be foolish and fatal to the chances of the two candidates for governor from the First district. It is said that the delegation from the First is pretty well divided between Lord and Diment.

It is believed that a caucus will result in an agreement to give each a complimentary vote on the first ballot, the whole delegation to go solidly to the stronger of the two on the second ballot, with the second candidate as a second choice. Should both of these candidates fail of nomination, it seems likely at this time that the First district will go about solidly for Nolan for lieutenant governor. Mr. Nolan wants a caucus, and says he will not be a candidate for lieutenant governor unless Messrs. Lord and Diment both fail of nomination for governor. His activity and work for the second office is made only on that condition, and he says he has considerable strength. The nomination of any candidate from the southern portion of the state for governor would also affect Nolan's chances adversely.

It is understood about the lobbies of the hotel this morning, that Cole has increased in strength amazingly within the past two days. It is claimed that he has made a vigorous campaign in Jacobson's acknowledged territory, and has made great inroads on that candidate. One politician of considerable astuteness said this morning, refusing to allow his name to be used:

"So far as I am concerned I have not taken an active part for any candidate, but I must say that Cole has been something of a surprise to me. Those he has with him are solidly with him; there seems to be no turning them.

WALTER T. LEMON, St. Paul, Candidate for Clerk of Supreme Court. Committee.

And I understand that he has so worked among the Jacobson people that he has a slew of them promised to come over to him for second choice. I understand believe that Jacobson's strength is principally of the kind which requires a continual gain on the part of their candidate, and if Jacobson fails to make good on that account, there is likely to be a lively breaking away from his ranks. Should this happen, it seems likely that Cole is going to gain from Jacobson's ranks to a large extent—just how much I cannot, of course, say. But it may start a band-wagon movement for Cole, and if it does the likelihood is that it will all be over soon."

The state convention will be called to order at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, at the Armory. The big hall has been completely filled with chairs, and there will be accommodations for upwards of 2,000 persons. The lower floor will seat about 1,800 and the balconies will accommodate 500 or 600 more. Standing room will also be in great demand, it is expected. In all there will be 1,089 delegates, and these, of course, will be given the most advantageous positions on the lower floor.

As early as 8 o'clock this morning hotel lobbies began to take on an unusually busy appearance, as a result of the arrival of politicians from all directions. Men were to be seen standing or sitting about in groups, discussing the chances of this or that candidate, and expressing wonder or curiosity over the intentions of others.

Walter Lemon of Ramsey county, who is trying for the nomination of clerk of the supreme court, was the first candidate to arrive. Accompanying him was Dar F. Reese, chairman of the Ramsey county delegation. Both seemed to be feeling good over the outlook.

"I wouldn't have entered the fight at all if I hadn't expected to receive the nomination," said Mr. Lemon. "Of course I will be nominated. Why shouldn't I be. I do not care to make any predictions in regard to the governorship fight. What is the use? I have been so busy looking after my own affairs that I haven't had time to look after anybody's else's. We figured the business of the convention will be done in Duluth, and thought it would be a wise move to be on the ground early."

FENTON G. WARREN, St. Paul. Member of Ramsey County Steering

Mr. Reese was just as sure of the success of Mr. Lemon's candidacy. He said they were antagonizing no candidate for governor, but were running Mr. Lemon's campaign along lines as nearly independent as possible. He is an enthusiastic backer of Mr. Lemon.

The early morning train from the Twin Cities brought several more candidates. Among them was Lewis J. Vogel of New Ulm, who is a candidate for state treasurer, with what he considers very good chances for election. George W. Somerville of Sleepy Eye, a prominent candidate for governor, was another of the early arrivals. He also presented a smiling and confident face. E. A. Nelson of Hallock, candidate for secretary of state, and J. P. Heatwole of Northfield were two others to arrive this morning and register with those named above at the Spalding.

Mr. Heatwole's appearance caused a ripple of interest. He is known to have entered into an extended conference with James A. Martin, in St. Paul yesterday, in regard to the Jacobson campaign. It is said that he is ready to join the Jacobson forces if he is met half way. He is understood to control thirty or more votes, which he can turn to Jacobson if it is seen that Cole hasn't a very good chance of winning out.

At the St. Louis hotel those who came on this morning's trains from The Twin Cities were A. L. Cole of Walker, candidate for governor; L. M. Babcock of Wadena, a prominent political leader and for a time speaker of the house; Representative J. R. Morley and Senator Peachey of Owatonna; C. A. Pidgeon of Buffalo, candidate for clerk of the supreme court, and J. M. Diment of Owatonna, candidate for governor. Mr. Morley is managing Diment's campaign for governor, and is as optimistic as could be desired over the outlook. A. L. Cole, who has been making such an aggressive campaign during the last few weeks, is also entirely confident.

Darwin S. Hall of the Renville county delegation, and Charles Watson of the Lake county delegation, are about the only two delegates or candidates at the Lenox this morning. The Lenox will be well filled with convention men this evening, however.

Among those who will attend the convention who arrived yesterday were J. J. Lomen of Ada, candidate for secretary of state; Julius A. Schmal of Redwood county, candidate for secretary of state; C. C. Dinehart of Slayton, candidate for treasurer; A. O. Eberhart of Mankato, candidate for lieutenant governor; W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow, talked of for lieutenant governor; D. M. Gunn of Itasca county, C. L. Todd, chairman of the Murray county delegation; Charles C. Haupt, United States district attorney, of Otter Tail county; Senator W. W. Dunn, F. W. Zallman, John F. Selb, Sherman F. Smith and Senator E. E. Smith of the Hennepin and Ramsey county delegation.

"I am the first of my delegation, and about the first of any of the delegates to arrive," said D. T. Hall of the Renville delegation of fourteen members, who will make the Lenox their headquarters. "The train service was such that I had to either get on the field early or late, so I came early. The remainder of the boys will be in before night.

"Our delegation is solid for Jacobson. He has the whole Seventh district with him. We know no second choice, but are for Jacobson all the time. I think he will receive the nomination. We are instructed for no other candidate on the state ticket, but the fact that Julius Schmahl is a neighbor of ours, naturally makes the inclination of the delegation lean toward him in his candidacy for secretary of state. In our district the boys haven't paid much attention to any candidate other than Jacobson, but we will vote as a unit on whatever comes up for consideration. I cannot say how we will stand on the vote for auditor."

John Abercrombie of the Douglas county delegation, is registered at the Miller hotel, where his delegation will make its headquarters. It is uninstructed. Some are Cole men, and some are for Jacobson, and some may be for other candidates for governor, says Mr. Abercrombie. The question of who the delegation will support for state auditor has not been discussed yet.

A. L. Cole of Walker, the North's candidate for the nomination for governor, is at the St. Louis in parlor Q, accompanied by his brother, Dr. Cole of Fergus Falls, who heads the Otter Tail county delegation. Dr. L. W. Babcock of Wadena, former speaker of the house of representatives, is also here in company with Mr. Cole.

Mr. Cole would not talk for publication, except to say that he feels very much satisfied that he is going to win. His brother, Dr. Cole, says that the chances are excellent. So far as Dr. Cole's delegation is concerned, it is solid for A. L. Cole, with no second choice decided upon.

Clarence C. Dinehart of Slayton, who is candidate for the nomination for state treasurer on the Republican ticket is in Duluth, and has parlor C in the St. Louis hotel. He is pulling his wires shrewdly, and has for his manager C. L. Todd of Slayton, who is also a wire puller of some considerable ability. Mr. Dinehart says his chances are good, and says that while his county is rather productive of candidates, most of them are bunched in one end of it, while he is alone in the other end. He expects to make a showing on the first ballot, which will attract plenty of support as second choice, and confidently expects to land the nomination.

E. A. Nelson of Hallock, Kittson county, who is a candidate for secretary of state, is circulating among the politicians here today, and if his manner and speech count for anything, it would seem that he has a cinch. But others will dispute that. Mr. Nelson said today that he sees no reason why he should not get the nomination he is after. Said he:

"Geographically, I have the edge on other candidates, and besides that my nomination, is the only one for which my part of the state is asking. I have received the greatest encouragement, and have a lot of votes pledged to start with."

Mr. Nelson did not care to state how many he had pledged to go into the convention with, but declared that he had enough to make the others sit up and take notice. He is very confident that he is going to land on his feet, and his friends seem to feel the same way. Asked as to how his candidacy, he being from the Northern part of the state, will affect Odin Halden's campaign for state auditor, he replied somewhat guardedly that he did not believe it would interfere in the least.

"Of course," said he, "I cannot tell how my friends feel about this; but, personally, I cannot see where it would interfere in the least. We are in distinctly separate parts of the state, and there is no reason why one should interfere with the others so far as geography is concerned."

Mr. Hallock was state librarian for the two terms of Governor Van Sant's administration, and is now owner and editor of the Hallock Weekly News.

Carl A. Pidgeon of Wright county, who is the present clerk of the supreme court and is asking for a second term, is installed in Parlor M at the St. Louis hotel and is doing some little work today among the advance guard of politicians who are invading Duluth now. With him is Bert Oakley, receiver of the land office at Cass Lake, a former partner of Mr. Pidgeon. It was given out among some that Mr. Oakley would act as manager for Mr. Pidgeon, but Mr. Oakley says that he is not manager, but is helping in any way he can. At any rate he is not going to lose any votes for his former partner if he can help it. Both Mr. Pidgeon and Mr. Oakley know the game from long experience and are very affable gentlemen. Both of them say that the situation looks first rate for the candidate and claim that they are very sanguine of results. Mr. Pidgeon said this morning:

"I feel reasonably certain of a renomination. My friends throughout the state are working for me faithfully and while Mr. Lemon of St. Paul, my only opponent for the place, is also aparently sanguine, I believe that I have the best of it. Many who would be indifferent otherwise, seem to feel that the usual giving of a second term is only reasonable in my case and that I have been satisfactory so that there is no reason why I should be made an exception to the rule."

"Jacobson and Cole are the favorite candidates for governor with the Wadena county delegation," said L. M. Babcock of Wadena at the Spalding. Mr. Babcock was speaker of the house at the 1903 session, and has played a leading part in state politics. He is not in Duluth as a delegate, but will be on hand at the convention, and is exerting his efforts to land the nomination for A. L. Cole of Walker.

"I am not here as a politician," he continued. "I had some business to attend to in Duluth for the company I represent, and came to the Head of the Lakes to look after it. I expect to leave this evening for Ashland, but will be back Wednesday morning and will be on hand at the convention.

"It isn't easy to say how long the meeting will last. A good many of the boys are of the opinion this morning that all the business will be wound up Wednesday, so they will be able to go home on the night trains. It all depends on circumstances which may arise. Things may pass off quickly and smoothly, and then again there may be a tangle in one way or another that will delay proceedings for hours.

"Thus far no bitter feelings have been displayed by the candidates or their backers. I do not believe the respective backers of Collins and Dunn two years ago are yet on what might be called a friendly footing, and possibly the feeling between the two factions will make itself felt at the convention. I think Dunn will have considerable influence there. Up to the present time he has maintained a neutral position, but has said that either Cole or Jacobson would be satisfactory to him, if nominated for governor.

"I am of the opinion that the fight lies between these two men. They will come into the convention with the greatest number of votes back of them, and if they and their delegates could get together and affect a compromise they could control the situation absolutely, but it is hardly possible that they could affect such a compromise.

"Neither of the two will be able to control all the delegates voting for him, should he fail to land the nomination, although I believe quite a few of the Cole votes would go to Jacobson in the event that victory should be placed beyond the reach of Cole. I don't know how it would be if Jacobson is seen to be second to Cole—whether some of his backers will switch to Cole or not, but it appears very likely that this would be the case. There is nothing to this talk that one of the men will accept second place on the ticket, making one for governor and the other for lieutenant governor.

"It looks to me as if all the candidates were in the fight to stay to the finish. None of them will drop out of the race until he has to. Personally, I am for Cole, and confidently believe that the fight lies between Cole and Jacobson. It isn't likely that it will be necessary to ring any of these dark horses they are talking about."

D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids, candidate for state senator on the Republican ticket, was around the lobby of the Spalding this morning. He is here ahead of his delegation, which will arrive tonight and tomorrow.

"We stand solidly for Cole for governor up our way," said Mr. Gunn. There hasn't been much talk concerning candidates for other state offices. We would naturally be friendly to the candidacy of Odin Halden for state auditor, however, being such close neighbors of St. Louis county, with interests nearly identical."

"The Ramsey county delegation is coming to Duluth sixty-four strong, with the intention of landing the nomination of clerk of the supreme court for Walter Lemon," said Fenton G. Warner of St. Paul. "The main delegation will be here this evening at 7 o'clock. We are instructed for Lemon, and for Halden for state auditor. Convention day will show which candidate for governor is the favorite with Ramsey.

"Of course, there is plenty of talk going the rounds concerning the different candidates, but you will find no one who is willing to positively predict that his favorite for governor will win out. The situation is such that it is very hard to judge, and I do not care to risk my reputation as a political prophet in saying who will win out in the end. The convention promises to be an interesting one, but the services of the police department will not be required to preserve order."

HOUSE THE VISITORS.

Private Citizens Asked to Take Them in and Help Matters.

Duluthians are anxious to house the visitors to the convention and the leading men of the city are making every effort to do so and have them feel comfortable and happy while here. L. M. Willcuts suggested this morning that the private citizens having friends among the delegates take these friends to their houses as otherwise a good many of them are going to be uncomfortably situated. He also suggests that as many as can leave their names with Secretary H. V. Eva of the Commercial club to take delegates whom they can accommodate and thus take the burden of shelter off the hotels as much as possible.

It is desired to have the delegates rest comfortably while here and to see to this, those having charge of the convention and the entertainment of guests are making every effort to provide beds for everybody.

"SHERM" SMITH HERE.

Not a Delegate But Comes From Minneapolis to See the Fun.

Representative Sherman Smith of Hennepin county came into the city last night and was at once surrounded by the large number of friends whom he possesses here. "Sherm" wore his usual expansive smile and his hair is as curly as it ever was. He is passing out the glad hand with the same affability as of yore and says he is making a noise like a candidate for sheriff, he having filed for the Republican nomination for that office in Hennepin county. He is not a delegate to this convention but is here to see the struggle for the ball.

He has been a member of several houses of representatives and has always been one of the hardest workers, best mixers ,and best liked men in them. He also has been on the governor's staff a number of times and looks like Admiral Bob Evans when he gets into his full regimentals. Duluth men who know him count on him as a friend of Duluth.

EBERHART TAUGHT HERE.

Mankato's Candidate for Lieutenant Governor Once a Duluthian.

Should Senator A. E. Eberhart secure the nomination for lieutenant governor, for which he is a candidate, this city will have a friend in the chair of the president of the senate. Few are aware of it, but Senator Eberhart, who now registers from Mankato, is an old Duluthian, and watches with interest the progress of this city, and is one of the city's best friends when it comes to a pinch.

Senator Eberhart taught school twelve years ago, and lived here for some time. He is still in many respects a Duluthian at heart.

Senator Eberhart was regarded as one of the closest students of affairs in the last state senate. He was made chairman of the joint special railroad committee appointed to look into the matter of freight rates last session. The result of the investigations of this committee was that a number of bills were introduced, many of which passed, looking toward fairer railroad rates.

HEATWOLE HERE.

Former Congressman Up From Northfield---Not in Politics He Says.

Former Congressman Joel P. Heatwole of Northfield is in the city, but denies that he is here in connection with politics. A dispatch received from St. Paul to the effect that Heatwole was here last night in conference with James A. Martin for the benefit of Jacobson, he waives aside and declares that he is here only for a vacation. This might seem reasonable at any other time, in view of the fact that Heatwole was formerly a printer here, and he might be coming up to renew acquaintances; but at a time like this when a state convention is on, those who know things political, look on the former congressman's visit as suspicious, to say the least. Mr. Heatwole sat in an easy chair in the Spalding lobby this morning, a copy of "The Scrap Book" in his lap, and looked out at The Herald man through half closed lids. He said that he was very sleepy and as soon as he was assigned a room would go to bed for a while.

"No," he added, "I'm not here in connection with politics. The long and short of it is, I'm clear out of the game."

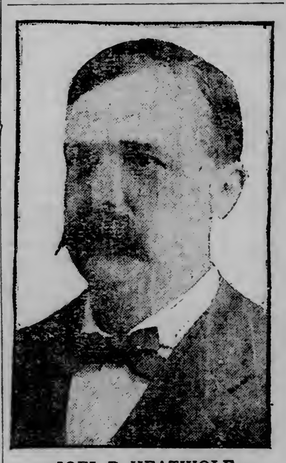

At this he looked up with a smile which one might take as one pleased.

"So far as I am concerned," he continued, "it does not matter who is nominated. I'll watch them struggle for it until Wednesday night and then I'll go home, no matter what happens. Down in our county? Oh, I don't know what they propose to do. You see, I'm not even a delegate. Our county has a young fellow named Hunter who is running for secretary of state and just what they will do about it, I cannot say. You had better see some of the delegation when they arrive.

"I'm kept pretty busy these days running my paper and the job shop. I started a dairy paper three months ago and that is keeping me going some. It is a monthly issue and already has over 4,000 subscribers; I expect in a very short time to have 25,000 subscribers. You see I'm much more interested in cows and things than in politicians. I have a fine herd of Holsteins and a man managing them who is also a capable newspaper man; and he is getting out a fine journal.

"As I said before, I'm out of the game. It's nice to sit back here, enjoy your cool breezes and watch the game, though."

The Jacobson leaders, it is understood, claim that Heatwole can break the Hennepin combine and it is also said that Heatwole is favorable to E. A. Nelson of Hallock for secretary of state. But Heatwole's presence is always good for speculation and it is generally conceded to be a cinch that he will be figured with, whether he admits it or not. The admitting part of it does not matter.

was charged with complicity in the assassination of Marcum, told him that the testimony of a plot to kill Marcum was true.

Samuel Jett, an uncle of Curtis Jett, and B. R. Jouett, who have been prosecuting Curtis Jett, decline to affirm or deny the report of the confession. It is believed here that Jett also implicated persons not indicted in connection with the Breathitt case. P. L. Altizer, who sent the report, is a stenographer for B. R. Jouett.

Cynthiania, Ky., June 11.—The alleged confession of Curtis Jett is discredited here. The county attorney denies it absolutely.

Annual Clearance of Colored Wash Fabrics

A little earlier than usual, to be sure—but none too early for the woman who is looking for desirable wash Fabrics at considerably under regular prices. Not a jumbling together of "riff raff" from jobbing houses who desired to get rid of their unsalable stuff, but clean new goods in choice and desirable patterns and colorings. The fact that women who shop around in stores where stuffs are being sold at from "1c to 9c a yard" come back here and buy is sufficient proof that our prices for choice and desirable kinds are lower than so-called great bargains about town.

This sale will include our entire stock of imported wash fabrics, dainty things from the looms of the best manufacturers in the world, and at prices you usually pay for the ordinary kinds. The prices we name are only a few of the good values to be had from our stock.

DISAPPEARS, LEAVING NO TRACE BEHIND HIM

James P. Harris Fails to Return From Day's Fishing Trip.

Since bidding his wife good-bye last Tuesday morning, and saying that he was going on a short fishing trip and would be back before night, nothing has been seen or heard of James P. Harris, manager for the Gately Supply company.

Mr. Harris resided with his wife and two children on Park Point, just a short distance below the canal. He has always been an enthusiastic angler, and was president of the Duluth Fly-casting club. A week ago he made arrangements for a day's fishing, and told the employes at the store not to open any mail during his absence, as he would be gone only one day. He gave instructions to them concerning some minor matters, and said he would be back Tuesday night.

Tuesday morning he arose at 5 o'clock and got his fishing tackle together. He took with him a small valise filled with his lunch and fishing tackle, and left the house about 5 o'clock in the morning, telling his wife he would be back about 5 or 6 o'clock in the evening.

Since that time Mrs. Harris has heard nothing from him, and she is nearly frantic with anxiety concerning him.

She notified the police of her husband's disappearance, and they have been making every effort to find some trace of him. They found that he had entered a Superior street saloon, about 6 o'clock, to buy some cigars to take with him on the trip, but from that time all trace of him has been lost.

Mr. Harris bore an excellent reputation in the city, and was very well known, having lived here a number of years. He had charge of the Duluth store for the Gately Cupply company.

J. P. HARRIS,
Noted Fisherman Who is Missing.

His wife stated to the police that he had always been the kindest of husbands and fathers, and that any theory of his deserting them is out of the question.

She fears that the only plausible explanation is that he met with some accident while fishing, and was either drowned or fatally injured by a fall of some kind.

Mr. Harris was one of the most enthusiastic anglers in the city, and as president of the flycasting club did much to keep the streams in the vicinity of the city well stocked with brook trout. It was no uncommon occurrence for him to take such a trip as the one he planned for last Tuesday, as he frequently got away for a day's fishing in some of the nearby streams, when he felt that he could spare the time from his business.

His wife paid little attention to his plans for the trip, as he said he would be back before night, and she did not happen to ask him where he was going. She is very anxious to find some trace of him, and if anybody saw him leaving on one of the early morning trains Tuesday, or drive out of the city, it might furnish the police with a clue which they could follow up.

NATIONAL RIFLE MATCH

At Sea Girt, N. J., Will Probably be Well Attended.

War Department Wants Team From Each State in Union.

Washington, June 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The war department is making arrangements for the next national rifle match, which is to be held at Sea Girt, N. J., beginning Sept. 4. Unusual efforts are being made to secure the attendance of a team from each state in the Union, as well as from Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. It is improbable that there will be any team from the Philippines, however, although at one time it looked as though arrangements had practically been completed for the attendance of a team from our Asiatic territory, but it was believed that the expense of bringing a team from the Philippines to Sea Girt and their return would be so large as to lead to unfavorable criticism. The war department, however, is hopeful that every state in the United States will be represented by a team at Sea Girt, and has addressed letters to the adjutant generals of Ohio, Illinois and North and South Dakota, urging them to make provision for the attendance of a team from their states. Accurate rifle shooting is calculated by experts to count as 5½ points out of 10 in estimating the efficiency of a soldier in battle, and holds that while the teams from the above-named states may not win the prizes, the members would be brought into contact with the finest military rifle shots in the world, and thus be enabled to gather information and ideas relative to shooting which it would be impossible to obtain under any other circumstances. Such information would be carried back to their homes, to be disseminated to other members of the National Guard of these states. This would undoubtedly cause many others to take an interest in rifle practice, and directly promote a greater interest in such practice, and incidentally in all other matters relating to the National Guard.

Commenting on this matter, a member of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, which has charge of the national matches, said: "At the breaking out of the Spanish-American war, the members of our small regular army were, as a class, the finest body of military rifle shots in the world, and when an enemy showed his head or body at a distance of 400 or 500 yards, and even much farther, he was generally put out of action. On the other hand, our men charged over open ground to the Spanish rifle pits with comparatively few casualties, because the Spaniards had never been taught to shoot. This fine shooting on the part of the regular army was due, mainly, to the competitions which the officers and men had attended. Generally one man from each company would attend a competition; he might not win a medal, but he learned a great deal, and returned with the information to his company, so that in a short time the members of the company knew all he could tell them. This continued for a number of years, and the result produced, as before stated, was the finest lot of military rifle shots in the world. It is believed that these points about rifle shooting would be disseminated even better in the National Guard than in the regular army, for the reason that the members of the National Guard as a rule live for a number of years in the same locality, whereas in the army most of the soldiers leave after one enlistment. Having made a study of military rifle shooting for many years, and having watched its growth in our country with a great deal of interest, I am convinced that the things learned by officers and men in shooting competitions have done far more than anything else in bringing our army and National Guard in the states which have paid a great deal of attention to this matter to the high degree of proficiency which they have attained.

"It is advisable that each state and territory which decides to be represented at the national match should hold a preliminary competition two or three months in advance, that the best shots may be selected. Every man chosen should be willing to obligate himself to follow the necessary practice, which should be held at least two half days of each week. However, from many years' experience with competitions I believe that a very large majority of rifle and revolver shots have concluded that it is very easy to over-do the practice before going into the match; in other words, nearly all competitors shoot too much, and by this get their nerves into a condition which is far from conducive to good shooting. A man should shoot enough with full charges to become accustomed to the recoil of his weapon and its elevation. After this is done it will be found far more advantageous to put in his time in training his muscles to be steady in holding his rifle or revolver in various postions in snapping the weapon, taking great care each time that the front sight does not move away from the bulls-eye. This training in sighting the weapon and trigger pulling is emphasized for the reason that the three positions taken in rifle shooting, i. e. standing, sitting and lying, are all more or less straining on the muscles, thus causing a certain amount of tremor, which, for successful shooting, must be prevented.

"The training of the muscles can be done much better, more effectually and more economical, by using dummy cartridges than by firing full charges. Men who intend to enter a match should devote about two hours each day to holding the rifle and pulling the trigger in the three positions. It is not desirable to do this in two consecutive hours, but to make three or four trials at it each day, as may be found most convenient; a man can have his rifle at home or at his place of business and put in ten or fifteen minutes at this work when practicable. Each member of the team should be provided with at least ten dummy cartridges, and use them in going through the motions of rapid fire and skirmish. I have spent much time in teaching soldiers to shoot the rifle and revolver, and have seen a large number of men who followed the practice as above indicated go upon the target range and qualify as sharpshooters on their first attempt. A man should not be allowed to fire a shot until he gets his muscles in such shape as to be steady in holding the rifle in the prescribed positions.

"In selecting the rifles to be used in the national match, new ones should be obtained if practicable. I am firmly convinced that these national competitions are of the greatest assistance to all in making efficient soldiers for the firing line, and when we consider the numerical disadvantage of our small military force in comparison with the armies of other nations, the absolute necessity of a military force trained to assume the most important duties of the line of battle, is apparent. Since the advent of the long range, accurate rifles, I believe the military unit is the man behind the rifle, and when that element is first-class, the efficiency of the company, the regiment and the army, is assured."

While the war department understands that the question of sending a team to the national match is largely one of expense money, it is believed that every state and territory should be able to spare from its apportionment of the annual federal appropriation a few hundred dollars necessary for this purpose. The information gained at these competitions is believed to be worth to the states many times the amount of money it will cost to be represented by a team.

In view of the great interest taken by the newspapers of the country in the matter of rifle shooting and in the coming national match at Sea Girt, the committee on publicity of the National board for the protection of rifle practice will this year make a new departure which is expected will be highly commended. The national rifle match will be followed by the annual matches of the Nation Rifle Association of America and the committee on publicity has arranged with the National Rifle association to have this year a "press match." Every year there are a number of newspaper men in attendance on the rifle matches sending special reports to the larger newspapers of the country. Some teams bring with them newspaper men who send reports of the shooting done by these teams to the papers in the state from which the team comes. In addition, a number of newspaper men are good shots and members of the National Guard and frequently a team will have a newspaper man on it. In recognition of these facts the interest which has been taken in the subject by the press in general, the committee on publicity of the National board offered to give a prize for a press match at Sea Girt next September to be shot in connection with the other matches of the National Rifle association. The offer was not only accepted by the National Rifle association, but that organization will add several prizes on its own account and thus the "press match" will be a very respectable one although this will be the first time a match of this kind has ever been shot in the United States.

The newspapers of England take great interest in the national matches which are shot under the auspices of the English government and the National Rifle association of England at the great range at Bisley each year. Three or four of the larger London newspapers give trophies for these matches and regular teams composed of newspaper men participate in the events. As far as known Boston is the only city in this country which now possesses a rifle team composed exclusively of newspaper men which shoots with the military rifle of the United States so that no matches have as yet been arranged between teams composed of newspaper men and representing various cities or states. No prizes have been offered by any of the newspapers of this country nor have any as yet been asked to give them, but it is hoped that later some of the leading newspapers will offer cups or trophies to be contested for annually.

The prize to be given in the "press match" this year will be a handsome trophy, probably from Tiffany & Co., of New York, and will become the property of the winner. The conditions of the match will provide that any newspaper man connected with any of the teams participating in the national matches or other matches at Sea Girt, or regularly assigned to Sea Girt, as a correspondent, or coming to Sea Girt, especially to participate in this match, shall be eligible to contest in the "press match."

COURTESY PAYS.

The Value of Politeness When on Robbery Bent.

New York Sun: "As a general proposition," says Mr. Blinkinton, "I should say that a pirate could get away with is easy, if he would observe good manners. To be robbed rudely is distressing to most people—it is the familiar adding insult to injury, and that is something that always rankles.

"It has always seemed to be that if ever I should have taken up the piracy game in any form, I should go about it with the greatest possible consideration for the personal feelings of the people robbed, for people will stand for almost anything as long as they are decently treated; and so with polite treatment piracy is easy and profitable at least for a long time.

"It is not alone in piracy that good manners count for profit; good manners give great dividends to the practitioner in the pleasure that arises from giving other people pleasure and sparing other people distress.

"I don't find, in my experience, that any one sort of people has a monopoly of good manners or that any one sort is more than another guilty of ill manners. I should say that prosperity begets thoughtlessness but thoughtlessness is not necessarily ill manners, and it may be harmless, unless it develops into indifference, in which form it may hurt us some.

"Generally speaking, I don't find myself any more likely to be disturbed by arrogance on the part of the rich than by rudeness on the part of the poor; which is to say that I am as likely to meet ill manners from one as from the other. The man whom I encounter in an elevated car sitting slewed around so that he occupies a seat and a half and who declines to straighten around for me may be comfortably circumstanced and well dressed or he may be poor and poorly dressed. In either case the lack of courtesy might proceed from precisely the same cause, from simple boorishness and natural ill mannerdness.

"It is fear that we may be imposed upon, and further, that the other fellow will think that in giving way we are knuckling to him, that is responsible for many an exhibition of ill manners. We meet a man coming along the sidewalk on a rainy day carrying an umbrella, while we are doing the same. It would be an easy thing for either of us to elevate his umbrella a little so that it would clear the other man's as we passed, or it would be easy for either of us to tilt his umbrella a little, with thes same result.

"We hesitate to do either for fear the other man will think we are knuckling to him. And precisely the same thing holds, though in a somewhat more acutely felt form, as to turning out, as between two men meeting in a path wide enough only for one, beaten down in new fallen snow.

"I used to know a man up in Turner's Falls, Mass., who tried habitually to practice good manners, and he has told me that in rainy day encounters such as I have cited he invariably raises his umbrella or tilts, as invariably to find to other man returning his courtesy in manner corresponding. He tells me that when he meets a man in a narrow snow path he always steps out with one foot, so giving the other man half the path, and he tells me that rarely does this courtesy fail of return in the manner offered—that he has seen coming along the path toward him bull headed and determined men who were evidently bent on hogging the whole path, but who, when they saw him do this, stepped out with one foot themselves, yielding to him what he conceded to them.

"And he tells me that it is his common experience that people treat him as he treats them—that if he shows good manners to them they show good manners to him, that good manners bring good manners in return.

"As I remarked at the outset, we will stand to be pirated if the person is polite to us—but it is in the innumerable little encounters of our daily life in our meetings here and there with various people and over little things that good manners count. In these things they count for much.

"Blessed be the man who first invented good manners; and thrice blest is he who makes it the code of his daily life."

THOSE WHO OWN AUTOS

List of Duluth Citizens Fortunate Enough to Possess Them.

Forty-Nine Licenses Have Been Issued by City Clerk.

Duluth now has forty-nine automobile owners who have taken out licenses from the city clerk's office, and there are still several to be added to the list.

The numbers of the machines run from 1 to 49, F. W. Heimick having taken out the first license and Victor Huot the last.

Counting those which have not yet been granted city licenses, and others which are ordered and not yet received, there will be from seventy to seventy-five machines in the city before the summer is over.

The owners are required by law to carry their numbers in plain figures on the back of the machines. For the benefit of those who have any curiosity to know the owners of the different automobiles, the following list of the license numbers is given:

DOCK WORK IS DELAYED

Lack of Material Ties Up Operations on New Structures.

Car Shortage in West Continues and Timber is Scarce.

Car shortages in the West, which have tied up shipments of Pacific coast timber to this part of the country, are delaying work on the new ore docks in the course of construction at the Head of the Lakes.

The work at the Missabe's new dock in the West end has been tied up to quite an extent during the last two weeks and the contractors complain that a lack of material is also retarding progress on the reconstruction of Great Northern dock No. 3, at Allouez.

The amount of timber used in this work is enormous and when it is practically impossible to get timber from the coast, the effect on these extensive building operations is most apparent. The concrete foundations for the approach to the new Missabe dock are completed and the only thing lacking now to rush the structure to completion is the timber.

It was expected that the new Missabe dock would be near enough to completion by the first of August to permit boats to be loaded there, but that possibility is rapidly fading.

When the Great Northern dock is enlarged, it will be as large as the big one, No. 2. The improvements will make it about 996 feet longer than it was.

CONVENIENT FOLDER.

South Shore Has Something New in Way of Time Tables.

Mart Adson, general passenger agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, is receiving many compliments on the new South Shore folder that was recently issued by the company. It is something entirely new in its line, and the most convenient and readily understood folder to be found on the racks anywhere in the country, for it gives particulars regarding the running time of more connecting roads than does any other folder.

With this folder a person can start from the Atlantic coast and go clear through to the Pacific, using any of three or four lines west of Duluth, and tell the arriving and departing time at all stations of any importance without the assistance of any other time table, where heretofore it has been necessary to carry three or four of the little books along to find this out.

It gives all the connecting routes both east and west and the time made, the sleeping and dining car accommodations and the different train services between here and the Twin Cities on all lines. The service on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Duluth & Iron Range roads is also given. This is of especial convenience. The running time of all the coast trains out of Duluth, clear through to the Pacific coast, is given, with the important stops. In addition to this, all necessary particulars regarding service to Wisconsin and Michigan points from Duluth over different lines is given, including the Omaha, Milwaukee and Soo roads.

F. I. WHITNEY RESIGNS.

Leaves Position of Great Northern General Passenger Traffic Manager.

St. Paul, June 11.—F. I. Whitney, for eighteen years at the head of the Great Northern's general passenger department, has resigned as general traffic manager. The resignation takes effect July 1. As yet no appointment has been made of a successor. C. E. Stone, now general passenger agent of the Great Northern, and A. L. Craig, general passenger agent for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company, are mentioned as probable successors to Mr. Whitney. Mr. Whitney will devote himself to business, the exact nature of which is not yet made public.

DEBATE WILL CONTINUE LONG

Then Agrarian Question Will Not be Settled by Parliament.

St. Petersburg, June 11.—The debate on the agrarian question in the lower house of parliament promises to continue throughout the week and when it is finished the solution of the question will hardly be much further advanced than when the debate began, as the idea of giving instructions to the commission which will frame the bill has been abandoned. Whatever fighting occurs will come upon the election of the commission, which will consit of eighty-eight members. While the commission will be supposed to follow the general direction of the views expressed during the debate its size will make it easy to reopen a discussion of all the disputed points. Therefore there is little prospect that the bill will be ready for submission before July 1, at about which time it is the government's intention to declare parliament adjourned until September for the summer vacation.

The members of the house dare not return to their constituents after a fruitless session of two months and undoubtedly will resist any attempt to adjourn.

Nevertheless, the house will be powerless if the government persists. The government's plan is clear. Thus having failed to offer a solution of the agrarian question, the emperor under the authority reserved to him by the fundamental law, will promulgate the government's agrarian program as a temporary law in the hope that the peasants, disgusted at the failure of parliament to give relief will accept it. Once the government's scheme for land distribution is put in operation and generally accepted the government calculates that it will create enough support to prevent the house from attempting to replace it by its own plan in the autumn. The mere adjournment of parliament against the protest of the lower house of parliament, however, is sure to raise a popular outcry with which the government will have to reckon and the situation and temper of the country at the moment parliament will determine whether the government will have the courage to attempt to execute the scheme.

In the meantime the upper house is doing nothing, having virtually resolved to await the legislative initiative of the lower house on all questions.

The peasants are reported to have taken possession of the estate of M. Stakovitch, a member of the lower house belonging to October party in Riazan province.

KNOWLTON HAS A NEW METHOD

Captain of Company C Does Away With Written Examinations.

Capt. Knowlton of Company C, has adopted a method of examining candidates for non-commissioned officers that is finding much favor with the members of his organization, and it may be adopted by the other companies in the Third regiment.

At the last drill of the Co. C soldiers, he announced that a corporal's place at the head of the squad was vacant; that every private in the company would have an opportunity to try for the place and that the examination would consist of drilling a squad. This is looked upon as more effective than the written examination.

The candidates stepped out from the ranks and put the squads through the different drills. The would-be corporals were instructed to give their men such orders as they thought of. The men made a very good showing, and Capt. Knowlton will probably have to deliberate quite a while before he selects the successful man.

There was not time at the last drill to give all the men a chance to show their prowess as officers, and the examination will continue at the next meeting. Company C will probably drill in the street Wednesday, if the weather is pleasant. The Republican convention has taken over the armory.

OPENING OF CLUB HOUSE

Boat Club Has Attractive Program for Next Friday Night.

Will Hold Regatta Followed by Dance in the Evening.

Next Friday evening will be a gala night at the Duluth Boat club.

It will mark the formal opening of the main clubhouse for the season, and also of the branch boathouse beside the White City grounds.

The new cafe building and launch house adjoining the main boathouse will not be finished in time for the occasion, but they will be completed in two or three weeks, if the weather is favorable, and will be opened in time for the regatta on July 10.

The program for the evening's entertainment will be a very attractive one.

During the early part of the evening there will be an informal regatta, the feature of which will be a race between the "mosquito" launches owned by the club members. There are six of these craft of the same size and with the same kind of engines, and there is considerable rivalry between their owners.

There will also be one or two races between the crews in training for the regatta on July 10, but these have not yet been definitely arranged. There will probably be a four-oared race, and possibly an eight-oared race.

The members who are fortunate enough to own launches, and the number is by no means small, will place their boats at the disposal of the guests, to carry them back and forth between the main clubhouse and the branch building at Oatka beach.

After the regatta supper will be served in the club cafe, and there will be an informal dance in the evening.

This will be the first of a series of such affairs planned for the summer months.

TAR MACADAM IS SELECTED

Contract Let for the Paving of Tenth Avenue East.

After many disputes and much uncertainty, tar macadam was finally chosen as the pavement for Tenth avenue east, and at the meeting of the board of public works held this morning, the contract was let to George R. King for $10,973.50.

The avenue will be paved from London road to Fourth street, a sandstone curb being used.

Some effort was made this morning to have ordinary rock macadam selected, but the board felt that the sentiment of the majority favored tar macadam. The contract will be sent to the council this evening for approval.

DOWIE'S SILVERWARE

Cannot be Moved From Shiloh House, Says the Court.

Chicago, June 11.—Representatives of the Dowie and Voliva factions in the Zion City trouble filled the courtroom of Judge Landis of the United States district court today to listen to the trial of the issue of ownership of the Zion City properties.

The first move in the court was the issuance of an injunction asked for by Dowie, preventing Mrs. Dowie, and her son, Gladstone Dowie, from taking away from Shiloh house in Zion City, $6,000 worth of table silver to the Dowie summer home in Michigan. The court ordered that all of the silver and tableware with the exception of the knives and forks be allowed to remain in Zion City. Both sides have entered into a stipulation that the court shall determine the ownership of the property, but an immediate decision in the matter is not expected.

GET IT TODAY "PIGS IS PIGS" THE BEST EVER.

A PORCINE COMEDY,
BY ELLIS PARKER BUTLER.

A really side-splittingly funny tale; a little gem in its way. The main actors in the farce are a pair of guinea-pigs, a stubborn suburbanite, a mule-headed station agent, and a slow-moving railway freight office. The burning question which sets the story in motion is this: Are guinea-pigs pigs in the sense of domestic animals, or are they "pets" and pigs only by courtesy title? In the freight rate there is 5 cents difference according to which classification is chosen, and over this large sum the suburbanite and the station agent wage heated wordy war.

The guinea-pigs take up their family life quietly and unostentatiously in their box, and they presently increase their number. Very presently they increase it again and soon have lusty grand-children, who begin having children of their own. Guinea-pigs develop in frightening profusion. Here is the amusing situation, headed for even more ludicrous complications, which it would be unfair to the reader and the author to disclose.

LAW WILL HAVE TEETH

So Congressman Says of the Proposed Inspection Measure.

Still It Will be Satisfactory to All Concerned.

Washington, June 11.—Consideration of the proposed meat inspection law occupied some time today at the White House, the president consulting with several members of the congress, regarding the question. Representative Henry of Connecticut, of the agricultural committee, talked to the president.

"A satisfactory meat inspection law will be enacted," said Mr. Henry. "It will be a law which will have teeth too. It will be along the lines of the proposed amendment of Senator Beveridge to the agricultural appropriation bill, but there may be some modification of that proposition."

Mr. Henry would not venture to say precisely what the house provision would contain, but he thought it would meet the approval of the president and of the people.

Speaker Cannon and Senator Hopkins of Illinois, also discussed the suoject of meat inspection with the president.

"As to meat inspection," said the speaker, "I have not talked five minutes with the members of the agricultural committee, which in its wisdom, will report to the house such a measure, as it shall deem just and, as a deliberative body against the non deliberative senate (with compliments to Senator Hopkins who was standing near) will pass upon the committee's proposition. The house will pass an inspection measure that will be just and fair alike to the public, the packers, the stock raisers and shippers. Just what the nature of the act may be, I do not know. I really know little more about the subject, than I have seen in the newspapers. I saw in some paper this morning that a bill had been drawn which was satisfactory to the president, but I know nothing of it. I learn that 92 per cent of the product of the packers is not only throughly inspected, but is absolutely healthful and is prepared under conditions that are cleanly and sanitary. Now, as to the other 8 per cent we will provide that it, also shall be prepared in the best of conditions, so that, from the carcass of beef down to the smallest can of the by-products of the packing houses, there will be nothing of which anybody of right can complain."

Senator Beveridge of Indiana, who drew the amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill, concerning meat inspection after a talk with the president, declared that the talk about the proposed amendment being unconstitutional was beside the real question. He said it had been drawn and redrawn carefully several times and he thought there was no more doubt of its constitutionality than there was of the constitutionality of the inspection of meat products intended for foreign consumption. He added that if the government were required to pay the cost of inspection, it simply would mean the defeat of the object of the measure. He also added that the report that the president had agreed to compromise on the meat measure was without foundation.

It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed to give both old and new addresses.

MAKE THEM WELCOME.

This week the Republican state convention is "in our midst" and nothing should be left undone to make the visit of the delegates a pleasant one.

The candidates, and a few delegates, began arriving last night, and they came in a larger volume today. By tomorrow night practically all of the delegates will be there, though a few stragglers will arrive on the Wednesday morning trains.

It is hardly necessary to suggest that if any citizen finds it within his power to do anything to make the delegates glad they came it is his duty to do it. Those who wish to see the visitors go away with a positively good impression can assist by getting out and getting acquainted with them, and by showing them such hospitality as they may.

Above all, great care should be taken to see that the delegates are properly distributed among the hotels of the city. There is plenty of room, and there is no danger that anybody will go without shelter, but if all the delegates pile into one or two hotels, without being directed to others where they can get good and comfortable quarters, the resulting congestion may give some the idea that the convention is beyond the capacity of the community. Convention time is always a crowded period in any city, and in the past years when the conventions met in St. Paul the delegates have become accustomed to a greater degree of crowding than they will find in Duluth.

Plans are being made to take the delegates for a boat ride about the harbor, and this is a good idea. The naval militia training ship Fern can be pressed into service for this purpose, and by making a couple of trips can show the delegates much of the harbor and city.

Duluth is glad to have these visitors. They are representative citizens from their various sections of the state, men of prominence in their home communities as a rule, and the city is honored by their presence. Therefore it cannot be said too often, or expressed in too many ways, that they are welcome. No better way of expressing this welcome is possible than to see that none of their spare time that might be spent in sightseeing and enjoying themselves is wasted.

Of course there are duly authorized committees to look after this matter, but their membership is small, and there is no reason why individual citizens who can spare the time should not mingle with the delegates and extend to them the glad hand of warmest welcome.

BETTER THINGS COMING.

It is a little discomforting, just when everybody was getting happily enthused over the prospects that all freight discriminations and rebates and other disadvantages of that sort were to be dispensed with, to learn that in the making of the things we eat there is apparently a widespread discrimination against cleanliness and purity.

Of adulterated foods we had already heard much. We all knew that preservatives, consisting of strong chemicals, were used to conceal the evidences of impurity and decay. We all knew that when we bought pure maple syrup we were very likely buying something that never had the remotest relationship to the maple tree. We knew that there was sand in our sugar, cocoanut shells in our pepper, cottonseed oil in our olive oil, and we suspected that there was hay in our breakfast foods.

So we had it all fixed up to have a pure food bill to root these things out, and we chuckled in great satisfaction when the senate passed it with hardly a single wry face. Then it got hung up in the house, and appears to be slowly dying a death that is suspected to be due to homicidal impulses.

Then came Upton Sinclair with his horrid stories about "Packingtown," followed by the president's own special investigators with equally unpleasant relations about packing house methods. It did not improve our appetites, nor was it encouraging at all, particularly when it appeared that there was a doubt, even in the face of these revelations, whether the house was going to adopt an inspection law designed to prevent such conditions.

It has been suggested that these disclosures may result in a revolution in the meat industry. Instead of buying meat from the great houses of the "Jungle", the public may develop a marked preference for country-cured products, so that a large number of model establishments may be developed in the smaller cities where conditions favorable to clean and pure food products may be found.

It may come this way, or through a revolution in the methods of the large city houses, but some way there must be a change. Sanitary packing houses, well lighted, well ventilated and clean, with tiled floors and walls and wholesome processes, will necessarily be forthcoming in response to an overwhelming demand for reliable meat products.

MAD DOG SCARES.

A good deal of hysterical nonsense is published about "mad dog" scares, and the season is approaching when there will be more of them than at any other time of the year.

Every time a poor, forlorn dog gets overcome with the heat, and runs about with foam on its chops, somebody will shout "mad dog!" and the poor animal will be killed. If a crowd pursues it, and it finally turns and bites some of its tormentors, they will be scared to death and hustled to a Pasteur institute at great expense of money and worry.

If a man is overcome by the heat, however, he will have every attention, as he should have, and nobody will think for a moment that he is suffering from hydrophobia. Yet a dog is just as likely to be afflicted by extreme heat as a man; it will try his temper just as severely as it will that of a human being, and it will not be surprising if it makes him a little irritable and snappy.

According to many neurologists there is no such thing as hydrophobia in human beings, but so long as some of them say there is, the average man will of course take reasonable precautions against getting it, and if he thinks he has been bitten by a mad dog he will be seriously alarmed.

And if the dog is really "mad"—which is not likely; and if there is such a thing as human hydrophobia—which some scientists dispute, the danger is infinitely less than most people imagine. Dr. Charles W. Dulles of Philadelphia, a famous neurologist, in discussing this matter recently said that he has carefully followed out the results of bites of animals supposed to present the symptoms of rabies, and discovered that in 175 such cases only three times did so-called hydrophobia develop, and one of these cases was undoubtedly delirium tremens.

So long as scientists are not agreed on the question of whether or not human beings can have hydrophobia, it is perhaps better for people to assume that they can, and to take precautions against getting it. But it is not right that a community should become hysterical every time a dog gets sick, and assume that it is suffering with hydrophobia. It is unfair to the dog, and causes an immense amount of useless worry in the community.

THE PEOPLE DID IT.

The story of how the denatured alcohol bill came to pass both houses of congress is rather interesting, and it is very encouraging to those who realize that in an enlightened and determined public opinion lies the remedy for all political and economic evils, and the key to better things.

Three months ago there was no more probability of the passage of the bill removing the internal revenue tax from dnatured alcohol than there was that congress would pass a free silver bill. Not ten members of congress had the slightest idea that it would be possible. When the bill first came up newspaper correspondents called on Senator Aldrich, the boss of the senate, and asked him what he thought about it. He smiled and said that it couldn't possibly pass.

But the people became interested. They learned that free alcohol would be available for a multitude of heat, light and power purposes. They learned that it would do better and cheaper work than gasoline, and that that accounted for the Standard Oil company's opposition to it.

Newspapers began demanding the passage of the bill, and the people, stirred up by the newspaper comment, began to write letters and sign petitions in favor of it. Within a short time the house committee on ways and means was flooded with petitions. The senate leaders still said it couldn't pass, but the house succumbed and passed it hurriedly. Before it had gone through the house the senate had felt the force of public sentiment, realized that it was foolhardy to oppose it, and surrendered.

In the meantime the tide of public sentiment had become so irresistible that the officers of the Republican congressional campaign committee became fearful lest serious injury might result to the party if the senate failed to pass the bill. They called on Aldrich and told him that if it didn't go through the Republicans would lose the house this fall. In the end, seeing that it was inevitable, Boss Aldrich bowed to it, and let the bill go through.

Same way with the railroad rate bill. It isn't the same way with tariff revision, because the tariff is more firmly seated, and its roots have gone deeper. But it will be the same with the tariff whenever the people make their wishes as clear as they did on the rate bill and the denatured alcohol bill.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Someday somebody will manufacture a gasoline engine that will run at any time and on all occasions, and in a few months he will be a rich man," said S. A. Stark of Ashland at the McKay. "I don't know anything in the world more aggravating than a gasoline engine. Some of them are better than others, but all of them have their bad spells, and when so disposed they are the meanest things in existence, the meanest man in the world not excepted.

"I'll wager there are a lot of people in Duluth who will agree with me on this point, because of experiences they have had with launches and automobiles. In any town situated near a lake a man would ordinarily have to search diligently and long before finding a person who hadn't at one time or another been caught many miles from home in a gasoline launch that was for the time being useless. A lot of pleasure is to be gotten out of one of these boats, and they are worth the trouble and money they cost, but all the same they are bad for one's temper.

"It isn't like having a buggy or steam engine break down with you. With one of them a fellow can easily find out just what is the matter. But with a gasoline engine it is different. The temporary defect may be very simple, or it may be very serious, but usually a man cannot tell until he has labored away for an hour or two, and probably taken the thing apart and put it together two or three times. The engine apparently will be all right, and a close examination will disclose nothing wrong, but still it will refuse to work. The engineer will turn the crank till he is sweating like a shingle roof in a rain storm, and then he will fuss over the thing a while longer.

"Meanwhile the girls in the party, for there always are girls along when the engine breaks down, are offering suggestions of a crazy sort not calculated to smooth a roughened temper, and the other fellows along, who probably couldn't tell the difference between a gasoline engine and a wheelbarrow, tell the engineer what they believe should be done to start the boat running again. After one has labored away for an hour or two, maybe the engine will start going at a most unexpected time, and without as much reason as if it had started an hour before. Or you may find that the engine is all right and the gasoline is mixed with water, or perhaps one of the new batteries you just purchased is no good, or any one of fifty things may explain the mystery. I never had any experience with an automobile engine, but I understand the trouble exists with them the same as it does with a launch."

The Fall of Jenkins.

Harper's Weekly: William Allen White, the Kansas editor, in telling of the trouble of a city editor in drilling green reporters, was reminded of an amusing case that came within his own observation.

"There is one thing you must remember above everything else," said the city editor of a St. Louis paper to a new reporter, "and that is: tell in the first few lines what your story is about—in other words, give the substance at once. Then follow with a recital of the facts, and conclude with interviews with the people concerned. That is the only orderly way of writing your story."

The new man gave close attention to this lesson, the result of which was that he handed in that night a news item reading as follows:

"Rufus Jenkins, a carpenter, slipped and fell in Vine street yesterday and sprained his ankle badly.

"Mr. Jenkins was walking along Vine street when suddenly his feet slipped from under him and he fell, spraining one of his ankles.

"When seen by a reporter, he said: 'I was walking along Vine street, when in some way my feet slipped from under me, and I fell heavily to the sidewalk, spraining one of my ankles.'

"Frank Fuller said: 'I was walking behind Mr. Jenkins on Vine street when I saw him slip and fall to the sidewalk. When I assisted him to rise he told me that he had sprained one of his ankles.'

"Dr. Thomas Rich, who attended Mr. Jenkins said: 'Mr. Jenkins has a badly sprained ankle, due to a fall in Vine street. He will be laid up for some time.'

"Mr. Jenkins could not attend last night's meeting of the Carpenter's union. The president, in convening the meeting, expressed regret that Mr. Jenkins could not attend, as he had slipped and fallen in Vine street, spraining one of his ankles."

Spain's Strong Poker Hand.

Baltimore American: Spain has in a way on her hands now four queens—the reigning Queen Ena, ex-Queens Christina and Isabella and the wife of the pretender who claims to be the real queen. But paradoxically, perhaps, only a democratic American management would know how to utilize a hand like that.

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday was clear, bright, warm and charming. There was a northeast breeze, but it was uncommonly gentle and agreeable, and served to temper the sun's rays to a very happy medium. This morning dawned brilliantly, but later it became partly cloudy, though still pleasant. Yesterday's highest temperature was 62 degs., and last night's lowest was 42 degs. The weather man expects it to be cool and partly cloudy, with northeast winds, tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago today the weather was damp and foggy, but warm; and in the evening a change of wind from easterly to southerly brought better conditions.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Barometric disturbances are centered over Florida, Arizona and off the Oregon coast, causing showery weather in Atlantic states and over the Eastern sloops of the Rocky mountains, and high temperature in Gulf and South Atlantic states. Areas of high barometric pressure overlie Lake Superior and California, the one over Lake Superior being attended by cool temperature. This latter high pressure area in its relation to the low pressures in the extreme southwest and far northwest will cause fresh northeasterly winds and partly cloudy weather in this section tonight and Tuesday."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as reported by the weather bureau:

Bulls and Bears.

New York Times: Once, when Addison Cammack was trading in an office which overlooked Broadway, a friend asked him what he thought of the market. Calling attention to a crowd of immigrants at that moment passing up Broadway from the Battery, Mr. Cammack said: "How can you look at that and be anything but bullish? Each man you see there in that crowd is an addition of so much to our economic wealth. Each man represents a unit in the scheme of production. He is worth anywhere from $100 to $1,000, according to how you figure him. We are taking this wealth in a steady stream from the Old World. It's positively the most bullish thing I can think of." A few months afterward Cammack was in the midst of a bear campaign. One day some one asked him what he thought of the market, and, pointing to the crowd of immigrants northward bound up Broadway from the Battery, he exclaimed: "See the rabble! Our beautiful country is being overrun with pauper labor. Cheap labor means that everything else must be cheap. Every man you see there in that ragged mob comes here to take the place of an honest American workman. It's a crying shame. It makes me very bearish to think of it."

In the Atmosphere of Go.

Success: Whatever you do in life, make any sacrifice necessary to keep in an ambition-arousing atmosphere, an environment that will stimulate you to self-development. Keep close to people who understand you, who believe in you, who will help you to discover yourself, and encourage you to make all the difference to you between a grand success and a mediocre existence. Stick to those who are trying to do something and to be somebody in the world—people of high aims, lofty ambition. Keep close to those who are dead in earnest. Ambition is contagious. The success of those about you who are trying to climb upward will encourage and stimulate you to struggle harder if you have not done quite so well yourself.

There is a great power in a battery of individuals who are struggling for the achievement of high aims, a great magnetic force which will help you to attract the object of your ambition. It is very stimulating to be with people whose aspirations run parallel with your own. If you lack energy, if you take it easy, you will be urged forward by the constant prodding of the more ambitious.

A Public Fraud.

New York World: Better no federal legislation at all for the inspection of packing-house products than the emasculated, disembowelled substitute for the Beveridge amendment which Messrs. Lorimer and Wadsworth have submitted to the house committee on agriculture.

The amendment does not provide for an honest or an effective system of inspection. It is a contemptible subterfuge in the interests of the packers. If enacted into law it will enable them to shirk city and state inspection without undergoing any of the inconveniences of adequate federal inspection.

It is worse than no law at all, for it is a piece of hypocritical false pretenses, and should be branded as a public fraud.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

Edgar Nash, who came to Duluth this morning from Minneapolis, is well known in this city. He is an old timer and lived here ten years ago, being the proprietor of a hardware store on Superior street. Mr. Nash built the first two story-business building in Duluth, and he sold the last piece of property at a good price before the failure of Jay Cooke, which was fifty feet on the corner of Hale avenue and Superior street, where Bell & Eyster's bank and the Duluth & Iron Range building now stands. He sold to the old First National bank for $9,000. The bank soon after failed and the receiver offered the fifty feet for $1,000, but no one would buy it. Since then the inside twenty-five feet was sold for $10,000.

The Republican county convention has been called to meet at the court-house in Duluth, on June 16, to elect eight delegates to the congressional convention in Brainerd, June 30. The judges of election for the city are: M. Burnell, Sr., J. H. Leites, J. H. La Vaque, James D. Ray, D. G. Cash, F. W. Eaton, J. IZimmerman, John Butchart, A. Sjobert and John Anderson. The call is signed by R. C. Mitchell, chairman and J. R. Carroll, Nils Hall and James A. Goss, of the county committee.

Yesterday was the occasion of one of the most memorable events in the history of the Head of Lake Superior—the first semi-annual reunion of the old settlers. At 1 p. m., Capt. Hibbard's ferryboat, the Free Trade, steamed out into the bay with the most precious cargo ever on her decks. There were fully 100 "forty-niners" aboard, and upon arrival at Superior, a delegation headed by the Superior band escorted them to the Nicollet house, which was recognized through its new coat of paint as the Avery Inn, the original stopping place of the old settlers. In the afternoon there was a banquet at the Nicollet, followed by speech making. Capt. Hibbard presented a number of odd canes, made from the timber of the schooner Algonquin, wrecked at the Quebec pier, where she is now rotted with the waters of twenty-five years. The canes numbered twelve and were the handiwork of the captain himself, who distributed them among the following gentlemen: H. Saxton, R. G. Coburn, Dr. Smith, S. C. McQuade, H. W. Wheeler, I. W. Gates, John Dunphy, Rev. S. M. Barnett, J. R. Carey, R. Beff, F. Bishop and Thomas Hocker.

 The following real estate transfers have been recorded:

J. C. Pierce to Elias Beckman, lots 193 and 195, block 68, Second division, $300.

William D. Rombach to A. N. Seip, lots 1 and 2, block 110, Portland division, $250.

A. F. Haines to Etta Pollock, lots 7 and 8, block 71, Portland division, $3,000.

The firm of Boggs, Merriam & Jones, has been dissolved. Mr. Boggs will engage in business on his own account.

Herman Benz went to St. Paul today to spend a week.

Capt. Anderson, the well known fisherman of Knife river, has been in the city for the past two days.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Princeton Union: It is rumored that a trio of state officials are preparing for the press a booklet entitled "What We Know About Aggressive, Common and Silent Legislative Boodlers." It will be an interesting little book. For political reasons the publication of the work may be deferred until after election, but the Union has been promised advance sheets.

Elk River Star-News: There is nothing more discouraging to the leg pullers than a political campaign on strictly moral persuasion lines.

Red Wing Republican: The president is preparing to slaughter a few slaughter houses.

Le Sueur News: In printing a newspaper, like making love, a great deal depends upon the presswork.

Stillwater Gazette: For fear that the little fellows who are running packing houses will not be able to pay inspection charges, as suggested by the big fellows, suppose we confine our patronage to the Independents? That would help some.

Le Sueur Center Leader: The hardest kind of debt to collect is one of gratitude.

Ripple Compass: When a newspaper man hears some behind-the-back talk against himself or paper he has the privilege of publishing a return-date roast, getting out of business or of closing the door and freeing his mind about his pin-headed, shrunken-souled pollywog traducers in language that would kill the devil with suffocation. He generally takes the last method. Blessed be the life of the newspaper man!

Sauk Center Herald: Our flag is the day star of hope to the world's oppressed. It is Liberty's official insignia, the totem of the free. Then on Flag Day let every domicle in this favored land of God be decorated with starry flags to show to all mankind that we appreciate the blessings we enjoy.

Anoka Herald: The people of the country are demanding a pure food law.

Madison Independent Press: How many of the politicians who have howled long and loud about railroad passes would refuse a pass to the state convention if it were tendered them? You could put the whole bunch in one eye and not suffer any inconvenience. The fact of the whole matter is that this free pass howl is worked over time, and, to some extent, keeps a lot of third rate politicians before the public who would otherwise sink back into the nothingness from which they came.

Fairmont Sentinel: Things that are free delight the public and free alcohol is one of the latest things for which all say amen. Now give us free trade on a few trust controlled articles and we will shout Hallelujah!

Madison Independent Press: A heavy frost is predicted for the region of Duluth about next Wednesday or Thursday.

Blackduck American: The matter of state appropriations for state development (drainage) is usually attended to by the legislature and not by the governor as one would be led to believe by some of our exchanges, hence it behooves us to elect men to that body that are in thorough sympathy with the drainage cause.

An Interrupted Preachment.

I am very tired of Money—in the abstract sense, of course.
Though, my feelings notwithstanding, I appreciate its force;
But the thought comes to me sometimes that I'd like to end my ills
In some place where there were no dollars, duns, debts, checks, drafts, or bills;
I've supreme contempt for riches—all I want is what I need,
For a half way decent living, but this madness gone to seed
That would garner fruit of millions other men may have—not I—
Just excuse me for a minute—there's a dollar going by.

I've no hungering for millions, for I know that wealth has wings,
Though I'm frank to say that money will buy lots of pretty things;
But this never ending struggle just to get a dollar more
To a man of my convictions is an everlasting bore;
And the current weekly wonder as to what will be my share
In the scramble after dollars almost drives me to despair.
For a lodge in some vast wilderness, quite moneyless, I sigh—
Just excuse me for a minute—there's a dollar going by.

I'm aware it's inconsistent to go out and bring it in,
But somebody else would get it, so it hardly seems a sin;
And the fact is that I need it, as a concrete essence which Will enable me to dine with all the splendor of the rich;
But the abstract dollar fills me with no feeling but disgust,
And I only go and chase it because Wisdom says I must;
I would preach a little longer, but, alas, the pitcher's dry
And I think I hear the jingle of a dollar going by.

TART TRIFLES.

Philadelphia Press: Newitt—Of course, every young man thinks he'd be perfectly happy if he could only have his own way.

"Why, that's Prof. Blueberry from Boston."

"It is? What's he saying?"

"He is insisting that there is no possible impurities in canned beans."

Chicago Tribune: "Did he offer you the insult of a bribe?" asked the new alderman.

"Catch him offering anybody a bribe!" exclaimed the alderman from the 'Steenth ward. "The dirty tightwad wanted me to do it for nothing!"

New York Sun: First Landlady—What do you think of this meat agitation?

Second Landlady—It's fine business.

Cincinnati Commercial: "Oh, yes. She tried her best to keep him from falling in love with her."

"With what result?"

"Awful—he didn't."

New York Sun: Knicker—Does your wife have you water the plants while she is away?

Booker—Yes; I just put them under the place where the bath room floor leaks.

Chicago Record-Herald: "I see that the state of Tennessee is to be represented by a fiddler in the United States senate."

"Oh, well, what of it? Somebody's always manipulating the strings there, anyway."

Louisville Post: Thirty-four years ago T. M. Alexander of Helena, Ark., was in Louisville and sent his wife a money order for $25 through the local post office. The sequel came today, when Postmaster Baker received a letter from Mr. Alexander saying that his wife had not received the money order to date and was beginning to get a little anxious.

"I can see how Mrs. Alexander might be a little worried over the remittance," said Dr. Baker today. "She has shown remarkable patience in the matter, and I shall do all in my power to get a line on the missing order."

Break in Long Spell of Bad Weather is Appreciated.

More Than 5,000 People Inspect Grounds of White City.

The welcome break in the long spell of disagreeable weather which came yesterday, attracted throngs of people to the parks of the city, and every outdoor amusement resort was crowded throughout the day.

At the baseball grounds there was the largest paid attendance ever seen in Duluth. Lester Park was crowded throughout the afternoon and Lincoln Park also proved a very popular resort.

Park Point was probably visited by larger crowds than any other part of the city, however, and during the afternoon more than 5,000 people passed through the grounds of the White City and inspected the buildings which are in course of erection.

The ferries running between Superior and the Point were crowded to their utmost capacity, and the equipment of the Interstate Traction company was no more than enough to care for the crowds.

Chairs and seats had been provided, and during the afternoon the visitors enjoyed the free open air concert, by Flaaten's Third Regiment band.

The harbor was dotted with canoes and all the craft owned by the boat and yacht clubs, and by the owners of boats for hire, were in great demand. During the middle of the afternoon it was almost impossible to secure a canoe or rowboat of any kind.

The day was the first glimpse of real summer enjoyed this year, and that it was most thoroughly appreciated by the people of the city, was evidenced by the manner in which they turned out.

CITY ENGINEER RESIGNS

Because Eveleth Council Paid Contractors Without His Estimate.

Eveleth, Minn., June 11.—Ralph C. Knight, city engineer, has tendered his resignation to the city council because of dissatisfaction with the course pursued by the council regarding the newly installed waterworks system. The dissatisfaction was caused by the payment by the council, at its regular meeting last week, of $9,000 to Dowling Bros., contractors, for the installation of the plant. This action was taken before the council received the engineer's official appraisement of the work.

James S. Ray & Co., Duluth, got the contract of putting in the jail in the new city hall at $1,500. The electric work for the building was let to the Eveleth Electric company at $168.50. Because there was only one bidder, the plumbing contract was not let.

An agreement was made with Missabe Mountain township whereby the new township hall, under construction, may be connected with the city's sewer and water systems. The site for the hall is at the West end of Adams avenue, just outside the city limits. It cost $8,000.

Lumber Companies Buy Timber.

Purchases of standing pine are being made right along by the Minnesota manufacturers. They are not all confined to the Northern part of this state as some of the large concerns are increasing their Southern pine holdings. Alger, Smith & Company have recently purchased a large quantity of north shore pine from F. D. Beveridge for $58,500, and the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company has bought 110,000 acres of yellow pine lands in Florida, near Orlando. No mill goes with the timber, but it is expected that one will be built before long and the timber put on the market.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A tornado at Dewey, I. T., Saturday night, demolished several residences and wrecked 200 oil derricks, causing a loss of $50,000. In the destruction of the home of Charles Ishelman, Mrs. J. J. Knowles of Los Angeles, was killed, and her daughter, Mrs. Ishelman, was seriously injured.

An explosion of 1,600 giant fire crackers in a fireworks factory at East St. Louis, Sunday, burned George Beckman and Henry Beckmeyer so seriously they may die, and badly damaged the factor.

The building occupied by Klem & Olson, grocers, at Mount Vernon, Ohio, was destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The fire started with an explosion in the powder and gasoline room. Five firemen were slightly injured. Loss, $85,000.

JUDGE BENSON TO BE SENATOR

F. D. Coburn Declines to Succeed Senator Joseph Burton.

Topeka, Kan., June 11.—Foster Dwight Coburn, who was appointed by Governor E. W. Hoch to be United States senator, succeeding Joseph R. Burton, Saturday announced that he had decided not to accept the appointment. Governor Hoch immediately offered the vacancy to Judge A. W. Benson of Ottawa, Franklin county.

In an interview yesterday, Judge Benson said: "I do not see why I should not admit at this time that I have decided to accept Governor Hoch's offer. I shall go to Topeka Monday morning and formally inform Governor Hoch that I accept the appointment.

"I presume I shall be a candidate for re-election to the senate before the state legislature next winter. My inclination is to ask the people to send me back if my services are satisfactory. The whole thing comes as a surprise to me, as I had never for a moment considered my appointment to the senate a possibility."

The statement of Judge Benson that he will stand for re-election next winter adds much interest to the Kansas senatorship for which there have been several avowed candidates. The term that Judge Benson will fill expires on March 3, 1907. A half dozen men in the state have either publicly expressed themselves as being candidates for the new term or have been prominently spoken of for the place. They include W. R. Stubbs of Lawrence, railway contractor, and former chairman of the Republican state central committee; Representative Charles Curtis of the First Kansas district; J. L. Bristow, editor of the Salina Journal and former fourth assistant postmaster general, Frank C. Nelson, state superintendent of schools, and ex-Governor W. M. Bailey.

It is stated that F. D. Coburn, who declined the appointment, had the pleasure of suggesting to Governor Hoch the name of Judge Benson.

GRANDSON OF PROPHET JAILED FOR FORGERY.

Butte, Mont., June 11.—Brigham W. Young, claiming to be a grandson of Brigham Young and a son of J. W. Young, a Wall street broker, is under arrest in this city as the result of an attempt to pass a worthless check on M. S. Siegel, a pawnbroker.

The check was drawn on W. S. Greenfield & Co., of Spokane, for $50, and was made payable to J. W. Wilson, an alias used by Young. The broker paid part of the money, instructing Young to call this morning for the remainder. In the meantime, communication with the bank proved the check to be worthless.

When Young called at the broker's office this morning he was invited to accompany Siegel to the bank and get the rest of the money. He acquiesced, and was piloted to the city jail, where he was placed under arrest.

At the station Young admitted that his name was not Wilson, and told of his family connections.

MEMPHIS ADVENTURER KILLED IN HONDURAS.

New Orleans, June 11.—Advices from Puerto Cortes, Honduras, tell of the killing there of Lee Christmas, by an unknown man in a street fight. Christmas was an American adventurer who went to Honduras from Memphis, Tenn., twelve years ago. He served as chief of police of the capital city, Tegucigalpa, for several years and figured in every revolution that has taken place there since his arrival, always landing on the right side.

Recently while holding a commission as brigadier general in the Honduran army, Christmas augmented his income by acting as a train dispatcher for the Honduras railroad. The story told about his death is that a relative of a man with whom he had had a quarrel many years ago, met him on the street, and renewed the quarrel, and Christmas knocked him down. The man drew a revolver and shot him.

EMPEROR'S DAY IS FULL

Francis Joseph Enjoys Life, Though He Works Without Ceasing.

Activity Best Refutation of Report of Failing Health.

New, York, June 11.—A Vienna cable to the World says: Anxious inquiries after Emperor Francis Joseph's health have deluged the Vienna newspaper offices for some time, about once a week, reports getting abroad that his health is failing. In some cases the question was put whether a castrophe was impending, as had been reported. Lately disquieting news that the emperor's body physician, Dr. Herzel was begged to explain what the reports could have been founded upon. All the answer Dr. Herzel gave was to show the emperor's list of audiences on that day, the total number being forty. It must be remembered that the emperor stands during the time he receives people, three hours, without so much as a moment's interruption. These audiences, given twice a week (on Mondays and Thursdays) all the year round, should be sufficient proof that nothing ails him.

In the audience room he has a small marble table with gilt legs, on which lies the list of persons he is to receive that forenoon, and a few words besides each name, exvplain the reason for the audience. The emperor's eyes are excellent at a distance, but he has to use glasses for reading. These glasses lie on the table beside the list and in the short interval between audiences the emperor glances at the list, so that by the time the next person is announced he is ready with his answer to questions or his sympathy.

But there are other ways of convincing one's self of the emperor's condition any day in the week. All one needs to do is to walk along the great thoroughfare that leads to the western terminus of the castle and park of Schonbrunn before 8 o'clock in the morning or after 4 in the afternoon. At twenty minutes to 8 the emperor starts from Schonbrunn in an open carriage, with his aide-de-camp at his side, and drives rapidly to the imperial burg palace. Between 4 and 5 he returns by the same route, and, though the road is more crowded than in the morning, he never avoids it, but unthingly lifts his hand to his cap to return the kindly greeting that all who meet him are glad to give.

When the emperor comes to town to attend to state business he has been up for hours. He rises soon after 5, takes a bath, gets rubbed down by one of his three faithful valets, and he has breakfasted by 6 o'clock.

The reader must not picture to himself that the emperor's private apartment resembles in any way that of an American millionaire. Of course the reception rooms of Schonbrunn, one suite overlooking the park, the other having a good view of the city in the distance, are most beatiful in the old world glory of waxed inlaid floors; brocaded walls, mirrors encased in gild scroll work, the ledges of which are full of lovely old Dresden and Oriental pottery, and everything is kept in such splendid order that Empress Maria Theresa might rise from her tomb at any time and she would find her sumptuous apartments in the same state in which she left them, 126 years ago. But the emperor only uses these rooms when he has guests.

His own bedroom furniture is of the most homely style—a low camp bed, before which lies a strip of carpet; a wahs stand, which is covered up during the day, according to the bourgeoise fashion of the time when the emperor was young.

In his working room the writing table is a fine piece of furniture, full of presents from wife, children and grandchildren, and on the walls hang several magnificent portraits of the late empress.

The emperor's house wear is an old military cloak cut short, and he has worn the same skull cap many years. When his valets try to substitute something new for the venerable pieces of clothing the emperor grows wroth, and nothing but assurance that the old things have been given to some poor man induces him to wear the new ones.

He is very fond of smoking, but the strong Virginia cigarettes made expressly for him disagreed with him, and he had to reduce the number smoked in a day to half of what he would have liked it to be. He was also advised to smoke the light Havanas, which were substituted for the Virginias, in very long merchaum and amber holders to prevent the smoke getting into his eyes.

After the emperor has breakfasted he goes down into the park in Schonbrunn and, letting himself out with a latchkey through one of the small gates in the wall, he goes and fetches Frau Schratt, who has to be up and ready by a quarter past 6 and standing at the door of her villa in Hietzing waiting him. He then takes a walk in the inclosed wooded part of the park with her and returns to the castle at 8.

He merely changes his boots and gets into the carriage waiting for him, which takes him through the western suburbs to the burg palace in town. As he passes the outer gate the soldiers on guard beat their drums.

The day's business of hearing reports, reading documents, discussing politics and signing papers begins at 9 and goes on until 4 o'clock, with less than half an hour's interruption at noon.

At noon the palace guard is relieved and the band plays for about half an hour under the emperor's windows in the great palace courtyard. About that time he takes his light lunch, which is placed on a tray between the litter of papers in his working room. Twice a week he cannot dispatch the business of state all the time, having as many as fifty audiences to give in one day.

Between 4 and 5 he drives back to Schonbrunn and takes a short walk in the inclosed garden. At 5:30 he dines, and then enjoys reading the newspapers and smoking a cigar or two. At 9 he is invariably in bed.

While walking along Grand street, a large tree was blown down by the gale and fell on the party. Miss Bunn's head was crushed by a limb.

VETERAN OF CIVIL WAR

Who Lives on Food Costing Only $10 Per Year.

Instead of Bathing, Massages Himself With Horse Brush.

Boston, Mass., June 11.—In the heart of Berkshire county, Mass., in the town of Dalton, lives John A. Eddy, a Civil war veteran, who is probably the most pronounced and consistent faddist of the day.

His food costs him $10 a year, yet as a physical marvel he will outlive almost any man of the state who has reached his own age of 67.

And to vegetarianism alone he lays claim to life, activity, strength and freedom from disease as the autumn of his life is drawing on.

Existing on raw and uncooked food, abstaining from salt and spices of any kind, while imbibing nothing but water and sour milk, John Eddy has actually grown fat during the five years that he has followed this diet.

In this primary instance he reverts back to the customs of the ancients, but strangest of all he completes the resemblance to their way of living as relates to bathing and living near to mother earth.

For nearly five years the Dalton man has never taken a bath.

In lieu of bathing he massages himself from head to foot every morning with a horse brush.

Winter and summer, in fine weather, rain or snow, he spends an hour or more outdoors in his bare feet, "getting close as I can to nature," as he puts it.

One meal a day, taken at 10 o'clock in the morning, consisting of uncooked nuts or rolled oats and dates, followed by water or sour milk, satisfies his appetite and makes him feel like a young race horse.

Never did a Spartan in all of his primitive simplicity of living outdo the aged veteran of the Berkshires, except perhaps in the manner of clothing himself to conform with the customs of the day.

About ten years ago, shortly after coming to Dalton to live, he was a martyr to rheumatism, a victim of a dangerous type of kidney disease, had an affection of the heart that was akin to palpitation, and suffered all the tortures that come to a confirmed dyspeptic.

Physicians had treated him for years and at last gave him a practical death warrant, in saying that at the very most he had but a few months to live.

For many years he had been a theorist on the efficacy of raw food as a remedy for disease, but it was not until the doctors declared his case hopeless that he put his ideas into practice.

He tried the raw food diet in a crude and unsystematic manner.

Improvement began, which has continued to this day. All disease was finally dispelled, leaving him strong, hearty and vigorous.

For five years he has lived on food that has cost him a bare $10 a year.

He now offers to wager $100 with any man or woman living that he can exist on raw food of his own choosing for 100 days under a test that will prove that the entire cost of the food will not exceed $2.50.

He expressly stipulates that nothing in the nature of meat or cooked food shall be used, but that he shall be allowed to smoke and exercise all he chooses.

Mr. Eddy claims that early in his experimentation he became convinced that eating three times a day was an error, and that the excessive amount of food that man disposes of is the keynote to the cause of all diseases.

At first he had eaten nuts and raw vegetables as often as he felt the slightest trace of hunger during the day.

This diet proved to be all-sustaining, while he was growing stronger and more active ,and he then began to systematize his methods, first, by cutting his feasts to two in number each day.

For two years he took two meals a day of the primitive food, one at 9 o'clock and the other at 5 o'clock, and then came down to the regimen of one meal a day.

When visited by the Boston newspaper man a few days ago, the old gentleman very readily talked of the strange method he adopted of living and offered the visitor opportunity of becoming convinced that he was as strong as a man of 20 years younger might be expected to be.

While the veteran was enthusiastic in extolling the diet he had adopted, it was very evident that he was not a faddist in this particular simply because of the fashion of the recommendation of others.

Absolute cures, he claimed, have been worked in four obstinate and wearing diseases that had racked his body, and he now continues the regimen both because of necessity and unqualified liking of the diet.

At the time of the reporter's call, Mr. Eddy was working in the little garden attached to his bit of ground on Ashuelot street, puffing a cigar with the huge enjoyment that might be expected of a man who had just completed a very satisfying dinner.

In the little parlor of his home he talked of the methods that he employed to regain strength and health while Mrs. Eddy, still unconverted to vegetarianism, occasionally added a word to bear out the statements of her husband.

The occasion of his beginning the treatment that has brought health to him came about when his wife had left him alone at their home while she visited relatives in Connecticut.

This was in September, 1901, and during the two months she was away he lived on bread and milk and toasted bread and buttermilk without eating a particle of meat in that time nor indulging in vegetables of any kind.

When she came home he was just starting on a diet of fruit and raw peanuts, which, very much to her objection, continued for six months without a break at any meal.

Then came a "hankering" for the New England standby—baked beans.

The succulent odors that can only be produced from the kitchen of a New England housewife caused the veteran to fall off the "vegetarian wagon" and for a few days he fairly revelled in baked beans, cold beans, warmed-over beans and even bean sandwiches.

This gorging brought its effects, for he was taken down sick again, when he vowed for the last time never to touch cooked food again.

Bread, meat, potatoes and cooked vegetables in general he tabooed promptly and began his diet on varying dishes of fruits, peanuts, dates, figs and raw turnips, onions, lettuce and cabbage.

Shortly after returning to the diet he found that his heart was becoming strong again and that the rheumatic pains were beginning to decrease.

After a year the improvement in his general health became so noticeable and the absence of trouble from his kidneys so satisfying that he then cut his food allowance down to one meal a day.

On making this radical determination he also mapped out a plan for the future, this to consist of eating only three ounces of uncooked peanuts, a raw onion and whatever fruit there might be in season.

From that time he began taking on flesh. Exercise every day he persisted in, and soon commenced the habit of going outdoors in the early morning in his bare feet in order to meet nature as she should be met, he says.

Very soon he became the wonder of the very physicians who had, when he was a bedridden invalid, declared that he would never live to leave the house.

All the while the little old couple were living on the somewhat generous pension that Mr. Eddy receives from the government for injuries received while he was fighting as a member of the First Vermont cavalry under Gen. Custer.

Four years, lacking five months, he served in the army during the Civil war, and his affection for Gen. Custer has never waned from the day of his enlistment to this.

Owing to the injury that he sustained to his knee in the army, he has been at times obliged to use a crutch, but never around the house.

With this old crutch in hand, on his last birthday he performed a remarkable feat of pedestrianism in walking every foot of the way from his home over the crest of Greylock mountain to North Adams, a distance of fourteen miles, and then returned by trolley, having had nothing but water to sustain him on the trip.

The tale of another journey that he recites with much pleasure is that which concerns his attendance at the last reunion of his regiment held about a year ago at Bellows Falls, Vt.

It was the first reunion that he had been able to attend in many years, but he wanted to see the "boys" without having to participate in their feasting.

He took his usual meal at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at noon left home with just fourteen ounces of raw peanuts and raisins, which he had calculated would last him for the two days that he supposed he would be away.

That was Wednesday, but he did not return until Friday night.

During the entire time of his absence he did not allow a morsel of any other kind of food to pass his lips with the exception of six cups of black coffee, unsweetened.

Bantered, jollied and pleaded with to join them in their feasts of turkey and the "fixin's," he refused every invitation and stuck to his diet.

At no other time but while on that journey has he drunk even coffee, relying on water, sour milk or buttermilk to quench his thirst.

One of his most pronounced views is that a man who eats nothing but raw foods will gain a perfect digestion, and that he will never become fagged.

Another is that the eating of onions is the very best method of quieting the nerves, and that they also induce sleep, while raw peanuts are the most nourishing food of all.

Asparagus is one of the vegetables that he dearly liked at one time, but because of his abstinence from salt he refuses to indulge in the succulent tips that need just this flavoring.

His objection to salt is of long standing, and is owned to a belief that its constant use stimulates the action of the heart to an unwonted degree.

Day after day the happy couple sit at the same table together to at least one meal, while Mrs. Eddy indulges to her satisfaction in savory meats and vegetables of all kinds, here vegetarian husband envies her nothing but one dainty.

"When I sit at that table and see good fresh cheese before me I am always tempted to make a shift," he said to the caller.

"It is really the only thing that I long for now, among all the messes that I used to eat, but I won't eat it simply because of the salt in it.

"Today I eat four ounces of walnuts and peanuts and will drink about four or five quarts of water and a qaurt of sour milk with a little sugar stirred in, before I go to bed.

"Tomorrow I will change a little, maybe, taking a handful of rolled oats with a raw onion and a few dates, but the sour milk at all times, as I honestly thing that it is the very elixir of life."

Altogether he has not touched meat or potatoes in five years and not for thirty years has a piece of pie passed his lips, which he remarked himself was the strangest thing in the world for a farmer's son of old New England to boast.

Up every morning, winter and summer, at 5 o'clock, he takes his horse brush and vigorously rubs every portion of his body into a glow and then partially dressing, goes out into the snow or dew, as the season may provide, in his bare feet.

After paddling around for an hour through the grass and in the garden, he goes through half an hour of calisthenics on his piazza with a home-made chest weight exerciser.

After all of the chores are done, including the sawing and chopping of wood for the day's fires, he ends the nature cure for rheumatism by donning socks and shoes simply for appearance sake.

In summer he begins the roasting of peanuts and popping of corn in the little shed beside the house.

These products he sells in the town square afternoons and evenings and drives a good trade among the townspeople and employes of the great Crane mills.

After taking his one meal of the day, he goes out to a small shed in the rear of the house where he has rigged a short horizontal bar and there stretches himself in "chinning" the bar a dozen times at intervals of a few minutes.

While showing the visitor the rounds he called attention to this bar and really surprised the reporter with the ease with which he repeatedly negotiated the "chinning" stunt.

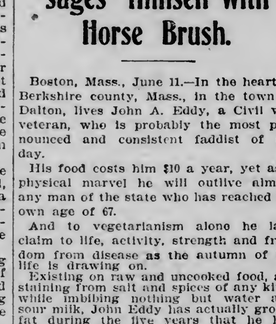

His faith in the simple diet he has adopted is absolute and unaffected.

The exercise he took up as a matter of course after a reading of the necessity of so doing after adopting his manner of living, but above everything he speaks of the marvelous cures that have resulted from his reverting back to nature.

"If I could, though, I would go out and roll in the grass or snow every morning in the nude condition the first men did, and then I would be rid of the little touches of rehumatism that sometimes get me in the shoulders," he said.

"I am going to get those shoulders down to the earth somehow this coming winter, though, and then I will be sure to end the pain for all, and I do not mean by death.

"Smoking in moderation I find is good for me, my mind is never hungry when my stomach is not. I sleep like a top while getting more than the usual pleasure out of life that a man of my age can expect and will be doing so until I am 100 years old, for I expect to live every day of that, now that I have found the only correct way of keeping the body and mind free of disease."

SPENDER, BUT STUDIOUS, IS MRS. CRAIGIE'S SON.

Eton, England, June 11.—Sixteen-year-old John Churchill Craigie, the only child of Novelist "John Oliver Hobbes" (Mrs. Craigie), has earned the reputation of being the most extravagant boy at the famous preparatory school here. He spent in three months $1,000 given to him as 'pocket money," whereupon his doting mother sent him more. Her father, Morgan Richards, who is devoted to the lad, goes to see him as often as once a week and sees that "Jack's" every want is gratified. Ponies, automobiles, yachts and motor boats are a few of the costly things that have been provided.

But, though he "rolls" in wealth, young Craigie is the brightest boy in his class, and his teachers predict that his career will be brilliant. He has the literary gift, too, and reads everything he encounters in his mother's little house, St. Lawrence lodge, at Ventnor Isle of Wight, where is to be found every book worth having.

DR. AMES WILL SEEK VINDICATION, HE SAYS.

Minneapolis, June 11.—True to his promise of two years ago and "seeking vindication at the polls," Dr. Albert Alonzo Ames, four times mayor, notorious through the exploitation of his last administration, and still better advertised by his trials, filed Saturday as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for mayor.

While not wholly unexpected, Dr. Ames' action has injected a new factor in the local political situation. "The genial doctor" has confided the information to his friends that he is not planning a continuation of the present city administration. From this it is taken that the former mayor is planning to recall his youth by gaining an office and lifting a lid as in days gone by.

Speaking for vindication the doctor says he seeks vindication, as well as to prove to the world, and more especially to Minneapolis, that he is a quantity in local affairs that must still be considered. He says he has every confidence of victory, so encouraging have been the proffers of support by his friends. To put all doubt at rest, and to satisfy his friends, the doctor filed Saturday.

EXPERIMENTS IN BUTTER MAKING.

Washington, June 11.—Some extensive experiments in the making and storage of butter have recently been concluded by the dairy division of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, in an effort to solve some of the difficulties encountered in the butcher trade. A bulletin containing a report of the experiments has been issued. The conclusion is that light salting and low temperature and the use of cream received at the creamery in a sweet condition give much the best results for storage butter.

(The games as George Ade might have have seen them.)

"Me for the simple life and the little old home down on the farm," said The Cherub, as he showed his face over young Mr. Wall's desk and handed him the morning mail.

"What's the matter?" asked Mr. Wall. "You talk like an arc light with a new carbon stick in it. You don't need to whisper to me. Speak up."

"My pipes is frosted. They're clean to the bad, and all me interior is flooded with conversation that ought to come out through me mouth. Any words you miss struck a leak in be plumbing, and they're sidetracked."

"How did it sappen?" asked Mr. Wall curiously.

"Well, you see, my poor old grandmother croaked Friday, and we planted her Saturday and Sunday. There were two grand funerals. Saturday there was about 700 people there, and yesterday we had about 4,000 to the funeral."

"Were they good games?" asked Mr. Wall, who flattered himself on being able to follow the Cherub's rhetorical wanderings.

"Better'n that," said the Cherub. "Say, they was heart-grippers. They had me shaking and shivering like one of these bamboo-backed boys full of hops. The Saturday funeral was bad enough, but when I got home after the Sunday game I had to take to the feathers, and I was fighting the umpire all night. I woke up this morning to find meself standing on the footboard of the bed heaving shoes at my reflection in the mirror. I thought he was the umps."

"Who won?" asked young Mr. Wall.

"What?" said the Cherub. "Who won?" Say, there's a heavy brewery wagon passing over your grave. Why don't you come back to life? The last of them games was played yesterday."

"Well, I have been out of town over Sunday," said Mr. Wall, "and I haven't had time to see a paper this morning."

"Well, do you think I get me plumbing out of gear for the other team? The Sox won, of course. Had 'em down and out and taking the full count."

"Tell me about them," said Mr. Wall.

"The Saturday game was easy money. The sky juice had been leaking and the field was like a custard pie when they started in. Krick was throwing. There's a four-ply, copper-riveted boy, though. He was just teasing them along, letting them hit him when the hits didn't amount to anything. They got him without his fingers crossed in the third, and for a time I thought there wasn't going to be no wake at that funeral. They got three hits on him in a bundle, and three scores.

"But Artie's crowd handed it to them in the fourth. Artie started the fun with a double. They got Barto, and that little blue-eyed boy in left field got a base on balls. Then Lovett shoves a hot one at Cassiboine and he sidesteps, and Treadway gets a nice clean single, and three scores is in.

"But the sixth was wores'n that. They got one on a hit batsman, a sacrifice and a single, and Artie's bunch was one to the bad again. But what does that blue-eyed boy do but tear off a nice double, first up. That scared their pitcher so bad he hit Lovett and gave Treadway his base, and the bags was fuller than a sailor on Saturday night. Then Adams hits a dinky little teaser to the third baseman. He fumbles it, and two runs are in. Krick goes out, and Livingstone cracks out a nice lut, scoring two more.

"How about yesterday's game?" asked Mr. Hall.

"Now you're talking," said the Cherub. "That game was the cheese, the fine old brickstein with a piece of apple pie on the side. They had us groggy up to the eighth, and the crowd was beginning to think that the third game was to go to Houghton. And they were all there, too. Not many people stayed home yesterday. They had them packed into the knotholes of the fence.

"We led in the first round with a double by Summers and a nice single by Artie that was good for one run.

"Then there was some in fighting for a couple of rounds, with not much hitting in the breaks, and it was not until the fifth that they got busy. They was going strong, and Beecher swung on Morton for a single. Stevens helped him along to second, and Brand got to first when Artie fumbled a bad one from Adams. Then Lovett juggled one from Kippert and Beecher scored. Smith got a base on balls, and the sacks were full again. Then Sundheim hits one out to Krick, but Billy couldn't swim, and while he was hunting for a raft to float across the right field lake, the ball fell, and two of them trots home. That was all for them.

"Artie's crowd gets a quick come-back in the last half. After Adams was out, Morton hits and Livy croaked before he got to first. Little Summers, the boy shortstop, gets to first on an error, and then Artie is there with another nice single, bringing in two runs.

"They got another pair in the sixth on hits by Hastings, Taylor and Kippert.

"The Sox was getting weaker and weaker in their counters, and only got one in the come-back. McCormick got a long one, and Lovett followed suit, but the blue-eyed boy was caught trying to work his paddles around to third base. Krick was out on an infield hit, and Adams got a nice safe one, bringing in Lovett.

"There was nothing doing in the seventh, and it looked as if the Giants had the Sox in their corner, up against the ropes and groggy. But when the gong sounded in the eighth Artie's crowd came up fresh and ready for the gaff. Lovett draws a base on balls, and steals second. Adams got down on an error, and after Krick and Morton were out, Livy had a chance to win a home and a meal ticket, and he slams out a double, tying the score.

"Say, you ought to have seen that crowd then. When I come to I was trying to beat a fat man's brains out with his silk hat, and he was hugging me like his long-lost sweetheart."

"It must have been exciting," said young Mr. Wall.

"Worse'n that. But we had another whoop saved up for the ninth. The big red-headed boy was pitching as if he liked it, and they couldn't get within a mile of him. After three of them had walked up and back again, O'Dea gets another hit, and Barto got his base on an easy one to Leonard. Leonard fielded it but tried to throw to second, and there was nobody there. The blue-eyed boy, McCormick, got his base on the same kind of a hit. Leonard fielded it but nobody covered the base, and then Lovett cracks out another nice single, winning the game."

"No wonder you are hoarse," said Mr. Wall.

"Say, if there had been a double-header yesterday, it would be me for the bone factory, all right," said the Cherub, as he strolled over to whisper sweet things to the pretty stenographer. The scores:

EACH GET ONE.

Hancock Wins Saturday Game and Fargo Takes One on Sunday.

Fargo, N. D., June 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hancock won Saturday by pounding Hanson in the ninth. He had pitched sensational ball for the first eight innings and held the visitors to a shut out for that period, when he weakened. A job lot of one eror, a stolen base, two singles and a trio of doubles, netted the visitors a quintette of scores, just enough to win. Rose tripled, the first man up in the ninth, and died, Dolan, the Great, striking out, and the other two being easy victims.

Donovan made a hair raising catch of a fly, as the only fielding feature of the game. The score:

Finnegan continued his winning streak Sunday and won his fifth straight game for Fargo. It was the only game of the series that the locals secured from Hancock.

Outside of Finnegan's box work the batting of Fitzgerald and a circus catch by Edwards in the second were the features.

Fargo hit Rogers consistently and in the fifth got to him for four singles and a two-bagger, for four runs, when Legore was substituted and stopped the matinee.

The attendance was large and the umpiring of Rudderham wrought the fans up to a high pitch of indignation at different stages of the game.

White Sox May Start Their Trip Leading the League.

The White Sox has but five more games to play in the present home series, and the fans are hoping to see the team leave home for the Copper country in first position.

The Hancock team comes today for three games, and on Thursday Calumet will play a double-header here, leaving Thursday evening with the Duluth team for Calumet, where the other three games of the series will be played on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Th double-header with Calumet will give the Sox an opportunity to crawl into first place, if they can hold their own with the Hancock men, who have earned the name of "The Climbers" from the manner in which they have been coming up in the race.

MICHIGAN TEAM SHOT TO PIECES

The Three-Year Rule Sets the Wolverines Away Back.

Chicago, June 9.—Last Saturday's conference meet at Evanston saw the last appearance in inter-collegiate track athletics of many of the stars who were generally considered to have another year of competition. The new three-year rule, adopted at the reform meeting of the big-nine conference committee, limits all athletes to three years' competition, and takes effect Sept. 1, 1906, with the exception that it does not apply to men who competed during the year 1905-06 until Dec. 1, 1906.

This allows all football men who finished their third year last fall to get in another year on the gridiron, but bars out all track and baseball men who have now participated three years. Michigan will be the heaviest sufferer. The maize and blue will lose seven of its star men, chief among whom will be Garreis, the one-man team, who will be barred by the three-year rule. Capt. Ramey, winner of the half-mile Saturday, Stewart in the dashes, and Coe, who took first in the mile and second in the two-mile, will be the other men affected by the new ruling. By the old four-year rule Goodwin, the quarter-miler, Dunlap, winner of shot-put, and Curtis, Michigan's third best weight man, would have become ineligible.

Coach Stagg will lose the captain of the team and best point-getter, Parry, who was expected to shatter some records with another year's experience. The Maroons will also be without Taylor and Parkinson, quarter-milers, and relay men. Chicago loses no men by the old four-year ruling and consequently the Maroons will have much the same team as that of last Saturday. Wisconsin's greatest loss will also be its captain, Waller, who has competed for four years.

Capt. Samse of Indiana, who broke the world's record in the pole vault, will not have another chance to better his own mark, as he has competed for four years, as has also Hamilton, the dark horse of the meet, from Iowa state normal, and Capt. Verner, the Purdue miler. Capt. Shawver of Northwestern is a four-year man and Capt. Peebles of Illinois is the seventh in the list of captains who have rounded out their allotted terms of service. Illinois, by the three-year ruling, will also be deprived of Kline, the broad jumper, Mackey, the hurdler, and Dupuy, the hurdler and quarter-miler.

As the new freshmen rule, requiring a year's residence before eligibility for competition, also goes into effect next fall, the conference schools will have to draw up the material now in colleges for their teams of 1907. This places Chicago once more prominently to the fore, for many of its best men are freshmen this year, while Michigan is the heaviest loser in veteran men.

SIX PROMINENT WOMEN TAKEN AS SHOPLIFTERS.

Helena, Mont., June 11.—County Attorney Leon La Croix has filed informations against six women, residents of the Union Station section, charging them with shoplifting. They are Mrs. P. J. Touhly, Mrs. Minnie Sloan, Mrs. Thomas Conlon, Mrs. Ann Sandige, Amelia Sandige and Harriet Sandige.

The women are alleged to have formed a conspiracy for the robbery of practically every store in town, and if the allegation is true or not, the fact remains that a room in the courthouse is piled high with goods which have been identified by merchants as belonging to them, and which includes practically everything moveable.

The wholesale arrests have created a sensation, the women being well connected.

NEW CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH AT BOSTON DEDICATED

MOTHER CHURCH OF CHRISTAN SCIENTISTS AT BOSTON.

Boston, June 11.—One of the most remarkable religious demonstrations ever witnessed in New England occurred yesterday when the new $2,000,000 Christian Science temple in the Back Bay district was dedicated. From every state in the Union and from all parts of the world came members of that faith to be present at the dedicatory services. It was estimated that more than 40,000 Christian Scientists were in the city.

Six services were held to accommodate the vast throngs, but even then there were thousands who were unable to gain admission to the temple. The seating capacity of the new edifice exceeds 5,000 and at each service hundreds stood in the aisles and in the rear of the church.

The first service was held at 7 o'clock in the morning. As early as 1 o'clock hundreds were standing in line waiting patiently for the doors to open. At 5 o'clock there was at least 1,000 in the street outside the church and an hour later the number had swelled to 5,000. At 7 o'clock there were 10,000 persons waiting, twice the seating capacity of the new temple.

As quickly as one service was completed and the congregation had departed, the temple was filled again and still there were thousands outside who had been unable to gain admittance.

The six services yesterday were identical and each was about two hours in length. The occasion combined both the annual communion and the dedicatory exercises. It consisted of the tenets, the reading of the dedicatory address by Mrs. Baker-Eddy, of Concord, Mass., and a sermon specially prepared for the occasion.

At the close of the lesson sermon, in accordance with the usual custom of the church, in response to an invitation of the first reader, the entire congregation knelt in silent communion, followed by the audible repetition of the Lord's prayer. The congregational singing was a feature of the service. At the close of each service, Edward A. Kimball of Chicago, presented a reply of thanks to Mrs. Eddy for her dedicatory address and for her general work in behalf of the church.

Mrs. Eddy's address was a lengthy document and dealt in the main with Christian Science tenets. Referring especially to the dedication of the new temple, Mrs. Eddy wrote:

"Beloved, I am not with you in propria persona at this memorable dedication and communion season, but I am with you in spirit and in truth, thanking your generosity and fidelity and saying virtually what the prophets said, 'continue to choose whom ye will serve.'

"You have dexterously and wisely provided for the mother church of Christ Scientist, a magnificent temple wherein to enter and pray. Greatly impressed and encouraged thereby, deeply do I thank for your proof of progress, unity and love.

"The modest edifice of the modern church of Christ, began with the cross, its excelsior extension is the crown. Its crowning ultimately rises to a mental monument, a superstructure high above the work of men's hands, even the outcome of their hearts, giving them the material and spiritual significance—the speed, beauty and achievements of goodness. We think this church is the one edifice on earth which most portrays self-abnegation, hope, faith, catching a glimpse of glory."

The new temple which is entirely free from debt, is one of the most imposing structures in Boston and is said to be the largest church in New England. Christian Scientists all over the world have aided in its construction and it is intended as a tribute to Mrs. Eddy, in recognition of her labors.

The original mother church adjoins and forms part of the new temple. The construction of the new edifice has occupied a little more than two years.

IS RUNNING REGULARLY

Ferry Bridge Has Not Missed Trip in Four Months.

Preparations Being Made for Heavy Traffic During Summer Months.

It is now a little more than four months since the ferry bridge has missed a trip.

During that time the car has been running on its regular schedule, and not a dollar has been expended for repairs. The only work that has been done on the bridge is to keep it oiled. Gus Rakowsky, the foreman in charge of the structure, spends the greater part of the day examining the tracks and the wheels in the running gear, and keeping them well oiled and in proper running order. While the city officials do not like to speak too loudly about it, they are nevertheless very well pleased at the manner in which the bridge is acting, and they are confident that it will give no further cause for worry.

The season is now approaching when the bridge will be most used, and those in charge of it are hoping that it will run through the summer without interruption of any kind.

The crowds of summer tourists are just beginning to arrive, and within three or four weeks the White City will be open, and where the bridge is now carrying hundreds of people a day, it will be carrying thousands a month from now.

Every preparation is being made by the engineering department to anticipate any breakdowns, and duplicate parts of most of the machinery will be on hand, ready to slip in at any time, and any ordinary breakage can be repaired at short notice.

Any lack of confidence that may have existed as a result of the troubles and delays incidental to the first few months' operation of the ferry car are being dissipated by the manner in which it is meeting the demands placed upon it, and if it continues to act as well during the summer months, the majority of people will have been convinced that it has justified its erection.

STEAMER GOES ASHORE.

Yarmouth, N. S., June 11.—The steamer Etolia of the Elder-Dempster line, which left St. John Saturday for Barrow, via Sydney, C. B., struck on a dangerous ledge near Cape Sable during a thick fog yesterday, and is thought to be badly damaged. The reports which have been received here from the Marconi wireless station at Cape Sable, and from Clarke's Harbor, the nearest wire station to the scene, which is forty miles southeast of this city, indicate that no person was lost.

IN A CLASS ALL BY THEMSELVES.

Whatever may be said or written for or against so-called patent medicines, there is this to be truthfully said of Dr. Pierce's medicines that applies to no other medicines put up for sale through druggists. They are entitled to a place all by themselves because they are neither patent nor secret medicines—all their ingredients being openly printed in plain English on their bottle wrappers. Then again they are entitled to a place all by themselves because they contain not a drop of alcohol in their composition, or make up.

Send your address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y., with a request for a free booklet, compiled by him from standard medical works and you will learn on reading it that the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice endorse and recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, "liver complaint," torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or lingering standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung diseases (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherrybark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Hare, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., late of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago, and scores of others equally eminent in their several schools of practice.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes, that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula on the bottle wrapper is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming agents and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful ingredient in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable.

Eminent doctors also praise the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invaribly acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues, "in Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhoea; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women, constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; uterorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M.D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Of Black Cohosh, another ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. John King, M. D., author of the AMERICAN DISPENSATORY, says:

"In the painful conditions incident to imperfect menstruation, its remedial action is fully displayed. By its special affinity for the female reproductive organs, it is an efficient agent for the restoration of suppressed menses. In dysmenorrhœa (painful periods), it is surpassed by no other drug, being of greatest utility in irritative and congestive conditions of the uterus and appendages, characterized by tensive, dragging pains, resembling the pains of rheumatism. It is a good remedy for the reflex 'side-ache' of women. It should be remembered in rheumatism of the uterus, and in uterine leucorrhœa."

Blue Cohosh root, and Yellow Lady's Slipper root, the two remaining ingredients not mentioned above, have just as strong endorsements for their curative merits in diseases peculiar to women, but we have room for no more. "Favorite Prescription" is a happy and harmonious compound of the above mentioned ingredients and faithfully represents them in curative results.

The foregoing are only a few brief extracts taken from amongst the voluminous endorsements which the several ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have received from the most eminent medical writers of all the different schools of medicine. After reading them who can doubt that Dr. Pierce has selected and compounded his "Prescription" from the most valuable ingredients known to the medical profession for the cure of those chronic diseases of women for which he recommends it? A far more extensive endorsement will be mailed free, in form of a booklet of extracts, from standard medical works, to any one sending name and address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules. They regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Do not beget the "pill habit," but cure constipation. One or two each day for a laxative and regulator, three or four for an active cathartic. Once tried always in favor.

TO OBSERVE FLAG DAY

Old Soldiers and Patriotic Citizens Will Celebrate Thursday.

Everybody Urged to Display the United States Flag.

As Flag Day, which is next Thursday happens at a date when Duluth will be well filled with people from the outside, on account of the Republican state convention, the local G. A. R. posts and other patriotic organizations and citizens are planning that the day may be observed with the greatest celebration of the kind the city has ever witnessed.

June 12, 1906, will be the 129th anniversary of the birth of the United States flag and all over the country patriots will in one form or another do honor to the national colors.

The local posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, who usually take the initiative in Flag Day observance, have received from Isaac L. Mahan, the patriotic instructor of the department of Minnesota, communications urging the old soldiers and all classes of citizens to join in the movement to do honor to the country's flag.

Extracts from the National Patriotic Instructor which are especially called to the attention of all citizens are as follows:

"The flag which was created to be the emblem and illustration of a bond of unity comprising thirteen states fringing a vast territory along the Atlantic, has expanded until its protection covers nearly a whole continent and extends far across the seas to embrace within its folds the oppressed and degraded of other races of men, who were the bondsmen of avarice and power.

"Honorable has been its mission; freedom and liberty its message; elevation its communication; authority its duty; sacred its promises. Beneath its benignity every birth is noble; every pure aspiration is exalted, and every honest possession protected. It welcomes the oppressed of all mankind, exemplifies national virtue, and is an ever victorious defense of the weak."

Together with Levi Longfellow, the department commander of the G. A. R., Mr. Mahan urges that it is proper that the anniversary of the flag should be hailed with acclaim. He suggests that the ringing of bells and salute of artillery would not be amiss, while from every housetop, steeple and mast there should be flung to the breeze the banner of the American people.

Old soldiers are especially urged to see that "Old Glory" waves above their homes, and teachers, pupils business men and citizens generally are asked to render their assistance in making the day to be remembered, one that will be a lesson in patriotism for young and old.

Arrangements will be made to have the Armory, where the Republican convention will be held, profusely decorated with the national colors.

The Virginia Lumber company has discontinued the night shift at their lath mill here, owing to the inability to secure sufficient timber. The engine in the mill has been found of inadequate horse power to drive all the machinery, and an order has been placed for a larger engine. When it is installed a hand resaw will be added to the machinery of the lath mill to manufacture short lumber for box shaks.

The Misses Murphy, sisters of M. A. and J. W. Murphy, who recently arrived from Woodstock, Ont., to make Virginia their home, have joined the choir of the Catholic church. GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

Program for County Association's Session in Duluth Announced.

Will be Held on Eve of State Republican Gathering.

On the eve of the Republican state convention, the first regular meeting of the St. Louis County Good Roads association will be held and an effort made to have the first named gathering incorporate a good roads plank in its platform. Other business incidental to the organization of good roads work in the county will be transacted.

It is expected that the attendance will be large, as many citizens have announced their intention of attending. The range towns and other communities outside of Duluth will be well represented. The sessions will be held in the assembly rooms of the Commercial club.

The session will be called to order at 10:30 Tuesday morning, June 12, by W. E. Culkin, president of the association. Mayor Cullum will be on hand to deliver an address of welcome to the delegates and then the meeting will get down to business.

Reports on the elections of the vice presidents will be heard. Every city, village and township in the county is entitled to a vice president and these officials will all have been selected in their respective communities by the time the convention is called to order in Duluth.

George W. Cooley, one of the most prominent men in the good roads movement in Minnesota, will deliver a talk on "State Highway Legislation," and before the adjournment for luncheon is taken, committees will be appointed to draft resolutions to be offered to the Republican state convention. It is hoped by the members of the association that this will have the effect of securing a good roads plank in the platform.

S. S. Mitchell of Hibbing, also will give a talk on "Adequate Administration of Road Funds." Others who are down on the program for a short talks during the afternoon session are: D. Stephens of Crookston, A. L. Cole of Walker, State Auditor S. G. Iverson, County Auditor Odin Halden, George W. Somerville of Sleepy Eye, G. A. Schalle, president of the State Good Roads association, and Dr. D. C. Rood of Hibbing. The county commissioners will be invited to give short talks pertaining to their own districts.

As soon as the meeting is adjourned, the actual work of the association will be started. It is probable that members of the executive committee will be chosen to head auxiliary committees in the different communities and the work carried on in this way. The executive committee will hold meetings every little while.

A membership list of 10,000 active citizens of St. Louis county is being striven for and excellent progress is being made. New members are being enrolled every day in Duluth, in the range towns and everywhere throughout the county. The good roads movement is one which interests everyone, as it spells greater prosperity for the county. This part of the state is becoming settled with progressive people and inadequate highways do not satisfy them nor attract prospective settlers.

SHOULD ENDORSE GOV. JOHNSON

Stronger With the People Now Than He Ever Was.

To the Editor of the Herald:

Four years ago I advocated the renomination and election of Governor Van Sant, and though my leaning was toward the Democrats, I favored the endorsement of Governor Van Sant by the Democratic convention, for the reason that I did not think, judging from two years' experience, that a man could be found who would improve or bring to the executive function a cleaner or better record. If Mr. Rosing had been elected he could not have given the people a more satisfactory discharge of duty. Then I thought it unwise on the part of Democracy to nominate a candidate against a man and force a false issue and an unnecessary canvass without warrant or justification, when the office had been filled with faithfulness and every duty performed with an eye single to the glory of the state and to the benefit of all the people without prejudice to any class or locality.

I though as Governor Van Sant had been faithful and true to the people, we ought to reciprocate by a unanimous vote of confidence. I hold to the same idea in regard to the present incumbent. The masses of the voters ought to ignore the wire-pulling bosses and state makers and stampede the Duluth convention for the greatest governor Minnesota has ever had. In doing it, they would only voice the sentiment of two-thirds of the Republican voters of the state. Suppose the convention nominates a man; can they hope to find one that will improve upon the admirable administration of John A. Johnson?

Political parties, as well as the individual, ought to make their acts conform to ideas of justice and consistency. What good can result from a change in the governorship? Only a division of the spoils, and that is what the people are getting tired of. What we desire now more than anything else, is honesty and efficiency in the public service, and Governor Johnson, like Van Sant, has filled the bill in every particular. He has made good in all his pre-election promises. No one disputes that fact. He has insisted that the laws in every department be rigidly enforced. This has resulted in a very thorough enforcement of the laws against timber trespass on state lands, and in fact all departments over which the governor has jurisdiction have been conducted in a manner to win the highest praise from the opposition as well as the governor's own friends. The insurance department has notably made a great record, so much so that President Roosevelt in a special message to congress congratulated Governor Johnson and Insurance Commissioner T. D. O'Brien for instituting reform in insurance matters that he hoped to apply to the nation at large. I am unable to figure out, and I figure from a non-partisan viewpoint—other than blind Hartisanship—why there is any necessity to make any change in the governorship this year.

The governor is stronger with the people than he ever was. I have as much license to know this fact as the slate makers. If any doubt his strength, let them go among the lumberjacks, the farmers and homesteaders and the business men—in fact—men of every calling. The fact is, a majority of the people are honest and want to encourage honesty, not only in private affairs but in public affairs, and when they are once convinced of the righteousness of a course or the honesty of a public servant, they will follow strong, as conscience dictates. There is no question as to Governor Johnson's honesty and fitness to fill the office two years longer, but there is doubt in the mind of many people whether the Republican convention will be able to nominate a man that can be banked upon to give everybody a square deal. I don't think we ought to risk a certainty for an uncertainty, and surely the interest of the entire population is of more concern to the voters than thought of a few appointive offices in the power of the governor to fill.

According to official record President Roosevelt's vote in Minnesota was 216,-657, and Parker's 55,187; Roosevelt's majority over Parker 161,464. Johnson's vote was 147,992, and Dunn's 140,130. Figuring that Parker carried the full Democratic strength, Johnson received 92,815 Republican votes, not because his opponent was a weak man, but because he himself was strong. Bob Dunn was the strongest man in the Republican party in the state. A glance at the above figures, coupling with them the fact that Johnson is stronger now than two years ago, ought to convince the most optimistic Republican that it would be easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than to defeat John A. Johnson this fall. I am also in favor of S. G. Iverson for state auditor for the same reason that I favor the present governor, and I will vote for him if I live till November. I believe in a rule that works both ways.

MAY SOLVE THE KINNAN MURDER

Four Italians Arrested Who Know Something of the Crime.

New York, June 11.—Four Italians were arrested here yesterday and remanded to the coroner until the story told by one of them, which tends to offer a solution of the mysterious murder of Mrs. Alice Kinnan in the Bronx Friday night, can be more thoroughly investigated. Mrs. Kinnan was called to the door of the home of her mother, Mrs. Stanton, with whom she had been living since a separation had been granted her from her husband. No sooner had she opened the door than she was struck down by an unknown man.

Yesterday Carlo Marino, a saloonkeeper, told the police he knew something of the murder Friday night. He said he and Demitrio Compoli, Theodore Skalla and Thomas Farina quarreled over a girl who was one of the party. Marino declared Compoli threatened him with a bolt similar to that with which Mrs. Kinnan was struck, and with which Compoli, a night watchman, usually was armed. During the quarrel the informant of the police says, the girl broke away and fled into the yard of Mrs. Stanton's home. When the men separated soon afterward, it was alleged Compoli went into Mrs. Stanton's yard, and it is the theory of the authorities that he thought the girl might have sought refuge in the house. When all the men had been arrested, Marino weakened somewhat in his story, and said he may have been mistaken as to some of the features. Most of the men, however, gave details as to the quarrel, and Compoli's actions afterward led the magistrate to hold them for the coroner as witnesses. Skalla and Farina, both of whom have good reputations, were afterwards released on bail.

SKIN DISEASES
FIERY ACIDS IN THE BLOOD

All skin diseases are due to the same cause—an excess of acid in the blood caused by faulty assimilation of food and poor bowel action; this fiery acrid matter is forced to the surface through the pores and glands. Pustules are formed, discharging a sticky fluid which dries and makes a crust, causing intense itching. When the crusts or scabs are scratched off the skin is left raw and bleeding. Sometimes skin diseases are in the dry form, and bran-like scales come on the flesh, or the skin becomes hard and dry, often cracking, and the painful itching causes acute suffering. It does not matter how the trouble is manifested, the cause is the same—an excess of acid in the blood. Salves, powders, cooling washes, etc., whil they relieve the itching and give the sufferer temporary comfort, cannot cure the trouble because they do not reach the acid laden blood. The best treatment for all skin diseases is S. S. S., a remedy that is purely vegetable and one which acts directly on the blood with a cleansing, healing effect. S. S. S. neutralizes the acids, and purifies the blood so that the skin instead of being blistered and burned by the fiery fluids, is nourished by a supply of cooling, healthy blood. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired will be furnished without charge.

Dear Sirs—My body broke out with a rash or eruption which in spite of all efforts to cure continued to get worse. The itching, especially at night, was simply terrible. I had tried many highly recommended preparations without benefit, and hearing of S. S. S. determined to give it a fair trial, and was inexpressibly delighted when a few bottles cured me entirely.

LABOR MEN IN COUNCIL

State Federation Opens Annual Convention at Stillwater.

State Secretary-Treasurer McEwen of Duluth Reports.

The state federation of labor opened its annual session this morning at Stillwater and will hold forth today, tomorrow and Wednesday. Some matters very interesting to the state labor movement will come up for consideration, among them the contribution of more money for the purpose of spreading organization into the smaller towns and also furthering it in the cities, where there is still a great deal of work to be done. The Duluth delegates are practically instructed to vote in favor of increasing the per capita tax for this purpose and it is quite likely that this will be done.

The matter of referendum and recall will also likely come up and the Duluth delegates will favor the pushing of a bill in the next legislature for this purpose. It is also very likely that a strong political move will be set on foot for the coming fall elections. A stronger effort than ever will be made to unite the labor vote in supporting their friends and defeating their enemies, and those who have thrown them down in the past.

The Duluth delegates left yesterday for Stillwater, each union which is affiliated, which comprises practically all the unions in the city, having sent delegates. Those from the trades assembly are President Joseph Shartel, T. G. Fresbey, George W. Davis, Martin Olmen and John McDonald. Quite a number of others not elected delegates went down, also. William E. McEwen, who has for years been secretary-treasurer of the state federation, is a candidate for re-election. President Phillips of the Minneapolis Retail Clerks' union is a candidate for the same office, but it is expected that Mr. McEwen will land again all right. The local delegates are instructed to do everything they can toward that end.

A dispatch received today from Stillwater says that Secretary-Treasurer McEwen gave his report today to the convention. In opening his talk he took occasion to say a lot of complimentary things about the commonwealth and people of Minnesota and throughout the speech urged unionism onward and also urged conservatism. In his report he touched on matters which in substance follow:

"Developments of the past year have caused an awakening among the people. They are beginning to understand that predatory interests must be combatted. I know of nothing more responsible for the great revolution in American thought than the American labor movement, through its commendable system of agitation.

"I have been identified with the work of the federation for more than ten years, and know something of its ever increasing influence in matters of public concern. If its influence has not been far-reaching enough to suit us, it is because we have lacked the united support of the trade unions of the state. Some organizations of labor feel that they are sufficiently strong to stand off by themselves, and can appreciate no benefit in affiliating with the federation. If a local union cannot secure direct benefits from affiliation, it most assuredly can be of some help in aiding us to organize other unions. If it were not for the state federation of labor, there would be no affinity between the trade unions of the cities.

"The federation council will undoubtedly report at length on the efforts at organization work during the year, and with the limited funds at their disposal. I wish to say that during my experience as an officer of this federation we have had some splendid executive councils, but I know of none that devoted so much time and effort to the welfare of the federation as did the retiring council. President Templeman was, until commissioned by his international union to do some special work, a most enthusiastic official. He supervised the work of organization most creditably.

"Speaking from experience I know full well what can be accomplished in the field by capable organizers, but it takes money to organize unions in outside cities. The funds are too inadequate to do justice to organization work. I trust that this convention will do something to give the federation relief in this respect. Discussing organization work generally, permit me to state that the growth of the movement has never been more marked and emphatic than it has been during the past year. It is gratifying, also to note the fact that organized labor has spread to several of the smaller cities of the state, and that the work of bringing in all of the toilers of the smaller towns within the fold has been pushed as vigorously as our funds would permit.

"The American Federation of Labor, of which this organization is a part, is without doubt, the greatest and most influential labor organization in the world. Its power for good cannot be overestimated. Its conservative, but forceful policy has commanded for it the respect of the best men in America. Its president, Samuel Gompers is without doubt the greatest labor leader of the age. The secret of his success has been his conservatism. In November next the A. F. of L. will hold its annual convention in the city of Minneapolis. The officers of this state federation played no unimportant part in inducing the delegates to come to Minnesota in 1906. While our fellow unionists in the Flour city are undoubtedly in a position to offer the very best entertainment to the convention without any outside help, yet it strikes me that it is our duty to co-operate with them in the name of the organized wage earners of Minnesota. I would recommend that the incoming officers of the State Federation of Labor tender their good offices to the local committee for the purpose of aiding in the reception of the delegates of the A. F. of L. convention.

"In reviewing Labor Commissioner Williams' special report of 1905 on child labor, I was agreeably surprised to note how few children under the age of sixteen are employed in the factories and worshops of the state.

"Mr. Williams severely critizes the present method in vogue in some cities by school authorities in granting labor permits to children under school age on the most frivilous of representation, and recommends an amendments to the child labor law that will render it more effective.

"The paramount issue in the labor movement of Minnesota as well as in the nation at large during the past year, has been the struggle of the printers for the eight hour day, and the maintenance of the union shop. As a result of comparatively little sacrifice 40,000 union printers now work the eight hour day, and only 4,000 are affected by the continuance of the contest. In so much as it was a national strike, almost complete victory can be claimed for the printers.

"Two years ago this federation sent out a series of questions to the candidates for the legislature asking them to state whether or not they were in favor of the principles of direct legislation. At the session of the legislature following I had drafted a bill providing for the advisory initiative and the advisory referendum. This bill never left the committee. I don't suppose that it was even discussed. I trust that the proper committee will present a plan to this convention for the incoming officers to renew efforts for the inauguration of the campaign for direct legislation.

"Whether engaged in the economic or political arena, let us always bear in mind, men of labor, our first duty is loyalty to our trade union. When entering the field of politics in the interest of all labor let us remember that we have nothing to lose but our chains. We have the world to gain. It is for the men of labor to say whether or not this shall be a government of the people, for the people and by the people. We have had plenty of time to reflect. Years ago we charged that privilege was enthroned. Today the people realize it."

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS THROWN FROM AN AUTO.

Boston, June 11.—Thirty-four Christian Scientists were injured through the overturning of a large sightseeing automobile in the Brighton district yesterday. Every person on the car sustained injuries, more or less serious.

The party had been making a sightseeing trip through the suburbs and were descending Commonwealth hill. Suddenly the brake broke and the machine ran away down the steep grade. Near the bottom of the hill the car jumped to the side of the street and tore through a fence into the grounds of the Kenilworth Golf club, where it overturned. Most of the party were thrown clear of the machine, and sustained nothing more serious than bruises and scratches. But those more seriously injured were caught under the car.

LIGHTNING CAUSES A $150,000 CONFLAGRATION.

Neodosha, Kas., June 11.—Lightning struck an oil tank containing 17,000 barrels of oil, the property of the Prairie Oil & Gas company, a Standard Oil branch, here, early yesterday, and caused a fire loss of $150,000. The burning oil set fire to the pumping station, and all the company's buildings, including some of the largest pumps in the world, were destroyed. The destruction of these pumps will stop the pumping of oil to the Kansas City and Whiting, Ind., refineries, and may cause the Prairie company to cease buying oil, as the storage capacity is almost exhausted. The hot oil flew in every direction, burning several men who were fighting the flames. None were seriously hurt.

MAN TRIES TO EXPLODE BOMB IN A MANHOLE.

New York, June 11.—An attempt was bade last night to explede a bomb in a manhole of the Rapid Transit company, in front of the powerhouse in East Eighty-fourth street, which furnished power to the subway. Joseph Bartky, 22, was arrested, the police say, just as he was about to light the fuse of the bomb as it lay on the manhole cover. Two companions who were with him escaped. On Bartky was found three other bombs, all being of a uniform size, the shape of a baseball, but a little larger. The prisoner declared that he and his friends had found the bombs at a pleasure resort.

ONE DUEL WILL SETTLE THE WHOLE CONTROVERSY.

Vienna, June 11.—The 151 duels between Richard Zombory, a well known Hungarian sportsman, residing at Budapest, and officials connected with the Hungarian Land and Mortgage bank, will not take place, the matter having been settled by an apology by Zombory. He now will only be compelled to fight one duel with Johann Szuecs, the original challenger, who was bitten by Zombory's dog and insulted by Zombory for railing at the dog. The date for the duel has not been fixed.

Constipation and Its Causes.

A Well-Known Remedy.

Constipation is one of man's worst enemies, and half of the bodily ills we suffer from are a result thereof. Nature meant that the bowels should be kept free and open—that we should have a free movement at least once a day. Of course, we ourselves are to a large extent responsible for our troubles by failure to observe Nature's laws. Our habits are irregular, we eat improper food with undue haste, and when we find our bowels do not move, have resort to powerful drugs and medicines, which are so drastic in their action that, although they may purge at first, they damage the tender lining of the stomach and bowels, so as to leave a worse condition than before. And why take such injurious and expensive drugs when we can obtain from any druggist, much cheaper, a bottle of Nature's own remedy—the famous Mineral Laxative Water — HUNYADI JANOS—bottled at the springs in Hungary; in use nearly half a century. One dose, ½ a tumblerful, drunk on arising in the morning, (slightly warmed for best results) will bring within an hour a refreshing movement—gentle, natural and thorough—without any griping or purging or other bad effects. A whole bottle costs but a trifle. Keep one always on hand. At all Druggists.

BUHL AND ITS NEW ERA

Wealth of Iron Mines and Explorations---Agricultural Resources of the District---Buhl's Business Men of Push and Pluck.

By J. A. MONGER.

If you who are rated in the millionaire class have not figured up Buhl's prospective assets, then you have missed the chance of adding another million to your fortune. Note what the former head of the United States Steel corporation, Charles M. Schwab, said, in speaking of the values of iron ore: "Every ton of Minnesota iron ore is worth $1 a ton in the ground." This being true, then many of us have been dreaming away our golden opportunities, for Buhl is situated in the center of a great iron ore zone, stretching eastward to Mountain Iron for a distance of eight miles, and westward to Hibbing, nine miles, an almost continuous ore body without a break. In 1905 the Buhl mines shipped the following tonnage:

	Tons.
Kinney	90,457
Frantz	69,509
Yates	57,594
Grant	49,600
Total	267,159

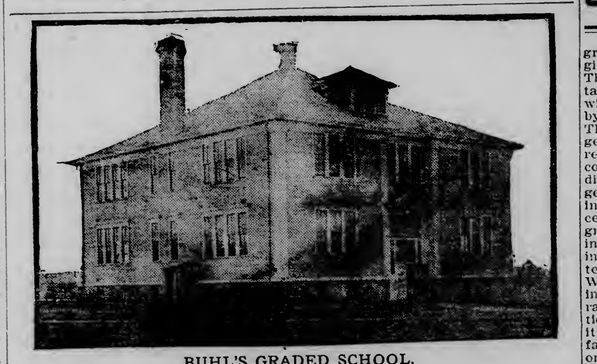

In addition to the above shippers in 1905, Buhl has the following mines and explorations: The Sharon, Iron Chief, Wabegon, Culver, and Jennings. The Grant mine heretofore has been worked as an underground proposition. They are all but ready to commence shipping operations with an entirely new mechanical engineering appliance known as the Grab system for stripping the overburden and taking out the ore. The Grab is now working successfully, which means that the Grant will be on the shipping list of mines for 1906. The Yates is stripping, working two steam shovels; the Jennings two, and the Kinney one. There are 600 men working on the four properties, with an average monthly payroll of $35,000.

THE VILLAGE OF BUHL.

There is not the shadow of a doubt that Buhl is destined to be one of the great ore producing locations of the Mesaba iron range. It will grow like a green bay tree, when the present mines and explorations are in commission; when the state awakens to the needs of draining her swamp lands and aiding in the building of good wagon roads in every section of St. Louis county. Buhl has the distinction of having a good wagon road, the Hibbing and Mountain Iron, and has let a contract for another leading to the little Fork Settlement, to be built due north through township 58-19 and 59-19. The only drawback to good road building is the unjust and unequal division of the county road money. With the great campaign that has been inaugurated for good roads throughout St. Louis county, Great Scott township should get her proportion. In public utilities Buhl owns her own waterworks system, built at a cost of $22,000. The supply is taken from a well 140 feet deep, pumped into a standpipe holding 30,000 gallons, giving ample pressure for fire and other purposes. Water mains are distributed throughout the business and residence portions. The electric lighting plant was installed at a cost of $4,500. There are 600 incandescent and six arc lights in use. This plant is also owned by the village. Buhl has one of the very attractive public school buildings on the Mesaba range; an eight-room building, costing $15,000, heated by hot water and a sewerage system. The census of school district No. 35, of which Buhl is a part, numbers 170 pupils in school attendance. The financial standing of the village is of the highest, there being only $6,000 outstanding bonds of the original indebtedness, which are not due until 1911. In the sinking fund there is $2,200, which is drawing interest. On May 1 there was a cash surplus in the treasury of $4,450. This certainly is a grand good showing that reflects no little credit on the president and board of trustees. There is no mining location on the Mesaba iron range that has made greater strides in city building than Buhl, it having grown from a population of 99 in 1900 to 1,200 in 1906. Buhl is located on the Great Northern railroad, 100 miles northwest of Duluth; nine miles from Hibbing and five miles east of Chisholm, both connected by daily stage line. Buhl has the well equipped Shaw hospital, the First State bank, a city hall and jail, built at a cost of $4,500; an up-to-date volunteer fire department the Buhl and two other hotels, making it a desirable place to live and do business in.

FERTILITY OF THE SOIL.

There is no better soil than that of Great Scott township, of which Buhl is the judicial seat. It is a rich, sandy clay and black loam, an unequaled crop producer, for diversified farming, stock raising, and dairying. Here are climate and soil that grow two crops of clover and timothy hay, two tons to the acre, two of three hundred bushels of potatoes or rutabagas to the acre, other root crops, small grain and fruits in proportion. The greatest need for the development of the soil has been good roads and the draining of the state swamp lands. Both of these pressing needs are receiving attention, and in another three years both will be successfully operate the new grab system of mining, introduced for the first time at the Grant mine, Buhl, Minnesota, where it is attracting the attention of the iron ore mining interests of America.

THE NEW GRAB SYSTEM OF MINING.

This is the very latest production of inventive ingenuity, mechanical and engineering skill for stripping, mining and loading iron ore into cars. The system was designed by Hoover & Mason, of Chicago. The grab system of mining is being installed at the Grant mine, the property of Jones & Laughlin's Steel Co., of Pittsburg. The system consists of two steel towers, 172 feet high, weighing 200 to 350 tons each, 1150 feet apart, built on trucks and run on heavy steel rails. The grab that does the stripping and mining has a capacity of 20 tons of ore. There are four 2¼ inch locked wire cables for supporting the trolley and grab, 2 two inch cables, each one going twice across the span, for controlling the movements of the trolley. The grab is controlled by two pairs of 1⅝ cables, which take care of the raising, lowering opening and closing of the grab. The grab strips 11 yards at each load, digging and closing at the same time. The length of each cut which the grab takes is 20 feet long by 6 feet, 6 inches wide. The whole system is operated by a 900 horse power electric motor. The current that supplies the motor is generated by five, 72 inches, by 18 feet return tubular engines 18¾x36x30, each compound engines 18¾ and 36x30, each directly connected wit ha 400 K-W. generator. The smoke stack is 6 feet in diameter and 150 feet high. It is certainly one of the sights to view the great system of stripping and mining in operation at the Grant. On removing the over-burden by the grab system the earth is handled but once. When the grab descends it settles down into the dirt; it is then closed and raised high enough to pass all obstructions and carried to the dump, where it is opened by electricity. The dirt falls on the dump and the grab is now on its return trip for another load. A. B. Holley, the superintendent of the Grant, is a man of energy and mechanical skill, who is doing his share to

PERSONAL NOTES.

Cronberg & Anderson have the busy store in groceries, glass, crockery, tinware and graniteware, fruits and country produce. They cover all the mining locations within a radius of three miles. The business has grown to large proportions, as Messrs. Cronberg & Anderson are live, up-to-date merchants. Mr. William Anderson is a native of Sweden, born there in 1871. He came to the States in 1891, locating at Ishpeming, Mich., where he worked in the mines down to 1895, then removed to Virginia where he found employment with the Cash Grocery, and remained to the time of coming here in 1900. In March, 1906, he was elected village trustee, and is making a good record. Mr. Gus Cronberg, the other partner in the business, owns the store building, size 22x72 feet, two stories. He was for three years previous to coming here, boss packer in the Listman Flour mills of Superior, Wis.

William Fanta, one of the three popular trustees of Buhl, owns one of the most valuable business blocks, in which he runs a first-class buffet. In 1903 he located here, coming from Chicago. Mr. Fanta is a native of Austria, born there in 1878. He came to America in 1898 to New York where he was raised and educated. In public spirit he is one of Buhl's progressive business men.

• • •

Postmaster M. A. Nichols is one of the very busy men of Buhl. He is up and doing all the time for the best interests of the people, who elected him president of the village last spring. There are no scallops about Mayor Nichols, as he was highest up in the school of push and vim, which accounts for his success in life's battle.

John Johnson is one of the men of affairs in Buhl, conducting one of the leading meat markets, besides holding the responsible position of village treasurer.

The First State bank of Buhl is one of the sound financial institutions of the Mesaba range. It has a capital of $10,000 and surplus of $488.83. The officers are R. M. Sellwood, president; P. H. Nelson, vice president and T. G. Flynn, assistant cashier.

John Pasiah, the popular ex-president of the village board, and now recorder, is a pushing, up-to-date business man. He conducts the leading meat market in his own building—size, 22 by 48 feet.

HAS BIG CONTRACT.

Great Lakes Dredge Company Is Improving Fort William Harbor.

The largest individual dredging job on the great lakes at the present time is the contract that the Great Lakes Dredge company has for the improvement of the harbor at Fort William. The contract was made with the government of the dominion and involves the removal of about 15,000,000 cubic yards of material. The company has five dredges at work on the improvement.

James Whalen, manager and part owner of the Great Lakes Dredge company is a visitor in the city. He is also owner of the ice-breaking tug James Whalen which did good service the past spring in opening navigation at the Canadian Head of the Lakes.

According to Mr. Whalen, the work of removing the grain from the Ogilvie elevator at Fort William, which threatens to topple into the river, is progressing rapidly. There were about 300,000 bushels of grain in the house when it began to tip. The building is now stationary and may not fall. It will be taken down and be rebuilt on a larger scale.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

a union of church and state, contrary to the constitution of said state of Utah, and contrary to the constitution of the United States, and the said Reed Smoot comes here, not as the accredited representative of the state of Utah, in the senate of the United States, but of the chief hierarchy which controls the church, and has usurped the functions of the state in said state of Utah."

The report says it is shown beyond reasonable doubt that the authority of the first presidency and twelve apostles is so exercised over the members of the Mormon church as to inculcate a belief in the divine origin of polygamy and polygamous cohabitation. Quotations from the Book of Mormon and other publications are cited to prove the alleged Mormon belief that the revelation on the subject of polygamy is of higher authority than the manifesto forbidding the practice.

"It is very evident," the report says, "that if polygamy were discountenanced by the leaders of that church it would very soon be a thing of the past among the members of that church. On the contrary, it appears that since the admission of Utah into the Union as a state, the authorities of the Mormon Church have countenanced and encouraged the commission of the crime of polygamy, instead of preventing it, as they could easily have done."

A sufficient number of specific instances of the taking of plural wives among officials of the Mormon Church since the manifesto of 1890 have been shown by the testimony, says the majority," to demonstrate that the leaders, the first presidency and the twelve apostles connive at the practice of taking plural wives, and have done so ever since the manifesto was issued which purported to put an end to the practice.

"It has been shown by the testimony so clearly as to leave no doubt of the fact, that as late as 1896, one Lillian Hamlin became the plural wife of Abraham H. Cannon, who was then an apostle of the Mormon church. George Teasdale, another apostle of the Mormon church, contracted a plural marriage with Marion Scholes since the manifesto of 1890. It is also in evidence that Walter Steed, a prominent Mormon, contracted a plural marriage after the manifesto of 1890. Charles E. Merrill, a bishop of the Mormon church, took a plural wife in 1891, more than a year after the issuing of the manifesto, the ceremony being performed by his father who was then, and until the time of his death, an apostle in the Mormon church. It is also shown that John W. Taylor, another apostle of the Mormon church, has been married to two plural wives since the issuing of the so-called manifesto. Matthias F. Cowley, another of the twelve apostles, also has taken one or more plural wifes since the manifesto."

It is asserted that Abraham H. Cannon and Lillian Hamlin were married on the high seas, off Los Angeles, Cal., by Joseph F. Smith, now president of the Mormon church. Of the marriage of apostles, the report says:

"While the proof that Apostles Taylor and Cowley have married plural wives since the manifesto, may not be so free from all possible doubt as is the proof in the case of Abraham Cannon, the fact that the proofs presented to the committee showing such marriages by Taylor and Cannon stand wholly uncontroverted and the further fact that Apostles Taylor and Cowley, instead of appearing before the committee and denying the allegations, evade service of process issued by the committee for their appearance and refuse to appear after being requested to do so, warrant the conclusion that the allegation is true and that said Taylor and Cowley have taken plural wives since the manifesto."

Taylor and Cowley have recently dropped from the list of ajostles and this action by the church is offered as amounting to an admission by the first presidency and twelve apostles that Apostles Taylor and Cowley have each taken one or more plural wives since the manifesto.

Several instances of plural marriages by other church members are cited and the report adds :

"It is morally impossible that all these violations of the laws of the state of Utah by contracting plural marriages could have been committed without the knowledge of the first presidency and the twelve apostles of the Mormon church. Furthermore, it is shown by the testimony of one of the twelve apostles and of other witnesses that under the established law of the church, no person could secure a plural wife except by consent of the president of the church."

One interesting chapter of the report is devoted to the charge that testimony was suppressed by Mormon leaders, through the sending out of the country of apostles and other officials who were charged with taking plural wives since the manifesto. The report says:

"It would be nothing short of self-stultification for one to believe that all these most important witnesses chanced to leave the United States at about the same time and without reference to the investigation. All the facts and circumstances surrounding the transaction point to the conclusion that every one of the witnesses named left the country at the instance of the rulers of the Mormon church and to avoid testifying before the committee. It is, furthermore, a fact which cannot be questioned that every one of the witnesses is under direction and control of the first presidency and twelve apostles of the Mormon church. Had those officials seen fit to direct the witnesses named to return to the United States and give their testimony before the committee, they would have been obliged to do so. The reason why the said witnesses left the country and have refused to come before the committee is easy to understand, in view of the testimony showing the contracting of plural marriages by prominent officials of the Mormon church within the past few years.

"Aside from this, it was shown by the testimony, and in such a way that the fact could not be possibly controverted, that a majority of those who give the law to the Mormon church are now and have been for years, living in open, notorious and shameful polygamous cohabitation. The list of those who are thus guilty of violating the laws of the state and rules of public decency is headed by Joseph F. Smith, the first president, prophet, seer and revelator of the Mormon church.

"The list also includes George Teasdale, an apostle; John W. Taylor, an apostle; John Henry Smith, an apostle; Marriner W. Merrill, an apostle; Heber J. Grant, an apostle; M. F. Cowley, an apostle; C. W. Penrose, an apostle, and Francis M. Lyman, who is not only an apostle, but the probable successor of Joseph F. Smith as president of the church; Brigham H. Roberts, one of the presidents of seventies and a leading official of the church; J. M. Tanner, superintendent of the church schools; Andrew Jensen, assitant historian of the church; Thomas H. Merrill, a bishop of the church; Alma Merrill, one of the presidency of the church stake; Angus M. Cannon, a patriarch of the Mormon church; a man named Greenwald, who is at the head of a church school; George Reynolds, one of the first seven presidents of seventies and first assistant superintendent of Sunday schools of the world; George Brigham, president of the Young university, and Joseph Hickman, teacher in Brigham Young university. All the officials named were appointed, either directly or indirectly, by the first presidency and twelve apostles; and in the case of J. M. Tanner, his appointment to his present office was made after he had been compelled to resign as president of the agricultural college because of the fact that he was a polygamist.

"These facts abundantly justify the assertion made in the protest that 'the supreme authorities of the church, of whom Senator-elect Reed Smoot is one, to-wit, the first presidency of twelve apostles, not only connive at violation of, but protect and honor the violators of the laws against polygamy and polygamous cohabitation.'"

Another chapter is devoted to the manifesto and the statement of one witness is set forth, that "the manifesto is only a trick to beat the devil at his own game."

The majority report characterizes as "wholly untenable" the position that because Senator Smoot himself does not practice polygamy and there is no evidence to show that he has personally and individually encouraged the practice in others, he ought not to be condemned—because of the acts of his associates. It is charged that "Smoot is inseparable of the governing body of the Mormon church, and those who compose that organization, as the act of each and every member thereof, and, whatever policy is adopted and pursued by the body which controls the Mormon church, Mr. Smoot must be held to be responsible for as a member of that body."

The report declares that Smoot knew the polygamous practices of President Smith and other church officials and he has sustained them by a vote as an apostle, and at no time uttered a word of protest against the conduct of his associates, but on the contrary has sustained them by his silence. The report continues:

"In the judgment of the committee, Mr. Smoot is no more entitled to a seat in the senate than he would if he were associating in polygamous cohabitation with a plurality of wives."

The report discusses the political domination of the first presidency and twelve apostles of the church, which is described as most injurious to the interests of the state.

"Not only is Mr. Smoot one of those by and through whom the political affairs of Utah are dominated," says the report, "but his election to the senate was, it is believed, the result of such domination. When Mr. Smoot concluded to become a candidate for the senate, he was careful to obtain the 'consent' of the first presidency and twelve apostles to his candidacy. But this so-called 'consent' of the rulers of the church was naturally regarded by the people of Utah who were familiar of the ways of the Mormon high priesthood, as being, under the circumstances, equivalent to an endorsement and made it impossible for anyone else to become an aspirant for the same position with any hope of success."

The final chapter of the report, just preceding the conclusions of the committee, quoted at the beginning of this abstract, is devoted to the oath of vengeance, administered to those who go through the ceremony known as "taking the endowments." The committee says it was proven that an oath was administered expressed substantially in this form:

"You and each of you do covenant and promise that you will pray, and never cease to pray Almighty God to avenge the blood of the prophets upon this nation, and that you will teach the same to your children and to your children's children unto the third and fourth generations."

"There can be no question," declares the committee, "in regard to the taking of the oath of vengeance by Mr. Smoot. He testified that he went through the ceremony of taking the endowments in the year 1880 and the head of the Mormon church has in his testimony that the ceremony is now the same as that it has always been.

"An obligation of the nature of the one before mentioned would seem to be wholly incompatible with the duty which Mr. Smoot as a member of the United States senate would owe to the nation. It is difficult to conceive how one could discharge the obligation which rests upon every senator of the nation in his official duties as to promote the welfare of the people of the United States and at the same time be calling down the vengeance of heaven on this nation because of the killing of the founders of the Mormon church sixty years ago."

The Minority Report.

That Reed Smoot possesses all the qualifications prescribed by the constitution to make him eligible to a seat in the senate, and that the regularity of his election by the legislature of the state of Utah is not questioned in any manner, is the conclusion reached by the minority of the senate committee on privileges and elections, which submitted its views today. This report is signed by Senators Foraker, Beveridge, Dillingham, Hopkins and Knox.

Attached to the report is an extended statement of the investigation conducted by the comittee in hearings continuing over three years, together with an abstract of all of the material, relevant and competent testimony offered from the point of view of these senators. The report of the minority, outside of the statement, is brief, but touches upon all of the points believed by the minority to be essential. Concerning the character of the Utah senators, who has been on trial for his membership in the senate, the minority report says:

"Aside from his connection with the Mormon church, so far as his private character is concerned, it is, according to all the witnesses, irreproachable, for all who testify on the subject agree or concede that he has led and is leading an upright life, entirely free from immoral practices of every kind. He is not a polygamist; has never had but one wife, and has been noted from early manhood for his opposition to plural marriages, and probably done as much as any other member of the Mormon church to bring about the prohibition of further plural marriages.

"So far as mere belief and membership in the Mormon church are concerned," says the minority, "Reed Smoot is within his rights and privileges under the guaranty of religious freedom given by the constitution of the United States, for there is no statutory provision, and could not be, prohibiting either such belief or such membership."

On this subject it was pointed out that congress required the people of Utah to provide in their constitution that "perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said state shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship, provided, that polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited."

Upon compliance with this requirement Utah was admitted as a state, and the minority adds:

"Accordingly, members of the Mormon church, open and avowed believers in its doctrines and teachings, have been admitted without question to both houses of congress as representatives of the state."

The minority says there remain but two grounds on which the right or title of Reed Smoot to his seat is contested, and these are:

"That he is shown to have taken what is spoken of in the record as the 'endowment oath,' by which he obligated himself to make his allegiance to the church paramount to his allegiance to the United States; and,

"That by reason of his official relation to the church, as one of its apostles, he is responsible for polygamous cohabitation which yet continues among the Mormons, notwithstanding it is prohibited by law.

"As to the 'endowment oath,' it is sufficient in this summary to say that the testimony is shown to be limited in amount, vague and indefinite in character, and utterly unreliable, because of the disreputable and untrustworthy character of the witnesses.

"There were but seven witnesses who made any pretense of testifying about any such obligation. One of these was shown by the testimony of two uncontradicted witnesses to be mentally unsound. Another, to have committed perjury in the testimony given before the committee on another point. The third was shown by the uncontradicted testimony to have a bad reputation for truth and veracity and to be thoroughly unreliable. A fourth admitted that he had been for years intemperate and was shown by indisputable testimony to have lost his position on that account, and thereupon, and for that reason, to have withdrawn from the church, and to have assumed such a hostile and revengeful attitude as to entirely discredit him as a reliable witness. The other three witnesses were so indefinite as to their statements that their testimony amounted at most to nothing more than an attempt to state an imperfect and confessedly uncertain recollection.

"All that it is attempted to show as to the character of this oath is positively contradicted by Reed Smoot and a great number of witnesses, whose standing and character and whose reputation for truth and veracity are unquestioned, except by so far as they could possibly may be affected by the fact that they are or have been members of the Mormon church.

"Upon this state of evidence we are of opinion that no ground has been established on which to predicate a finding or belief that Mr. Smoot ever took any obligation involving hostility to the United States, or requiring him to regard his allegiance to the Mormon church as paramount to his allegiance and duty to the United States."

As to whether Senator Smoot, by virtue of his official relation to the church as one of its apostles, has any responsibility for the continuation of polygamous cohabitation by members of that church the minority says:

"It will be found by examination of the testimony that he had never at any time, and particularly he has not since the manifesto of 1890, countenanced or encouraged plural marriages; but that on the contrary, he has uniformly upheld the policy of the church, as announced by that proclamation, by actively advocating and exerting his influence to effect a complete discontinuance of such marriages, and that in the few instances established by the testimony where plural marriages and polygamous cohabitation, as a result of them, have occurred since 1890, they have been without any encouragement, countenance or approval whatever on his part.

"As to polygamous cohabitation in consequence of plural marriages entered into before the manifesto of 1890, there is no testimony to show that he ever had done more than silently acquiesce in this offense against law. In view of his important and influential position in the church, this acquiescence might be regarded as inexcusable if it were not for the peculiar circumstances attending the commission of this offense."

The minority then shows, by a recital of historical facts, that instead of discountenacing and prohibiting polygamy, when it was first proclaimed and practical, the congress remained silent and did nothing in that behalf. Among the acts cited are the appointment and confirmation of Brigham Young as governor of the territory of Utah in 1850, the legislation of 1862, 1882 and 1887, first to restrict and then to prohibit entirely plural marriages and polygamous cohabition. Then came the Woodruff manifesto of 1890, and then minority says that, so far as the testimony discloses, there have been few plural marriages since.

On the subject of the failure of the prosecutions, it is stated:

"It was not alone the fact that, if no further plural marriages were to be contracted, polygamy would necessarily, in the course of time, die out and pass away, but also the fact that congress, having by the statutes of 1882 and 1887 specifically legitimized the children of these polygamous marriages, it was inconsistent, if not unwise and impossible, in the opinion even of the non-Mormons, to prohibit the father of such children from living with, supporting, educating and caring for them; but if the father was thus to live with, support, educate and care for the children, it seemed harsh and unreasonable to exclude from this relationship the mother of the children."

After quoting testimony of various witnesses on the subject of the prosecutions, the minority, in concluding says:

"The conditions in Utah since Reed Smoot became an official of the Mormon church in 1900 have been such that non-Mormons and Mormons alike have acquiesced in polygamous cohabitation on the part of those who married before the manifesto of 1890, as an evil that could best be gotten rid of by simply tolerating it until, in the natural course of events, it shall have passed out of existence.

"With this disposition prevailing everywhere in the state of Utah among all classes, the Gentile or non-Mormon population as well as among the Mormons—we are of the opinion that there is no just ground for expelling Senator Smoot or for finding him disqualified to hold the seat he occupied because of the fact that he, in common with all the people of his state, has not made war upon, but has acquiseced in a condition for which he had no original responsibility. In doing so he has only conformed to what non-Mormons, hostile to his church as well as to Mormons, have concluded is under all circumstances not only the wisest course to pursue, but probably the only course that promises effective and satisfactory results."

SUES BOTH COMPANIES

Section Hand Asks $30,000 for a Crushed Leg.

Kust Jalonen, a Finlander, formerly employed as a section hand by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company, has instituted a $30,000 damage case against that company and the Duluth, Virginia & Rainey Lake Railway company, in the United States circuit court, on account of personal injuries which he claims to have received.

Jalonen alleges that he was employed by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company, Oct. 19, 1905, at which date he was ordered to go with a number of other laborers to the intersection of the road with the line of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainey Lake road, and unload from a box car a piece of railway iron, commonly termed a "frog." He claims that the iron weighed over 1,000 pounds.

Jalonen claims that while the iron was being unloaded, the locomotive attached to the car started up suddenly, and he was caught between the side of the car and the "frog," his left knee and ankle being crushed. He alleges that the limb is shrunken and stiff, and that he has lost the use of it, the injury being regarded as permanent. Jalonen says he was capable of earning $1.75 before the accident happened, but that he is now debarred by his injury from earning a living.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

An Ellendale Farmer is Murdered by His Stepson.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Ellendale—John Bartel, 37 years of age, was shot and instantly killed by his stepson, a youth about 19 years of age, as the result of a quarrel over the ownership of some land. The boy had been absent from home for some time, but a few days ago returned and induced his mother to come away with him. They both returned and a quarrel ensued, in which Bartel, it is alleged, abused his wife. The boy interfered and said that if he did not stop abusing his mother he would shoot him. Bartel turned on the boy, it is said, and in the mixup was shot in the head, the bullet penetrating the frontal bone and causing instant death. The only witness to the shooting was Mrs. Bartel. The boy made no attempt to escape and is now in the custody of the sheriff.

Fargo—There is a possibility that publicity will be given to more alleged land frauds in this state. The government has sent five assistants here to Special Agent McNeely and the greater part of the summer will be devoted to an investigation. The last batch returned included the case of Frederick Nurenberger, who was convicted and sentenced, and on the showing by the examiners the United States district attorney has brought other cancellation suits.

As many of the North Dakota militia as can go to Wyoming will take in the government encampment at that place. Governor Sarles has issued an order to that effect. Some companies will be unable to send anything like the full quota, as one of its captains has responsibility for the continuation of polygamous cohabitation by members of that church the minority says:

After spending a year on the ocean as a sailor boy, John Peterson, a Fargo boy, who was on the Marblehead, has tired of the sport, and is now down on the records as a deserter. The officials thought he would return home and wired to cause his arrest.

Fargo lost its appeal to the supreme court in the case of Johnson vs. the city. Johnson saw a fire one night and went to turn in an alarm. He fell over a guy wire that was being used to steady a peanut stand, and broke a knee. His suit in the lower court resulted in a verdict for $700, and the upper court confirmed the decision.

The Fargo board of education elected C. B. Spaulding of the St. Cloud high schools as principal.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sisseton—John Mazahawaste, an Indian of this reservation, came to town and notified the authorities of the death of his wife, Hannah Mazahawaste, by violence at the hands of a gang of drunken Indians camping at Waubay lake.

The coroner held an inquest over the remains of the dead woman, and the verdict of the jury was to the effect that death was caused by violence at the hands of John Mazahawaste, the woman's husband, John Bear, and possibly others.

A postmortem examination of the body revealed that the woman, who was 46 years old, had been the victim of a horrible and indecent outrage. Her back was found to be broken and the lower part of the body was bruised and beaten almost to a pulp.

The dead woman's little 5-year-old daughter was the only eyewitness to the crime, she having testified that her father kicked her mother down and that all the other Indians present outraged and maltreated her. The testimony of the girl corroborated that of the woman before she died. Two of the Indians have been arrested and other arrests will probably be made.

Sioux Falls—While engaged in the performance of his duties as lineman for the Bell Telephone company, David Marshall of this city fell thirty feet, with the result that he is lying in an unconscious condition, with possibly fatal injuries.

Marshall is about 29 years of age and is unmarried. He came to Sioux Falls from Minneapolis about two years ago.

When the accident happened he was near the top of a pole. He had taken the customary precaution of fastening a safety belt to himself and the pole, but the top of the pole suddenly broke off and Marshall fell to the ground.

Being fastened to the pole by the safety belt, he could do nothing, and the man and pole came down to the ground together. Physicians say there may be a clot of blood on the brain of the injured man, or that his unconsciousness may be the result of concussion, which would gradually wear away.

A substantial gift, in the form of a deed to a valuable quarter section of farm land situated in Edmunds county, has just been made to the South Dakota Children's home in this city.

The man who donated the farm to the home requested the authorities of the home to keep his name a secret, and it therefore is withheld from the public.

11 EAST SUPERIOR STREET.

ALL STATES ARE INVITED

To Send a Rifle Team to National Match at Seagirt.

Assistant Secretary Oliver Sends Out a Special Invitation.

Washington, June 11.—Assistant Secretary Oliver, one of the first authorities in military rifle shooting, is making every effort to have the national match to be held at Seagirt, N. J., this year, beginning Sept. 4, surpass in point of attendance any previous event of the kind. Therefore he has addressed letters to the adjutants general of every state and territory urging them to provide for the participation of a rifle team.

The assistant secretary points out that accurate rifle shooting is 8½ points out of 10, in the figure of efficiency of a soldier fo rthe line of battle, and while the state teams cannot all win prizes the men would at least be brought in contact with the best talent in the country, and upon their return to their own states would be able to carry back to their fellow guardsmen information relative to good shooting of the greatest value and, interest in rifle shooting would be stimulated.

The assistant secretary then suggests that each state and territory intending to be represented in the approaching competition should hold a preliminary competition two or three months in advance, in order that the best shots may be selected, and every man chosen should obligate himself to devote at least two half days each week to practice, taking care however not to overdo the practice and lower the nervous force.

After giving much other advice as to the use of dummy shells in practice, and the relief of the muscular and nervous strain, the assistant secretary concludes his letter with an earnest appeal to the states to attend the Seagirt competition, saying:

"I am convinced that these national competitions are of the greatest assistance to all in making efficient soldiers for the firing line, and we consider the numerical disadvantage of our small military force in comparison with the armies of other nations the absolute necessity of an auxiliary force trained to assume the most important duties of the lines of battle, is apparent. Since the advent of the long range, accurate military rifle and when that element is first class, the efficiency of the company, the regiment and the army is assured."

THE TERRORISTS SHOOT OFFICIALS

Hardly a Day Passes in Poland Without Assassinations.

Warsaw, June 11.—The terrorists of Poland continue to wage a relentless war against the state, municipal and police officials. Hardly a day elapses without an assassination. Last night the mayor of Siedlce, the chief of the governor's office, and the secretary of the police and guard were walking in the streets of Siedlce, when a band of terrorists, armed with revolvers, attacked them. The first two officials were mortally wounded, and the third was seriously injured.

At Bialystok yesterday the chief of police was shot dead.

Odessa, June 11.—Since the commencement of the repatriation of the troops which took part in the war with Japan, 152,000 men, including the Russian prisoners from Japan, have been landed here and distributed throughout the interior of the country. The most stringent precautions were observed during the whole period in order to prevent the slightest intercourse between the returning troops and the townspeople, in consequence of fears of mutinous demonstrations, as it was undeniable that the troops coming home were largely disaffected. The spirit of disaffection was even more noticeable among the officers than in the men. The former frankly expressed the opinion that if parliament can hold its own until the spring it will be able to count on the army to support its demands.

Parents!

Give your children the opportunity to improve themselves during the summer vacation by taking piano, violin or vocal lessons at the Bradbury School of Music.

Come Up Where You Belong.

Perhaps you know why you fail in the plans for money, fame and position.

Some Don't.

Just why the brain does not produce practical money making results is a puzzle to many men.

Strong, healthy, natural brains can be made from food, and good brains can work keenly when they have their proper food.

Unsuccessful brains often come from improperly selected food.

A DISTINCT IMPROVEMENT in mental power will follow in a week or ten days, when the brain-building food is used twice a day.

Grape-Nuts

There are well established and very clearly understood reasons for these sure results from the change in food.

You can make Money, Position, Fame if you have the kind of Brain that works that way.

There's a Reason.

Mrs. J. L. Washburn returned Saturday from the biennial meeting at St. Paul, and a number of women prominent throughout the country in federation and club work returned as her guests. Mrs. Sarah Platt-Decker of Colorado, president of the General Federation, and her daughter, Miss Platt, Mrs. E. L. Buckwalter of Springfield, Ohio, president of the Ohio state federation; Mrs. Henry Ward of Chicago, one of the biennial committee and a member of the Women's club of Chicag; Mrs. Welch of Fergus Falls, Mrs. W. B. Mitchell of St. Cloud; Mrs. Phillip Moore, vice president of the General Federation and president of national collegiate alumni and Mrs. Robinson, president of the Louisville, Ky., Women's club, are Mrs. Washburn's house guests.

Saturday at noon Mrs. Washburn was hostess at luncheon at the Kitchi Gammi club in honor of her guests. Beside the visiting ladies, covers were laid for Mrs. R. N. Marble, Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, Mrs. C. M. Rice, Miss Virginia Morris and Mr. Washburn.

Mrs. Washburn entertained at luncheon today at her home at Woodland and beside her house guests she entertained Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour, Mrs. T. K. Hawkes and Mrs. L. J. Hopkins. This afternoon a tea was held and a large number of local club women were invited out informally to meet the visiting guests.

The guests were members of Pythian Sisters, Gate City Temple, No. 10. After a musical program a guessing game was played, and the favors were won by Mrs. May Cutliffe and Mrs. Perrett, and the consolation prize went to Mrs. B. Kruschke. The guests were:

Home Wedding.

A pretty home wedding took place Saturday afternoon when Miss Edna Whiteside and Harvy Snyder were married at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. James F. Murphy, of 11 West Second street. The wedding service was read at 3:30, Saturday afternoon, by Rev. Baxter Waters of the First Christian church. The rooms were prettily decorated in palms, ferns and red roses. The bride was attended by Miss Mayme Johnson of Superior, and the best man was Benjamin A. Black. The bride wore a pretty gown of gray voile and a picture hat. She carried white roses. The maid of honor wore a dainty gown of white and carried pink roses. After the ceremony an informal reception was held, Mrs. James Watt and Mrs. William Bradley of Port Arthur assisting about the rooms.

Mr. and Mrs. Snyder left for a wedding trip. They will return to this city, where they will be at home.

As Serpolette.

The Duluth friends of Miss Katchen Geist will be interested in the following notice by the St. Paul Dispatch of her appearance in the role of "Serpolette" in the opera "The Chimes of Normandy," which was presented Friday and Saturday of last week by local talent at St. Paul. The Dispatch says:

"Of the principals Miss Katchen Geist carried the leading feminine role of 'Serpolette' with marked vocal and artistic ability and an enunciation well nigh perfect.

"Miss Geist has a voice of surpassing clarity and sweetness, and she used it to good effect in her solos, 'I May Be Princess,' 'Now Look at This,' 'Call Me Serpolette,' and the Norman drinking song.

"As the mischievous village gossip, the dainty little lady sang and danced her way into the hearts of the audience."

ITCHING PAINFUL SORES ON HANDS

Suffered for a Long Time Without Relief—Had Three Doctors and Derived No Benefit—One Doctor Was Afraid to Touch Them—Soreness Disappeared and Hands Now Smooth After Application of

CUTICURA SOAP AND CUTICURA OINTMENT

"For a long time I suffered with sores on the hands which were itching, painful, and disagreeable. I had three doctors and derived no benefit from any of them. One doctor said he was afraid to touch my hands, so you must know how bad they were; another said I never could be cured; and the third said the sores were caused by the dipping of my hands in water in the dye-house where I work. I saw in the papers about the wonderful cures of the Cuticura Remedies and procured some of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. In three days after the application of the Cuticura Ointment my hands began to peel and were better. The soreness disappeared, and they are now smooth and clean, and I am still working in the dye-house.

"I strongly recommend Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment to any one with sore hands, and I hope that this letter will be the means of helping other sufferers. Very truly yours, Mrs. A. E. Maurer, 2340 State St., Chicago, Ill., July 1, 1905."

Women's Mannish Shirts

Checked silk is always in good taste.

A polka dot blouse is fetching

Smartest of the season's mannish shirts for women are those of silk and flannel in vogue for tennis. Made in a most comfortable style with loose open neck and half sleeves, they form one of the most practical of the season's models and are universally becoming. Made up in any one of several seasonable materials, they are in demand among the younger set of women particularly.

These shirts are only one exhibition of the tendency to get away from the more fussy waist and get back to the simpler and more masculine style formerly in vogue when the shirt waist first came into fashion. Lingerie waists are manifestly unsuitable for the strenuous action required in playing either tennis or golf, and the new shirts have come in in response to the need for a comfortable and at the same time becoming garment.

One of the nattiest waists of this type is made from black and white checked silk, with a soft Byronic collar of black and cuffs of the same material. Polka dots have also come to the fore again this season, and are particularly stylish for these waists.

Another pretty design recently seen in the shops is made of white flannel, striped with black, with a pocket at the left side and a yoke at the back. These are cuffs for links and the collar is made detachable. A pretty soft silk tie is worn with this garment. In white linen there are ever so many pretty styles, all made up after the same model, some with detachable linen collars and with cuffs for links or the half sleeves which is most deservedly popular this summer for waists of this sort.

A very smart tennis shirt of linen has embroidery worked down the front plait and fine tucks beyond. Another tennis waist is made with a French back and side pleated front with collar and cuffs in either blue or pink linen. In some, the collars are slightly flared with roll cuffs and a pocket flap of either pink or blue ribbon. Those made with the French back are extremely pretty and serve to give an appearance of breadth to a slight figure.

THE BARONESS

By L. A. Harker.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The baron had gone to Hamburg. The baroness, for some reason known only to herself, chose to visit her newly made friends, Lord and Lady Watcliffe, in Wensley Dale.

The baroness had never been in England before. She found the Yorkshire climate both cold and damp that September. Her host and hostess were kind and amiable, but it was not to see them that she had come. In her letter of invitation Lady Watcliffe had said:

"I hardly like to ask you to come to Willansbe. It is only a small house, and we have no house party; our only other guest will be Prof. Ray. I think you said you had met him some years ago. Still, if you will venture, and if you still feel the desire you expressed in Paris to see our Yorkshire moors—know how charmed we shall be to see you. The heather is at its best now, so try to give us a day or two."

So the baroness went to Willansbe, and very dull she found it. However, as she was generally bored, she did not resent the ennui as do more happily constituted mortals. Besides, she had come for a reason; and she could wait.

"It is very sad about Prof. Ray," said Lady Watcliffe. "He looks dreadfully ill, but he is so plucky he won't give in. You know he loves this part of the world, and all the country folk love him. He comes here every year, generally to us."

The baroness shivered. "What is the matter with him?" she asked.

"No one knows exactly, but it's something incurable, fatal. He looks so ill, but he never talks about himself and is the best company in the world; we are devoted to him."

"Do you know his wife?" asked the baroness, and here was a note of real interest in her voice.

"Not well. I've met her; she's little and young, and gay, and the children are beautiful!"

Lady Watcliffe sighed the sigh of the childless woman.

"Have you ever visited them?"

"Once. They have only a little house, such a pretty little gabled house. They are the cheeriest people and find something to laugh at all day long."

The baroness asked no more questions; she found it difficult to conceive of a menage where people found life so amusing.

Three days later Rupert Ray and the baroness were sitting on a big round stone in the middle of a heather-covered moor.

The sun shone and bees were busy in the heather. The baroness had taken off her long gloves and her white hands lay idly folded in her lap. Her tall sunshade, with its onyx handle, lay on the heather beside her; she had taken off her hat, and the sunshine glinted on the golden threads in her admirably dressed bronze-colored hair.

She sat looking at her own pretty hands. Now, when the baroness looked down you felt she could not possibly assume a prettier attitude. Her eyelashes were so long and so curly. But when she looked up, especially if she looked at you, it was plain that her greatest charm lay in the eyes themselves—so big, and blue, and childlike.

Rupert Ray turned himself, regarding her with unfeigned pleasure. "It is good to see you again Rosie; you are prettier than ever!"

"Ah! you have not forgotten the little, funny name! Did you think that the schoolgirl you knew would grow into—me?" and she turned her white hands inwards to emphasize the "me."

"You were hardly a schoolgirl at Capri. You impressed me as a very clever young lady, indeed. By Jove! though, how time does fly! ten years ago!"

"It may fly for you!" pouted the baroness; "it creeps and crawls for some people. Do you know," she continued slowly, "that I was rather in love with you at Capri?"

"I know that I was more than 'rather' in love with you."

"Ah!" said the baroness, and there was a word of meaning in that "Ah!"

Rupert Ray laughed. "And how was a wretched student at the Neapolitan Stazione to aspire to you—you, with your ten languages, and your eyes, and your charms? Besides, I had an immense respect and affection for your parents. You see, they trusted me and treated me like a son; and there was no use in sighing for the moon!"

"You certainly did not sigh long. Another eighteen months and you had married the little English girl who wrote you serious letters. I remember—is she still serious?"

Rupert gazed into space over the heathery moor, with a look in his eyes that the baroness hardly understood, as he answered: "Serious' hardly describes her. She was only 15 when you used to hear of her."

"Have you her photograph?" she asked, curiously.

He took a worn old pocketbook from his breast pocket. In it was the photograph of a large-eyed little girl. "It is the only one I have, but it is very like her still."

She looked at it in silence for some moments; then she said, "There are more photographs in the case; are they your children? May I see?"

He gave her the case, and she looked at the portraits, one after another. As she closed it she said gently:

"You are very happy?"

"I have been very happy."

The baroness looked up quickly, his tone was so sad.

"Do you love your boys very much?" she asked, with a little catch in her voice.

Again Rupert Ray looked into space over the heathery moor, and again there came into his kind, gray eyes that expression which the baroness could not understand.

"My life is full of shadows," she said, wearily; "nothing is real."

"Life itself is very real," said Rupert "and death."

For a minute or two there was no sound but the hum of the bees of the heather. Then he turned to her, saying:

"Listen to me, Rosie. We are old friends, and you are a brave woman; you shall face a reality. In six months I shall be dead. I know exactly how it will be. I shall do my work as long as I can; then there will be an operation and I shall die. I do and shall suffer a good deal of pain. I don't want to die. The world is a very pleasant place to me; but it has got to be. I have come to see this dear Dale country for the last time; to see all the kindly country folk I love for the last time; and you, Rosie, unexpectedly, once more. This, that is coming, is a reality."

He held out his hand to her, the strong, kind right hand that was now so thin. She placed her own little white one in it and they sat silent.

She thought of the little house where life was so amusing—the little house soon to be so sorrowful. She thought of the round-faced boys and of the wife of the years she had never seen. Then she thought of herself, and how through all these Ray was in the world, so strong and cheery and dependable. She remembered how he had comforted her at Capri, when her mother was pronounced hopelessly ill by nursing nuns; how loyal he had been to that mother through all the many chances that threw them together.

Suddenly her eyes grew hard, and she said:

"At least you have lived your life; you have a thousand tender memories to lose. Since my parents died I have nothing. My brother is in Siberia and the baron is at Homburg, wither I follow him tomorrow. You are the best off; though you leave so much, you have got it to leave."

She rose as she spoke; then suddenly falling on her knees beside him, laid her face down on his hands. "Pity me, too, a little," she whispered. "I am so lonely."

They walked over the moor together and talked of old times.

When they came to the rocky path down which they could only walk in single file, Rupert went first. Presently the baroness exclaimed: "You ought not to carry a geological hammer in your coat pocket, really—it makes your coat hang so badly, one side lower than the other; all your coats are the same!"

Rupert laughed. "It isn't the hammer, it's the boys; they hang onto my pocket when I have books to carry, and can't give a hand to each."

He did not hear her behind him and, turning his head, saw that she was sitting on the steep side of the bank with the tears running down her face as she thought of the little hands that so soon would have no coat to hold.

He stood just below her in the steep path.

"You are just the same, Rosie; you have the tenderest heart in the world!"

She smiled at him through her tears and shook her head. "You have galvanized it into life for a moment, but it is dead; I have lived with the baron eight years—you do not know the baron!"

Rupert held out his hand to her in silence to help her down the steep little path. There is silence that is more helpful than speech, and the baroness understood.

Rupert Ray is dead, and in the little gabled house, where there was so much laughter, there is a silence as of tears.

The baroness sheds no tears, but she has not forgotten.

What Retail Markets Offer

Gooseberries, 15 cents a quart.

Crookneck squash, 15 cents each.

Real green onions, 3 bunches for 5 cents.

Veal steak, 20 cents a lb.

"Gooseberry fool" is one of the picturesque and English-novel exclusive delicacies that one has always enjoyed the sound of, but as far as intimate acquaintance was concerned one depended entirely on book knowledge, for greater familiarity of gooseberry fool never was realized. For this was not one of the delicacies that mother used to make, or is making now. "Gooseberry fool" has, however, an enticing sound, and promises satisfaction and indigestion at the same time. But really nobody ever expects to taste gooseberry fool. One thinks of it every year when the gooseberries come into the market, but the person who regulates the meals never enthuses very much, so gooseberry fool will probably be one of the unreached longings which discipline one through this land of sunshine and cherry pie.

The golden summer squashes are getting cheaper, the slender, pretty things being now purchasable at 2 for 25 cents. The green onions have nice little knobs on the ends now, and are not the straight uninteresting stalks that the first ones always are, and the other things of the market are desirable.

PREPARE FOR KIRMESS.

Elaborate Arrangements Making for Gaudy Event This Week.

For the Kirmess which will be presented at Lincoln Park auditorium, on Wednesday and Thursday nights, elaborate preparations are being made. There will be over 100 dancers in the cast, and it is expected that it will be kaleidoscopic as to color. The costumes are said to be rich, and in many combinations, superb. Prof. Speedy, who is putting the affair on, says that he has never in all his experience had a more flexible class, nor has he ever been favored with better talent. A huge stage has been erected in the auditorium, and will allow the affair to be presented in a manner which is fitting the undertaking.

The different nations of the world will be represented, and their national dances will be given, including jigs, reels, flings, cake walks, songs and dances, flag dance, wooden shoe dance, and fancy and grotesque dancing of all descriptions. Miss Alice Cooley will represent the Goddess of Liberty, and will also sing. Charles O. Applehagen will also be heard in solo work.

"GO SLOW," SAYS POPE

"May you have no collisions and no accidents. God bless you, but go slow."

EFFECTIVE INSPECTION

Of Canned Meats Will be Had, Burns Tells Commons.

London, June 11.—In the house of commons today, John Burns, president of the local government board, supplementing his reply to William Field, National member of the St. Patrick's division of Dublin and president of the Irish Cattle Traders and Stock Owners' association, June 9, on the subject of canned foods, said the local government board is doing everything that can be done by administrative action "in this serious matter," representations, he said, have been made to the foreign office in regard to effective inspection in the country from which the largest supply of canned meats come. "In the event of this being insufficient," he continued, "I shall ask the house to grant further, and if necessary, legislative powers to the board. I rely with confidence upon the house granting it such authority."

BOB DUNN GETS HERE

Princeton Man Arrives on Afternoon Train for Convention.

Says Odin Halden Will be Nominated on First Ballot.

The afternoon trains brought in another bunch of delegates to the Republican state convention and quite a crowd of hangers-on. The delegates are not coming in bodies, but straggling in by twos and threes and a good many of the advance guard of the various delegations will not express an opinion until the whole delegation arrives here and holds a conference. In the meantime, the ones who came in advance are nosing around and attempting to sound sentiment for a good many are uninstructed and are trying to find out what the other fellow thinks about it. Therefore the best talkers among those who have opinions and know the shrewdest way to advance them are having considerable weight.

Probably the most notable arrival this afternon was Robert C. Dunn of Princeton, former state auditor and gubernatorial nominee of the last Republican convention. Mr. Dunn, both in stature and prominence loomed up as prominent as a battleship in a fog in the crowd at the St. Louis lobby. Alike those who opposed him and those who suported him two years ago hustled over to grasp his hand and tell him they were glad to see him.

Mr. Dunn would say nothing for the present in a political way. To The Herald he said:

"I have nothing to say just now, but I hope to be able to give you some information in a short time. But I will tell you one thing, which is not exactly fresh information now, for it is quite well known—and that is that Odin Halden of Duluth will be nominated for state auditor on the first ballot. You mark what I say—on the first ballot."

Accompanying Mr. Dunn is James A. Peterson of Minneapolis who managed Mr. Dunn's campaign for the nomination in Hennepin county two years ago. In the party also were the following from Minneapolis:

P. S. Nellson, Former Representative John C. Sweet and J. E. Mellander.

Shortly after James A. Peterson arrived at the hotel he and City Clerk Lydiard of Minneapolis met. They had quite a lively passage of words for about ten minutes and it was thought by those who observed it that there might be a physical mixup before the matter ended. They happen to be on opposite sides of the fence politically in Hennepin county and there is evidently anything but a friendly feeling between them. Mr. Peterson seemed to be the more belligerent of the two, while Mr. Lydiard seemed to be taking a conciliatory attitude. Mr. Peterson was heard to remark:

"I'm onto you; some others may not be, but I'm on. Now that's all there is about it."

There was a lively reply, and Mr. Peterson walked away. The affair was observed by quite a number from a distance.

• • •

Among others who arrived on the afternoon trains were E. K. Whiting of Owatonna, A. M. Hayes of Hastings, James Hunter and W. J. Milne of Faribault, P. C. Koerner and his son, August F. Koerner, of Litchfield, the latter a candidate for the nomination for state treasurer; L. S. Briggs of Princeton, and W. J. Brown of Warren, also Swan B. Molander of St. Paul.

State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson arrived from St. Paul on the afternoon train and registered at both the Spalding and St. Louis hotels. He had nothing to say concerning the political situation, further than that he expected to land the nomination for state auditor Wednesday.

"There is nothing new to be said," Mr. Iverson remarked. "We came up here intending to win out, and I haven't any doubt that we will be able to do so. That is all I have to say in regard to the matter."

NO LEGISLATION IS NECESSARY

There is Sufficient Now to Govern Reservoir System.

Washington, June 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede is making some progress on questions involving the administration of the reservoir system on the upper Mississippi. The rivers and harbors committee has concluded that no additional legislation is necessary and the questions involved have been referred to the war department, it being believed that under the existing law there is ample authority for the secretary of war to act to prevent the floods complained of.

The question of the cut-off ditch at Aitkin has been referred to the rivers and harbors board of the war department. This proposition was investigated by the war department in 1899 and surveys made. Under that report it was estimated it would cost $1,250,000 to construct the ditch. Citizens of Aitkin, however, are of the opinion that $100,000 would be sufficient. If this be true, Represestative Bede hopes to get an appropriation of such an amount, possibly at this session, certainly at the next.

MUST USE JUDGMENT

Government Inspectors Are Not to License Incompetent Persons.

No Examination Required for Licenses to Run Gasoline Boats.

Although no examination of the applicants for licenses to run gasoline or electric boats of fifteen tons and under can be required by the steamboat inspectors under the revised statutes, Supervision Inspector General George Uhler of the steamboat inspection service at Washington, has made a ruling that gives the inspectors discretionary power in the matter of issuing licelses. The inspectors are directed to refuse to grant the licenses unless reasonably assured by personal knowledge or otherwise that they are not licensing absolute incompetency.

At the present time there are a number of applications on file for gasoline boat licenses at the office of Captains Mongahan and Chalk, the local inspectors, but as they have not yet received the special forms required by law they have issued none.

The matter has been taken up by the local inspectors with John D. Sloane, of Dubuque, Iowa, supervising inspector of Fifth district, and Supervising Inspector Uhler's instruction to Mr. Sloane are as follows:

"I have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 4th inst., referring to section 4425, revised statutes, and in reply to the inquiries in regard thereto, you are advised that under the amendment to section 4426, revised statutes, no examination whatever, and no certificate as to visual examination (color blindness) can be required of an applicant for a license to operate a 'motor boat of 15 tons or less carrying passengers for hire,' and according to the law, the license must be passed out simply upon application.

"Notwithstanding this, I shall insist that no license be granted unless the local inspectors are reasonably assured, either from personal knowledge or otherwise, that we are not licensing absolute incompetency.

"A special form of license is now being prepared for this class of navigators, and when completed the local officers will be supplied. A license as either master, pilot, mate or engineer cannot be issued for this purpose, and the license for these operators must be on the new special form.

"Motor boats of 15 tons or less are not required to be inspected, neither are the owners or agents required to make affidavit regarding life preservers, signal lights, whistles and fog bells, and this service has no authority whatever to restrict the number of passengers on any vessel or than a steam vessel."

MODERNITY IN CHINA.

Kansas City Journal: Modernity is reported to be making strides in China, but it is not especially evident in the imperial decrees. Here is a recent one:

"Liu Yung-ching, the provincial commander-in-chief of Kianpei, has memorialized the throne that the rivers in his jurisdiction have kept quiet; and the throne has felt grateful for the peacefulness of the rivers; therefore, the throne dedicates five sticks of Tibetan incense each through the said Liu Yung-ching to all the temples of the god of rivers to thank him for their protection."

Pineapples in Their Prime for Making Preserves

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Preserving Pineapples.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Kindly let me know how to put up pineapples. I don't want jam or marmalade. I would appreciate an early reply, as I am about to move and pineapples are now so reasonable. Oblige. MRS. S. A.

With Pineapples Plentiful and Cheap.

Pineapples should be preserved in quite a heavy syrup, three-quarters of a pound of sugar being used for every pound of the fruit. Measure after the pineapples has been peeled, sliced, cut into cubes or shredded, as you prefer to have it. The choice of Singapore pines that come canned in heavy syrup are cut in slices about half an inch thick, with the core cut out in circular shape. This may be done, using an ordinary apple corer. In peeling the apple use a silver knife or else a small, keen edged French boning knife, which enables one to work rapidly. The acid of the pine is so strong that it becomes contaminated with the flavor of the steel if one is too deliberate in her movements. Dip the knife frequently in cold water during the cutting process. Put the prepared pineapple in a stone jar and cover with sugar in layers. When all the pineapples are prepared put a cover on the jar and let it stand in the cellar or any cold place until the following morning. By that time the juice will have completely dissolved the sugar and a clear syrup will have covered the fruit. Put the fruit and syrup in the preserving kettle (never use tin), bring slowly to the boiling point, skim and simmer gently until tender but not mushy. Take up into cans that have been rolled in hot water and seal at once. A dessert spoonful of brandy added to each can just before sealing is deemed a great improvement by many, while it adds to the certainty of the fruit's keeping well.

Canned Pineapple Without Cooking.

While I have never tried this myself, friends have recommended it most highly and I shall use it this year.

Peel sweet sugar loaf pines, core and shred. Take equal parts pineapple and sugar, mix well in a stone jar and let them stand over night. The next morning put into sterilized cans, fill to overflowing and seal. This is said to give the pines a fresher and better taste than when cooked.

Pineapple Syrup.

This makes a delicious water ice and is better for flavoring than fresh pineapple. Put three pounds loaf sugar in a granite kettle over the fire. Beat the whites of two eggs and add to them two cups clear water. Pour over the sugar and set over the fire to boil until clear. Remove and cool. Pare and grate enough pineapple to make a quart of juice, and strain into the syrup. Boil ten minutes, then bottle. Cover the corks with melted wax.

Recipe for Chafing Dish.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly give me a recipe for chicken livers which can be prepared in a chafing dish in the presence of guests. Thanking you in advance. Yours truly, MRS. T. B. G.

Chicken Livers.

Mince one slice of bacon into small pieces and cook five minutes with two tablespoonfuls butter. Skim out the bacon, add a teaspoonful of chopped onion and cook until a light yellow (about five minutes). Now add half a dozen chicken livers creamed and separated and toss and cook five minutes. Add two tablespoonfuls flour, mix thoroughly, then add one cupful of brown stock or beef extract dissolved in hot water, a teaspoonful lemon juice and a quarter cup sliced mushrooms. Cook two moments, sprinkle with fine chopped parsely and serve.

Chicken Livers and Mushrooms.

For one pound each mushrooms and chicken livers, put a piece of butter larger than an egg into the blazer with the chicken livers and cook ten minutes from the time they begin to cook. Add one pint of cream and a pound of mushrooms, discarding most of the stems. Cook ten minutes after the cream begins to boil. Add one tablespoonful flour dissolved in a little cold milk. If the cream is very heavy it needs but half as much flour. Boil up a moment longer, adding salt and pepper to taste. Serve on toast.

Chicken Livers With Bacon.

Clean the livers, carefully removing the gall bag. Have in readiness a half dozen slices of bacon cut thin, and dividing the livers into as many portions, wrap each one in a slice of bacon, fastening with a small wooden skewer or toothpick. Lay carefully into the hot blazer, and cook until the bacon is brown, turning frequently.

Chicken Livers With Olive Sauce.

Clean the livers, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and dredge lightly with flour. Put a tablespoonful of butter in the blazer and brown the livers. Take up and keep hot while you prepare the sauce. Brown two tablespoonfuls of butter in the pan, and three tablespoonfuls flour, and when browned, pour in gradually one cup brown stock of beef extract dissolved in hot water. Season highly with salt and pepper, add ten olives from which the stones have been removed, cook three minutes and pour about the livers.

FIERCE BATTLES.

New York Times: On the British steamship St. Andrew, from Antwerp, came one of the largest cargoes, and without doubt the worst-tempered cargo of wild animals ever landed in New York. There were seventy-eight cages of animals in the hold and on the decks of the big liner, and the beasts were ugly all the way over, especially since last Friday, from which time until their arrival in New York two days later there was not a morsel of meat.

There were fights all the way over between the beasts, an elephant killing a puma, a lion killing his mate, and a Russian wolf committing suicide after having slain his cage mate.

The fight between the wolves was the most desperate of all. It started soon after sundown on May 2, and raged with such fury that the keepers were unable to get near enough to part the beasts, one of whom finally became so desperate that it actually jammed its way through the bars, which had been forced apart by the beasts in their terrific encounter.

Once out of the cage, the maddened animal, snarling and howling, started up the companionway leading to the quarters of the trainers. Ten trainers followed it, prodding it with spears and trying to drive it back, but the animal was not to be controlled, and, once on deck, made a wild dash, whither it knew not, and landed in the sea.

The next fight took place the following day between the lions. The male fell out with his mate, and before the trainers knew what was up the lion and lioness were fighting viciously. For fully half an hour the beasts roared and fought, and then the lioness began to give in. Ten minutes later she was dead. Her mate stood over her triumphant.

He put up another fierce fight when the keepers pulled the carcass out of the cage. The keepers were too much for him, but not before two of the ten men that it took to get the dead body of his mate out of the cage had been injured. One of them had a piece of the calf of his leg bitten out, while the other received a vicious blow from a lion that was in the adjoining cage.

Next came a fight between a baby elephant and a puma. In the storm the puma got out of the cage and walked to the part of the hold where the elephants were tied. He picked out the baby elephant as his prey, and made a leap for her. The elephant was ready and caught him around the neck with her trunk. Then she calmly braced herself and choked the puma to death. This ended the finish fighting, but there would have been a lot more had not the trainers been on the alert and stopped further trouble by separating the animals the moment any of them showed ill temper.

Friday the meat gave out, and from that time until the ship arrived at her berth in the North river three days later, such a howling, roaring, and trumpeting as made life almost unbearable aboard the St. Andrew has seldom been equaled on an animal-laden ship at sea. Day and night the trainers were always on the watch to prevent the beasts killing one another in their frenzy, as a result of their hunger, and it was not until they had been fed on the ship's arrival that a semblance of order was restored in the cages on board the St. Andrew.

Among the animals, all of which are destined for Bostock's show at Coney Island, were a herd of elephants, seventy-eight lions, thirty-six tigers, including one the press agent declares is the biggest Bengal tiger in captivity; fifteen Great Dane dogs, fifteen hyenas, several cages of leopards, pumas and monkeys, seven chimpanzees, one of them a trained beast of unusual intelligence; jaguars and scores of other beasts.

Accompanying the animals were thirty trainers, including ten women, one of the women being in charge of a group of fifteen small bears, whose performance is described as comical; every one of them is reported to be a clown beast of the first rank. There is also a sacred bull, tattooed or spotted otherwise, from India.

Three lion cubs, all born on the voyage, died in mid-ocean.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Prices Go Off on More Favorable Weather in America.

Flax is Dull in Duluth and Prices Are Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 11.—More favorable weather for crops almost everywhere, except Nebraska, caused wheat to close weaker in all the American markets except New York, today. The July option in New York was unchanged and the September option 1/4c higher. The rumor coming from Liverpool that the Russian government was about to prohibit the export of breadstuffs caused a firmness abroad and during the sessions of the American markets, but the declines came at the close here, nevertheless. The world's shipments of wheat were about 580,000 bus., less than the estimate. Liverpool closed 1/4d to 3/8d higher, Paris and Antwerp unchanged, Berlin 1 1/8c higher and Budapest 1/2c lower.

The July option closed 1/2c lower in Duluth, 1/2-5/8c in Chicago, 7/8c in Minneapolis, 5/8c in St. Louis, 1c in Kansas City and 3/4c in Winnipeg. The September option closed 1/2c lower in Duluth, 5/8c in Chicago, 7/8c in Minneapolis, 1c in St. Louis and 5/8-3/4 lower in Kansas City. The October option closed 1/2c lower in Winnipeg.

Corn was stronger in Chicago, the July option closing 1/8-1/4c up. Corn closed 3/4d higher to 1/4d lower in Liverpool. July oats closed 1/4c higher in Chicago.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week of last year were as follows:

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago—Wheat—Traders kept close to the basis today. Both buyers and sellers were afraid of what the government report might contain. This report was wired here at the most convenient possible moment, about ten minutes before the close of the market. It showed a condition of 83 for winter wheat, and 93 for spring wheat, with only 38,000 acres increase in the area of spring crop. It is probable that the trade in a general way has discounted the report down to about 85 for winter and 95 for spring condition. The official figures, falling off on both crops are naturally constructed as bullish. The report goes very far to justify the bullish state reports which the trade has been receiving of late. Expectation of these crop figures made the trade very nervous all day. Longs found it difficult to sell on the swells, and shorts could not buy much without causing a rally. The higher Liverpool cable, the decrease of 1,000,000 bushels in the visible supply, the conflicting crop reports from Kansas, Nebraska and elsewhere received little attention, the trade waiting all day for the Washington report. If anything occurs to give the market a moderate set-back we think wheat will be a buy again.

Corn futures had a range of about 1/2c for the day, and closed firm at a fractional advance. Receipts of 475 cars were followed by a smaller estimate for Tuesday of 406 cars. The visible supply increase was so small as to be no figurement to the bears. There was a good decrease on passage. Some adverse reports on the growing crop were received from the West. The trade anticipates trouble for this crop before the harvest.

Oats—The official report gives the average condition of oats at 86. This figure is not as low as generally expected, because of the very bad private reports.

Dennis, Chicago: I am looking for a loss in the winter wheat crop at harvest time as compared with last year, about as follows: Kansas, 20,000,000; Nebraska, 8,000,000; Michigan, 7,000,000; Missouri, 5,000,000; Ohio, 4,000,000; Indiana, 3,000,000; Illinois, 4,000,000; Kentucky, 2,000,000; New York, 3,000,000; Pennsylvania, 2,000,000; Maryland, 2,000,000; Oregon, 6,000,000; total, 68,000,000. Oklahoma will probaly have 8,000,000 and California 4,000,000 bushels more than last year, Texas a little less, Indian Territory about the same and other states about the same as last year. This would give us easily fifty millions less winter wheat than last year. Everybody seems to be forgetting, too, that the winter wheat acreage is smaller than last year. Whatever gain in acreage there will be shown now in the spring wheat will be lost to them by abandoned acreage in the Red River valley and elsewhere from excessive moisture and by failure to seed land that was already reported to the authorities as seeded when reports went in. The spring wheat crop of 1905 was practically taken care of by the domestic demands and what foreign business we have had, no matter what the price. The probability of harvesting as much spring wheat as last year on such freaky weather conditions as have existed and will exist the balance of this season is asking something unreasonable.

The Cotton Market.

New York, June 11.—The cotton market opened strong at an advance of 1 to 3 points in response to higher cables. Good death and crop advices checked the demand but the market after selling off a point or two firmed up in sympathy with July in New Orleans which sold 14 points above the closing prices of Saturday, while new crops gained about 3@4 points. The local market was firm during the middle of the morning and about 6@9 points higher on covering of srots and a few buying order sfrom New Orleans.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Market Closed Strong With Some Prices Sharply Higher.

Early Strength of St. Paul Gave Trading a Good Tone.

New York, June 11.—Opening prices in the stock market today were below Saturday's closing but the majority of stocks suffered only slightly. Consolidated Gas yielded 2, Colorado Fuel 1 1/4 and Missouri Pacific 1 point. Louisville & Nashville, Baltimore & Ohio, Northern Pacific, Copper and Smelting were off 1/2 to 3/4.

Supporting orders were placed on the market, and St. Paul was bid up 1 1/4 above last week's closing to offset any further sympathetic losses through the 3 1/2-point break in Consolidated Gas. These tactics rallied the market to a small fraction above Saturday's final figures, after which speculation became quiet and steady until there was a rather precipitate decline in Reading from 142 1/8 to 140 3/4. Other stocks gave way again to about where they opened at.

Speculation was too narrow to admit of much independent action, and the result was the entire list was swayed by the professional operations in any particular stock. The decline caused by the heaviness of Reading was readily checked and prices brought up to about the best of the morning, when the bull party in St. Paul resumed their buying and put it up 3 points to 173 3/4. Anaconda improved 2, Locomotive and Iowa Central preferred 1 3/8, Illinois Central 1 3/8 and People's Gas 1 1/4. Consolidated Gas rallied over 5 points from the lowest and Reading made up all of its loss. Bonds were steady at noon.

Very little stock was offered and stocks for which there was the slightest inquiry sold higher. This was noticeably the case for Reading, Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper. St. Paul hovered above 179 and Delaware & Hudson made one of its characteristic advances of 7 points on a few transactions. Other advances reached 1 to 1 1/4 in Union Pacific, Colorado Southern, Colorado Fuel and Republic Steel.

Conditions in the stock were especially altered late in the afternoon. Northwestern gained 2, Colorado Fuel 1 3/4, New York Central 1 3/8 and Pennsylvania and Reading 1, while Hocking Valley lost 3.

Railroads operating in the wheat territory were bought heavily after the crop bulletin, especially Atchison and the Hill stocks. Atchison gained 1; Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific, 2 1/4. Moderate advances occurred also among various other stocks, but the general improvement was soon checked by realizing orders in Reading and St. Paul. In the final dealings, the market stiffened again and closed firm.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong, prices showing general advances and in some cases sharply up from Saturday. Pronounced strength early in St. Paul gave an excellent tone to balance of list, and the government report on grain was construed as bullish on stocks. The action of market seems to be a natural rally from the depression of Friday and Saturday, helped along by free circulation of bull tips, and especially in St. Paul. The character of the market seems unchanged. Market seems like a scalping one.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been decidedly strong today. There was not much activity, but the buying was persistent and apparently of good character. The government crop report, which was the important development of the day, was favorable. The market closed strong, with most stocks at their best prices and showing promise of further bullish activity tomorrow. Money remained easy and routine news was favorable.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market opened quiet but very dull. The trading was mostly professional and commission houses had few orders. Later there was a little bidding up and prices strengthened. In the afternoon, after the crop report was published, there were further gains, and the market continued steady and strong until the close. We look for rather a dull market for the rest of the week.

BONANZA CIRCLE STOCKS

Telephones, Duluth, 1408; Zenith, 971. HEADQUARTERS. 404-405 Palladio Bldg Duluth, Minnesota.

FRED H. MERRITT

I devote my entire time in buying and selling on commission and guarantee best prices. I confine myself to the most active stocks and make a specialty of large orders.

The Consolidated is the feature again today selling as high as $20.00 with large buying orders in the market at $20, $20.25 and $20.50. The others are all well taken and show considerable signs of immediate advance at least, I think, further decline is improbable under present general excellent conditions.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

Some Expert Criticisms From Classroom of Public Schools.

"It was written by Sir Conan Doyle, who is famous for his neck of making untrue things to look like true."

This bit of original criticism on his peculiar "nack" would probably please Sir Conan if he could read it, says the New York Sun. It was written by an elementary schoolboy in old Greenwich village, who mixed quaint foreign turns of expression with his otherwise excellent English.

"The book in which the Hudson library has its home," he went on, "is the one I am going to speak about. It is a medium sized book, with a dark red color cover. It bears the name Brigadier Gerard. It is the most interesting book I ever read, sad in parts, funny in others. However, there is a mistake and this is that his life is not connected, it only tells of the main exploits."

Here is confirmation of the publisher's theory that the public demands sustained interest and does not care for volumes of short stories. The unhesitating confidence with which the young critic charges up a mistake to Sir Conan is beautiful.

In order to get at the real unbiased literary tastes of the children in the elementary classes Superintendent Leland of the bureau of libraries of the public schools sometimes asks the teachers to allow the children to write compositions on their home reading. No instructions are given to the children. They are simply told to write anything they like about anything they have read at home.

The results Mr. Leland studies to find out what the children really do like, particularly the boys. The girls read more than the boys, and if they read juvenile books at all must perforce read a great many boys' books, since there are fifty times more boys' books than girls' books in existence.

A bunch of thirty-seven of these criticisms came in from the boys in the Eighth grade in one of the Greenwich village schools the other day. Among the thirty-seven there

WEST DULUTH

EVERYONE OUT DOORS

West Duluthians Take Advantage of Pleasant Weather.

Stolen Bait Proves Worthless to a Party of Anglers.

The fine weather of Sunday induced many West Duluthians to spend the day out of doors. Fairmount park received the best patronage it has enjoyed so far this year, and the bay was dotted with launches and row boats. The amateur ball chasers also got active, and a number of well played games were pulled off.

The West Duluth Millers succeeded in walloping the Oak Hall nine to the tune of 5 to 3, a home run by McLellan, with the bases full, deciding the game in favor of the West Duluth aggregation. Manager F. B. Mickiech is anxious for games, and will meet any team in the city, with the possible exception of the White Sox. Peterson and Webber comprised the Millers' battery, and Peterson's pitching was a feature.

The West Duluth longshoremen, though they had no game for yesterday, have organized a team, and are looking for blood. Tommy Robinson has been signed to do the back stop act, and Al White will officiate in the box. Manager William Leech has arrangements under way for games with Cloquet and Merrill & Ring's organization, and is also figuring on a contest with the Universal Millers.

STOLEN BAIT WORTHLESS.

Former Alderman and His Party Have Bad Luck.

William Baldwin is telling with considerable enjoyment the story of one of the parties of fishermen whom the weather induced to journey up the river yesterday. Saturday night. Former Alderman Chesney and a party of friends decided to go up the river next day and fish, and consequently started out to look for bait.

After tearing up a number of sidewalks, and disturbing the surface of the country generally in their fruitless search, they gave up. One of them remembered, however, that Mr. Baldwin had dug a fine can of bait earlier in the day, and when opportunity offered they succeeded in spiriting it away under cover of darkness.

Mr. Baldwin discovered his loss, and soon secured some new worms and went fishing, as he had planned. He secured a fine string during the day, but some avenging providence must have "doped" the stolen worms, for Mr. Chesney and party returned, sunburned and weary, without a fish.

ATTENDANCE WILL BE LARGE

Many High School Students to Recite at the Irving Building.

That the Irving high school will be a flourishing institution next year is no longer a matter of doubt, according to Principal Foster. He expects to receive 100 students in the Freshman class next year, from the Fairmount, Longfellow, Spirit Lake and New Duluth schools, and the grade department of the Irving. This number, with those of the present Freshman class who will return as Sophomores, will make a total of over 150 in the high school department, and the attendance at the building, including the grades, over 1,200. This will tax the capacity of the building to the utmost, and the board of education is already considering the advisability of an addition of two rooms.

The work of the Sophomore year, if carried on as it is at the Central High school, will necessitate the installment of a biological laboratory, and there is great need for a book-keeping room, the upper corridor now being used for that purpose. An addition of at least three members of the faculty will be required in Mr. Foster's opinion, as the present corps had about all it could do this year.

West Duluth Briefs.

While attempting to imitate the daring slides and rescues of the city's fire fighters, Saturday, Robert Peterson of Fifty-seventh avenue west received a bad fall, resulting in a sprained ankle and some bad bruises. The "stunt" was to slide down a rope from the top of a house, the roof representing the loft of the fire-hall, and the rope doing service as the brass rod. Several of the boys had executed the maneuver successfully, but when young Peterson made the attempt, the rope had become frayed on the sharp edge of the house, and broke when he was about twenty feet from the ground.

The West Duluth Republican club will do its share in taking care of the delegates to the Republican convention. The reception committee, headed by George J. Mallory, has been hard at work making arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors.

The excavation for the ovens of the Carbolite plant was completed today, and the last car load of Thomas Lowrie's machinery is ready to be shipped. The company will probably spend $100,000 on the plant before any business can be done.

Jewelry repairing—Hurst, 301 Central.

Henry Solem of Clinton, was in West Duluth Saturday on busines.

John A. Curo has secured a new site for his boathouse and will build in the near future.

Peter Ennit, who has been treated at Graham's hospital, is around town again.

Elmer MacDowell and Henry Graden, who have been employed at Short Line Park erecting the concrete supports for the Northern Power company's cables, have returned.

Mrs. James Hayes of Mora, is spending a few weeks in West Duluth visiting friends.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Plymouth Congregational church, will meet tomorrow afternoon in the church parlors at the corner of Fifty-fourth avenue and Bristol street.

Saturday, the Hill Tops played a double header with the Oneota ball team and won both games, the first by a score of 7 to 1, and the second, 16 to 3. The feature of the first game was Loss' pitching, as he allowed the Oneota aggregation but one hit and struck out twenty-two men.

C. W. Trowell was down from the range yesterday, visiting friends.

Thomas Maloney left yesterday for a week's visit with relatives at La Crosse.

R. G. Wheeler of Montana, was in the city Saturday.

Warren Crofton of Minneapolis, is visiting friends here this week.

Ray Hagland, while racing across the Central Avenue bridge, stubbed his toe on a protruding board, and, falling forward, struck the walk with his face, resulting in a broken nose.

Harry Garbarson is visiting relatives in Chicago.

Mildred Grange, who has been visiting relatives here, left yesterday for her home in Shattuck.

The Zenith Furnace company has installed a new system for keeping the time of the men. Supt. Marris says that it is the first that he has seen which was practical in dealing with the class of laborers employed at the furnace.

Mrs. E. J. Haggerty of Duluth and Miss Nellie J. Haggerty of West Duluth left yesterday for Eau Claire, Wis., where they will visit relatives. They are expected to return in about two weeks.

The Western Curling club is repairing its rink. The roof is being painted, and the whole building given an overhauling. It was feared that the roof would be seriously damaged by rust, but it was found to be in a much better condition than was supposed.

This evening the chief feature of the meeting of the West Duluth Athletic club will be a wrestling match between Richard Johnson and William Little.

Miss Florence Brown, who has been suffering from blood poisoning, caused by an ill-fitting shoe, is much improved. Ada Burnside has returned from Minneapolis, where she has been attending an art school.

HARDWARE AND FURNITURE

At 19th and 21st Avenues West on Superior St. Duluth.

Submarine Service to be Added to Coast Telephone System.

Grand Marais—The telephone system which the United States life saving service has constructed and maintains between Grand Marais and Vermilion point, forty-eight miles to the east along the shore of Lake Superior, is being provided with added improvements.

New long-distance transmitters and receivers of the latest model are being installed at all stations west from Whitefish Point to Grand Marais, adding materially to the efficiency of the communication, of great importance in time of disaster along this stretch of treacherous shore, and in addition the distance between the local station and Lonesome point is to be covered by means of submarine cable, doing away with the present overhead line.

Except for the lack of power boats for the various stations, the lifesaving service along the shore at the east end of Lake Superior is not excelled in equipment anywhere on the great lakes. There is need of power craft, however, espeically so in case of the Grand Marais station, the limits of which extend to the dangerous Sable reef, to the west, where numerous marine mishaps have occurred in the past five years, and for nine miles to the east, and in this respect the service is handicapped.

There are four lifesaving stations between Grand Marais and Whitefish Point—Deer Park, Two Heart, Crisp Point station and the Vermilion Point station. The country between Grand Marais and Whitefish Point is a wilderness, bleak and uninviting.

Ontonagon—The Holt Lumber company has purchased of William McFarlane, of Ontonagon, the white pine, norway and spruce timber upon forty-seven forties of land in Stannard township. The consideration is $30,000 and Mr McFarlane retains the ownership of the land and the balance of the timber. The land is on Middle Branch and Baltimore and is in the vicinity of where the Holt Lumber company is conducting extensive logging operations. The logs will be taken to the company's mill at Oconto.

Munising—Mrs. Owen Riley of Munising, who some years ago secured from the township a road contract which she successfully completed, has secured $2,050 back pension for her five children. These children were sons and daughters of Mrs. Riley's first husband, the late Isaac Mead, to whom at the age of 13 years she was married. The late Mr. Mead was a veteran of two wars—the Mexican and the Civil. The children drew pensions of $2 per month from the government until their mother's marriage to Owen Riley, her present husband. Then the pensions ceased. The mother has secured a reinstatement of this pension and two of the children will receive $2 per month for still another year.

Sault Ste. Marie—The game warden's department has been informed that persons living near the western end of town at the So have been killing robins and other song birds for food. The practice, it is alleged, has been carried on until it is seldom any birds except crows are seen in the vicinity of Algonquin and the up river district. So numerous have the complaints become that the game warden's department is making an investigation and persons discovered violating the laws in this respect will be vigorously prosecuted. Robins seem to be the most desirable as an article of food; at least, they are said to have been killed in large numbers.

ONLY WILD CAT BANKING

Is "Admirable Financing" Praised by Hopkins, Says Tillman.

Washington, June 11.—The Tillman-Hopkins controversy of a few weeks ago, concerning the status of the affairs of the Chicago National bank was revived in the senate today by an inquiry made by Senator Tillman concerning the status of his resolution for an investigation of that bank of which John R. Walsh was president. The inquiry was directed to Senator Aldrich, chairman of finance, before whom the resolution is pending.

Mr. Tillman prefaced his statement by saying that when the resolution last received the attention of the senate, Senator Hopkins had taken exception to his interest in the matter and had used language that was insulting to him. He added that Mr. Hopkins had advanced the remarkable doctrine that because he (Tillman) had admitted that the people of South Carolina had stuffed ballot boxes and hanged negroes for rape, in order to protect their civilization, it was perfectly permissible for the people of Chicago to go on stealing and that he must be stopped from referring to the matter.

He had read a newspaer article which he said showed that the "admirable financing" which Mr. Hopkins had praised so highly had been only "wildcat banking."

FAST TRAIN DERAILED; THREE KILLED, THIRTY HURT

Redbank, N. J., June 11.—The Central railroad of New Jersey's Atlantic flyer, due in New York at 11:30 o'clock, ran into an open switch near here this morning at 12:10. The engine and two cars toppled over and rolled down a ten-foot embankment. The fireman and two other persons were killed. Thirty passengers are reported injured.

ENGINEER INJURED.

Cleveland, June 11.—Eighteen persons on a Cleveland & Southwestern electric car were injured late last night when the car jumped the track at a curve.

NO FURTHER CONTINUANCE

Of Ouster Proceedings Will be Agreed to by Hadley.

St. Louis, June 11.—The hearing of evidence in the Missouri ouster proceedings against the Standard and Waters-Pierce Oil companies was resumed today before Special Commissioner R. A. Anthony. Attorney General Hadley and two assistants arrived last night to take part in the case and will represent the state in the first test case under the railroad maximum freight rate law, which proceedings were begun today before Commissioner Schofield. Eighteen railroads have been cited to appear and the state will select one of which to make a test case.

H. Clay Pierce of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, was expected to be the chief witness at the oil hearing. He is now in New York and when this fact was elicited from General Counsel Johnson for the Waters-Pierce company, who asked for a continuance of the hearing on the ground that Mr. Priest, leading counsel, is ill, Attorney General Hadley sharply declared that he would not consent to a continuance and threatened to have an attachment issued for the appearance of Mr. Pierce.

Attorney General Hadley asserted that the illness of Attorney Priest was made a subterfuge for delay of the hearing. "This hearing has been postponed three times already," declared Mr. Hadley. "First because of the plea of pressing business engagements in New York by Mr. Pierce, second because of the illness of Attorney Charles Nagel; third, because of the illness of Mr. Pierce, and now you want a continuance because of the illness of Judge Priest. When the hearing was postponed because of Pierce's illness he was making a reservation on a train for New York under the name of Stewart and only abandoned the purpose when discovered by opposing parties."

The court inquired when Mr. Pierce would arrive from New York, and Attorney Johnson replied that he would ascertain by telegraph and inform the court this afternoon and a recess was then taken.

JOHN HALEY DIES.

Well Known Duluth Man Passes Away After Long Illness.

John Haley, aged 56 years, died Saturday at St. Mary's hospital of cancer.

Mr. Haley formerly lived at 1919 East Sixth street. He leaves a wife, but no children.

The body was removed to the home of Capt. Martin Cole, his brother-in-law, at 201 East Sixth street, and the funeral will be held from the cathedral tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock. Interment will be made at Calvary cemetery.

ARE INDIFFERENT TO CONFERENCE

South and Central American Republics' Position Annoying.

Washington, June 11.—Many of the South and Central American republics are showing an indifference toward the third peace conference to be held at the Hague next year, which is especially annoying to the United States. Secretary Root was instrumental in bringing about a delay of the Hague conference until next year that it might not conflict with the Pan-American conference at Rio Janeiro, July 21. But Secretary Root's interest in the meeting does not seem to have spurred the Southern republics to participation in the Hague conference, in spite of the protests they voiced when Russia suggested that early this fall would be a good time for the Hague meeting.

Panama has declined from the first to take any part in The Hague conference. Venezuela, Ecuador and Nicaragua have ignored all communications, not even acknowledging the receipt of the original invitations. Bolivia, Guatemala, Salvador and Peru have accepted the invitations, while Brazil, Argentina and Mexico, are also known to have expressed a desire to take part in The Hague deliberations under the prescribed conditions.

JURY FINDS MEAT PACKERS GUILTY OF ACCEPTING CONCESSIONS FROM RAILROADS ON EXPORT SHIPMENTS

Verdict is Against Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Morris Concerns.

Law Only Provides for a Fine, Not Yet Assessed.

Case Against Burlington for Granting Concessions Tried Next.

Kansas City, June 12.—Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy & Co., and the Nelson Morris Packing company were found guilty in the United States district court here this morning of accepting concessions from the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway on export shipments of packing house products.

The case was given to the jury at 10:40. The verdict was returned at 11:40.

Judge Smith McPherson of Red Oak, Iowa, the presiding judge, stated that sentence could not be assessed until the case against the Burlington road, which is charged with granting the concessions to the packers, is concluded. The Burlington's trial will begin this afternoon. The law in the present case provides for a fine only, and not a jail sentence.

After the instructions to the jury by the judge were finished, Alex New and Frank Hagerman for the defendant packers, asked the court to make the following instructions, which were overruled:

1. The jury will return a verdict for defendant.

2. The indictment in this case is insufficient to warrant a finding of guilt against the defendant.

3. The evidence in this case is insufficient to warrant a finding of guilt against defendant.

4. If the shipment in question was a through export shipment to a foreign port in a foreign country, then the verdict should be for defendant.

5. If you fail to find that defendant did some act in the Western district of Missouri, then the verdict should be for the defendant.

6. The fact that the transportation of the shipment was through the Western district of Missouri is not sufficient to vest jurisdiction in this court and the provisions of the act of congress of Feb. 19, 1903 (32 stat. at large, 847) in so far as they purport to authorize a prosecution in any district through which the transportation may have been conducted, is as to this defendant violative of Section 2 of Article 3 of the constitution of the United States and of Article VI of the amendments to said constitution.

Kansas City, June 12.—The cases of the four meat packing companies, charged with accepting rebates, was today given to the jury in the United States district court here. The cases are those of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy & Co., and the Nelson Morris Packing company. They were charged in indictments returned here last December with accepting from the Burlington railroad concessions on shipments from the Kansas City plants to New York for export. The cases were consolidated for trial purposes. The specific

ST. LOUISANS VOTE ON A NEW FREE BRIDGE.

St. Louis, June 12.—A municipal election was held today to decide the question of the issuance of bonds for the building of a free bridge across the Mississippi river to East St. Louis, Ill., the betterment of the fire department and other public institutions. The main issue is the question of a free bridge. The items comprising the bond issue amount to a total of $11,200,000.

NO CHOLERA IN RUSSIA.

Washington, June 12.—The treasury department has sent a letter to the state department announcing the absence of cholera in Russia so far this year and recommending removal of certain restrictions on Russian immigrants at points of embarkation in Europe.

PROGRAM INDORSED

Russ Nobles Approve Government's Stand on Agrarian Matters.

The Conservatives Protest Against Selfish Attitude of Nobility.

St. Petersburg, June 12.—The nobles congress, now in session here, has practically endorsed the government's agrarian program, having declared itself against the forced expropriation of land and proposing only two methods for the relief of the peasants. These are purchases of land through the peasants banks and trans-migration to Siberia, especially commending the latter, and recommending the granting of free land in Siberia, and exemption of taxes for a period of years. The congress also endorsed the government's proposition for a dissolution of the commune system where it is desired. An influential, but small, minority, headed by Count Uvaroff of Saratoff, protested against the selfish attitude of the nobility, urging unvallingly that the large landlords, if they wished to escape from utter ruin, must cede something to the peasantry, and at least consent to the expropriation of surplus estates.

A strong effort is being made by the Moderate Liberals, who are being organized into a new party under the leadership of M. Yermoloff, formerly minister of agriculture, and now a member of the upper house, to induce the emperor and court to attempt to compromise the situation by supplanting the Goremykin ministry with a mixed cabinet chosen from the October party, the party of Democratic reforms, and the Constitutional Democrats.

M. Shipoff, of Moscow; President Mouromtzeff, Prof. Kusmin-Karavieff, Prof. Maxim Korvalesky of Kharkoff and Count Heyden are suggested as the nucleus for such a ministry, but there is no evidence that the emperor is ready to try the experiment. On the contrary the straws point in other directions.

Some of the provincial governors are still openly continuing the campaign to discredit parliament and this morning the decoration of all the officers of the Seminovsky regiment, was announced.

Although the crop reports from the entire western provinces, including Poland, from the Black Sea and from the Gulf of Finland are excellent, the latest reports from the Volga region indicate that Russia will not escape a famine. The harvest in that corner of the empire this year, especially in Kazan, Simbirsk and Samara, threatens, owing to lack of rain, to be a complete failure. This is the region where the peasant agitation is most acute. In spite of the bad showing in the Volga region the government crop report considers that the good condition westward indicates more than an average crop.

CLASSIFICATION OF FROG SKINS

As Freight is Asked of Railroad Men of Louisiana.

New Orleans, June 12.—An unusual question in classifying frogs' skins as freight was asked of freight agents of several railroads in the state by rural agents. The question is whether a frog skin shall be classed with wild animal hides, bird skins, fish or in a class by itself, for which double rates shall be charged. Dealers have had the skins shipped under each of these headings, but so large has become the industry of sending them east for manufacture into covers for women's pocketbooks that more uniformity is demanded. Textile lightness of this commodity has contributed to the confusion in classification.

FIGHT AMONG THEMSELVES

Five Thousand Union Men Go on Strike at St. Louis.

Business Held Up Until the Unions Adjust Difficulties.

St. Louis, June 12.—More than 5,000 union men affiliated with the building trades council are out as a result of the strike begun yesterday and building operations now are limited to structures where stone and brick work has been completed and to frame houses, where it is not necessary to employ stonemasons or bricklayers.

The strike was caused by strained relations between two unions, one being composed of bricklayers and the other of stonemasons and bricklayers. The feeling became so intense that members of one union finally refused to work with any members of the other union. Then a general strike resulted. The question of wages does not enter into the complication and the employers are forced to wait for the unions to adjust their difficulties and resume work.

FLOCK TO OLD HOME

Thousands of Kentuckians on Way to Native State.

Will Participate in Celebration of "Home Coming Week."

Louisville, June 12.—All trains running with extra coaches, a double number of Pullmans and the great majority of them in two and three sections, proved today that Kentuckians from all parts of the United States were flocking back to their native state for the "Home coming week," which will be formally inaugurated at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Thousands of native born and nearly as many more who cannot claim Kentucky as their birthplace, but who are anxious to take part in the festivities have already arrived and within twenty-four hours Louisville will hold the largest crowd ever gathered in the city for any event.

Former Vice-President Stevenson is to speak Friday. He will arrive this evening from Indianapolis, as will ex-Governor Francis of St. Louis, who comes with a large delegation of Kentuckians from Missouri. Ex-Governor Preston H. Leslie of Montana arrived earlier in the day. "The Kentucky Colonels," a marching club is to do much escort duty during the week, made its first appearance today and elicited great applause.

MORE RURAL CARRIERS.

Washington, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Francis S. Walker has been appointed regular, and Eliza B. Walker substitute, rural carrier on route No. 5, at Princeton, Minn.

WESTERNLAND UNDAMAGED.

Philadelphia, June 12.—The American liner Westernland which went aground yesterday at the entrance to the Delaware bay and was floated at midnight, reached here today. The vessel is in good condition having sustained no damage by running on the shoals.

GALVESTON IS ISOLATED

Burning of Bridge Cuts Off City From the Mainland.

Only Connection With Outside World is by Water.

St. Louis, June 12.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Houston, Texas, says: About 1,000 feet of the bridge, over a mile long, which connects Galveston island with the mainland, burned this morning, completely isolating Galveston from all connection with the outside world except by boat.

Galveston is built on an island in the gulf of Mexico, and a long stretch of shoal water separates the city from the mainland. This water is spanned by the single, long bridge, which burned.

WISCONSIN FOR BRYAN.

All the Elements of the Party United in His Behalf.

Milwaukee, June 12.—It has been decided by leaders of the Democratic party of the state to indorse William Jennings Bryan for president at the state convention to be held in Milwaukee on June 27 and 28.

Bryan is the unanimous choice of the party in Wisconsin, and not only are the radical Democrats for him, but those who have opposed him in the past have swung into line.

OIL WAREHOUSE BURNS.

Springfield, Mo., June 12.—A spark from a passing locomotive today set fire to the warehouse of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, which was burned with a loss of $50,000.

CANDIDATES AT SEA ON THE MAKING OF TRADES

They Find It Impossible to Make a Slate on Which Even a Few Can Agree.

Chairmanship Talk Now Beginning to Be Heard and Several Mentioned.

This morning some little impetus to the already growing rush in Republican political circles was given by the arrival of more delegates from various parts of the state. The two morning trains brought in quite a crowd, and almost all of the delegates, it is expected, will be here by this afternoon. With the arrival of the night trains this evening, it is pretty certain that the list will have been completed, and beginning this afternoon, if possible, the real trading will begin.

The greater crowd of workers was in the Spalding hotel this morning, but in the St. Louis there was also a good deal of work doing, and the street between the two hotels was packed by politicians. Every office doorway was occupied by delegates button-holing each other and trying to fix some kind of a situation and understanding.

The headquarters of the various candidates in each hotel were packed almost all of the time, and it was hardly possible to get a coherent word out of any candidate or any office in his outer rooms before he was led off by some manager or worker for a conference.

Everything is apparently at sea, and no combination yet attempted has succeeded. Numerous ones during the night and this morning have been attempted, but each has failed of fruition. The great trouble seems to be that most of the candidates, while having individual support, seem unable to have their delegations solid enough to deliver and therefore trades are a hard matter, and but little is being agreed to.

The leading subject of political gossip today is the overshadowing influence of the state auditorship fight. Everything else is tied up awaiting something definite in the struggle between Odin Halden and Samuel G. Iverson, and the fight is a hot one. No trades have been put through yet on the governorship or any other office, and it seems to be folly to try them until something is done in the auditorship. It overshadows everything else, and all recognize it. It is generally acknowledged that the situation is up in the air, but that so far Halden has the best of it.

Just before noon, it is understood the Jacobson forces made a demand on Iverson which may puzzle him and may make a complete change in the situation. Iverson is understood to control for himself, forty votes in the First district. As Jacobson has been supporting him and has refused to throw him overboard for any gain which he might make among the Halden delegates, it has looked pretty rosy for Iverson if Jake's strength held out.

This morning, however, the Jacobson people demanded that Iverson throw to Jacobson the forty votes of the First district mentioned. Now it is up to Iverson and it is a question if he can take these votes away from Lord to whom it is understood they are pledged. The understanding is that if Iverson cannot do this he cannot count on Jacobson's support or influence. That is what Sam is up against.

United States Marshal Grimshaw sizes up the situation that the contest at this time is between Jacobson and Lord and it is a tossup which will land. There has been considerable talk of Jacobson having lost ground in the last twenty-four hours but as one politician put it, it may be that his claims were wild and false and that the so-called falling off is merely a matter of getting down to the proper value of his strength.

The whole situation seems to depend upon the auditorship and the other candidates, including those for governor, seem to be waiting for that contest to be settled.

For lieutenant governor there may be a break at any time and the choice of a candidate will be governed almost wholly by the situation as regards the gubernatorial nominee. Senator C. N. Cosgrove of Le Sueur, is being quietly pushed. C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center, is holding close to the Jacobson boom, his county, Stearns, having instructed for Jacobson and Sprague, and Jacobson has to behave in this regard or Stearns may jump away from him. Senator Eberhardt is hugging the Lord boom and W. S. Dwinnell of Minneapolis is being backed by those in the Hennepin delegation who are trying to cause a break in that county for Jacobson.

It is understood also that the Jacobson people have decided not to cause Julius Schmahl any trouble for secretary of state. E. A. Nelson was counting on the Jacobson forces for support. This morning the seven counties of the Ninth district caucused and got together on A. D. Stephens for governor and E. A. Nelson for secretary of state, both local candidates.

The matter of chairmanship of the convention is being discussed and Senator W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson is leading. Other candidates are W. E. Lee of Long Prairie and M. H. Boutelle of Minneapolis. E. L. Millar of Duluth is also being pushed this morning and an effort was being made to unite the anti-Jacobson forces on him. This, however, is being discouraged by the St. Louis county politicians for they have no desire to estrange Jacobson men or any other adherents because of Odin Halden's candidacy. There is considerable of an independent movement for Mr. Millar as well. The Cole forces are insisting against an agreement on chairman and demand that the selection of chairman be made on the floor of the convention. But generally speaking the candidates are not worrying much over who will preside over the convention.

The delegation from Hennepin county is said to be involved in a mix-up which promises to carry out time-honored custom of Hennepin county in the way of a split. It is claimed that a bunch of about 15 delegates are likely to break away from the Block movement in Hennepin and go over to Jacobson but just whether or not this will occur has not fully developed yet and likely will not until this afternoon, when all of the delegates will have arrived.

Threats have been made this morning toward that end, those that are leading the break movement claiming that they are not bound in any way to Block and see no reason why they should be delivered. It is said that this bunch belongs to the labor end of the delegation, which made an independent fight in Hennepin this year and commanded recognition and are therefore still in an independent situation and are pledged to nobody.

John Mullane of Minneapolis is said to be the leader of the fight and whether or not he will succeed in causing a serious break is a question which is yet to be decided. It is claimed by those opposing this break that Mullane has been promised the office of labor commissioner, should he succeed in bringing over a considerable bunch of Hennepin votes to Jacobson, and the opposition is fighting along this line, representing to the others that Mullane is not sincere in his attitude and advocacy of independent action of the labor delegates. That is the talk of the lobbies this morning and is being handed out by every Block man you meet.

So far every attempt at combination has fallen down and the attention of all the delegates and leaders is centered on the tremendous fight being made between the Halden and Iverson forces for the state auditor nomination.

Visiting delegates and their friends are more than delighted with the hospitality of Duluthians, and with the weather. The same weather is promised for tomorrow. The St. Louis county delegation, members of the reception committee of the Garfield Republican club, and all other individuals who are in the least interested in politics, and many who have betrayed no such interest in the past are doing everything they possibly can to make the visitors feel at home.

J. F. Jacobson and his followers were particularly pleased today with the reception and treatment accorded them. Any animosity that may have been felt locally in the past against anyone from the outside is for the time being forgotten, the only thought of the home people being to look after the comfort and pleasure of their guests. The four leading hotels were all well filled early last evening, but private houses all over the city, as well as the better class of boarding and rooming houses, were thrown open to the outsiders, and all were provided with comfortable quarters. The same rule will prevail this afternoon and tonight, when there will be another big influx of newcomers.

The Commercial club, through its bureau of registration, is taking care of a good many. Whenever a Duluthian runs across a visitor who is not provided with a room the searcher is steered to the Commercial club, where he is fitted out in good shape, or perhaps the Duluthian has some place where accommodations are to be had without calling the Commercial club into consultation, in which case rooms in the care of the latter are left for late comers. The club still has a number of good rooms in reserve, but the supply is likely to be exhausted this evening, unless more are placed at its command. Anyone having a vacant room which can be spared during the convention should notify Secretary Eva.

Representative N. E. Hugo and Senator George R. Laybourn were instrumental last evening in securing quarters for a

MARINE.

TRAFFIC THROUGH THE SOO CANALS

During Month of May Reached Total of 5,339,278 Tons.

Despite the longshoremen's strike, the traffic through the St. Mary's river during the month of May made an excellent showing. The record for the American ship canals fell about 200,000 tons under the 5,000,000-ton mark, but with the freight carried through on the Canadian side the total for both waterways footed up 5,339,278 tons. The traffic was made up as follows:

EASTBOUND.

	Canal.	Can. Canal.	Total.
Copper, net tons			15,598
Grain, bushels			6,056,566
Flour, barrels			689,520
Iron ore, net tons			3,916,593
Pig iron, net tons			1,821
Lumber, M feet, B. M.			125,419
Wheat, bushels			8,834,407
General merchandise, net tons			23,994

WESTBOUND.

Anthracite coal, net tons			27,120
Bituminous coal, net tons			523,483

Westbound	601,505	115,946	717,451
Total	4,819,400	519,878	5,339,278

There were 2,039 vessel passages recorded for the United States canal and 732 for the Canadian, a total of 2,762. The total registered net tonnage of the boats was 4,635,775. The passengers, eastbound, numbered 1,410; those westbound, 1,620. The largest cargo of coal ever carried through the locks was registered the 3rd of the present month, when the steamer John Stanton passed up with 10,500 tons.

The shipments of ore from the Lake Superior region, which include those from Escanaba, Lake Michigan, which do not pass through the Sault canals, as well as those from the five Lake Superior ports, compare as follows up to June 1, this year and last season:

	1906.	1905.
Duluth	1,524,404	1,367,527
Two Harbors	1,399,346	1,416,251
Escanaba	923,744	956,092

Ashland	632,062	572,788
Marquette	404,397	597,973
Totals	5,752,340	5,814,694

This is a decrease of 62,264 tons for the present season compared with last year, for which the recent marine strike was responsible, the ore shipments for May this year having fallen 344,477 tons below the record for May, 1905, the respective totals being 4,304,964 and 4,619,431 tons.

MRS. W. E. COREY ASKS A DIVORCE

Wife of Steel Corporation President Files Petition at Reno.

Reno, Nev., June 12.—Mrs. William Ellis Corey, wife of the president of the United States Steel corporation, this morning, filed a petition in the Second district court of Nevada, at this place, for an absolute decree of divorce.

The petition of Mrs. Corey is brief, reciting that she was married to Corey on Dec. 13, 1883, and that he abandoned her about May 1, 1905. She asks for a decree upon the ground of desertion and also requests that the custody of their minor son be given to her.

The petitioner has obtained three attorneys of Reno to prosecute her case. Sardis Summerfield, representing Corey, stated today that he did not know whether his client would oppose the petition or not. It is currently stated that negotiations are in progress which will result in Corey giving his consent to the decree and the settlement upon his wife of an independent fortune. His attorneys declined to discuss this phase of the matter. Mrs. Corey is attended while in Reno by the mother and sister of the defendant. She declines to see newspaper men and pays no social visits.

GUESS ON THE WEIGHT

Of the Coal That is Delivered at the Docks.

Witness Says Buyer and Seller Are Both Satisfied.

Philadelphia, June 12.—The presidents of the big coal carrying railroads, will be given an opportunity to appear before the interstate commerce commission and make any statement they may desire. Commissioner Cockrell said today that invitations would be extended to the presidents of the Pennsylvania, B. & O., the Norfolk & Western, the Chesapeake & Ohio, and the New York Central railroads, to appear before the commission. No subpoenas will be issued for the heads of those roads and their appearance will be entirely optional with the officials.

"You cannot condemn a man without a hearing," said Commissioner Cockrell.

"It has been the purpose of the commission to permit the presidents of the coal roads to make any statements they may desire, but we are not yet ready. We want all the testimony we can get from the subordinates and then the case in its entirety will be put before the commission and the railroad presidents.

Commissioner Cockrell said the official notification that the committee was ready to hear the presidents, would probably be sent to them tomorrow, but he did not believe that they would be heard before June 21.

The commission resumed its inquiry today into the relation of the railroads to the coal and oil interests. The first witness was Robert L. Franklin, assistant freight claim agent of the Pennsylvania railroad who detailed the method of investigating claims made by coal companies for coal lost in transit.

Mr Franklin was asked to furnish the commission with eight claims, the numbers of which were furnished by Mr. Glasgow. He was excused in order to procure the claims.

The Berwind-White Coal company and the much-discussed Harsimus Pier, in New York harbor, came up again when R. F. Cochran, superintendent of the pier was called. Mr. Cochran was an interesting witness and gave an intelligent explanation of the system on the pier. The Berwind-White company, it had been testified by previous witnesses, has the exclusive use of Harsimus pier, which was built by the Pennsylvania road and paid for by the coal company. Mr. Cochran testified that a space of 125 feet on the pier is used by the Pennsylvania road for coaling its tugs with anthracite. This fact he said, handicaps the Berwind-White company, as the latter is compelled frequently to wait until the railroad bins are filled before the coal company can fill its own bins. Superintendent Cochran said it is the practice to load coal into barges without consignment in order to have it in readiness for orders from vessels. The bill of lading given to the barge captain is made on the weights furnished by the railroad. Another bill of lading is furnished to the vessel by T. J. Kelly, superintendent of delivery. The most important feature of Mr. Cochran's testimony was his statement that the Pennsylvania road operates all the cars on the pier, both those belonging to the railroad and the coal company cars. The railroad's locomotives are used and railroad employes operate the locomotives. Berwind-White company employes are prohibited from handling the cars.

It is evidence before the commission that the Berwind-White company is allowed 7 cents a ton by the railroad for performing this work.

"What was the improvement made to the pier in 1890?" Mr. Glasgow asked the witness.

"It was a new addition which the Pennsylvania railroad uses exclusively with the exception of 55 feet."

"Are you aware that the Berwind-White company paid the railroad for that improvement?"

The witness had no knowledge on that subject. It is in evidence that the Berwind-White company paid to the Pennsylvania railroad $46,000 for these improvements.

Cross examined by Attorney Heebner, counsel for the coal company, Superintendent Cochran said he did not know that the Berwind-White company made monthly settlements with the railroad for operating the cars on the pier. Mr. Cochran further testified that while all bills of lading are made on estimated weights furnished by the railroad, the purchaser is entitled to demand the actual weighing of the coal. Asked if he knew of any instance where the coal was actually weighed, Mr. Cochran said the fuel furnished to the Ninety-sixth street and the One hundred and Sixteenth street power houses of the New York city railway is always weighed.

Gilbert A. Williams, assistant to Superintendent T. J. Kelly, was asked as to the manner in which the bills for coal to vessels are made out.

He said that they are based on the estimates made by George J. Johnson, superintendent of tow boats and the steamship agents.

"Who makes out the bills?" asked Mr. Glasgow.

Attorney Heebner here made a vigorous protest against "this line of examination." He wanted to know what was to be gained by it. The shipper and the consignee, he said, were satisfied with the method of rendering the bills.

"The Berwind-White and the steamship representatives estimate the weight of the coal," Mr. Heebner continued, "and the bills are redeemed on their guess. There is the uncertain element of a portion of the coal remaining in the barge when it is not all taken by the vessel. But we do not tally the number of tubes taken from each barge when a number of them are loading a vessel with fuel. We take the total number of tubes dumped into the steamship."

"Then how do you apply the residue?" asked Commissioner Cockrell.

"We don't apply it," rejoined Mr. Heebner. "Shipper and buyer seem to be satisfied, and that is all there is to it."

"Well, that's a proposition, and I would like to hear it explained," said Mr. Cockrell.

"I don't know how you are going to find out," responded the lawyer.

"Well, we will stagger along some way," interjected Commissioner Clements. ""If your method is such that we cannot learn what we want to know, we will have to do without the information."

MILITIAMEN CALLED OUT

To Protect Negro Charged With Assaulting Two Women.

Norfolk, Va., June 12.—A riot call was sounded here this afternoon for the quick assemblage of two hundred militiamen of the Seventy-first Virginia regiment of infantry to proceed at once to Eastville, Va., to protect William Lee, a negro now in jail at that place charged with criminal assault on Mrs. Robert Barnes and her cousin, Miss Powell, near Kingston.

The crime occurred on Sunday last, while the women were enroute to their home with the infant of Mrs. Barnes in a baby carriage. Miss Powell is reported to be in a serious condition.

The assailant of the women escaped and Lee was later arrested at Cape Charles, Va. He was jailed at Eastville, and threats of lynching resulted in Governor Swanson this afternoon ordering the Norfolk and Portsmouth companies of the Virginia National guard to proceed to the scene.

SENATOR TILLMAN

Called to Order by Request of Senator Clapp.

Washington, June 12.—Mr. Mondell of Montana, will on Wednesday report from the committee on public lands, a bill confining the provisions of any federal drainage legislation to the state of Minnesota alone. It has been decided that, since Minnesota is the pioneer in the movement, whatever is done at first will be something in the way of an experiment by the government. Another reason for confining the provisions to Minnesota is that the representatives from the other states, wherein it was proposed to install government drainage, have been unable to agree on just what they want.

Senator Clapp is again having trouble with the annual Indian appropriation bill and had to resort to summary methods during the consideration of the conference report yesterday. He ordered Senator Tillman to be called to order by the vice president, and Tillman had to retract his charge that certain claims for attorneys' fees, that had been included in the bill, were an infamous outrage. Senator Teller came to the front in defense of Senator Clapp.

Dr. Bracken, secretary of the Minnesota state board of health, has written to the Minnesota senators to stand for a pretty thorough inspection of livestock before slaughter.

NEW WEST BADEN

Found by Omaha Road in Mud Hole at Jordan, Minn.

St. Paul, June 12.—Officials of the Omaha road think that they have discovered a new West Baden in a mud hole at Jordan, Minn., and are already laying plans to develop it. Physicians have been sent to examine the water in the hole and on Thursday the Omaha will run a special to the spot for the purpose of making a final test of the water.

The mud hole for years has been regarded as a menace to the town, but recently, through the discovery of a German physician, it has blossomed as a "veritable fountain of youth." The German physician was attracted to the pools by reports of the nauseous odor which it was claimed came from the pool. He tasd the water and attests to its curative powers, and it is reported that one resident of Jordan, long suffering from rheumatism, was completely restored to his powers through drinking the water and wallowing in the mud of the spring. Some have already dubbed it the "Magic Pool" and as soon as the Omaha road gives it the publicity it deserves, it is claimed that one of the greatest health resorts in the state of Minnesota will be developed about the strange spring and pool.

MEDAL FOR BRAVERY.

Little Chute, Wis., Boy Rewarded by Token From Congress.

Appleton, Wis., June 12.—August Mollen, a 14-year-old Little Chute lad, was yesterday presented with a silver medal awarded by congress for bravery in saving a playmate from drowning on July 19, 1905. The presentation was made by United States Marshal Thomas B. Reid, in behalf of Maj. W. V. Judson, United States army. Accompanying the medal were letters from L. M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, and from Maj. Judson. The letters explain the boy's act. The deed was witnessed by Maj. Judson, who took the matter up with the authorities at Washington, recommending that the lad be decorated for bravery.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had Inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint; her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

ALL HAIL PE-RU-NA.

A Case of

STOMACH CATARRH.

Miss Mary O'Brien, 306 Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna cured me in five weeks of catarrh of the stomach, after suffering for four years and doctoring without effect. In common with other grateful ones who have been benefited by your discovery, I say, All hail to Peruna."

Mr. H. J. Henneman, Oakland, Neb., writes:

"I waited before writing to you about my sickness, catarrh of the stomach, which I had over a year ago.

"There were people who told me it would not stay cured, but I am sure that I am cured, for I do not feel any more ill effects, have a good appetite and am getting fat.

"So I am, and will say to all, I am cured for good.

"I thank you for your kindness.

"Peruna will be our house medicine hereafter."

Catarrh of the stomach is also known in common parlance as dyspepsia, gastritis and indigestion. No medicine will be of any permanent benefit except it removes the catarrh.

A Great Tonic.

Mr. Austin M. Small, Astoria, Ore., writes: "During the hot weather of the past summer I lost my appetite. I tried Peruna, and found it pleasant to take, a splendid appetizer and a great tonic."

The medal is a handsome affair, suspended by a blue ribbon. On one side is engraved:

"To August Mollen for bravery in rescuing a boy July 19, 1905." On the reverse side is engraved around the outer edge: "In testimony of heroic deeds in saving life from the perils of the sea." This is the first congressional medal presented for bravery in many years.

TO BUILD AN ORPHANAGE

Knights of Columbus Will Finish Structure Begun at Woodland.

Will Care for Children Now in Old West End Building.

The work of completing the orphanage once begun at Woodland, will be undertaken, as a result of the meeting held last evening by the Knights of Columbus.

The plan of erecting an orphanage at Woodland has always been a favorite project of Bishop McGolrick, and out of respect to his wishes, and in appreciation of the work which he has done for the Catholic religion in the Northwest, a vigorous campaign will be begun by the Knights of Columbus to raise the necessary funds to complete the structure.

Bishop McGolrick now has five acres of land which was donated for the purpose of an orphange, and the foundations of the building were begun several years ago, but the work was abandoned for lack of funds.

At present about 70 children are being cared for in the West end orphanage, but this has never been considered the proper location for such an institution. The children have no place for outdoor exercise, and they are kept confined to the building, the greater part of the time. The building has also been outgrown, and is no longer large enough to meet the demands upon it.

Leo A. Ball, formerly grand knight of the local chapter, resigned at the meeting last evening, having been advanced to the position of district deputy. D. P. McDonald was elected to succeed him.

HARMONY SUITS

If your last suit is full of patches, don·a new one. To be in harmony with nature and with 1906 styles, buy a Columbia Suit. These suits are specially made for us by the "Stein-Bloch" and the "Sincerity," Wholesale Tailors, which should be "enough said," as these two makes are known from coast to coast to be the foremost examples of the American art of producing ready-to-wear clothes.

Out-of-town people may know them, as they are sold in every town—but while in Duluth you have the advantage of selecting from metropolitan stocks at this store. If you ask some of the natives you will also be informed that Columbia prices are as low as in New York or Chicago, perhaps lower.

Well-dressed people are in harmony with themselves and promote harmony among others. This is a sly hint for the busy politicians now gathering in the "Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas." See!

POSTAL RATES ARE REDUCED

On Matter Between the United States and Great Britain.

Washington, June 12.—In connection with the work of the recent universal postal congress, the post office department has given out the following statement as to the effect of one of the provisions of that convention as affecting this country:

"The universal postal congress, recently in convention at Rome, Italy ordered a substantial reduction in letter postage by increasing the unit of weight, effective on and after October 1, 1907, from fifteen to twenty grams,and providing that while postage on the first twenty grams shall remain at 25 centimes (5 cents), every aditional twenty grams shall be at the rate of 15 centimes (3 cents).

"Great Britain and the United States strongly urged that the unit of weight for them should be fixed at one ounce, as it would be extremely difficult for them to express an equivalent weight for twenty grams, not having adopted the metric system. This request was granted. This will give the two great countries exceptionaly low rates for the exchange of letters. Under the reduced rates a letter to Great Britain will cost 5 cents for the first ounce and 3 cents for the second ounce or 8 cents for two ounces. In other words, when the new rates become effective a letterpacket weighing 6 ounces can be sent to Great Britain at the rate now charged for a two ounce packet."

A meeting of St. Louis County delegation will be held in the private dining room of St. Louis Hotel tonight, Tuesday, at 8:30 p. m.

TICK-TACK ON WINDOW; MINISTER SHOOTS BOY.

Le Sueur Center, Minn., June 12.—The town of Cordova was thrown into unwonted excitement yesterday when it was bruited about that Rev. W. W. Vine, pastor of the United Brethren church at that point and Le Sueur Center, had shot a farmer boy shortly after midnight. The preacher used a 22-caliber rifle and shot the lad through the right leg, near the hip.

The boy had placed a "tick-tack" upon the window of the pastor's bedroom and was murdering the sleep of the household, when the enraged minister issued forth, armed cap-a-pie. The latter has not been arrested, but in all probability will be. The boy will soon be all right again unless blood poisoning results from his wound.

WATER PLANT SOLD.

San Francisco, June 12.—It is reported that the Contra Costa Water company, which includes not only the sources of supply for the city of Oakland proper, but for Alameda, Berkeley and other small towns in this vicinity as well, has been sold to the Realty syndicate of Oakland for $11,000,000. Frank C. Havens, vice president and general manager of the syndicate, is on his way East, it is said, for the purpose of financing the deal. The Realty syndicate controls the Key route ferry system and the street railways of Oakland. William J. Dingee is at the head of the water company.

CATTLE REMEDY TO BE TRIED ON MAN NOW.

Philadelphia, June 12.—That developments of Dr. Leonard Pearson's animal practice vaccination for tuberculosis offers the most promising possibility for immunization of the human race against consumption is the freely expressed opinion of many authorities upon tuberculosis.

Animals treated, although exposed hourly to tuberculosis have failed to develop a trace of the disease. Mankind is next to be treated with the immunizing serum. Not only has vaccination practiced in this manner immunized cattle absolutely, but it has also arrested the progress of the disease in animals already affected and in some instances, by encysting the tubercles has wrought apparent cures.

WEST END

PAVING IS CONNECTED

Almost Continuous Roadway From City to West End.

Only North Side of Street is Finished—Rest Delayed.

There is considerable joy at the West en dtoday for the West Superior street paving of tar macadam is connected with the brick paving at Eighth avenue west. This gives a continuous teaming way between the central part of the city and the West end as far as Twenty-fifth avenue west, with the exception of two blocks between Thirteenth and Fifteenth avenues west, where telford macadam is to go in, and a short space at Twelfth avenue west, which will be filled in within a day or two.

The tar macadam paving and the brick were connected yesterday afternoon. This includes only that part of the street on the north side of the tracks from Thirteenth avenue west.

The south side is held open on account of the power company putting down subways and wires under the street, which is torn up on the south side. As rapidly as that work is completed, Contractor Steele will go ahead with the paving.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Miner Killed at Calumet and Child Dragged to Death.

Calumet—Samuel Matson, a miner employed in No. 5 shaft of the Tamarack Mining company, was instantly killed by a blast. With his partner he was at work on the thirty-second level and was preparing for a blast. Matson, according to the evidence of his co-worker, violated mining rules by "spitting" his fuse instead of "snuffing" it. The blast went off prematurely, and Matson was struck in the back, dying almost instantly. The jury summoned by Coroner Fisher decided that death was the result of Matson's own negligence. The deceased was 40 years of age and leaves a family.

The Allouez location was the scene of a shocking accident. The family of Walter Nelson was moving from the Delaware, transporting their household goods by wagon. Their possessions included a cow, which their 12-year-old son was instructed to lead. The child had the cow attached to a long rope, and to secure more freedom for his hands, tied the rope around his waist. As the family neared Allouez the cow became frightened and ran away, dragging the child. The youngster struck his head on a rock and sustained severe bruises before the maddened animal could be stopped. The child was taken to the Tamarack hospital, where it was ascertained that his skull was fractured. The boy died a short time afterward.

Ishpeming—Deputy Game Wardens J. C. Downing of this city and William Harrington of Michigamme arrested Alexander Bonnar, second cook on the Chicago & Northwestern dining car, which passes through here, for taking trout of illegal size from a stream north of Clowery. The fish were found in Bonnar's basket as he was returning to Champion. He was given a hearing at Champion, was found guilty, and paid a fine.

Hancock—It is pretty nearly a certainty now that a company of naval reserves will be established at Hancock. All that is necessary is the approval of Governor Warner to the petition presented to him Saturday by C. A. Wright with the approval of Assistant Adjt. Gen. Cox and Col. Rogers, A. Q. M. G. of the Michigan National Guard. It is considered likely that the governor will indorse the plan to establish the proposed organization, which would be the only one in the peninsula. The project has been under consideration for some time, and as Hancock is abundantly supplied with facilities for naval drill and study, the company should attain proficiency in a very short time.

W. C. T. U. Should Favor Beer

Miss Phoebe Cousins Speaks Plainly and To the Point on Temperance.

Every day seems to bring us nearer a sane, sensible, and practical solution of the temperance question in the U. S. More than one noted speaker and thinker have of late shown a theoretical effort to aid in the cause of temperance. One of the most noted women of our day and age is Miss Phoebe Cousins, for a quarter of a century the leader in the woman's suffrage movement in the West. She recently said: "There never will be a law to compel prohibition and the sensible thing for the Women's Christian Temperance Union to do is to aid in the substitution of mild, nourishing drinks like beer which seldom produces drunkenness."

This broad assertion may bring a storm of criticism from the fanatical upon this devoted woman's head but in the end the living truth of her words will prevail. She is borne out in her statement by statistics. It has been clearly shown that with the increased use of malt beverages in this country there has been a corresponding decrease in intemperance.

Recently a prominent army officer in the West operated canteens at three different army posts at which only beer was sold—no alcoholic liquors whatever were allowed. He made the canteens so acceptable to the soldiers, who found beer satisfying their demands, that he actually ran all the low dives of the surrounding neighborhood out of business. Yet it was through the efforts of the W. C. T. U. that the army canteens were driven out. Let us hope the many noble women comprising the W. C. T. U. will be broad-minded enough to recognize their mistake and join Miss Cousins and others who are sincerely striving to stem the tide of intemperance by the substitution of mild, harmless beer for strong drink. In this connection it might be well to mention that chemical analysis shows Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer, which is perhaps the best known of all bottled beers, to contain only a fraction over three per cent alcohol—as one eminent physician puts it, "just enough for a good tonic effect to the stomach, while in food value it is far superior on account of the Pabst exclusive eight-day process of making malt."

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Boy Who Accidentally Shot Companion Takes His Own Life.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Overcome with remorse over his accidental killing of his companion on a gopher hunt, Ernest Grebbe, 12 years old, shot himself and was wounded so badly that he died shortly afterward.

The boy who was accidentally shot was Edward Alex. Both boys lived at Kensal, in Stutsman county.

There will soon be a vacancy on the supreme court bench, owing to the resignation of Justice B. N. C. Young, who has retired in order to enter the law firm of Hall & Watson of Fargo. Justice Young has served nine years on the bench.

Several persons have been mentioned as possible appointees for the vacancy, but Judge Fisk of Grand Forks is considered the most likely candidate, an agreement having been made five years ago that he should be given the appointment for the next vacancy.

There are more converts to drainage work among the farmers of the Red river valley than ever before. The excessive rainfall this season, added to partial crop failures for the four previous years, has made the farmers near the river take notice of the situation.

Several drains have been constructed in the county by the local board, but the chief complaint heretofore has been that the drains are too small. The country is so level that the fall is necessarily slight. The ditches fill up with water and the land is not drained as it should be. A new county drainage board has just been appointed, and some action is to be taken this summer for more drains in the sections that are most subject to damage. The fact that the banks of the river are higher in some sections that the rest of the farm lands also prevents natural drainage.

James Kennedy of Fargo has secured the contract for the extension of the street railway line to the state fair grounds. The line will be completed in ample time for the fair. Kennedy has contracts for repaving the business streets, and has a force of 200 men at work on different local jobs, in an effort to get the work completed before the rush of farm work commences and labor gets too scarce.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—A smooth forger succeeded in victimizing a Brookings bank to the amount of $450, and has now disappeared. The forger had cashed at a local bank a certified check for the amount stated. After the check had been through the regular course it was returned to the bank at Brookings, from which it was supposed to have been issued, when the discovery was made that the check was a clever forgery. The loss will be borne by the Brookings bank, unless the forger can be apprehended and it can force him to make a settlement.

While a Rock Island freight train was approaching the city Monday forenoon, it was discovered that a car loaded with buggies consigned to the John Deere Plow company's branch house in this city was on fire. The train made double speed to the Sioux Falls yards so the fire department could be summoned, but notwithstanding the car and its contents were practically destroyed. The loss will reach $3,000, which will have to be borne by the railroad company.

Groton—Walter Anderson, 17 years of age, was kicked in the right side by a horse and died a few minutes later. The boy had only arrived here a few days ago to help his uncle on the farm near this town.

J. W. Ellwood, an attorney of this town, had a painful experience while umpiring a game of baseball between the Groton and Warner teams. He was running to first base to make a close decision and was struck on the nose by a thrown ball. His nose was fractured and he was compelled to retire from the game.

ENDURES "23" BUT QUAILS AT "SKIDDOO."

New Haven, Conn., June 12.—After the lapse of many days a change has come over the telephone number of Gen. Andrew H. Embler of New Haven.

Gen. Embler's number used to be 23. He used to tell his friends that to change his number would be to make a concession to a vulgarism that was wormwood to his soul. So they applied the acid test.

Night after night call would come on the heels of call.

"Is this 23?"

"Yes."

"No, really? Well, skiddoo for yours."

Being anti-slang, the Embler household could not fail back on profanity, which is the ruffianly relation of slang. It could only go back to bed and consider.

Gen. Embler has now changed his number and no one else has applied for it to date.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, president of the general federation of Women's clubs, spoke this morning before a number of the women of the city at the public library. Mrs. Decker has been the guest of Mrs. J. L. Washburn for the past few days and no plans for her formal appearance before a Duluth audience of club women were made until last evening. The room was comfortably filled with the women, anxious to meet the far famed president of the largest organization of women of the world, and during the half hour she spoke, the closest attention was given Mrs. Decker was introduced by Mrs. Washburn as the "heart and soul and spirit" of the biennial meeting held at St. Paul, and in the address which Mrs. Decker delivered, the magnetism of the woman was apparent. She spoke on federation and during the course of the talk the audience was in a gentle ripple of laughter or furtively wiping a tear away and between times, Mrs. Decker drove home her points for federation.

"I came up to Duluth for a rest," said Mrs. Decker, "but when I arrived here the necessity for a rest was not apparent. The biennial meeting was an inspiration and a help and today I find the only thing about me a little disfigured, is my voice, but I do not believe it will ever be so entirely out of commission that I will be unable to speak the gospel of federation.

"The power that federation among women has come to be, is just being realized by the many. One of the prominent men of our country who was a speaker at our recent biennial meeting was astounded at the audience of women which had gathered to hear him. The evening was not an evening of art or music or literature, but an evening devoted to the consideration of good citizenship as were the other meetings of our biennial. He said to me after the session, "You do not know what you have in this body of women. I am going back to Washington and the president, and tell him that the country better grant what this organization of women asks." I told him that we fully realized who and what and how much we were, the only thing was that he had just discovered us. Federation is building and growing constantly and must be recognized.

"Coming from that helpful and vivifing biennial it seems impossible that the question could ever be asked 'Is federation worth while?' But it is asked constantly and that reminds me of a convention of men held in our town upon which thousands of dollars were spent and much time. A grand parade was held and I asked one of the members what was done after the parade. 'Business session' said he and asked what the business transactions were, he remembered after some hesitancy. 'Why, we decide where we will hold the next meeting.' Now we don't want to criticise the men, for we love them individually and collectively and if they did nothing more than meet for that, it was worth the time and money, for the closer bonds of sympathy and understanding which must have grown between the North and the South, the East and the West.

"But we feel that we have done more than that. Federation is no new thing. Men have realized the potentiality and value of federation for centuries. Without federation would the signing and enforcing of the Magna Charta been possible; could the men who sailed into unknown seas for new worlds have done it without federation. Without federation the shot from Lincoln and Concord which was heard around the world would not have been fired. If Washington and Adams and our early great men had not believed in federation we would still be English colonists, with no voice in the government. Federation is fealty, friendship, faith. It stands for power, glory, religion, for home, hope, love and liberty. It is not simply belonging to an organization. It is believing in it, loving it and being ready to die for it.

One of the drawbacks to federation among women is that we have not yet outlived the religious intolerance as much as have our brothers. It creeps into our clubs. You all know what I mean and it cannot exist with true federation. Our literary studies are all right, but we don't want to study for study's sake, but for Life's sake, that we may go through our opportunities help to do the things we are waiting and crying out for women to do.

"Another of the bugbears of many women is publicity. And I will admit that those newspaper pictures at St. Paul last week were trying and your beautiful president was terrible to look upon. And occasionally some of the comments are hard to bear, but the time is past for women to be afraid of publicity. We are doing a world work, we are establishing institutions, and delivering baccalaureate sermons, we are establishing juvenile courts and traveling libraries, and to be publicly known in such work is glorious. The woman who wins a golf championship, or she who is publicly known for her money, her gowns, her horses and her husbands, does not object, and I say again the time is past for women to fear publicity.

"The third reason for much of the lack of interest is that the women who joined the club originally had no idea of federating and doesn't take to the idea when it is presented. But men are beginning to realize the value of it and women must come to a realizing sense of the sweetness of it, to have a loyalty for, and abiding faith in it."

Following Mrs. Decker's talk, Mrs. Buckwalter, state president of the Ohio federation, was presented and greeted the club women present. Following the talks, an informal reception was held, Mrs. Mitchell of St. Cloud, Mrs. G. O. Welch of Fergus Falls, and Mrs. R. N. Marble of this city, also receiving with the speakers.

Either they may be very small or nearly as large as a woman's travelling bag. Invariably there is the chain to carry them by or in lieu of that the strap, through which the hand is placed, as in the case of the envelope purses, which are still considered stylish.

Walrus skin in black is still worn to a greater extent than any other leather, but for summer wear all the delicate pastel shades to match the gowns are to be had, and they are wonderfully delicate and pretty. A watch is till one of the conveniences of the shopping purse, and very frequently a bit of art nouveau decoration takes its place. Vanity purses are also being carried, though to a limited extent.

What Retail Markets Offer

Special order of two wee live pigs.
A watermelon, 90 cents for it.
Egg plant, 20 cents each.
Live lobsters, 35 cents each.
Smoked tongues, 70 cents each.
Pork tenderloin, 23 cents a lb.

The watermelon in the market is as popular as an uninstructed delegate to the Republican convention, and like the delegate, there is more than one candidate out for it. The person who lands the watermelon will be noticed in this column. Enough people have had longing eyes on it, and if we were a small boy and had not our appetites in good control, we would jeopardize our financial standing for the summer and buy that watermelon. Selling the rind and some portion of the green left after we had finished the red of each slice for about five cents a rind would realize us something, and also the purchasers. But what's the use, we have eternally and everlastingly passed the time when we could think of eating a whole watermelon and yet remain in polite society.

The two wee pigs in the market were the dearest things. Pigs are so interesting that nearly everybody stopped to see them this morning. Pigs grunt their contempt of life regardless of persons. They get out and root for the thing they think most important and wax fat and prosperous, and are killed for it, but during their brief sojourn they are happy as the day is long, and as contented as a freckle faced boy enjoying a 5-cent ice cream soda.

Preserving Corn, Peas and Beans for Winter

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Preserving Vegetables.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Kindly publish how to preserve peas, string beans and corn for winter use.

A. B. S.

One of the nicest ways to put up corn, string and Lima beans and peas for winter use is by steaming in glass jars. I prefer the jars with glass instead of metal tops. Always use new rubbers and keep the canned products in a cool, dry place. Wrap each jar with coarse, brown paper, and write plainly contents and date of preserving. If you have a damp cellar and no closet to keep your preserves in, put in a box lined with cotton batting, and cover with a lid.

For Steaming Corn, Lima Beans and Peas.

Put the corn in a colander and let hot water run over it for a moment. Then with a sharp knife cut the kernels off the cob, scraping out as much juice as possible, but taking care to leave all the cob behind. Fill the jars which should have been sterilized, with corn, working down gradually as the corn goes in, until as compact as it can be. Fill to within an inch from the top. Now for each quart can allow three-fourths of a pint of warm water, in which has been dissolved a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful and a half of sugar, pour over the corn, then adjust the lid of the jar without the rubber, part way closed. Have ready a wash boiler with a wooden rack or perforated tin in the bottom and enough warm water to cover the jars about three-quarters of their height. Place the filled jars in the boiler, but do not let them touch each other. Pack clean cotton rags or a cotton rope between and around the jars to prevent their striking each other as the water begins to boil. As soon as the water boils, steam ten minutes, with the boiler cover on. Then take out one jar at a time, work the corn down on the sides with a silver knife and again set back and steam three hours. At the end of that time take out the cans again, one by one, work down the corn and fill up with more of the same liquid which you have boiling for that purpose. Put on the rubber and screw the lid slowly air tight, put back in the boiler and add more water to the boiler, so as to come to the very top of the cans. Steam an hour longer. Now take out the jars and set on a board where they will be out of a draught. If screw covers are used, tighten again as the glass cools and contracts. The Lima beans and peas are steamed in the same way, only that they need not be packed as tightly and no sugar is required.

Canned String Beans.

Select the beans when young and tender. Wash thoroughly, string and cut into slantwise pieces about half an inch long; pack into sterilized jars, shaking and working down to make compact, then fill up with freshly drawn water until the can is running over. Slip a silver knife blade down the sides so as to allow the air bubbles to escape. Lay the covers loosely on the jars without the rubbers and cook two hours in the boiler with the lids part way, and one hour with the lids sealed airtight. Before putting on the rubbers for the second steaming, fill up the cans with more boiling water, to which a little salt has been added.

Canned Asparagus.

Wash each stalk thoroughly in cold water and pack in the jars, with the thick end of the stalk down. Fill the jars with fresh cold water and proceed the same as with peas and beans, boiling steadily for three or four hours. Before steaming the last hour be careful to have the liquid in the jar cover the asparagus at least three-quarters of an inch from the top to allow them to swell without bursting the jar; but before sealing fill up with liquid.

Vegetables prepared in this way are already cooked, and simply need to be heated and seasoned to taste when ready to use.

To Preserve Beans New Hampshire Style.

A friend who has spent many summers in Whiteface, N. H., has given me this process of doing up fresh snap beans that will keep all winter and taste almost as good as fresh, and far better than the average canned ones. "In the summer," she says, "when everyone is tired of string beans, they multiply very fast. Then it is that my hostess, a woman possessed of that fine New England gift of faculty, begins doing up her surplus bean crop to be used in the early part of the succeeding summer before fresh vegetables are ready. As fast as the beans are ready to pick, she strings them and cuts in pieces as if for immediate use. Into an earthen jar or crock she puts a layer of beans and sprinkles salt over it—about half a cupful for each layer. When the jar is filled, with salt on top, it is closed airtight. In the summer, when ready to use, as many are taken from the jar as needed, soaked in cold water over night to remove the salt, then cooked like fresh."

THE EVENING STORY.

THE GOVERNOR'S PARDON

By A. W. Rolker.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

My friend Rae, the governor's private secretary, told me this story after dinner in Albany.

"Did you happen to notice the two little girls as you passed through the waiting room to the governor's private office this afternoon?" he asked.

I had noticed them. None could have helped but notice them, in deepest mourning; sad-mouthed, sensitive, motherly, gentle children that they were.

"These little shavers are the children of Schofield. You must recall Harold Schofield, down in Sing Sing, the cashier of whom they made a scapegoat a month ago for the smash of the Tenth National? And bless me, if the youngsters hadn't come to beg the governor to pardon their dad." Rae gave a short, hard laugh.

"Of all things and of all men, to try to beg a pardon from the governor of New York!" he resumed. "Gad, but I felt sorry for them. Why, they had about as much chance as a snowball on a redhot stove. You know yourself what the governor is, honest as the day is long, and just—if it isn't blasphemy—next to the Almighty himself, and you can put that down where you won't forget it. But that is where everything ends. He has no more human feeling in him than a block of granite. His heart is chilled iron. Tales of distress irritate him. Tears harden him.

"Old man Shaw, the governor's stenographer, who was a neighbor of the Schofields, started the trouble. He should have known better. But the case really was a desperate one, and, I suppose, he lost judgment, even as I did.

"He came into my office, one hand on the shoulder of a pretty, gentle little girl, the other holding the waxlike fingers of her elder sister.

"'Major Rae,' Shaw began, 'I've done a risky thing. But I'm playing for a stake that means very much to these little women. They are two very lonely, sad children. Their name is Schofield. They want to see you because I told them that in all the world no one could help them, only you.'

The wrinkle on the secretary's forehead deepened. He slowly shook his head. Then he continued:

"It's bad enough to have a father come to you and lay his most secret feelings bare, to see him as he looks you hopelessly in the eyes, wondering if you're going to hit him when he's down. It's bad enough to have to listen to the story, knowing all the time you've simply got to turn him down. It's four times worse to have a mother come to you and tell you the inmost secrets of her soul, and to break into sobs and tears and try to go down on her knees and kiss your hand. But—here were two shy, pretty, innocent little gentle children!

"'So you've come to talk to me?' I asked.

"'Yeth,' lisped the smaller one, with a covert glance at her elder sister, 'in Merthy, too,' she added.

"With full red lips twitching and tears in the dark blue eyes, Mercy looked me straight in the face. 'We want our papa back! Oh, give us our papa back!' she cried, and burying her burning cheek against my hand, all self-control fled the brave little soul and she cried as if her heart would break.

"Shaw swallowed hard and came to the rescue.

"'Give them a chance,' he begged. I know the whole sad story from end to end. These two little ones were born and raised next door to me. If ever the clutch of the law fell sharper than meant, it is in this case. Then he told the story.

"He began with the happy home among the cool maples and dusky pines where all was peace and plenty and sunshine. How dearly each loved the other, and how impatient were all when one was away he pictured in a score of little scenes, and into these he threw the sudden cloud—the long, weary days when laughter ceased, when a shadow fell back to the father's face till it hurt to see him smile, and till he no longer played with his wife's golden hair, but drew her close and held her tight as if to shield her from a sight.

"Of the days when the mother stole off by herself to cry, he told. When it made her cry to see her children laugh. When deep into the night the murmur of two anxious voices penetrated to the little white beds in the room above. Then he told of the arrest at the Sunday dinner table, how Schofield beat the sheriff to the ground when he insulted his wife, and how the desperate man stood proudly, holding his wife in long embrace, whispering courage into almost senseless ears, until at last he gently freed himself, kissed his little girls, promising to return soon, and, with a dry, choking sob, walked out of the room with the strange man—not to return.

"Of the struggle against hope Shaw told, how the mother felt her approaching end, called him to her, laid his hands upon her babies heads, and, pale and trembling in every limb, left them to his care.

"The old man's voice sank low as he recalled this scene, and he blubbered like an old crocodile. Two pairs of tiny hands clutched mine frantically. I myself had to turn my gaze down the capitol hill.

"'Please, please don't say no!' came a dry sob that sounded as if it must split a little chest in two.

"'I'll not say no. You shall see the governor,' I said.

"'However, it was a bad business. It meant my job. But, just then, I was disgusted clear through and didn't care if I did or not.

"'What's the governor doing?' I asked Shaw.

"'His visiting hours are long passed It's a little after 5 o'clock, and he's shigning some papers,' he answered.

"'It's a bad day to try and see the governor,' I forewarned the elder girl. 'He has been very busy all day reviewing the soldiers and receiving important visitors. Tonight he's going to a big dinner, where he will have to make a long speech. So you will have to be very brief in all you say.'

"All this time I was really trying to find how to smuggle the youngsters into the room, for nothing I could say would cause the governor to relent to an audience. It was a bit of deliberate strategy, even as Shaw had played unconsciously on me. All alone, without help or protection, I would send them into the presence of the mightiest man in the state.

"'Listen,' I said to the older girl, 'you are a brave little woman; if I let you see the governor, do you think you can do it just as I tell you? Above all, don't be frightened. Some say he is a hard, hard man. That all depends upon what you say to him. You mustn't tell him what you heard Mr. Shaw tell me. It would anger him. Do not try to tell him how you loved your papa and how you cried when your mamma died. Talk to him in a different way. Tell him you are all, all alone in the world with no one to protect you. Tell him you have no home. Tell him you will have to leave school to go into a factory to earn a living. And tell him the little sister, here, will have to quit her books and go to work. Say to him that you want your papa back to educate you and make a fine woman of you. Remember above all, on't let him see you cry. Mr. Shaw will show you the governor's room and open the door for you. You just walk in with the little sister by the hand, and walk straight up to the governor and tell him what you have to say.'

"I think I would have given five years of my life to have been able to give those youngsters the pardon, and for twenty minutes I sat on something like warm coals. Shaw came in at the end of that time. He looked hopeless.

"'It's no use,' he said, 'I can hear the governor raise his voice in anger.'

"At best, time was up. It was up to me to cut the audience short. I stood at the door and listened. I could hear the governor's deep bass voice. I could not understand what he was saying, but I, too, made out that he was irritated. I hesitated no longer. I opened the door and—saw a picture I do not wish to regret. Pale as I never had seen him, his voice husky, the governor leaned forward in his leather chair, and on his lap huddled close to his big, broad shoulder, sat the little girl sobbing softly, while the great long arm held her close as if inside a citadel of protection. Leaning forward, eyes rivited on the governor's, and both little snowy hands clasping his hairy paw, was the elder princess, pleading. His face was drawn. It twitched about the cheeks. He was the picture of a man fighting an overwhelming emotion. In an instant it dawned on me I has made a big mistake. Two minutes more and the little ones would have won. As it was—all, I spoiled.

"No sooner had the governor saw me than he was reminded of his office, and the spell was at an end. He disengaged his hand as if he were trapped in something grievously wrong. Hastily he lifted the little one from his lap and arose and straightened the lapel of his frock coat, and with that he was the same cold, judicial iceberg as of yore.

"'I'll take the matter under consideration, little girls; I'll take the matter under consideration,' he said absently, wiping perspiration from his forehead, and with that my heart sank. I knew what it meant. It meant the cleanest, cruellest 'No' any one ever got out of the astute politician. But the pleader understood. She believed, as if her father had spoken. A joyous scream escaped her. She clapped the governor's hands in both her own, wrung it and pressed her child lips to it in a burst of gratitude.

"'Thank you! Oh, thank you so!' she cried, grasping her sister's hand and fleeing toward the door as if her father were waiting for her on the far side. But with the door knob in their hand, they were arrested. Sharply the governor had snapped his fingers, and then he coughed. A fit of coughing seized him so that he could not talk and had to wipe the tears out of his eyes. When he regained his voice he said:

"'Here, little girls, wait,' and something like a smile lighted his stern, sphinx-like features. 'You might as well take the paper with you before you go home. Meanwhile, sit over there, near the window where you can look down the green hill.

"'Rae,' he said, turning to me, 'arrange with the pardon clerk. Have him make out the necessary papers. See that you get the signature of the secretary of state, and then bring them here to me. I think these little girls would sleep better with that pardon tucked under their pillow tonight.'

Whoop!

We won.

Skunked 'em.

They never had any more show than a plugged nickel in a church bazaar.

Treadway is the white-haired boy that did the trick. Stand up, Mr. Treadway. Ladies and gentlemen, we present the only four-ply, brass bound, copper riveted, master of the undulating convolution in captivity. He's the flossiest specimen of a pitcher that has been served up to the fans for many a moon. In fact, Wix is the cheese—the rare old brickstein.

They called themselves the climbers, but everything that goes up must come down when it hits Duluth, and it's back to the mines for the Patriots.

It was all over but the shouting and the slugging of the umpire at the end of the first inning.

They started in as if they were still playing Grand Forks, and before the Sox struck their gait, these copper diggers from Hancock had tallied a run on a hit batsman, and errors by O'Dea and Lovett. That wasn't Treadway's fault, and Artie felt as badly about it as if he had knifed his grandmother. That was all there was in the game for the Patriots. They never got within smelling distance of the joyous rubber again. Treadway just kept heaving them over, and the Patriots were tearing their lungs out, lunging at them. Only three lonely hits scattered through three innings, and two free passes to first were allowed in the entire nine innings.

But Artie's crowd redeemed themselves in the last half of the inning, and countered with a couple of stiff jolts that nearly made the Patriots take the count. After Livy and Summers were down, Artie drew a base, and Barto got a hit. Then the blue-eyed boy in left field cut the strings on the ball with one of his smashing angles that tore its way through the left fielders and went to the fence, scoring two runs.

That was enough right there. The Sox didn't need any more, and it was unfair to use the visitors the way they did in the sixth and ninth. The tall, handsome gentleman, named Hopkins, who looks like a bank president on a vacation, and who started in to pitch, got a hot liner on his meat hand in the second and retired to right field, while Speiser came in to pitch. Mr. Speiser is the boy that used to twirl for Two Harbors, and win games against Virginia and Eveleth, but he found himself in different company yesterday. It took but three innings for the Sox to find what few things he had, and then they used him shamefully. In the sixth, with Summers down, O'Dea drew another base on balls, and big Barto got one on the nose and drove it to the fence. The hit looked good for two or possibly three bases, but the ball found a broken board in the fence and went through for a homer.

McCormick and Lovett followed with two more hits, but they didn't count, as Krick struck out, and the umps said Lovett was caught on the base lines, although Lovett strenuously denied the allegation.

In the eighth the Sox showed the visitors up heartlessly. Barto started the trouble with a hit, and then the infield went to pieces when McCormick and Lovett tried the bunt game. The bases were all occupied when Krick came to bat. He let three good ones go by, and then Adams poked a little scratch hit over shortstop, scoring two runs. Livingstone brought in another with a clean single, and Adams scored on a long fly by Summers which Hopkins dropped after a long run.

Climbers? It was cruel to wake them so suddenly from their pleasant dreams.

ONE BAD INNING

Causes Fargo Team to Lose First Game to Houghton.

Fargo, June 12.—Special to The Herald.)—Fargo lost yesterday's game by going to the bad in the fourth inning, when Houghton scored three runs on two untimely errors. The locals tried hard to win back the game in the eighth, but failed to tie the score by two runs.

GAME IS CALLED.

Lake Linden and Winnipeg Teams Play Nine Inning Tie.

Winnipeg, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the score tied in the ninth inning, Umpire Anderson called the game on account of darkness, although the sun was still shining.

The Maroons outbatted and outfielded the visitors, but all the luck seemed to be with the Lakes. Winnipeg's only error let in two runs, while the seven errors by the visitors were not responsible for any.

Much dissatisfaction was expressed by the fans when the game was called, as they confidently expected the homo team to win out in the extra innings.

TIGERS BLANKED.

Calumet Wins One Sided Game From the Tail Enders.

Grand Forks, June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—It was a game yesterday between the two extremes, Calumet at the top and the Tigers at the bottom. It was a splendid game for just one inning, but it was all one-sided after that. Bushelman was at the mob for the Tigers and although he fielded his position much better than in previous games, he was given about the worst support a pitcher could receive. Six errors were made by his team mates, which is enough to send any pitcher to the bad.

NELSON-CASEY BOUT

Is First Venture of the Red Jacket Athletic Club.

Hancock, Mich., June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ole Nelson, a Copper country featherweight, has been matched to fight Bing Casey of Lower Michigan before the Red Jacket Athletic club on the evening of June 19. Since defeating Jimmy Devine of Milwaukee at Calumet two weeks ago, Nelson has been in Milwaukee under the care of Harry Pales. The Red Jacket club is a new organization, incorporated under the laws of Michigan. Its purpose is to foster clean sport in the Calumet district, and the Nelson-Casey bout will be its first venture. It will work in harmony with the Milwaukee Athletic club, and through the latter organization will be in position to bring off a number of good boxing shows. Nelson has developed rapidly the past year, and is considered a comer in the fistic game.

Hod Stuart, the greatest coverpoint in the game, formerly a member of the champion Portage Lake team, later with the Calumet seven when, a year ago last season, it won the national honors, and last winter one of the stars in the Pittsburg line-up, has been engaged to manage the Smoky City hockey aggregation for the coming season, and is already recruiting fast players in Canada. It was stated some months ago that Hod was to manage the proposed Chicago team, but this arrangement has fallen through. Stuart's home is in Canada, but he has been in the States for a number of years, first with the team he is now to manage.

SOX STRIKE FAST GAIT

Duluth Team Has Won Eight of Last Ten Games.

Secured Big End of Every Home Series Yet Played.

Just in order that the fans may not overlook it, attention might be called to the fact that the White Sox have struck a pennant winning gait, since they came home from their first trip.

During the present home series, ten games have been played, and O'Dea's men have won eight of these.

They have captured a majority of the games in every series, and made a clean sweep of one.

In the Fargo series they won two games out of three, and repeated the trick against Lake Linden. They followed this up with three straights from Houghton, and have taken the first game of the Hancock series.

They have now won four straight games.

Unfortunately the entire series with Calumet was called off on account of rain, or otherwise the Aristocrats might not now be leading the league.

Only four more games remain to be played on the home grounds before the Sox leave for a trip to the Copper country. Two more games will be played against Hancock today and tomorrow, and on Thursday will come the big double header with Calumet. One of these latter two games will be a postponed game from the last series, and the other, one of the games scheduled to be played at Calumet. Immediately following the games the two teams will take the train for the Copper country and complete the series there on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

These five games will be the most important series yet played in the pennant race, and the fans are anxiously looking forward to them, hoping to see the Sox take at least three of the five.

But few kicks against the work of the team are heard these days. The men are playing good ball and are getting their batting eyes back again. At the present gait which they have struck in the batting line, they are liable to go in and hammer out enough runs to win a game at any moment, and they can never be counted as down and out until the last ball is pitched.

FIVE CREWS ORGANIZED

Arrival of Fine Weather Brings Increased Interest in Rowing.

First Race for Medals Will be Held on June 30.

All of the four-oared boats in the Duluth Boat club were out on the harbor last evening, and two senior and three junior crews were working under the directions of the coaches.

With the arrival of fine weather, interest in the sport is increasing, and the crews are beginning to assume some definite form. Two four-oared senior crews have now been organized, and they are rowing regularly every evening. One of the fours is stroked by Elmer Whyte, with W. L'Estrange rowing three, A. R. Skelton number two, and Franch Church bow.

The members of the other senior four are as follows: A. W. Puck, stroke; H. A. Hamilton, three; E. C. Peterson, two; Dr. G. H. Jones, bow.

The members of the eight-oared crew have not yet been all selected. The four stroked by Whyte will row in the eight, with Whyte as stroke, and the remaining four positions will be filled from the other four-oared crew and the other senior oarsmen of the club.

The junior fours have also been organized and are rowing regularly each evening.

The members are looking forward to the regatta and dance next Friday evening, when the club house will be formally opened for the season.

This will be the first of a number of informal affairs which will be given during the summer.

The first race for the medals or watch fobs which have been offered as prizes, will probably be held on Saturday, June 30. This will probably be the only other club regatta to be held before the race with the Fort William and Port Arthur crews here on July 10.

Good progress is being made on the new cafe and launch house, and the plans for the fitting up of the cafe building are causing much favorable comment. The room will be entirely surrounded with glass, giving a view of the entire harbor. It will be furnished in the old Dutch style with high backed seats, built in. The room will have a seating capacity of about seventy, and it is expected that this will be sufficient to accommodate the increased membership of the club.

How to Break Up a Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. For sale by all leading druggists.

Settlers Contest Claim.

A hearing of the land contest between Dan McDonald and E. E. Saunders, of Brevator, was starter in the local land office yesterday afternoon. When the Fond du Lac reservation was opened last August, McDonald and Saunders took possession of the forty acres described as the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 18-50-17. Both claim that they were on the ground at 9 o'clock of the morning in question, at the moment the lands were open for settlement. McDonald filed his entry papers in the land office at 1:32 p. m., the same day, but Saunders had filed about an hour earlier. The land office officials will have to decide which was actually on the land first. A number of witnesses have been produced by the contestants to establish their claims.

RESTRAINING ORDER

Against City of Eveleth on the Water Plant Payment.

Eveleth, Minn., June 12.—The payment to Dowling Bros., contractors, of approximately $9,000 for installing the municipal water plant has been the cause of the resignation of R. C. Knight, city engineer, and now has brought about the issuing of a restraining order to prevent the payment of the money. The restraining order, issued yesterday, is fathered by A. N. Peterson, who several years ago was village recorder.

A peculiar state of facts will develop if the case comes to trial, as the amount was paid to the Miners' National bank Saturday evening on an assignment from Dowling Bros., and it is a question if the restraining order will now have any effect. Apparently action by Peterson was too long delayed.

BLUE LABEL LEAGUE

Holds Meetings at Stillwater and Elects Its Officers.

Stillwater, Minn., June 12.—In connection with the Minnesota Federation of Labor convention, the Blue Label league held forenoon and afternoon sessions yesterday. There were sixteen delegates in attendance from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Rochester, Mankato, Faribault, St. Cloud, Hibbing and Winona.

The reports show that the collections for the past year amounted to $3,546.40 and the expenditures, chiefly for advertising, amounted to $2,852.75, leaving a balance of $694.80. The report of the work also showed progress. It was decided to provide ways and means for putting organizations in the field for the ensuing year to work in conjunction with the national association.

The following were elected officers: John Kirby of Minneapolis, president; E. G. Hall, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer; Joseph Shartell, Duluth; J. Colson, Mankato; L. R. Porter, St. Cloud, vice presidents. The executive board is made up of the president and secretary, together with Charles Butzenhart, St. Paul; Adam Dimmler, St. Cloud; Joseph Shartell, Duluth.

CHISHOLM BOY LOST.

John Nihalifsky Has Been Missing Since Saturday Afternoon.

Chisholm, Minn., June 12.—John Nihalifsky, the 10-year-old son of Michael Nihalifsky, living about a mile southeast of town, has mysteriously disappeared. The boy, about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, accompanied by a shepherd dog, went out for the purpose of driving home the cows. When neither he nor the dog returned in the course of the evening, the parents began to worry, but finally concluded that he had determined to stay over night at some friend's house, and would come back in the morning. He did not return, however, and the father scoured the neighborhood, but without success. The police were notified late Sunday night, and Chief Connors with eighteen men started out yesterday morning. They found traces of the boy for a mile or so, but these traces ceased a short distance southeast of the Shenango. All day the search continued, but without avail, and it was resumed this morning.

LEADERS AND CANDIDATES ALL HERE AND FIGHT FOR ADVANTAGE IS ON WITH FIELD AGAINST JACOBSON

Lac Qui Parle Man and Followers With Brass Band Accompaniment Arrive.

Evening Largely Given to Buttonholing, Preparatory to Final Struggle.

The lobbies of the Spalding and St. Louis hotels were a seething mass of button-holing politicians last night, and reminded one of scenes in the past at the Merchants and Windsor hotels in St. Paul when the "moulders of laws" were at their busiest. Every train yesterday brought in fresh fuel for the political fire which raged all day in the hotels, and last night a whole raft of notables came in on the Northern Pacific and Omaha trains, which arrived late in the evening. Each as he entered one of the hotels was repeatedly grabbed, and had to explain himself over and over again, and thus the perpetual handshaking went on. If a man in the lobby escaped being introduced to the same people at least five times he was lucky, for the glad hand was hung out all over, and everybody endeavored to introduce everybody else.

It cannot be said that much resulted from this mixing last night, except in the way of a warming up such as is given contesting horses before a race.

FRANK M. EDDY,
Sauk Center,
A Jacobson Leader and One of the Most Interesting Figures of Convention

The politicians button-holed and querled and sounded claims. Robert C. Dunn probably saw and talked earnestly, and jokingly too, to more people than anybody else. A close second to him was his former friend and manager, Joel P. Heatwole, who says he is here on a vacation. These two passed from group to group, and as they would go on, a larger group would form about them, and then scatter in their wake.

Probably the most notable arrival of the evening, and the most looked for, was that of J. F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle, said to be the leading candidate for governor. Mr. Jacobson has always prided himself on being distinctly a man of the people, and very democratic in manner, appearance and habits, but last night he appeared on the scene in a burst of noise and glory which astonished those who know him best. He came up with quite a large party of Lac qui Parle adherents, together with the Madison Concert band in private cars, mind you. Now who would have thought that of Jake?

Instantly on his appearance at the Spalding he was the center of attraction. He became more so when he found that part of the rooms he had reserved for his band had been sold out through some misunderstanding. Jacobson, in anger, is a Jacobson which holds the mind's eye for quite a spell, and it was Jacobson in anger last evening. However, the matter was soon straightened out, and Jacobson was appeased and let the thing pass. There was a great deal of curiosity among those who had never seen him, to gaze upon the candidate from "The Lake that Talks," and for a time he was the most conspicuous figure on the floor. Pretty soon, however, he retired to confer with adherents, and when James A. Martin of St. Cloud arrived, he and Jacobson were closeted together until a late hour. Mr. Martin is probably best described as advisory manager of Mr. Jacobson.

Earlier in the evening State Treasurer Julius H. Block arrived from St. Paul with his workers. He, too, is one of the leading candidates for governor, and immediately upon his arrival he and his workers got busy. This, no doubt, had great effect, for there seems to be no denying that last night there was a growing sentiment in favor of Block and Lord. While Jacobson is certainly still in the lead, it was repeatedly asserted last night that he has lost ground from his position three days ago. Block and Lord are steadily gaining, and it seems that the gain is about neck and neck against between them.

On the last train Sam Langum, the well known secretary of the senate, arrived from his home in the First district and began at once to boom it's favorite, Senator Lord. Langum is a good talker, and boosts convincingly. To those who wish to kill off Jacobson's chances, Mr. Langum presented the case strongly in favor of Lord. He declared that Sam Lord is acceptable to almost every clan in the party, no matter who else a clique may be boosting, because Lord is known as an able man, and fair; and if they wish to kill off the man from Madison, it is necessary, and the only strategical move, to unite on Lord. His talk had its effect, too.

JAMES A. MARTIN,
St. Cloud,
Head of Collins Campaign Two Years Ago, and Now One of Jacobson's Chief Managers.

DAR F. REESE,
St. Paul,
Chairman of Ramsey County Delegation.

Lieutenant-Governor Ray W. Jones of Minneapolis, came in on the Omaha at 1 o'clock and was immediately surrounded by scores of his friends and he has a lot of them. They expressed regret that he was out of politics. "Governor" Jones let go his breakfast food smile and said that he was not necessarily out of politics. That made some of them wonder what he meant, and after inquiry it was found that there is a strong possibility of the lieutenant governor getting into the game for congressman in opposition to Loren Fletcher of Minneapolis.

The wise ones say that Mr. Fletcher is already realizing the immense strength which the lieutenant governor has and is preparing to battle for his official life if Mr. Jones gets into the game.

On the Omaha train came also the Stearns county delegation and among their number were a number of the more than ordinary run. The chairman is Senator Ripley B. Brower, who was strongly talked of for congress a while ago against Congressman Buckman and who at different times has been talked of as the logical candidate for governor in a fight against Governor Johnson. Mr. Brower was the Beau Brummel of the state senate and is not only noted for his good looks, but is also noted for his ability which is of a superior quality. Br. Brower would say but very little. He said that his county delegation is instructed for Jacobson for governor and C. M. Sprague for lieutenant governor.

Mr. Sprague is along with the bunch and was being introduced about the lobby last night by A. Lofgren of Duluth, who is a close friend. He made a very favorable impression last night and says he has a great many more votes than most people suppose.

Another member of the Stearns county delegation is Former Congressman Frank Eddy, now editor of the Sauk Center Herald. He is enthusiastic for his fellow townsman, C. M. Sprague, for lieutenant governor, and says that so fine a man should win. Mr. Eddy, who as congressman was a success, is making a still greater success in the newspaper business and, as his friends say, "has struck his gait." His paragraphs are being quoted in papers all over the country and he is making a niche for himself in the profession. He appeared last night in his usual negligence of garb and became at once one of the central figures on the floor of the Spalding. Since he last appeared in this part of the country he has begun to put on unwonted airs by growing a mustache, which was the subject of the greeting which Heatwole gave him when they met. Mr. Eddy would express no opinion on the outcome, saying that he would have to get posted first.

James A. Martin, another member of the Stearns county delegation, was a central figure wherever he appeared. It will be remembered that he managed the fight for Judge L. W. Collins for the gubernatorial nomination two years ago, and is considered one of the ablest political managers in the state. He would say nothing except that Jacobson will win the nomination.

Another delegate from Stearns county is Alvah Eastman, editor of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, who is, so to speak, a mono-Jacobson man. Mr. Eastman is one of the most noted editors in the state, probably because of his strong personality coupled with his strenuous and never flinching support of any man or measure which he takes up. Two years ago it was Collins first, Collins last and nothing but Collins. And Mr. Eastman never quit for a minute, even after election for he then supported Johnson. Now it is Jacobson all of the time. On the political horizon every cloud formation as seen through Mr. Eastman's glasses bears the features of the man from Lac qui Parle and nobody else is in view at all.

Senator Ward of Alexandria came in last evening with part of the Douglas county delegation. Senator Ward said that the only man for whom they are instructed is E. A. Nelson, of Hallock, for secretary of state, and as to governor he believes that a majority of the delegates from his county are for Jacobson. Outside of these two he says he does not know how they stand and will not until they all arrive today.

* * *

J. F. Rosenwald of Lac qui Parle, who succeeded J. F. Jacobson in the state house of representatives, is a delegate from that county. Rosenwald is noted for his immense bulk and high tenor voice, which, when he spoke in the house of representatives, attracted almost as much attention as had the contra-tenor of his predecessor. Mr. Rosenwald said last night that Jacobson has the field distanced, and is holding his gait in good shape.

"We're going to win," said Mr. Rosenwald, and then we are going to beat Johnson" with 'Jake,'. Minnesota will have a real governor for once anyway. Sure—you bet."

Circulating quietly about the lobbies, getting acquainted and storing up information and inspiration for future mighty good paragraphs and verse, was A. W. Greeley, sage of the swamps, and editor of the Big Fork Compass. Mr. Greeley is interested in drainage more than anything else outside of his newspaper which, while published in the backwoods, is one of the most widely quoted journals in the state. He comes from Itasca county and is proud of it. He probably more than anybody else, except A. L. Cole, has done more agitating for relief from the swamp morasses than any other man in the state. He is a great deal of a philosopher and considerable of a poet. His muse may be a swamp angel but it surely does the business at times.

One of the arrivals on the Great Northern from the West last night was Senator Calhoun, of Minneapolis, who in many respects was one of the strongest men of the last senate. Senator Calhoun so far has no opposition for re-election. The newspaper boys will be glad of this for he was one of the best friends of the item chasers, and without ever trying to make a play to them, was forever entertaining them. Senator Calhoun is not on the Hennepin delegation but he is here to see what he can see and hear what he can hear.

Henry Feig of Willmar, a former representative and at present state elevator inspector, came in last night and at once began mixing. He is quite popular among those who know him, and especially among those who were in the house of representatives with him, for he was always ready to go out of his way to help a friend and did it lots of times.

* * *

The youngest delegate to the convention is George Martin of Bemidji. He is in the Markham-Schisel Lumber company, and was 21 years of age and eligible to vote only the day before the county conventions were held.

* * *

P. C. Koerner and Louis Vogel, candidates for state treasurer, appeared on the ground last evening and immediately began to work to offset anything which C. C. Dinehart had done, he having arrived earlier in the game. Mr. Koerner gave it out last evening that he feels sure of winning on the second ballot. He says that he will show great strength on the first ballot and that he has promises enough of votes on the second ballot to nominate him.

* * *

J. C. Applegate of Cannon Falls, arrived this morning with the delegation from Goodhue county. Mr. Applegate is editor of the Cannon Falls Beacon, one of the most widely known newspapers in the state, and its editorial page conducted by Mr. Applegate himself is recognized as one of the strongest among the country newspapers of Minnesota. Mr. Applegate is also a member of the house of representatives and a great worker in that body. He is widely known for the fight he has made for the readjustment of railroad rates, both personally and through his paper, and he has been a power in bringing about what has been accomplished in Minnesota in that direction.

"If there were not a combination against Jacobson among the other candidates at the opening of the convention, the Madison man would receive the nomination on the second ballot, if he didn't get it on the first," said A. D. Brown of Madison, who is an active worker in Jacobson's behalf around the latter's headquarters at the Spalding.

"Our candidates will enter the convention with at least 400 votes to his credit, and we are fully confident that the remaining 146 needed to secure him the nomination will be forthcoming after a few ballots have been taken. The trouble is with Mr. Jacobson that he is not known well enough among the uninstructed delegates. If they were acquainted with him as well as the people in his home town are, the rush to get on the band wagon would be complete."

Company Denies Responsibility.

The Wallace Contracting company which has been sued for damages on account of the personal injuries claimed to have been received by Sam Morenelli and Joe Petti, while in the company's employ, has filed answers to the complaints, in which it denies all responsibility for the accident. The two men who have brought the suits were operating a steam shovel between Hibbing and Chisholm, July 25, 1905, when they were hurt.

NATIVES ARE ROUTED.

Durban, Natal, June 12.—Col. MacKenzie's column yesterday attacked the rebel natives who had sought shelter in the bush. The latter climbed trees whence they hurled assagais on the troops, but bullets dropped them out of the branches. Over forty were thus killed and altogether one hundred and sixty natives were slain. Darkness ended the operations of the troops, but the rout of the rebels is regarded as practically complete.

PATRICK TELLS WARDEN

That He Had Better Defer Arrangements for His Execution.

Ossining, N. Y., June 12.—Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer whose appeal for a new trial on the charge of murdering William Marsh Rice, was denied yesterday, suggested to Warden Johnson of the state prison today that the warden defer his arrangements for Patrick's execution next week. Patrick, who did not seem despondent, notified the warden he was preparing an application to the United States circuit court for a writ of error and that this would probably stay the execution. Warden Johnson, however, informed Patrick that he should continue his arrangements unless stopped by order of the court.

The warden said he will issue tickets on Thursday to the necessary witnesses to Patrick's execution.

ALL STILL IN THE AIR

New Delegations Arrive, But Nothing is Definite Yet.

Conde Hamlin, State Chairman, Comes Up From St. Paul.

The remainder of the Hennepin county delegation together with a crowd of rooters, came up this afternoon in a special train, arriving at the Union depot at 2:20 o'clock. A number of others who had already arrived here went down this morning as far as Carlton to meet the special and came up with their fellows, explaining on the way the situation as best they could and also telling them of the threatened break in the delegation. However, as to that break, this afternoon there does not seem to be much to it and it is expected that if it occurs it will be a desertion of only two or three at best.

On this special were 122 people. It is variously claimed that the majority is with Block or Lord, according to whom you are talking to, but it is believed that it will be easy to combine this difference against Jacobson.

This afternoon, in connection with the demand made just before noon by the Jacobson forces on Iverson to deliver to them the Lord and Iverson delegates in the First district, a little flurry was caused by the rumor which sprang from nowhere in particular, that there were about thirty delegates in the First district who are for Jacobson as a second choice. A poll of some of them, seems to give ground for the belief that this may be true and now the anti-Jacobson forces are working hard to keep the delegations solid to offset this, but keeping any delegations solid seems to be a hard job. Repeatedly attempts are made to put up a combination but each and every time they have failed and one prominent politician said this afternoon:

"This is the funniest outfit I ever saw. Nobody seems to be able to control his delegates and supporters; and such a thing as having them solid enough to deliver in case of a trade is unknown to the present gathering. It looks to me that after all, the matter will have to go to the floor of the convention without being fixed up in advance, and each man take his chances."

Julius Schmahl said this afternoon, that he will be nominated and that he considers it beyond doubt now. He has secured promises from the most important of the candidates that they will not molest him and as that was all that he was afraid of he feels certain of success now that this is out of the way. Julius is keeping his hands off the other mix-ups and is considered wise to do so. He assured The Herald that he could be put down as the next secretary of state.

* * *

The Halden-Iverson fight for state auditor still continues to be the center of attraction and it is generally believed that Halden holds the whip hand and is steadily gaining. Some of the demands made on Iverson this morning have put him in a corner for he finds that he has not the strength to swing things as he would wish and as are demanded.

Conde Hamlin of St. Paul, chairman of the Republican state committee, arrived in the city on the afternoon Northern Pacific train, just in advance of the special bearing the Hennepin county delegation. The Ramsey county delegation will arrive shortly after 7 o'clock this evening.

"I am just as much at sea on the governorship situation as anyone else," said Mr. Hamlin. "Jacobson is apparently in the lead now, so far as the number of votes is concerned, but I cannot say whether he will or will not be nominated.

"It is a question whether the meeting will last more than a day or not. Affairs may all be wound up by Wednesday night. The delegates will remain in session during the evening, in all likelihood, if there is a chance of finishing the business of the convention. This would allow them an opportunity to go home on the night trains.

"I am glad to be in Duluth, and glad that the convention is being held here. It is a good thing for the city and a good thing for the Republican party in Minnesota. Duluth and St. Louis county have been too little known to the remainder of the state. The people don't know what you have got up here, but this will give a lot of them an opportunity to see for themselves. It is fortunate, indeed, that Duluth was selected as the convention city."

With the falling down of combinations, and the lack of call for caucuses, many of the delegates are planning to attend the ball game at Athletic park this afternoon, and it is likely that but few conferences, if any will be held before tonight.

* * *

An effort is being made to hold a caucus of the full delegation of the Ninth district this afternoon, but so far it has not been connected up. Very few caucuses are even talked about yet.

NEWSPAPER BUNCH.

Well Known Reporters From Twin Cities Here for Convention.

Quite a bunch of the best known newspaper men of the Twin Cities are here to look after the news of the convention, and ante-convention doings for their respective papers. Charles B. Cheney, is here for the Minneapolis Journal, and is assisted by Melville Bacheller.

William G. McMurchy is representing the St. Paul Daily News, Vance Chapman the St. Paul Dispatch, Worth C. Harder the Minneapolis Tribune and Frank Force of the Minneapolis Tribune and some others are expected up this afternoon.

SOME OF THE VISITORS.

Prominent Politicians Who Are Here Watching and Working the Game.

A. B. Kelly of Northfield, a former representative, and J. B. Kelly of Dakota county, also a former representative and a brother of the other Kelly, are here as delegates from their respective counties. Ell Warner, one of the bosses of Ramsey county is also here and some other well known men present are: Senator Ole Mausten of Aitkin, H. A. Rider of Little Falls and Donald Grand of Faribault.

Harvey W. Grimmer, executive clerk for Governor Johnson is here watching the play. He was, before entering the governor's office, one of the active Twin City political reporters. John C. King, another Democrat and who is state librarian under Governor Johnson is also present, watching the fun. J. Gajerreaut, of Aitkin, also a Democrat is here.

Senator Dan Shell, of Nobles county, is at the Spalding and is sizing up the situation, but saying very little about it.

BLOCK THE MOSES.

G. W. Walsh Sings Praises of St. Peter Candidate.

George W. Walsh of the Ramsey county delegation, who is here, is an enthusiastic Block adherent. He believes that Julius H. Block is the very man whom the Republican party needs to drag it through the slough of despond into which it has fallen. Said he today:

"With the Scandinavians split up as they are, it strikes me that Block is the strongest candidate for the polls that has yet been offered. At any time he is a strong man, but particularly just now. I hope that he will win out, and I believe that before the voting starts tomorrow it will have been realized that an agreement must be reached on a man on whom all factions can unite. If that is done, Block stock will go a-soaring."

CITY BRIEFS.

Thomas R. Hancock has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court. He alleges that his liabilities are $1,824.49 and that he has no assets.

The Duluth branch of the People's Sovereignty league, which was to have held a meeting in the city council chambers this evening, has postponed its meeting a week, on account of the Republican state convention.

The 129th anniversary of the Stars and Stripes will be observed in Duluth Thursday. Flags are to be displayed from all public buildings, and the members of the G. A. R. are endeavoring to interest individuals enough to get them to display the national colors on their places of business and residence. The day will be observed throughout the country.

E. L. Millar has published an interesting brochure that is being distributed among the delegates and crowds in the hotel lobbies today. It contains much information valuable to the visitors and gives a list of the counties in the state, together with the number of delegates each is entitled to. It also mentions the places of interest in the city and tells how to get to them.

The Garfield Republican club is keeping open house in its rooms in the Kalamazoo block, and the reception committee has established an information bureau at the union depot. There visitors may obtain information as to rooms which may be rented.

The Theosophical study class will meet at 3 o'clock tomorrow at Flaaten auditorium. Subject: "What Is Theosophy?" "Scientific Corroboration of Theosophy."

Charging desertion, Augusta Nordland has begun an action in the district court for a divorce from Edward Nordland.

The Lake Superior Cement company, a concern that proposes to manufacture and deal in cement, filed its articles of incorporation with the register of deeds today. The incorporators are Alva L. Merritt, J. W. Merritt and L. C. Merritt, all of Duluth. The company is capitalized at $300,000, of which $150,000 represents preferred stock and the remainder the common stock.

WELLINGTON'S VANITY.

London Sketch: Among the portraits at the Royal Academy there are some which could tell stories; some with little touches to reveal the idosyncrasies of subjects no less than of painters. Is the story of Lawrence's portrait of the duke of Wellington commonly known?

The duke had only one vanity—his wrist was like steel. Now, when he was given the sword of state to carry it was his infinite delight that he was able to carry it upright; all his predecessors had had to slope it toward the shoulder. He would go down to posterity, he resolved, glorified by the power of his wrist.

In vain Sir Thomas Lawrence pointed out that, as a matter of art, it would never do; that the sight of a man perennially carrying a sword from his wrist would fatigue those who looked at his picture. The duke insisted upon having his way. Lawrence did manage to smuggle in a cushion upon which the duke seems to rest his elbow, but close examination shows the arm and cushion do not meet.

HEIGHT OF ATMOSPHERE.

Chicago Tribune: One hundred and thirty-one miles is the height of the atmosphere as measurer by Prof. T. J. J. See, who determines the thickness of the air envelope by noting the difference between the time of sunset and the complete disappearance of blue from the sky.

The moment at which the blue changes into black can be observed quite easily with approximate certainty by the naked eye when the sky is clear, and by trigonometry may be ascertained the distance below the horizon of the sun at the moment of change. By this means may be calculated the height of the smallest of the illuminated particles of oxygen and nitrogen which give to the sky its blueness of tint by the reflection of the smallest wave lengths of the sun's light.

The instant of change from blue to black is possibly a little difficult of exact observation, but the method is not more doubtful than that based on the observation of shooting stars. The shooting star method gives a result not greatly differing from the vanishing blue method. The former gives the height of the atmosphere at 109 miles.

WELCOME, DELEGATES.

Tomorrow morning the Republican state convention will gather in the Armory to select a state ticket, and by tonight a large proportion of the delegates will be in the city to join in the merry game of politics that is going on.

In behalf of the city and its people The Herald takes great pleasure in telling the visitors that they are as welcome as they would be in their own homes; that the city is theirs; that every hand is extended to them in warmest greeting; that everybody hopes they will have a good time and will come again and come often.

They are going to be pretty busy. They have much work to do. They have an entire state ticket to nominate, and for most of the places there is a large field to choose from that will keep them closely occupied in making the selections. They are here for business, not for play or pleasure.

But The Herald hopes that since so many of them are here for the first time, they will take time and occasion to look about a little and notice what there is in this corner of the state. They will note that Duluth, with a population of 33,000 in 1890 and 53,000 in 1900, has nearly 70,000 people today, and is growing rapidly. They will note that St. Louis county, with a population of 120,000 souls, has an assessed valuation of nearly $100,000,000, of which Duluth has $31,000,000. They will note that in this county are great iron deposits, from which the state gets revenues not only in taxes, but in royalties from deposits on state school lands, a revenue which will increase each year. They will note that in Northern Minnesota there are large areas of unoccupied lands which are covered with swamps, and which need only an expenditure of something like a dollar an acre to be made into the finest kind of farming lands. They will note that from the importance already attained by Duluth, it is clear that when these lands are drained and settled, this city will be the capital of an empire greater in area and richness than many full-fledged states. They will note that the strategic situation of Duluth, close to cheap water transportation, with railroad lines reaching out to all parts of the West and Northwest, is certain to make her a great city.

If they note these things and many others that might be mentioned, they cannot fail to see that Duluth, now the third city in the state, will one day be the first; they cannot fail to see that Northern Minnesota, which has made great progress in spite of the handicap of swamp lands and unoccupied state lands which have not been settled because the state has not offered them for sale, is emerging from the wilderness into cultivation and industrial activity.

If they get time to think of these things, they will remember in their deliberations that this end of the state is entitled to greater consideration than it has had in the past, and that for the glory and advantage of the entire commonwealth, it is the duty of the state government to help this advance as much as it can.

THE NATURALIZATION BILL.

In spite of rather determined opposition from some quarters, the house the other day passed the new naturalization law, and passed it under suspension of the rules, an unusual thing in a measure so important. Bourke Cochran of New York attempted to defeat the bill by filibustering, but was unsuccessful.

If the senate takes similar action, the bill will work a considerable improvement in the present slipshod and unsatisfactory methods of naturalization. It establishes a bureau of immigration and naturalization, to be located in Washington, and provides for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the country.

At present the process of naturalization is extremely informal. Any federal or state court of record can issue naturalization papers, and practically the only requirements are five year's residence in this country and a couple of witnesses who can swear to the residence and to good behavior. In many parts of the country wholesale citizenship factories are in operation just before election time, and with politicians paying the fees aliens must be pretty levelheaded not to imagine that American citizenship is a pretty cheap thing when its poked at them and forced upon them so freely and so unceremoniously.

The bill requires applicants for naturalization to file their applications ninety days before they are acted upon by the court. United States district attorneys are authorized to appear and cross-examine applicants and witnesses.

Two important provisions are that applicants must be able to speak English before they can receive their final papers, and that they must swear that they intend to reside permanently in the United States. Much objection was made to the requirement that applicants for citizenship must speak English, but it is hard to see wherein such objections are well founded. To say the least, applicants for citizenship who have lived in this country five years without learning the speech of this nation are open to the suspicion of not being the best possible material for citizenship.

Much annoyance has been caused the government by fraudulent certificates, forged or assigned by actual citizens to residents of foreign lands in order that they might come into this country with their aid. Provision is made in the bill for the cancellation of such certificates when they are found to be fraudulent.

You can tell the candidates by their hearty delight in greeting the delegates.

Now that grafting employes of the Pennsylvania railroad have been discharged, will the coal companies keep on showering them with gifts in the name of "friendship"? Not yet.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

The other day in New York a man was standing on a platform waiting for an elevated train when he fainted, and he would have been ground to death under an approaching train had it not been for the presence of mind of a newsboy who stood near.

Now if that man had been killed, there is no question that his death would have been classified as the result of suicide. Investigation would have developed some sort of trouble in his life—the life without it is rarer than most people imagine—and it would have been said that he had thrown himself under the wheels of the approaching train with the deliberate intention of killing himself.

His memory would have been blasted with the disgrace of self-destruction, and when he could no longer defend himself against attack he would have been labelled as a coward; for it is the coward who seeks relief from trouble in self-imposed death. The brave man will "take up arms against his sea of troubles and by opposing end them."

All of which shows not only the unreliable character of circumstantial evidence, but man's proneness to think the worst. If circumstances surrounding the death of a fellow-citizen lend themselves in the remotest degree to give color to a theory of suicide, the public leaps to the conclusion that it is suicide, and will not entertain anything else. This is a most unjust conclusion, and the better way would be to give the dead man the benefit of the doubt. Suicide is cowardice, and to brand a dead man as a coward when he is no longer on earth to answer charges is cruel indeed.

Circumstantial evidence, too, has undoubtedly convicted many men of crimes of which they were innocent. Yet certain crimes, and among these the most atrocious, must from their very nature be proven principally by the evidence of circumstances. A deliberate, cold-blooded murder, thought out in advance and coolly and carefully planned, will not be committed in the presence of eye-witnesses. If the crime is ingeniously planned, the only evidence possible is circumstantial. A bloody finger print, a lock of hair, a foot print, a thread of cloth; trifles like these may be formidable enough to act as the foundation for a condemning structure of circumstantial evidence.

So while much stress has always been laid on the danger of convictions upon circumstantial evidence, it must not be forgotten that oftentimes such evidence is the only instrument that justice can use in seeking her ends. Therefore, while it must be used with careful discrimination, it must be used at times.

TRUSTS AND HARD TIMES.

In discussing the business failures in this country in the last quarter of a century, the New York Sun attempts to draw a parallel from the fact that the liabilities of commercial failures were less in the last six years, during the "trust period", than they were in the six years from 1870 to 1876, before the age of combinations. It shows that while the population has doubled, the national wealth more than trebled and American domestic and foreign commerce enormously expanded, the liabilities of the last six years are $771,387,486 against $879,288,900 in a similar period thirty years ago.

"This may or may not be, in whole or in part, due to a business system which is just now the object of violent attack," says the Sun.

In the first place the comparison between the panic period of the early '70s, and the unprecedentedly prosperous period that opened the twentieth century, is manifestly unfair. Times were desperately hard in the former period, and the country has been overflowing with prosperity and industrial activity in the past five years. This disposes, in a very large measure, of this attempt to show that business conditions are more stable in the period of "trusts" than in the period of competition.

Yet it cannot be doubted that strong combinations of industrial enterprises should tend toward commercial stability. One fruitful cause of panics before the day of combinations and monopolies was overproduction. When many leading commodities are controlled by combinations, the danger of overproduction is greatly lessened, because in the old days manufacturers simply made goods, in response to a demand, as rapidly as they could, and the result was that inevitably, sooner or later, they would glut the market, producing stagnation and hard times. A trust, on the other hand, can regulate its output to suit the demand.

Industrial combinations, as such, are no longer "objects of violent attack." It is becoming pretty generally understood that they are as logical and as inevitable as labor-saving machinery. In fact it would be utterly impossible for this nation to maintain its business upon any other basis. But while combination has produced great saving, and has therefore been a theoretical blessing to the American people, the profits resulting from it have gone to a few, instead of being distributed among the people. It is this feature of it with which fault is found, and it is to secure a more equitable distribution of the profits of the trusts, and not to destroy the trusts, that reformers are now working.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Women who try to keep in style have a hard time of it, as everybody must have observed," said F. L. Walsh of New York, at the Spalding, representing a large Eastern drygoods house. "That means all women have a hard time, for I never ran across one yet that didn't try to keep in style.

"This year they are having more trouble than usual. The first troubles that worried the brains of womankind this spring were the shortage in elbow gloves and the difficulty of buttoning the gowns down the back unaided. Now two more pieces of ill news has been broken to them.

"Hosiery is going up. Prices are advancing, and the gloves are in a measure to blame for this, strange as it may seem. When the elbow gloves came into favor, operators in the hosiery mills were induced by offers of better pay to leave their places and enter the silk glove factories, where their knowledge would be useful. This state of affairs was especially true at Chemnitz, which is the largest hosiery market in the world.

"Importers doing business in the United States are compelled to pay an advance ranging from 10 to 20 per cent on half hose and proportionately higher prices on women's hosiery. American manufacturers suffer from the same cause as the Chemnitz makers, but as they escape tariff duties they can do business at a comparatively slight advance. This state of affairs is predicted by hosiery experts to continue about a year, or as long as the long-glove fashion prevails. The situation is constantly growing worse.

"The rise is hosiery prices is not the only worry confronting women who keep up with the fashions. A Chicago physician makes dire predictions concerning the elbow glove. It appears that fashion decrees that the glove shall be worn unwrinkled, and to prevent it gathering into folds, a bracelet, called a slave bangle, is placed around the glove just below the elbow.

"On taking the bangle off, it is found to have left a deep mark in the skin. Paralysis of the nerves and muscles of the arm and hand is the least of the evils of the thing. Swollen arteries and veins will come, according to this physician, and as a result there will be a badly developed case of redness of the hands. My lady who prides herself on her soft, white hands will wonder at the growing redness and will waste much time and money applying bleaching lotions. This doctor has it that she will suddenly come to realize some day that her hands are as red and ugly as those of the kitchen maid, and then she will apply to some physician, who will break the news that the cause of the trouble is the slave bangle on her glove. But what of it? If fashion says to wear the bangle, why it must be worn, and that is all there is to it."

"The Louisville & Nashville road is enjoying a large increase in its tonnage," said F. F. Short of Chicago, at the Spalding. "This is chiefly because of the remarkable development that is taking place in the Birmingham district, which is tributary to the road. That territory, it is said, now produces four times as much tonnage as the entire cotton crop of the country, upon which the Southern roads formerly depended on in the main for their revenue traffic.

"The iron, steel and coal traffic has now become of immensely more importance, and the Birmingham district is the center of the industry in the South. The Louisville & Nashville gets the great bulk of the district's iron and steel traffic, as well as a large share of the coal and coke of the district. The development of the iron and steel trade there has been accompanied by a similar expansion in many of the allied industries, with the result that tonnage to be moved into and out of the district is increasing at an unprecedented rate. So much is this the case that the Louisville & Nashville finds it almost impossible to keep itself supplied with anything like enough cars to meet the requirements of its traffic demands.

"The road builds a large share of its own equipment. It has big manufacturing plants at Decatur and South Louisville. These can turn out twenty-five new cars a day, and now they are operated at their full capacity. Their entire output goes into service these days just as soon as it issues from the shops, and still there is a continued cry for more cars.

"Industrial development on the Louisville & Nashville is not limited to the Birmingham district. It is going on at an equally rapid rate throughout the entire territory tributary to the line. In the last eight years the road's gross earnings have increased from $21,000,000 to $42,000,000, and the gain is still going on."

Monsieur Leather.

Detroit Journal: A gentleman traveling in Europe engaged the services of a courier. Arriving at an inn in Austria the traveler asked his servant to enter his name in accordance with the police regulations of that country. The man replied that he had already anticipated the order and registered him as an American gentleman of means. "But how did you write my name?" asked the master. "I can't exactly pronounce it; but I copied it carefully from your portmanteau, sir." "But it is not there," was the reply. "Bring me the book." The register was brought and revealed, instead of a very plain English name of two syllables, the following portentous entry: "Monsieur Warranted Solid Leather."

Stago Thunder.

London Tit-Bits: Mr. Beerbohm Tree, as everyone knows, is a very exacting stage manager. On one occasion, when rehearsing a revival of "The Tempest," the man whose duty it was to suggest the "storm, with thunder and lightning," with which the play opens, could not satisfy him. Time after time he made them repeat their efforts. Presently a blinding flash of lightning illuminated the stage, followed by a deafening peal of thunder. "That's better," said Mr. Tree, grudgingly, "but I think it might be improved upon." "If you please, sir," observed the master carpenter, mildly, "that was a real one."

THE WEATHER.

The weather is specially imported for the convenience of the delegates to the Republican state convention. They have a lot of hard, hot work ahead of them, and because of that it has been made cool by a mild wind from the lake. But it is desirable that conditions should be pleasant, so the skies are cloudless, the sun shines amiably over all, and the combination spells perfection. Furthermore, the weather man expects it to hold just about that way through tomorrow at least. Last night's lowest temperature was 49 deg., and yesterday's highest was 58 deg.

A year ago today the weather was perfection of another sort, with a southwest breeze bringing warmer weather, and the skies unclouded.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Low pressure areas overlie Alberta, Arizona and Gulf states, causing light rains in Pacific and South Atlantic districts. The barometer is high over the lake region and off the Pacific coast, cool temperature prevailing in the first of these two districts. Clear skies are the rule in the lake region, Central valleys and Northwest. The Alberta disturbance is attended by increase in warmth from Montana northward. The slow easterly movement of the lake region high and Western low pressure areas will likely cause a continuance of northeasterly winds and fair and moderately cool weather in this section tonight and Wednesday."

THE NEW MEMBER.

He was a country senator, and when he took the floor
The eyes of fellow-members slowly turned to look him o'er;
His hair was long, his voice was loud, and whiskers decked his chin,
His "newness" advertised itself before he could begin.
He paused to gather dignity, with handkerchief in hand,
His movements were deliberate, but very far from "grand."
And well they knew, from former years, about what he would say,
But still they couldn't smile in quite the same old way.

"I'm not a ready speaker, gentlemen," he slowly said,
"And eloquence has never yet through me its luster shed,
But if you'll take my simple life, and its brief pages scan,
I think you'll agree that I have been an honest man.
I represent constituents in this great body here,
And I expect to serve them faithfully from year to year."
He paused in awkward silence, and stroked his beard of gray,
But still they couldn't smile in quite the same old way.

It was his maiden effort, and, while he strove to speak,
His voice would sometimes quaver, and then again would squeak;
He talked against monopoly and over-reaching trusts—
They recognized in his remarks the old reformers' thrusts.
He cried against corruption, its baneful lust, and then
He said they should be dealt with by true and upright men.
They watched him as with fervor his form would bend and sway,
But still they couldn't smile in quite the same old way.

It was the old familiar speech—they used to call it "cant."
And used to laugh within their sleeves to hear that kind of rant;
But somehow when this new man spoke, although he was uncouth,
They seemed to realize that he was dealing with the truth.
Some glanced about, with furtive looks, some trembled just a bit,
For well they knew those shafts at last had found a place to hit;
They were, of course, ridiculous, these things he tried to say,
But still they couldn't smile in quite the same old way.

—Puck.

Silly Partisanship.

Washington Post: There is one prominent Republican paper, and we know of no other, that finds the "Republican party high on the wave of popularity all over the country." Of course, there are many little country weeklies, edited by postmasters and county printers, that fail to perceive any difference in the relative positions of parties in 1904 and 1906. These organs look at the returns of 1904 and at the Republican majority of 112 in the house of representatives of the Fifty-ninth congress and see no reason to doubt that the Sixtieth congress will have a big majority on the G. O. P. side. But the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is one of the most conspicuous Republican papers in the trans-Mississippi region, and it joins the small fry in ignoring the most obtrusive fact of the political situation—the dark cloud of discouragement and doubt that lowers in the Republican horizon. While the shrewdest of the Republican leaders in and out of congress are looking over the returns of 1904 and comparing them with the returns of 1902, and seeing, in present conditions, a demand for hard work to retain their party's hold on the next house by even a very narrow margin, our Missouri contemporary seems not to have been shown how the case stands. If the Globe-Democrat will recall the elections of 1892 and 1894, it will see that the party which came in "high on the wave of popularity all over the country" in the former year went down, far down, and completely out in the latter year, and has stayed out ever since. There have been other changes in congressional elections equally sudden and surprising. Look, for example, at the contrast between 1872 and 1874, the Forty-third and Forty-fourth congresses, and you will find why the Democrats are confident and the Republicans apprehensive as to this year's campaign.

Bemidji Pioneer: About the only people who consider Roosevelt's "big stick" a menace to the nation these days are the ones connected with the institutions on which it has been used; the meat trust, the oil trust, etc.

North Branch Review: The Republican convention can do no better than nominate Odin Halden of Duluth for state auditor. While not an active candidate yet, his friends are doing some yeoman work in his behalf. Mr. Halden is a good fellow in every sense of the word and is a whirlwind of a campaigner when he goes after anything.

Republicans Helpless—Must Take Johnson—or Dunn.

Anoka Free Press: It really doesn't make any difference which one of the proposed candidates for governor receives the nomination at Duluth next week. It may be Jacobson or it may be Cole, or it may even be Block. It is all the same. The Republican can not muster sufficient strength to elect either one. And what is more—they know it, but, of course, refuse to admit it.

The situation is simply this: The Republican party is split in two. One half of the party, two years ago, perpetrated an abominable outrage upon the other half. There is only one way to heal the breach, and that is for the erring half to acknowledge its wrongs to the other half—not merely by word of mouth, but by actual deeds—by joining in the nomination and election of the man whom they unjustly, maliciously and dishonestly defeated two years ago. To do this requires sacrifice of personal feelings—to acknowledge and rectify a wrong always does. But until this very step has been taken it is absurd to look for a united Republican party in Minnesota. Until this step has been taken, one faction will ever be ready to unite with the Democrats and down the other. It will be so this fall. Already many of the Republicans are saying: "If Johnson was good enough to be elected by one wing of the Republicans last time, he is good enough to be elected by the other wing this year," and these will substantiate their remarks with their votes. To talk about harmony is all good and well. But when it comes to voting, the deep, flagrant injustice suffered by the regular nominee and his thousands of friends two years ago will rankle with sufficient force to guide the vote where it will afford a small measure of satisfaction.

Then, as between Jacobson and Johnson, many will feel that it is a case of Scandinavianism anyhow, and they might as well vote for the one they have, especially as there is a likelihood of his election in all events, while there is absolutely none as far as the other is concerned. As for Block, Cole and the others that have been named, an impartial and unbiased review of the existing conditions will convince anyone that their chances are even poorer than those of Jacobson.

As this paper has reiterated time and again, it will have to be either Dunn or Johnson. The Republicans have placed themselves in a position where they must content themselves with the one or the other. They are powerless to elect anyone else. And next Wednesday's convention at Duluth will tell whether or not they will continue further the luxury of biting off their nose to spite their face.

A Suggestion.

Softly in classic rhyme
Now let us greet her,
For it is summertime,
And we shall meet her!
In this or other clime
No one can beat her!
Nulli secunda!

Do not describe her dress,
Not if you're able;
Leave all such prettiness
For women's babel;
Mere man can only guess
At things unstable!
Lusus naturae!

Will she choose you or me?
Who'll be her hero?
Will all our pleading be
Dashed down to zero?
Maybe, myself I'll see
(Dum spiro spero!)
Facile princeps!

Who'll be the one to cross
Pons asinorum?
Who'll spend on her his dross
More majorum?
Who knows—for she's the boss!
Satis verborum!
Vivit regina!

Keeping Up the Joke.

Detroit Journal: In an English village there lived a dull witted boy. It was a great local joke to offer him the choice of a penny and a three-penny piece. The lad invariably chose the penny. A stranger one day saw him choose the penny rather than the three-penny bit, and asked him for the reason.

"Is it because the penny is larger?" the stranger asked.

"Naw," was the response, "not 'cause it is the biggest. But if I took the three-penny bit they'd soon stop offering it."

Why Worry About Your Children?

Right Food Goes Far To Keep Them Strong and Healthy.

Give your children plenty of good, pure food, rich in nutrition but easy to digest, and let them romp and play out doors to their hearts' content and you need not worry about their health this Summer.

We know of no other food so good, so pure, so rich in all the nutrition that little folks need, and so very easy to digest, as Malta-Vita, the delicious malted whole wheat food.

Malta-Vita gives children the highest possible degree of nourishment that their young bodies need, but does not tax the strength of their stomachs or overheat their blood. All the valuable food elements contained in this crisp, delicious, flaked whole wheat food are practically predigested and are taken up quickly by the system, forming pure red blood and giving vitality to the body and mind alike. It is the ideal food for every one all the year around, but, most especially, it is the one perfect food for children in the Summer.

A bowiful of Malta-Vita with milk or cream, and perhaps a little fresh fruit or fruit juice, makes the ideal breakfast for little folks, and it goes far toward making the complete, ideal breakfast for the rest of the family. Such a breakfast starts you off on the day just right. It gives you the life and vigor to accomplish things and enjoy yourself. It is a safeguard against indigestion, and positive insurance of good health. All grocers sell Malta-Vita. Now 10 cents.

ELEVEN YEARS' CONTEST ENDED

Col. Dupont Defeats Addicks in Delaware's Senatorial Deadlock.

Dover, Del., June 12.—Col. Henry A. Dupont of Wilmington, last night defeated J. Edward Addicks in the contest for the vacant seat from Delaware in the United States senate. Mr. Dupont was selected to fill the vacancy by a caucus of the Republican members of the legislature, which was in session several hours. The action of the caucus ends a contest that has continued for eleven years, during which time Addicks was the candidate of the Union Republicans for United States senator. The legislature will meet in special session Tuesday and each house will take a separate vote for United States senator and the two houses will meet jointly on Wednesday to verify the vote.

There was a full attendance of members of both wings of the Republicans at the caucus last night. There was a long discussion and when the vote was finally taken it stood: Dupont, 20; Addicks, 10; H. H. Ward, 1. Following the announcement of the vote, Senator Connor, an Addicks supporter, made a motion that Dupont's selection be made unanimous, which was adopted. The Democratic members of the legislature have criticised Gov. Lea for calling an extra session of the legislature and they have declared they will take no part in the voting.

FOR A FOREIGN TRIP.

Rev. Hjalmar Henrickson Going to Sweden This Month.

Rev. Hjalmer Henrickson of the Bethel Baptist church will have a three months' vacation this summer, and during the time he will go abroad, visiting in Sweden at several places. His father died recently over there, and that is one reason why he will take the trip. He will visit in the city of Sundsvall in the Northern part of Sweden, and other points in that vicinity, where he has a large acquaintance, having been the pastor in former years at Loyda, not far from Sundsvall. In speaking of his trip the other day Rev. Henrickson said he would gladly take messages from people here to their relatives in that part of Sweden. He will leave June 18, in company with George P. Hanson, sailing on the Scandia-American line.

A reception will be given in Rev. Henrickson's honor this evening. It will be a farewell gathering, and will be held at the Bethel Baptist church, Ninth avenue east and Third street, at 8 o'clock.

NEW YORK HAS $500,000 FIRE.

New York, June 12.—Property valued at more than $500,000 was destroyed, nearly a score of persons were injured by fire in the block bounded by Bergen and Brook avenues, and One Hundred and Forty-seventh and One Hundred and Forty-eighth streets, the Bronx, early today. The principal loss falls upon the Stuyvesant and Wheelock piano companies, and Charles Rieger's Sons, makers of bank and store fixtures.

DOCTOR EXPLAINS

His Article in the Medical Magazines About Coffee.

One of the most famous medical publications in the United States is the "Alkaloidal Clinic," in a recent number of which an entertaining article on coffee by a progressive physician and surgeon was published. In explaining his position in the matter this physician recently said:

"In the article in question I really touched but lightly upon the merits of Postum Food Coffee. I have had several cases of heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness where a permanent cure was effected by merely using Postum in place of coffee without any other treatment.

"In my own family I have used Postum for three years and my children actually cry for it and will not be satisfied with any other beverage. Indeed they refuse to eat until they have had the customary cup of Postum and as it is a rebuilder and does nothing but good I am only too glad to let them have it.

"To get the best results we boil the Postum at least 20 minutes and it is then settled by adding a little cold water, then the addition of fresh cream makes a beverage I now prefer to the very best coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Authorities are agreed that Postum is a wonderfully quick and sure rebuilder. Ten days' trial in place of coffee proves it.

SHE DENIES SHE TOOK HIS MONEY

Florence Flett Thinks London Should be in Insane Asylum.

Bemidji, Minn., June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Florence Flett, who was seriously stabbed at Baudette, recently by John London, of West Duluth, has given out a statement concerning London and some of his charges: "This talk about my having taken money from London is absurd," she says, "I never took a cent of the man's money. He charged me with it, though, saying that I had taken several thousand dollars and a number of valuable diamonds, and even went so far as to search my trunk at Fort Francis. I can't see any reason why the man should lie after making so much trouble. He has followed me around continually. I did all I could to get away from him. I think he should have a few years in the insane asylum after he is released from the pen." Miss Flett left Bemidji yesterday for Chicago, where she will remain for several months.

Roy O. Kane, agent for just one day for the Great Northern at Wilton, is now in the Beltrami county jail and must answer charges of having forged and attempted to utter three express orders. Kane is a man of middle age and claims that he has a family in Indiana.

Mrs. Nancy DeCoster, living in South Bemidji, has been arrested, charged with the neglect of her family. The woman has been living in a small shack with eight of her children, and the premises were filthy and unsanitary beyond description. County Attorney McDonald was informed of the conditions prevailing at the home of the woman, and he had her arrested and brought before Justice Skinvik, where her case was continued until the 19th inst. Bail was fixed at $750, which the woman was unable to obtain.

JURY FINDS MEAT PACKERS GUILTY

cases considered, which is practically identical with the others, is that charging Cudahy & Co., with accepting a rate of 23 cents a hundred pounds on a shipment of lard to New York for export to Germany when the legal tariff then on file with the interstate commerce commission was 35 cents. The trial began last week and after lengthy arguments, was continued until this morning, when Judge Smith McPherson of Red Oak, Iowa, the presiding judge, instructed the jury.

The present case bears unusual importance in the list of rebate trials to come up in this court for it is the first time that any concern has been brought to trial before a jury on a charge affecting export rates as applied to the interstate commerce act. Counsel for the defendants in this trial contended that the court lacked jurisdiction, which was overruled by Judge McPherson, and then that when they signed a contract covering the 23 cent rate it was legal and that the Burlington later raised its tariff to 35 cents. Judge McPherson's instructions to the jury covered the points fully.

Judge McPherson, in stating the case said that according to the indictment returned against the defendant, the packing company signed a contract to run until Dec. 31, 1905, in which the Burlington railroad agreed, with other connecting railroads, to carry packing house products from the Missouri river to Germany, billed via New York; that the rate agreed upon included a rate of 23 cents a hundred between the Mississippi river and New York; that while this contract was in existence the Burlington railroad filed with the interstate commerce commission an amended tariff of 35 cents on these products from the Mississippi river to New England, and that the defendant continued to accept the 23 cent rate after Aug. 6, 1905, when the alleged offense was committed. Judge McPherson says:

The constitution of the United States gives congress the power to regulate commerce between the states, and with foreign nations. And in the exercise of this power congress did enact the two statutes of Feb. 4, 1887, and of Feb. 19, 1903, the last being amendatory of the former.

And the court charges you that in carrying the products from Kansas City, Kas., in and through this division and district to the Atlantic seaboard ports to there, to be loaded on vessels and carried to European ports, such commerce was with foreign nations and was such commerce as is referred to and covered by the two enactments of congress mentioned. In this case the defendant packing company was both the shipper and the consignee. And in making such shipment from Kansas City, Kas., to, within, through, and beyond this division and judicial district to an Atlantic seaboard port, to be there placed upon an ocean vessel, to be carried to a European port, both the defendant packing company, the Burlington company, and the connecting lines of railroads, each and all, are amenable to the two statutes in question. And if the law has been violated in the facts in evidence under the indictment herein, then this court has jurisdiction to hear and determine the case and render such judgment as your verdict and justice requires.

And if such shipment of such packing house products were made from Kansas City, Kas., to the European ports, as a through shipment, consigned by the defendant packing company at Kansas City, Kas., to itself at the European port and this fact was so shown by the defendant when it made the shipment, and if this fact was so known at the time by the Burlington company, when it received the product, and in turn each of the connecting lines of the railroad and the steamship company knew such fact when receiving such product, then it is not controlling that the receipts, contracts, writings, or bills of lading were through contracts or bills of lading.

Judge McPherson said that in the case on trial there is no question as to the reasonableness of the rates nor as to the efficiency of the service, but the question is: "Did the defendant packing company receive unlawful concessions in making said shipments. He recited the fact that while their contract on the basis of 23 cent rate was in effect, they were aware of the fact that the Burlington railroad and its connecting lines had filed a 35 cent tariff with the interstate commerce commission. The court declared that as a matter of law the question as to the validity of the packers contract was not a practical question, "because and for the reason that the defendant company had no right to make a contract that would extend beyond the time of filing new schedules with the commission at Washington, fixing the rate to the general public and at a higher and different rate than that covered by the contract."

He continued: "And when the amendatory rates east of the Mississippi river was filed with the commission Aug. 6, and the defendant knew of the same, it could not knowingly receive a less rate or concession than that paid by the general public without being guilty of receiving an unlawful concession, provided that the same was thus received by any kind of device as hereinafter recited. This is so because, the right, privilege, and corporations, is modified and controlled by that provision of the constitution which gives to congress the right to regulate commerce between states and foreign nations."

Judge McPherson, in concluding said: "It is important for you to determine whether the concession of 12 cents per hundred after Aug. 6, from the rates, covered by the schedule then on file with the commission, was the result of a device and whether done with a guilty intent, because, if the shipper did not know it was receiving concessions and did not have a guilty intent, no crime would be committed. As to device, is meant, that which is devised or formed by design; a contrivance; a project; a scheme to deceive; a stratagem, or an artifice."

SHRINERS ARE IN SESSION.

Jesse Norton and S. L. Frazer Are Representing Duluth Temple.

Mystic Shriners from all over the United States and Canada are gathered in Chicago today for the opening session of the thirty-second meeting of the governing body of the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Among the delegates are two representing the Shriners of Duluth. These are Jesse Norton and S. L. Frazer.

The meeting will last two days. It was to have been held at Los Angeles May 7, but the earthquake in California caused the imperial potentate, Henrq A. Collins of Toronto, to change the place and date of the session.

This order has ninety-eight temples in every city of importance in the United States. Medinah Temple of Chicago is probably the largest and the sessions are being held in the new temple at North State street and Walton Place, Chicago.

The business session was called to order this morning and this evening, there will be a ceremonial session, when fifty will cross the hot sands and become nobles. The Mystic Shrine is a social organization composed of thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Masons and Knights Templar.

The Week at the Bijou.

The convention week bill at the Bijou is a good one and those out of town theatergoers, as well as the regular patrons, who drop into the pretty vaudeville theater, will spend a very pleasant hour and a half.

John Dunn and Wilhelmina Francis head the bill with a dramatic sketch called "The Hold-Up." It was very well received last evening. The Campbells are musical artists of ability and their selections, not of the jarring sort that remind you of the pieces played by the young man in the next block who practices on the cornet every evening. Swor and Westbrook have a song and dance turn that is pleasing and Claude Austin juggles cleverly.

Morey Long, who sings "The Belle of the Ball," Vardaman, the auburn-haired beauty, and the excellent moving pictures complete the bill.

Carlyle said: "Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world." Also—read The Herald ads. and you may be sure that there is one less "easy mark" in the world.

Weak Lungs

The Good Things of Earth.

ARE NOT ALL FAR-FETCHED.

THAT our American forests abound in plants, the roots of which possess the most valuable medicinal and curative virtues, is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers of our age. Even the untutored Indians had, by intuition and experiment, discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race on this continent. This information, crude though it was, imparted freely to the friendlier of the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots and herbs.

It is no longer thought necessary that a medicinal agent, in order to be good and useful, must have been brought across the ocean or that "being carried seven times across the Sahara Desert on the backs of fourteen camels" makes it the more valuable.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most of our obstinate and most fatal diseases, if we would properly investigate them; and, in confirmation of this firm conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of unsolicited testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of leucorrhea, painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines had failed.

Both these world-famed medicines are wholly made up from the glyceric extracts of native, medicinal roots, found in our American forests. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each of their wrappers. They are both made of such native, medicinal roots as have received the strongest endorsement and praise for their curative virtues from the most prominent writers on Materia Medica in this country. What is said of their power to cure the several diseases for which they are advised may be easily learned by sending your name and address to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a little booklet which he has compiled, containing copious extracts from numerous standard medical books, which are consulted as authorities by physicians of the several schools of practice for their guidance in prescribing. It is FREE TO ALL. A postal card request will bring it.

You don't have to rely solely upon the manufacturer's say-so as to the power of Dr. Pierce's medicines to cure, as with other medicines sold through druggists. You have the disinterested testimony of a host of the leading medical writers and teachers. Send for this copious testimony. It can be relied upon to be truthful because it is entirely disinterested.

From the little booklet above mentioned, you will learn what a marvelous curative action Stone root, one of the prominent ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, exercises over the heart and its diseases, especially those valvular affections which are attended with difficult breathing, smothered sensations, palpitation or irregular heart action. Dr. Paine, author of Pain's Epitomy of Medicine, considered Stone root specific in these cases, and cites bad cases cured by it in his extensive practice. Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of Dr. Pierce's "Discovery," is also a valuable heart tonic, as is also Black Cherry-bark, another ingredient. You will also learn that the eminent Drs. Hale, Ellingwood, Johnson, Hare, Coe and others recommend Golden Seal root, and several of them Stone root, Queen's root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark for bronchial, throat and lung affections attended with hoarseness, persistent cough, night-sweats and kindred symptoms indicating approaching consumption. All these agents are faithfully and fully represented in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and it can be confidentially relied upon to produce their combined curative effects, not only in the above mentioned affections, but also in all catarrhal diseases, no matter whether affecting the nasal passages or other regions of the body.

In nasal catarrh, while relying on the "Discovery" as the best constitutional remedy known to medical science, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy should be used to cleanse the nasal passages. Together they constitute the most thorough and effective course of treatment which can be employed for the cure of that troublesome disease.

No other medicines sold through druggists for like purposes, have any such professional endorsement as Dr. Pierce's, and, in consequence, none are so largely prescribed by physicians who know what they are made of and that their composition is of the best ingredients regardless of cost. Send for the little free book NOW.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" must not be expected to produce miracles. While it is especially suited for the cure of all chronic, lingering coughs that are curable, it is not so effective in acute colds and coughs unless slippery elm mucilage, flaxseed tea, solution of gum arabic, or other mucilaginous demulcent be drank freely in connection with its use. Nor must the "Discovery" be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages. In its early stages it will stay its progress and often effect a cure if its use be persisted in for a reasonable length of time. Send for the little book noted above and learn what those most eminent in the medical profession say of the ingredients out of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are made and thereby learn why they cure obstinate diseases.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation of the bowels, loss of appetite, coated tongue, sour stomach, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. Put up in glass vials, tightly corked, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are cathartic. They regulate, invigorate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels.

You pay the postage. Dr. Pierce gives you the book. The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, 700 illustrations, is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray cost of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-bound book, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WOMAN'S TRIALS.

Her Bitter Disappointment.

THE bitter trial in a woman's life is to be childless. Who can tell how hard the struggle may have been ere she learnt to resign herself to her lonely lot? The absence of this link to bind marital life together, the absence of this one pledge to mutual affection is a common disappointment. Many unfortunate couples become estranged thereby. Even if they do not drift apart, one may read the whole extent of their disappointment in the eyes of such a childless couple when they rest on the children of others. To them the largest family does not seem too numerous. It will rather appear to them that those on whom this blessing has been most richly bestowed hardly value it sufficiently.

In many cases of barrenness or childlessness the obstacle to child-bearing is easily removed by the cure of weakness on the part of the woman. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been the means of restoring health and fruitfulness to many a barren woman, to the great joy of the household. In other, but rare cases, the obstruction to the bearing of children has been found to be of a surgical character, but easily removable by painless operative treatment at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., over which Dr. Pierce of the "Favorite Prescription" fame presides. In all cases where children are desired and are absent, an effort should be made to find out the real cause, since it is generally so easily removed by proper treatment.

In all the various weaknesses, displacements, prolapsus, anteversion, retroversion, inflammation of ovaries, leucorrhœa, giving rise to disagreeable and weakening drains, and in all cases of nervousness, nervous prostration and debility, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the most efficient remedy that can possibly be used. It has to its credit hundreds of thousands of cures—more in fact than any other remedy put up for sale through druggists, especially for woman's use. You do not have to take Dr. Pierce's word alone for this, because the ingredients of which the "Favorite Prescription" are composed have received the most positive endorsement from the leading medical writers on Materia Medica of all the several schools of practice. All the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper enclosing the bottle, so that if you are an invalid woman and make use of this famous medicine you know exactly what you are taking. Dr. Pierce takes his patients into his full confidence, which he can afford to do as the formula after which the "Favorite Prescription" is made will bear the most careful examination.

You do not have to experiment when taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as with the many fake, Cheap John Medicines that are sent out on trial, composed of cheap and often harmful ingredients. Dr. Pierce resorted to Nature's Laboratory to get the ingredients for his "Favorite Prescription," believing that the indigenous, or native, medicinal roots of our country are endowed by Providence with the most marvelous curative powers.

The only rational way to attempt to cure disease is by assisting the natural functions of the body, and to do that there is nothing like Nature's remedies which act in Nature's way, toning and invigorating the digestive organs, the liver, the stomach and bowels and the nervous system, which always suffers to a great extent in all the various derangements of the organs distinctly feminine.

The medicine of known composition is one to rely upon—the one that has a record of nearly forty years of cures—the one devised and manufactured by a regularly graduated and experienced practitioner of medicine. By addressing Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y., you may secure, free, a little pamphlet giving numerous extracts from many medical writers of prominence, extolling the various ingredients which enter into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is worth looking over if you are a sufferer.

Dr. Pierce does not claim for his "Favorite Prescription" that it is a "cure-all." It is recommended as a most perfect specific of woman's peculiar ailments. So uniform are the results which follow the use of this remarkable remedy, that it can be truly affirmed of "Favorite Prescription" that it always helps and almost always cures. Ninety-eight per cent. of the women who give this medicine a fair and faithful trial are cured and remain cured.

It is a powerful invigorating tonic, imparting health and strength in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. The local, womanly health is so intimately related to the general health that when diseases of the delicate womanly organs are cured the whole body gains in health and strength. For weak and sickly women who are "worn-out," "run-down" or debilitated, especially for women who work in store, office or schoolroom, who sit at the typewriter or sewing machine, or bear heavy household burdens, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proven a priceless benefit because of its health-restoring and strength-giving powers.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womanly organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Cures obstinate cases. "Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhœa, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions and irregularities, prolapsus or falling of the pelvic organs, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration, inflammation, more or less pain and tenderness over the lower abdomen accompanied with "internal heat."

Dr. Pierce's medicines are made from harmless but efficient medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. The Indians knew of the marvelous curative value of some of these roots and imparted that knowledge to some of the friendlier whites, and gradually some of the more progressive physicians came to test and use them, and ever since they have grown in favor by reason of their superior curative virtues and their safe and harmless qualities.

Your druggists sell the "FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION" and also that famous alterative, blood purifier and stomach tonic, the "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY." Write to Dr. Pierce about your case. He is an experienced physician and will treat your case as confidential and without charge for correspondence. Address him at the Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., of which he is chief consulting physician.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

THE FIGHT FOR AUDITOR

number of their friends. Some of the hotels, as soon as they became filled, began directing visitors to go over to Superior, where between 300 and 400 first-class rooms were said to be available. A lot of the delegates and their friends acted on this advice, although they naturally would have preferred remaining nearer the center of the fray. The ride over is only one of a little more than half an hour, however, and thus takes no more time than the ride between St. Paul and Minneapolis. When the state conventions are held in St. Paul it is customary for a large number of convention people to stay in Minneapolis, making the present situation somewhat similar. But those who will rest content with rooms in private houses have little need to cross the bay, unless the influx tonight is even heavier than is expected.

The weather man is making a record for himself. Yesterday and today were as nearly ideal as anybody could desire, and comments on the fact are general. The visitors are delighted. Most of them even spare time from their political discussions to talk about it, and to remark upon the hospitality of Duluth. Those who have held a prejudice against the city and county in the past are largely forgetting any bad feeling in this direction. There is nothing else left for them to do. They are glad the convention is being held here, where a few days ago their sentiments were in many cases just the other way.

H. B. Knudsen is one of the most active men on the St. Louis county delegation. He may be found, it seems, almost wherever one goes around the hotels, extending the glad hand of good fellowship, and at the same time getting in a good word for Odin Halden for state auditor. The other members of the delegation are also very active as workers and entertainers.

The St. Louis county delegation will hold a caucus at 8 o'clock this evening at Kalamazoo hall, and Ramsey county delegates will caucus at the same place at 9:30 o'clock this evening. Kalamazoo hall is headquarters for the Garfield Republican club, where open house is being kept. Use of the hall may be had by the delegates and candidates at any time. The Commercial club grants memberships to the delegates and candidates during their stay and the club's assembly room is constantly at their disposal.

* * *

L. M. Willcuts this morning tendered Jacobson the use of the federal court room for the holding of the caucuses of his delegates. Federal court is not in session now, and the room offers an ideal place for the holding of caucuses.

C. H. Warner, secretary of the state central committee, will be prepared to distribute badges and tickets tomorrow morning at the Commercial club at 8 o'clock.

Odin Halden has headquarters on the parlor floor of the Spalding, right next to those of Jacobson. Mr. Halden's parlor was a center of attraction this morning. Mr. Halden remained there most of the morning, and was kept busy shaking hands with the visitors who kept coming and going. He was cheerful over the outlook, and expressed confidence that he would land the nomination. His friends say that assurances of support are coming from delegations they had hardly hoped to receive assistance from, together with promises from numerous individuals from delegations which have not been instructed for state auditor. The St. Louis county delegation has issued the following statement of Mr. Halden's position:

"The Republicans of St. Louis county ask at the hands of the convention to be held on June 13 the nomination of Odin Halden for state auditor. In view of this, a few reasons will be set out here why this nomination should be made. In doing this, personalities will be wholly omitted. Good will and harmony should be the watchword of this convention, and the delegation from St. Louis county will do nothing and sanction nothing to create ill feeling or discord. We desire a Republican victory at the polls in November all along the line, and that is one of the reasons why we ask for a place on the state ticket. For more than thirty years this great and populous county has in every election contributed large Republican majorities, and yet never has one of its citizens been honored by a nomination for an administrative state office. At times when Republicanism in Minnesota staggered under Democratic attack, this county was always firm and loyal, as it is today, and as it will be hereafter.

"Our candidate is entirely worthy of this honor. For twenty years he has proved his loyalty, integrity and ability, particularly in 1896, when the Republican party in this county appeared to be in the grasp of the 'free silver' movement, his services were valuable and disinterested. Odin Halden and a few like him stemmed the tide and preserved the Republican organization. He has been county auditor for twelve years, and during that time holding a difficult and important place, he has so conducted himself as to win high praise for his uprightness and fairness. A hostile press, alert and exacting opposition, have been able to find no flaw in his record. In the matter of taxation of corporate interests the records of this county and state prove that he has always led the battle for equal taxation. He has never been a mere follower in this good work. The present state auditor, who has supervisory powers over our candidate's official work, has never at any time spoken or written of it except with approval, and a former auditor wrote in his annual report words or glowing praise of Halden's labors for the public good.

"Let it be remembered that our interests are the same as those of other parts of the state, that we stand for and insist on efficient and honest administration of public affairs, and for this reason and with a just feeling of local pride we present this candidate. We know that he merits this honor and will, if nominated and elected, make a record pleasing to the people.

"We urge upon our fellow delegates that prudent politics in these unsettled times make it wise to recognize North-Eastern Minnesota. Such recognition would strengthen our ticket, and that is an added reason why we urge this action. It is for the convention to recall that when in 1904 Republican majorities elsewhere disappeared, St. Louis county stood firm for the ticket from top to bottom. Urging the nomination of Halden for state auditor we will, in any event, continue to be loyal Republicans inspired with the best ideals of our party.

"JAKE" IS BUSY MAN.

Confident That He is Gaining Strength Every Minute.

J. F. Jacobson of Madison was a busy man this morning. The Jacobson badges were much in evidence around the lobbies of the hotels, and in the corridors, and whenever a man wearing one of them happened to meet their candidate an introduction of two or three friends generally followed, until the Madison man's arm must have felt like that of President Roosevelt at one of the White House receptions.

Mr. Jacobson did not spend much time around his headquarters in the main parlor, but was to be found in animated consultation with different parties in the lobby, in private rooms and in the corridors. During the early morning his face wasn't seen in the lobby at all, but he was to be found shaking hands with friends and new acquaintances in the large hall on the second floor, or closeted with politicians in private rooms.

Mr. Jacobson and his friends seemed more than ever confident this morning, and predicted his success in landing the nomination for governor as if they really meant what they said. Thus far the man from Madison has had little to say when questioned by newspaper men, merely remarking that he expected to win.

"It is very evident this morning that we are gaining in strength," he said today. "There is no doubt in my mind regarding this fact. I am receiving promises of support from delegations I had no hopes of getting votes from, and more delegates are coming our way right along.

"I refuse to make alliances with anyone, and have not done so up to the present time. Our campaign is being conducted along independent lines, so far as possible, and we intend to continue the same policy. I can say with all truthfulness that I am entirely satisfied with the situation as it exists at present, and I believe the outlook will be even brighter tomorrow morning, when the time for calling the convention to order arrives.

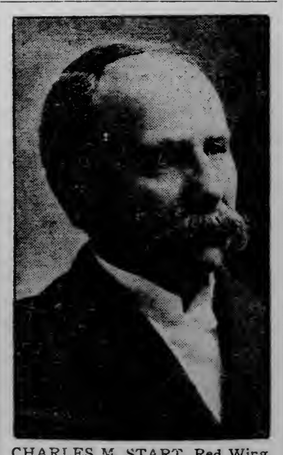

"None of the candidates expects to see a nomination on the first ballot, but we hope to win before many more than the one are cast. There is no telling what the developments of a day may bring forth, you know, and things may be settled up in very short order tomorrow."

LITTLE FELLOWS FOR PHILIPPINES

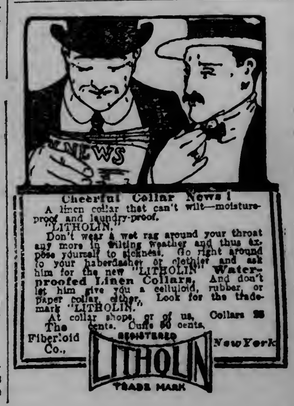

Fleet of Torpedo Boats All Ready for Their Long Trip.

Washington, June 12.—The navy department has been notified that the little fleet of torpedo boats which has been gathered at Norfolk for the purpose of being sent out to the Philippines has been completed, so far as the constructors and engineers are concerned, and the boats are now to be put through a course of trials to ascertain any weakness or faults so that these may be corrected on the home station at minimum expense. These trials will probably occupy at least four months so it will be late in the year before the fleet can be ready to start on its long voyage.

The boats of the new fleet are all simple torpedo boats, the Bagley, Barney, Biddle, Tingley, Thornton and Shubrick, averaging in displacement only about 165 tons, or a little more than a third of the destroyers. So it is believed that it may be necessary to assist the little boats by towing them when their coal supply runs low and the weather is such that they cannot be coaled from the convoying ship, and experiments will be made before the fleet sails, to determine the ability of the convoying ship to handle the boats in towing line. After the experience of the first fleet and of Commander Hosly with the dry dock Dewey, the naval officers believe that they can accomplish almost anything in that direction.

FISH ON A WILD SPREE.

Frankfort, Ky., June 12.—Farmers along the banks of Benson creek have been gathering in baskets and catching with their hands thousands of fish that were on a spree. The flake stand at the Fitzgerald distillery broke, and more than 13,000 gallons of whisky was turned into the stream. In droves the fish came to the surface of the water, sported around and cut the most fantastic capers.

CHISHOLM'S MARVELOUS GROWTH

Her Almost Inexhaustible Iron Ore Zone—Twelve Shipping Mines and Four Promising Explorations—Great Building Activity—New Waterworks and Sewer System—The Public Officials.

BY J. A. MONGER.

It requires a few hours' stay at Chisholm to convince the most skeptical that it is destined to be one of the most important cities on the Mesaba range. It has grown from a logging camp, with one general store in 1901, to a village on the three sections, comprising 1920 acres, of 5,247 population. Its growth has been the marvel of the Mesaba iron range. It has twelve shipping mines and four promising explorations, an iron ore zone not equalled by Chisholm has only started to grow for in another few years, when all the mines are fully developed and in commission, there will be employed in this district, five thousand miners with a monthly pay roll of $250,000. This with her other interests will make it a city of 15,000 population. It is iron ore that populates and builds cities, towns, and mining locations, and Chisholm is no exception to the rule. It has long since outgrown the original town site of 120 acres, as other additions of 140 acres have been platted. The village is splendidly situated on the west bank of Longyear lake, a beautiful body of water, affording good fishing and boating, 75 miles northwest of Duluth and four miles from Hibbing, on the Great Northern railroad. The Duluth, Misaba & Northern is building its line into Chisholm. There are two banks, First National and Miners; two hotels, O'Neil and Grant; an efficient public school system; electric light, water and sewer plants; two able and progressive newspapers, the Herald and Tribune; all reflecting its permanent growth. In business blocks and residence property, from an architectural standpoint, Chisholm is fully abreast of the times and the new brick blocks going up and others contracted for, will equal those of Virginia and Hibbing. The business men as a whole are progressive and public spirited, not afraid of spending their dollars for the upbuilding of the city of their adoption.

CHISHOLM'S IRON ORE ZONE.

Without exaggeration Chisholm is situated in an iron ore zone, the equal of which has not been duplicated on the Mesaba range. It has within a distance of two and a half miles sixteen mines, twelve of which shipped 1,950,304 tons in 1905. The whole sixteen are all but ready to ship, and when put in commission will produce 10,000,000 tons annually. No other location equals this, unless it be Hibbing. The following was the tonnage of the Chisholm mines for 1905:

	Tons.
Chisholm	241,295
Clark	358,036
Glen	287,667
Pittsburg	161,912
Morrow	51,050
Croxton	139,228
St. Clair	61,792
Shenango	208,560
Myers	88,548
Monroe-Tener	76,866
Jordon	191,320
Total tons	1,950,304

In addition to the above shippers in 1905, the Hartley, an exploration property, has two steam shovels now stripping, while the Alworth, Humphrey and Crescent are all but ready to ship. There are 2,000 men working in the mines and on explorations, who are paid an average monthly payroll of $100,000. This is the reason why Chisholm grows and expands, and will continue to do so until her population reaches 15,000. These figures are based entirely on the present known extent of the ore zone. How much this will be added to in the near future is as yet an unknown secret.

CHISHOLM'S BUILDING ACTIVITY.

The building activity has taken a new start, which will materially add to the architectural beauty of Lake street. R. S. O'Neil, proprietor of the O'Neil Hotel, has let a contract for a $25,000 three-story brick hotel with basement, size 50x42 and 32x83 feet, at the foot of Lake street, overlooking the beautiful Longyear lake. The New O'Neil will have all modern conveniences. It will be lighted by electricity, heated by hot water, and have rooms with or without baths, and sewerage. In a word it will be a modern, up-to-date, fifty-room hotel. Mr. R. S. O'Neil needs no introduction as to his ability to conduct a first-class hotel, as all the traveling public who make Chisholm, have long recognized this by their liberal patronage of the O'Neil.

The city fathers have decided to build a city hall at a cost of $15,000, a two-story brick, size 50x100 feet. The first floor will contain council chambers, treasurers', recorders', attorneys', jury and municipal court rooms, and jail, while the second floor will be set aside for a public hall.

The First National Bank will build an $8,000 addition, size 25x55 feet, of brick. It is to be an office building.

The school board of district No. 40, of which Chisholm is a part, has all but decided to vote a $75,000 bond issue to build a new high school. A whole block of ground has been reserved as a site in Longyear addition, just south of Lake street, overlooking the whole village, and Longyear lake. The building will be of pressed brick, with sandstone trimmings, and have all modern improvements.

The building activity of Chisholm is not confined to the business portion, but covers the entire location. There are some thirty residences under construction, and many others contracted for. The question of providing shelter for the ever-increasing population, has taxed the resources of those having this matter in hand. As the great iron ore beds that encircle Chisholm are developed into shipping mines, the more pressing is the demand for houses to room the people who are required to operate the mines.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

Chisholm owns her water works and sewerage system, which are being put into first-class working order. The water supply is taken from a well forty feet below the level of the lake. The plant is housed in a splendid brick building, size 30x42 feet, which contains two pumps, a Worthington Underwriters fire, of 750 gallons a minute, and Duplex Prescott 250 gallons a minute, and a 130-horse power horizontal tubular boiler. The pumping capacity of the plant is 1,000 gallons a minute. The water is pumped into a standpipe holding 35,000 gallons, with a tank pressure of 70 pounds. There are two miles of water mains, and thirty hydrants, the whole costing $25,000.

The sewer system was put in late last fall, and is being connected in the business portions of the city. The septic tank is 12x104, and 8 feet high. There are three blocks of 24, two blocks of 18, two of 15, and one of 10-inch sewer pipe. The sewerage system up to date has cost $10,000.

CHISHOLM'S VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

The progress, snap and vim of any city is best rated by the class of men elected to rule over the welfare of the people. The village officials of Chisholm are taxpayers who have all their dollars invested in business enterprises and real estate. Every penny of the village money expended is like spending their own money and for this reason the taxpayers' money is invested for the present and future upbuilding of Chisholm, without rebate or graft. R. S. O'Neil, president; W. G. Shane, recorder; W. H. Richter, Julius Grosso and E. Madisen, trustees; Jacob Skala, treasurer; Henry Fugere and Richard Bateson, justices of the peace; C. R. Woods, city attorney; Edward Freeman, municipal judge; D. C. Hackett, assessor.

CHISHOLM HIGH SCHOOL.

The public school system of Chisholm stands equal to any on the Mesaba range, being under Prof. J. F. Muinch, superintendent and principal. He is a graduate of Winona Normal, class of 1902. Prof. Muinch came to Chisholm four years ago, and has proved himself a very efficient educator, having brought the schools of district No. 40 up to their present high standing. The school census at this writing is 475 pupils, and is increasing at the rate of 200 a year, making a new high school one of the necessities of the hour. The following is the able corps of teachers, who are making such a good record in the cause of educational work:

Joseph F. Muinch, superintendent—mathematics, science, geography; Ethel C. Dann—Englishhistory; Pansy A. Peirce—music, reading, spelling; Isadora Prescott—Sixth and Seventh grades; Edith Chappine—Fifth grade; Edna Pietsch—Third and Fourth grades; Leonora Hambrecht—Second, Third and Fourth grades; Pearl E. Talboys—Second grade; Elinore Zacher—First grade; Ione M. Boehne—First grade; Hazel Pennington—First grade; Gilberta Logg—Kindergarten, Latin and German.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

The First National bank of Chisholm is one of the strong financial institutions of the Mesaba Iron range. It has a capital of $25,000 and surplus of $2,000. It pays interest on time and savings deposits. The bank is nicely housed in its own building, corner of Lake and Second, size 25x59, a two-story brick. In addition to the banking business, they do a large fire insurance business, representing twelve of the leading companies, while in real estate they own and control the original plat and other additions of Chisholm. The officers of the First National are: A. M. Chisholm, president; J. F. Killorin, vice president; L. G. Sicard, second vice president, and G. L. Train, cashier. Mr. Train for five years was teller in the Duluth Savings bank before coming to Chisholm.

MUNICIPAL JUDGE EDWARD FREEMAN.

The above official was appointed by Governor Johnson on April 23 and holds until the regular municipal election in 1907. Attorney Edward Freeman is a graduate of the law department of the Minnesota state university, class of 1903. He is a native of Mankato, born there in 1879. Judge Freeman is a young man of a genial, social makeup, who makes friends, and having ability, has a bright future before him. The office of municipal judge was established to better handle the judicial business of Chisholm, and is a necessity.

CITY ATTORNEY CHARLES R. WOODS.

This gentleman served Chisholm in the above capacity from the fall of 1902, to the spring of 1905, and was reappointed on April of this year for another term. He was admitted to the bar in St. Paul in 1890, where he practiced until 1902, part of which time he was assistant city attorney. In education and experience in the practice of his profession, few men in this part of Minnesota, excel attorney Charles R. Woods, and what is more he is popular in and out of court, which makes him friends in all walks of life.

MONROE MINE AT CHISHOLM.

SODA FOUNTAIN AND ICE CREAM PARLORS.

Dandrea Bros. have the finest soda fountain and ice cream parlors on the Mesaba range. They are fitted up regardless of expense, while the stock of confectionery, fruits, cigars, tobaccos, stationery, notions and canned goods for lunches is large and well selected. The Dandrea Bros. established the business in 1903, coming here from Duluth, where they located in 1890, after leaving their native land, Sunny Italy.

MAGNUSSON'S GENERAL STORE

The business of this house was established in 1902, and is the leader in its lines—dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, crockery and graniteware. B. Magnusson also owns the business block, 25x75, a two-story brick, heated by hot water and lighted by electricity. It is one of the best business blocks in Chisholm, reflecting no little credit on Mr. Magnusson's faith in the future of Chisholm.

CHISHOLM MEAT COMPANY.

This is one of the finest furnished meat markets on the Mesaba range, and the equal of many in Duluth. It occupies a floor space of 25x75 feet, has an ice cooler that holds a car load of dressed meats, a steam sausage machine and other labor saving devices, making the Chisholm Meat company stand in a class by itself. They employ four delivery men to keep up with their orders. They sell only the best fresh and salt meats, poultry and canned meats, give full weight and sell at the lowest fair profit prices. C. A. Monroe, the resident partner, is a thorough master of the meat business in all lines, while Joseph Karl, the other partner, is equally well educated. If you want meat that is fresh and clean and of the highest grade, patronize the Chisholm Meat company.

A LEADER IN HIS LINE.

E. Madisen deals in hardware, paints, oils, varnishes, tools, cutlery, builders' supplies and metal ceilings and makes a specialty of tinsmithing and plumbing. The business was established in 1903, and today occupies a store space of 24x60 and stock room 24x50 feet. Mr. Madisen is one of the village trustees and takes a leading part in public affairs. From 1900 to 1903 he worked at his trade for the Corrugated Iron Roofing company, Duluth, where he was rated as one of their best workmen. Mr. Madisen knows the hardware business from the ground up, and carries a stock that deserves the patronage of the people of this section of the Mesaba range.

HENRY TOMFOHR'S PLACE.

This is one of the pioneer business places, being opened May 15, 1901, by its present proprietor, Henry Tomfohr, who came here from Superior, Wis. He owns the building, 24x70, two stories, located on the corner of Lake and Second avenue, also the adjoining building, 24x80 feet. In the near future Mr. Tomfohr will put in a stone basement and plate glass front, making his block one of the best in Chisholm. Mr. Tomfohr is one of the live tractors and builders, as it will be enlarged to a two story building, lowered to grade, have plate glass front and be refitted with new fixtures. Mr. Shane is very active and spirited in business and public affairs, being village recorder and deputy clerk of the district court.

A PROMINENT REAL ESTATE OWNER.

Ben Ledoux, the proprietor of the Hibbing-Chisholm Stage line, makes two daily trips between these places, at 9:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m., and also makes all trains on the Great Northern line. He owns the livery barn and blacksmith shops on First avenue, size 75x125 feet, lots on Central avenue, and two houses on Chestnut street. Mr. Ledoux came here from Staples, Minn., where he kept the first hotel and dealt in horses for many years. In 1905 he was elected village treasurer of Chisholm, and in the spring election was defeated for president by a small vote.

THE PIONEER OF CHISHOLM.

James Haffey, the veteran dealer in cigars, tobaccos and stationery, located here in 1901, before the timber was cut off the town site. He has seen Chisholm grow from a logging camp to one of the greatest iron ore mining camps in the world. Mr. Haffey settled in Duluth in 1881, where he remained until 1901. In 1902 he was elected justice of the peace of Chisholm and served down to 1904, when he was appointed notary public, which position he still holds. Mr. James Haffey owns his own business block, 24x46, and other property. He is a native of Canada, born near Toronto in 1846. There is no man who takes a keener interest in the upbuilding of Chisholm than does the subject of this brief sketch.

AN ORIGINAL CHISHOLMITE.

In 1901, W. G. Shane opened the business house in his line, jewelry and watch repairing, and today as then is the pioneer jeweler. The stock of goods carried covers all lines in watches, diamonds, clocks, fancy painted china and silverware, suitable for wedding and birthday presents. Mr. Shane is also local agent for the Mesaba Telephone company, the exchange being in his store. The line has 170 patrons and would have twice that number if the switchboard would accommodate more. A new board will be put in large enough to accommodate all patrons. In another month the Shane business block will be in the hands of the contractors and builders, as it will be enlarged to a two story building, lowered to grade, have plate glass front and be refitted with new fixtures. Mr. Shane is very active and spirited in business and public affairs, being village recorder and deputy clerk of the district court.

McEACHIN BROS., MEN'S CLOTHING.

This is the big store in its lines of men's clothing, furnishings, hats and caps, boots and shoes. McEachin Brothers' stock is very select, the best that money can buy, up to date in all departments. The store is well lighted, having two large plate glass windows. The salesroom is 25x60 feet. Mr. C. S. McEachin, the manager, is very popular with his trade and is building up a large business.

NOTES OF INTEREST.

The town sites of Chisholm are composed of, first, the Chisholm Improvement company, 120 acres; second, the North Townsite company, 80 acres; third, the Second addition to Chisholm, 40 acres, and the Geary & Sicard addition of 20 acres. The lots that are left in these additions are selling from $125 to $350 a 25-foot lot.

The Great Northern railroad will extend its line into the heart of the business center in order to better handle its passenger and freight business. This road has also made the surveys and other preliminary work for the building of their Rainy Lake line, which is now a fixed reality.

Rose's Place is headquarters for all lines of confectionery, cigars, tobaccos, fruits, stationery, jewelry, gents' furnishing goods and notions. There are also news stands for Chicago and Duluth daily papers. If you cannot find what you want in these lines at Rose's Place, then it is not to be found in Chisholm.

TUCKER IS EXECUTED FOR MURDER OF MABEL PAGE

Boston, June 12.—Charles Louis Tucker of Auburndale, was electrocuted at the Massachusetts state prison at 12:12 o'clock this morning for the murder of Mabel Page, who was stabbed to death at the home of her father, in Weston, in March, 1904.

The condemned man, whose case aroused great public interest on public discussion, and to save whom the most extraordinary effort had been undertaken both by his counsel and thousands of citizens, walked from his cell to the death chair unassisted. He walked without faltering. The prison guards had opened his cell door and said: "Tucker, we are ready." The condemned man stepped quickly from his cell and scarcely before the legal witnesses to the execution, who numbered six persons, had realized that the final moment was at hand, he had appeared before them in advance of the jail officials. Just before reaching the electric chair, Tucker drew from the right hand pocket of his trousers a piece of paper. From this paper he read mechanically, and in a tone so low the witnesses could hear but a few of the words. The exact phraseology was only learned when the paper, which Tucker replaced in his pocket with wonderful deliberation and calmness, after he had finished reading was removed from his clothing after his death. This was Tucker's final utterance.

"I hope that God will forgive me for all the wrongs I have ever done in my past life. I forgive everybody who has wronged me. I am at peace with my Maker. May God have mercy on my soul."

Tucker then sat down in the chair and after the guards had adjusted the straps the warden raised his hand as a signal to the electrician.

After the first application of the electricity, Dr. Jos. McLaughlin, the prison surgeon, made an examination and announced that the pulse was still beating. After the current had been applied a second time the surgeon detected a movement of the heart, but when the current was applied a third time, Tucker was pronounced dead. Then announcement was made at 12:19.

The medical witnesses agreed that Tucker was unconscious, if not quite dead at the very moment that the 1,820 volts of electricity passed through him.

One more effort was made yesterday to prolong the life of Charles L. Tucker, through executive clemency, but after hearing the appeal of his clergyman as well as his counsel, Governor Guild last night again declined to interfere with the execution of the sentence.

After baptizing Tucker in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Thomas W. Bishop, convinced by his protestations of innocence, sought an interview with Governor Guild. At the close of the conference, the following statement was issued by Charles F. Gettemy, secretary to the governor:

"Rev. T. W. Bishop called upon the governor at the state house this afternoon and retracted his former statement, expressed to the governor some days since, of his conviction of Tucker's guilt. He said that the basis of his opinion was a long, serious conversation with the prisoner himself in which the prisoner's apparent sincerity in his plea of innocence overcame Mr. Bishop's previous conviction. Mr. Bishop therefore urged upon the governor to reprieve him.

"James H. Vahey, the prisoner's counsel, showed the governor Tucker's last letter to his counsel, which likewise asserted his innocence.

"The governor took the letter and the appeal of Messrs. Bishop and Vahey under advisement, and later notified them that he was 'regretfully forced to decline to interfere with the execution of the sentence.'"

The electrocution of Charles L. Tucker marked the final chapter in the history of the murder of Mabel Page at her home in Weston, March 31, 1904, and also marked the close of the most desperate legal battle ever waged in Massachusetts for the life of a convicted murderer. Tucker's case was taken through the legal windings until it received a hearing in the supreme court of the United States. A decision by the highest court in the land sustaining the rulings of the lower courts, did not discourage Tucker's lawyers. A petition to Governor Guild was prepared and circulated throughout the state. In a short time there were more than 116,000 names attached to it. The attorneys for the prisoner went before Governor Guild not only on new evidence, but with a general plea for executive clemency, but they were not successful.

Mabel Page was murdered at her father's home in Weston, March 31, 1904. Her body was found several hours later by her aged father. On the table was found the note supposed to have been written by Miss Page, saying she had been called to Boston, because of the illness of her brother. It later developed that her brother, Harold, was not ill, and the handwriting on the note and a postal card which was also found in the house, figured in the trial, the government contending that the handwriting as shown on the postal card was identical with specimens of Tucker's handwriting.

The police learned that Charles L. Tucker, an Auburndale young man, of roving habits, had been seen near the Page house on the day of the murder. They found Tucker, and on taking him to a police station, questioned him, but released him. About three weeks afterward the officers searched Tucker's home. There, in an old coat, they found a broken knife blade stained and scarred, the scars indicating that an effort had been made to dry it by means of a file. A stickpin of peculiar design was also found. It was soon learned that Mabel Page had owned a pin similar to that found in Tucker's coat. This, together with the fact that stains on the knife blade were suspected of being those of blood, as well as the cause of Tucker's act in breaking the blade into three pieces, caused his arrest. Indictment for murder in the first degree followed. The evidence at the trial was largely of a circumstantial nature, and counsel for the defense produced witnesses and maps to prove an alibi, but the pin and knife played more prominent parts than did any witness produced either by the prosecution or the defense.

Since Tucker's trial and conviction, the father of the murdered girl has died, as has also Prof. Sword of Harvard university, who was the expert analyst of the prosecution.

FIRE DEPARTMENT IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Report of Board to Council Shows Shortage in Fund.

Water Board Given Power to Contract for New Pump.

Food for serious consideration is furnished in the report of the board of fire commissioners, which was presented to the council last evening.

The city is confronted with the possibility that one of the fire halls will have to be closed for a time in order to allow the board to get within its allowance for the year.

The board has been steadily running ahead of its monthly allowance, and it is estimated that from $8,000 to $10,000 additional will be required to run the department for the remaining seven months of the year.

The comptroller's estimate of the amount required for the year was $111,000. The conference committee last fall, in fixing the levy, cut this down to approximately $100,000, which, with the small balance carried over on Jan. 1, gave the department a total of $100,858.43 available for the year. This gave a monthly allowance of $8,404.87.

Some bills carried over from the previous year, and payable in January, made the expenses for the month of January $3,265.23 in excess of the first month's allowance. By careful economy the board has cut down this excess about $1,000. The total expenses to June 1 amounted to $46,543.08, leaving about $57,000 available for the remainder of the year. This means a monthly allowance of about $8,150. The payroll is $7,600 per month, leaving but $500 for supplies and equipment.

The policy of allowing a department to exceed its appropriation for the year has not been adopted during the last five years, and many of the aldermen are opposed to it, believing that it would throw the doors open to extravagance on the part of the heads of departments.

The condition presented, however, is a serious one. Some relief is in sight, if the collection of taxes is good, and there is every reason to believe that it will be. The collection is figured on a basis of about 90 per cent, and it will probably run about 98 per cent. This will give the department an additional $3,000.

The communication of the board was referred to the committees on finance and fire department.

The committee on ordinances presented a communication from Building Inspector Kelley on the proposed changes in the section of the building ordinance, covering elevators.

The building inspector stated that he was opposed to any changes in the present ordinance, unless it would be to cut out Section 8 which calls for automatic gates. He declared himself as opposed to the repeal of the section regarding three-foot pits under the elevators, claiming that the place which should be used for pits is now, in many instances, used for a passageway under the elevators and is a source of great danger.

The argument that accident insurance is now carried, is met with the statement that fire insurance is also carried on the same buildings, but that this does not render the fire department unnecessary.

"It is all right to have accident insurance after an accident has occurred," the communication reads, "but it does not prevent accidents taking place."

The building inspector is also opposed to exonerating old buildings, and enforcing the ordinance only on new buildings to be erected.

"If there is any virtue in the ordinance, it should apply to all," he says, "and men working in the old buildings should have the same protection as those in the new.

"It is not a fact that many of the elevators and shafts would have to be almost entirely rebuilt, and many of the owners have signified their willingness to make the required changes."

Alderman Wilson of the ordinance committee, announced that the matter would come up for a hearing next Monday evening, and that any person who desired to be heard should be present at that time.

The Duluth Edison Electric company, in a communication from A. W. Hartman, president, called attention to the fact that no action had yet been taken on the offer made by the company last fall, to renew its lighting contract with the city and give reduced rates on private lighting.

The expiration of the old contract is now near at hand, and the company requested that some action be taken.

The water board, in a rather lengthy communication, submitted a contract with the Great Northern Power company, into which it proposed to enter.

The contract provides for the use of electric power in the pumping station, and the board recommended it as being cheaper, at the prices offered, than steam would be.

The cost of installing the electric pumps would be about $20,000, whereas the cost of the additional steam pumps would be about $100,000. Attention was also called to the upward trend in coal prices.

Under the proposed contract the maximum price for pumping 1,000,000 gallons is $6.50.

Last year it cost the city $8.90 per 1,000,000 gallons without counting the cost of depreciation in the plant. Counting in labor, interest and depreciation, the relative cost of the two systems would be $9.80 and about $12, which would mean a saving of about $2 for each 1,000,000 gallons pumped, or $10 a day.

The board stated that it proposed to install a pump of 12,000,000 gallons daily capacity, which will be sufficient for ten years to come.

The council passed a resolution empowering the board to enter such a contract with the Great Northern Power company.

The contract awarded by the board of public works to George R. King, for Tenth avenue East, was confirmed.

After some little discussion the employment office license of S. O. Carlson, was granted. The police recommended that it be denied, but the committee, after investigating, reported that there seemed to be no valid reason why Mr. Carlson should not be granted a license, and it passed with only two dissenting votes.

* * *

Alderman Wilson submitted an amendment to the ordinance licensing circuses, which permits a circus charging twenty-five cents or less, to exhibit here for a fee of $100, while the fee for larger circuses, charging fifty cents, is left at $250.

* * *

In future the board of public works will disregard petitions for certain varieties of pavement as a result of the motion by Alderman Moore. It is claimed that unfair means are used by agents of certain paving materials, to secure signatures to the petitions, and in future the board will be governed by the sentiment expressed at a public meeting called for the purpose of choosing the kind of pavement desired.

While he did not endorse it himself, Alderman Wilson, chairman of the committee on ordinances, submitted an amendment to the peddlers' ordinance, which compels farmers peddling their own produce in the city, to pay a license.

The ordinance was recently attacked in the municipal court, on the ground that it was unconstitutional, because farmers were given rights not allowed others. The assistant city attorney moved to have the case dismissed before the court ruled on the point, and it is believed that the present amendment is for the purpose of making the ordinance stand the test of the courts.

Alderman Wilson stated that the ordinance was submitted by request, and it was given its first reading, being laid over for one week for discussion.

FIVE MEN GET SENTENCES

Judge Dibell Disposes of the Remaining Criminal Cases.

The criminal calendar for the May term of the district court was cleaned up yesterday when Judge Dibell sentenced five men to the state penitentiary, or the reformatory.

Edward Hill, who was charged with assaulting August Koho with a knife in a Bowery saloon a few weeks ago, was sentenced to a term in the state reformatory at St. Cloud.

John Kelley, who was convicted of stealing a watch from a man named McLean, in Superior, and with bringing the stolen property into Minnesota, was sent to the reformatory.

Joseph Martineau, who was being held to the September grand jury on the charge of stealing a cravenette and suit case from W. N. Merriman, May 22, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, on information furnished by the county attorney, and was sentenced to a term in the state reformatory.

John Rhoddy, who was convicted on the charge of taking $25 from under a mattress in a Bowery boarding house, that belonged to his roommate, was given a term of nine months in the state penitentiary. The man to whom the money belonged forgot it when he left the room, but went back after it within a few minutes. Rhoddy had found the money and attempted to escape. He was soon apprehended by a policeman.

INDORSES THE SILO

Supt. Gregg of State Farmers' Institute Gives His Opinion.

Says Ensilage is Necessary Food for Winter Dairy.

The attention that is being given the subject of ensilage as compared with a clover and timothy crop for Northern Minnesota, when the area for roughage is limited, reaches further than St. Louis county. The fact that the farmers and dairymen of this part of the state are seeking information on the topic of ensilage, the best methods of building silos, and are actually about to make the experiment of building silos to handle ensilage, has brought many encouraging comments from experienced farmers in various parts of the state.

A few days ago Prof. A. J. McGuire, superintendent of the state experimental farm at Grand Rapids, Itasca county, gave the silo his indorsement through the columns of this paper.

In the following letter to The Herald, O. C. Gregg of Lynd, Minn., superintendent of the state farmers' institute, corroborates Prof. McGuire and offers some valuable suggestions:

"I am very glad that your people are becoming interested in the matter of ensilage. I consider it as a necessary feed for the winter dairy in particular, and I am growing in the conviction that it will become a great factor in the feeding of all our livestock to a certain degree.

"The cows will take more of it than our sheep, but other stock will find in it, when fed in the proper proportion, that succulent feed which is so much needed by our stock during the winter months. We have had a silo on our place for a few years and only regret that we did not put it in at an earlier period. The corn crop is the roughage for the West in the place of the timothy hay. You can grow timothy hay in your vicinity better than in some other portions of the state, because you have more moisture, but timothy hay is not to be compared with ensilage as a food for milk-givers.

"Cover is another factor. We want the clover with the ensilage. We need the clover for fertility if for nothing else. Good ensilage, with good clover hay, properly cured, needs the addition of but a small amount of grain to make a proper food supply for our stock.

"Our own stock on Coteau farm came out of winter quarters as sleek as though they had been on good pasturage. They also produced well, not only during the winter months when they were so fed, but their good condition helped them to make still better use of the good pasture when it came.

"It would be difficult to give words in too high praise or commendation for the silo in Minnesota. Supt. A. J. McGuire, who is in charge of our sub-station at Grand Rapids, has a silo and finds that it works as well there as it does with us in Southwest Minnesota.

Superintendent Gregg is quite well known to a number of the persons connected with the farming interests in this part of the state and his opinion, as that of an expert, is said to carry with it considerable weight.

Canada's Coming Navy.

An arrangement has been made with England, whereby a number of trading ships will be kept in Canadian waters and Canada is to pay the cost of maintaining them. Heretofore England has borne the cost of defending Canada with forts and guns and ships of war. The best and least expensive way to defend the system against attacks of disease is to keep strong and well fortified by an occasional dose of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. For 53 years it has been proving its wonderful merit as a health maker and keeper, so that you need have no hesitancy in taking it, as the weakest stomach can easily retain it. It is a specific remedy for poor appetite, sour risings, flatulency, heartburn, costiveness, dyspepsia, indigestion, female ills or malaria, fever and ague. Don't fail to try it.

FOUR PERSONS DEAD IN TENEMENT FIRE.

New York, June 12.—Four persons are known to be dead and several others are missing as the result of a fire in a seven-story tenement house at 209 East Ninety-seventh street yesterday. Two firemen were injured, one fatally, by falling from the building. Scores of thrilling rescues took place and just as the firemen were about to take a woman and her 2-year-old baby from the fire escape on the third floor, the woman fell, overcome by the smoke, and dropped the child. It was dashed to death on the pavement thirty feet below. The other bodies were found on the top floors of the tenement. All of them were so badly burned that they have not been identified.

The building was occupied by twenty-one families. The fire spread so rapidly that most of the inmates were cut off from escape except by the fire escapes.

THE WESTERNLAND FLOATED.

Cape May, N. J., June 12.—The steamer Westernland, from Liverpool and Queenstown for Philadelphia, which grounded on south shoals at the entrance to Delaware bay early yesterday, was floated at 11:40 p. m. After the futile attempt to float the big liner on the noon tide, nothing was done until the night tide came up, when several tugs fastened hawsers to the steamer and the vessel was pulled off the shoals without much difficulty. After clearing the shoals the Westernland swung around and steamed to the Delaware breakwater, where the liner remained until morning.

GUARDSMEN ON RANGES

Companies May be Formed in Some of Big Towns.

Hibbing Has Nucleus for Good Addition to Third Regiment.

From time to time there has been talk of the organization of more companies for the Third regiment of the national guard and one of these for Hibbing is said to be a possibility of the near future.

There has been talk of another company for Duluth, but the militia authorities are said to have their eyes on the range, looking to the organization of one or two companies in some of the biggest towns there.

If only one militia company is organized on the range, it will probably be at Hibbing. That city already contains several former members of Companies A and C of Duluth, besides others identified at different times with the militia of this or other states. There is said to be a nucleus for a very good company there.

Among the enthusiasts at Hibbing who would probably take an active part in the organization of a company is Fred Wood, formerly first sergeant of Company C. He removed to the range from Duluth several months ago. While an officer of the local battalion, Sergeant Wood took a very active interest in the militia and it was with regret that the members of Company C saw him depart for Hibbing.

Virginia, Eveleth and Two Harbors are also looked upon as places which might support full quota companies. If militia organizations are formed on the range, however, all of the cities named will not have them. Probably not more than two new companies will be organized.

The talk of another company for Duluth has not been extinguished altogether. The latest rumor concerning the scheme involves the names of some prominent ex-militia as the organizers.

THINK CANADA ALL RIGHT.

Former Duluthians Differ With Disappointed Minnesotans Regarding It.

To the Editor of The Herald:

We noticed an article in the Tuesday, June 5, issue of The Herald, where some Battleford, Saskatchewan, people expressed themselves as not being at all satisfied with their location. They must be hard people to satisfy, or they surely would not have left such a country as this for Minnesota or any other place. It would be a hard thing to go into any new country and find the weather ideal all the time, the hotel accommodations as good, and the same prices for necessities prevailing as in older and more settled countries. We are situated about two and one-half miles from Davidson, have 300 acres into crop and are more than satisfied with the district. The best kind of flour can be bought right in town for $2.75 per hundred, and it is as good or even better than any flour ever manufactured down there in Duluth. The crops are coming up fine, some of the wheat being up eight or nine inches, and we are getting lots of rain, and there has always been plenty of it during the summer and fall. Oats are 50 and 55 cents and they are the best. We have yet to hear of a single instance where anybody has not been more than pleased with the country. The Battleford district is regarded as even a better place than this by many people around here. Improved land is selling for from $30 to $40 an acre, which speaks for itself. We hope Mr. Williamson will find what he wants in Northern Minnesota, and when he gets to range, however, all of the cities named will not have them. Probably not more than two new companies will be organized.

The talk of another company for Duluth has not been extinguished altogether. The latest rumor concerning the scheme involves the names of some prominent ex-militia as the organizers.

STATE QURRRIES AT EAGLE RIVER

To Supply Trap Rock for Road Making in Michigan.

Marquette, Mich., June 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Horatio S. Earle, state highway commissioner, has returned to Lower Michigan convinced of the merit of his scheme to establish state quarries near Eagle River, Keweenaw Point, to supply crushed Lake Superior trap rock to lower peninsula townships and counties for road-making purposes. He proposes to establish a prison large enough to accommodate 1,000 convicts, whose labor he would use in the quarrying operations. Mr. Earle found plenty of trap rock in the upper peninsula, particularly so in the vicinity of Eagle river, where it lies in almost inexhaustible quantity, and in quality he says it is the best he ever saw.

"The Palisades of the Hudson, it is claimed, furnish the best rock in the world for macadam construction," said Mr. Earle, "but the trap rock of the upper peninsula is very much better than the Eastern product. I am satisfied that the rock can be crushed and shipped to any point in the state for less money than we now pay for the poorer limestone product secured in Illinois and Wisconsin. We will build 165 miles of highways in the state with the $20,000 appropriated a year ago by the legislature, all constructed according to the standard specifications of the state reward law, and within two years, providing the appropriation is large enough, we could use at least 1,500,000 yards of crushed rock for road-building."

However, despite Mr. Earle's confidence, the feasibility of the scheme of the state highway commissioner is considered open to serious question. It is much doubted that rock could be prepared and shipped at reasonable cost hundreds of miles to Lower Michigan points, even with conditions for production ideal. Rail shipments would be disastrously expensive, and water shipments would call for so much handling that it is held the result would be the same. But the primary cost of preparing for any such extensive production of crushed trap rock, the erection of a prison for 1,000 convicts, in itself, it is declared, condemns the project. Besides, that number of convicts could not be secured unless all the other prisons in the state were abandoned, while the annual cost of transporting under guard men sentenced to quarry rock in the most distant part of the commonwealth would amount in the aggregate to a very large sum. A fact overlooked by the commissioner is the practical impossibility of conducting quarrying operations during winter in such an exposed area as Keweenaw point, the coldest spot in Michigan, swept as it is by the icy blasts from Lake Superior. All in all, Mr. Earle's scheme is, in the upper peninsula at least, regarded as veriest moonshine.

OWNERSHIP A FAMILY AFFAIR

Majority of Union Central Stock is Held by Relatives.

Milwaukee, June 12.—The subject of stock ownership in the Union Central Life Insurance company was taken up when the special Wisconsin legislative committee, investigating life insurance companies, resumed its hearing today. It was shown that although there were originally fifty shareholders, this number had been gradually reduced until at the present time there are but thirty-two. The by-laws of the company provide that no transfer of the stock of the company shall be valid until ratified by the directors. It is also provided that when sales of the stock are made, that preference shall be given other stockholders of the company as purchasers. It developed that now most of the stockholders of the company are officers of the company or their relatives. Originally the amount of stock which any one person could hold in the company was limited to $5,000. Later this amount was raised to $10,000 and later still the limit was removed altogether.

Asked why the amendments had been placed in the by-laws providing that transfers of the stock must be ratified by the directors, Secretary Marshall said he presumed such a clause had been added to the by-laws to prevent the stock passing into the hands of people unfriendly to the company.

It was shown that out of a total of 5,000 shares of stock, 2,412½ shares were held by four families, all of whom are related in some manner to Governor Pattison, the president of the company. It developed that in 1902 there was a contest between President Pattison of the company and the treasurer, J. L. Clark, over the purchase of 800 shares of stock given by Mrs. M. E. Harry to the Ohio Wesleyan university. Mr. Pattison was awarded the stock at a meeting of the board of directors, at which Mr. Clark lowed to remain with Mr. Pattison, allowed to remain with Mr. aPttison, although he at the time of the transfer gave a bond to the directors to hold them harmless for any liability which might arise out of the transfer.

DUPONT FORMALLY ELECTED SENATOR.

Dover, Del., June 12.—The Delaware legislature today elected Col. Henry A. Dupont United States senator for the constitutional term beginning March 3, 1905. His election was practically unanimous, as the Democratic members voted blanks and all the Republican members save one voted for Col. Dupont. The exception was State Senator Thomas C. Moore of Kent county, who voted for J. Edward Addicks.

Mr. Dupont is the head of the great powder works bearing his name and is very wealthy. He served throughout the war of the Rebellion and was awarded a medal of honor for "most distinguished gallantry in action."

DELINQUENTS ARE ARRESTED

Three Men Pay Fines for Keeping Unlicensed Dogs.

The first installment of dog owners who are delinquent in paying up their taxes, was brought into municipal court this morning.

There were four prisoners in all, and three of them were arraigned on the charge of keeping an unlicensed dog. The case against the fourth one was dismissed, as he had secured his license. The three who entered a plea of guilty, were F. J. Small, F. S. Miller and Mrs. A. Gulden. Judge Windom fined each of them $5, remitting the costs, and they were instructed to procure their licenses at once.

The warning published in The Herald last evening had its effect, and this morning the city treasurer's office presented a busy scene. Between fifty and sixty licenses were issued up to 12 o'clock, and the total is now about 1,600. There are still between 200 and 300 dogs in the city, it is estimated, that are not incensed, and the owners of these are apt to find themselves in trouble before the end of the week, if they do not secure tags for their dogs.

BODY BROUGHT HERE.

Mrs. Jennie Clarke Had Many Relatives in This City.

The body of Mrs. Jennie Clarke was brought to Duluth from Middle River this morning for burial.

Mrs. Clarke leaves a husband and six children, the oldest of whom, Howard, a boy of 15, accompanied his mother's body to Duluth. Death occurred Friday, and was due to cancer.

Mrs. Clarke was a sister of John and David Butchart of Lakeside, Peter Butchart of Twenty-sixth avenue west, and James and David Butchart of Hibbing.

Her father, James Butchart, 89 years of age, is living with his son Peter at Twenty-sixth avenue west.

Mrs. Elsie Smith of Sandstone, a sister, is also in Duluth for the funeral, which will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from Stewart's undertaking parlors. Interment will be made at Forest Hill.

MICHIGAN PEOPLE ARE VOTING ON LAW.

Detroit, June 12.—Primary elections are being held in Michigan today at which the voters are balloting on the question of making permanent the present primary law, providing for the nomination of candidates for governor and lieutenant governor by direct vote, and the selection of candidates for the other state offices by convention of the party. Delegates are also being selected to the various county conventions which will select the delegates to the state convention.

FORTY-TWO POISON DOSES IN AN AVERAGE MEAL.

Kansas City, Mo., June 12.—"By studying a bill of fare in a restaurant not long ago, I found that the average man takes forty-two doses of poison at every meal he eats," said Harry B. Walmsley, champion of the pure food bill in the last legislature. "The butter is covered with coal-tar dyes, the meat has more or less embalming fluid, the lard in which his potatoes are fried probably contains portions of hogs that have died natural deaths, and not been slaughtered under sanitary conditions; the catsup is colored with coal dyes and has salicylic acid in it.

"The bread is full of alum; the tea and coffee contain coffer; the vegetables have different varieties of coal-tar dyes. You can't get any pure pepper; it is full of cocoanut shells, sawdust and clay. You buy a nice red apple on the stand. It is rosy because, nine times out of ten, it is painted with coal-tar dyes. Even the cherished illusion of new potatoes is not always ours. Old potatoes are freshened up in alum water after being scraped.

"Fifty per cent of the deaths that occur in this country are the direct result of impure and dishonest foods. The packers are not alone to blame. It is practically impossible to get any pure food in this country."

BOMB OF TODAY AN ENGINE OF DEATH.

New York, June 12.—The most dangerous feature of recent bomb outrages is not their number, as indicated by secret service officials, but the great improvement that is being made in the construction of bombs.

The number of persons who can be killed by a single bomb is now much greater than it was when these engines of destruction were first introduced. No less than twenty-four persons were killed by the explosion of the bomb aimed at King Alfonso and Queen Victoria a few days ago, and about eighty were more or less injured.

When such a man as Morales, who threw the bomb at King Alfonso, turns anarchist, the result can be appalling. He was a profound student of chemistry and a practical chemist, and he made the bomb which literally scattered death.

TALK ABOUT GOOD ROADS

County Association Opens Session at the Duluth Commercial Club.

Drafting Resolutions to be Presented to the Republican Convention.

Plenty of enthusiasm and interesting talks marked the opening of the session of the St. Louis County Good Roads association at the Commercial club this morning.

Before the adjournment for luncheon was taken, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions which are to be presented to the Republican convention, asking for a strong good roads plank in the platform of that body. This committee, appointed by Vice President Pattson, who was in the chair, comprises A. E. McManus, chairman; L. B. Arnold, Dr. D. C. Rood of Hibbing, and Judge Cant. The adoption of the resolutions is taking place this afternoon.

Many members of the association came in from the ranges at noon and the attendance at the afternoon session, which was called to order at 2 o'clock, was considerably larger than at the morning session.

In addition to the adoption of the resolutions which are to go to the convention, the program for this afternoon includes an interesting paper on "State Highway Legislation" by George W. Cooley, state engineer.

The principal speaker this morning was Gustav Scholle of St. Paul, chairman of the state highway commission. Mr. Scholle is an enthusiast on the good roads question and his experience in such matters gave his address a double interest.

There were two things upon which he laid particular stress. One was the taking of the public highways out of the hands of the townships and their overseers and placing them under the direct control of the county commissioners, in all the counties of the state. He pointed that the saving would be great and the method much more effective.

He also said that he would like to see a resolution presented to the convention favoring the placing of the prison labor at work crushing stone for public highways instead of making shoes and binder twine, occupations which placed the prisoners in competition with paid labor and was not as healthful for the state's charges as crushing rock in the open would be.

A former speaker has spoken of the aid that the automobilists might give to the good roads movement and Mr. Scholle elaborated on the theme.

"The automobile is the farmer's friend," he said. "I would advise the farmers and automobilists to get together on this road proposition. The farmers should be able to secure large sums from the autoists for the condition of better roads. Those who owns autos are mostly men of means and should be willing to expend some of their money on the betterment of roads. What good is a man's automobile unless he has some good place to run it?"

In speaking of the present system of road supervision and repairing, Mr. Scholle said:

"In four-fifths of the counties in this state, it is customary for the farmers to work out their poll tax by doing work on the public roads and that is the most expensive and ineffective way possible.

"I would take the repair of the roads and their construction out of the hands of the township overseers and place them in the hands of the county commissioners. The saving would be great. Town roads should be abolished and all of them made county roads.

"The county commissioners could employ a competent man to look after the roads and the entire expense would not be nearly so great as it is under the present arrangement. Now there are overseers, clerks and so forth who receive salaries for their work, whereas by a centralization of the working forces, much economy could be practiced.

"Some people will ask where are you to get the money for all these road improvements? Let me tell you if you will only change the system, you will have more than enough to carry on the work. In one small county in this state, about $12,000 was spent in one year for the construction and maintenance of public highways. Think how much of that could be saved were there not so many fingers in the pie. The salaries of many overseers and clerks came out of that $12,000.

"This matter of placing the roads under the direct supervision of the county commissioners should be brought to the attention of the Republican convention.

"In Ramsey county, this scheme has been tried with excellent results, and in some Eastern states it has long been a success. It is not that, under the prevailing system, that the farmers who do the road work do not intend to do good work, but they do not always know how and there is a tendency to shirk the responsibility. The men are paying off their taxes and they are inclined to go along in slip-shod shape and let the next man do better, if he has the inclination.

"Last summer, on my way from Hastings to St. Paul, I came upon a number of farmers at work on the road, paying off their poll tax. They were working with a plow and spreading the worst kind o stu ffon the top of the road. In a month, the rain had washed great holes in that road and it was practically worthless.

"In Ramsey county, the road gang starts out in the spring and it is out for about four months. A cook is carried with the gang and there are no delays. The men are right on hand and can work all day long. Under the old system, men would sometimes be sent out from St. Paul and lose half a day sometimes, going back and forth. This new gang is under a man who knows his business.

"The people appreciated that they were getting something for thier money and signified their willingness to be taxed for this work, so $75,000, instead of $39,000, will be spent on macadam roads during the coming year."

Reports of the election of vice presidents from some of the townships in the county were heard. It is expected that more will be reported before the meeting adjourns. Those reported this morning were the election of Anton Hielm of Normana township, Charles Kangas of Pike township, B. A. Martin of La Velle, E. A. Beckman of New Independence and John A. Redford of Hibbing.

Dr. D. C. Rood of Hibbing made a short talk and Mayor Gullum delivered an address of welcome in which he spoke of the importance of the good roads movement.

Heber McHugh of Superior was called upon for a talk. Mr. McHugh is an enthusiastic automobilist, and attacked the subject of good roads with much vigor. He referred to good roads as competitors of the railroads and trolleys, looking toward lower rates for farmers, gardeners and dairymen. He hopes to see a good public highway from the Head of the Lakes to the Twin Cities, in the near future.

Unknown Friends.

There are many people who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with splendid results, but who are unknown because they have hesitated about giving a testimonial of their experience for publication. These people, however, are none the less friends of this remedy. They have done much toward making it a household word by their personal recommendations to friends and neighbors. It is a good medicine to have in the home and is widely known for its cures of diarrhoea and all forms of bowel trouble. For sale by all leading druggists.

STRONG PROTEST FROM ST. JOSEPH

Over Injury Done Packing Business by President's Letter.

Washington, June 12.—A delegation of officials and business men of St. Joseph, Mo., called on the president today to discuss with him the meat packing inquiry with special reference to their city.

Louis E. Golding, editor of the News and Press, who acted as spokesman of the delegation, said that they had told the president of the packing house conditions in St. Joseph.

"Our packing houses," said Mr. Golding, "we know, are cleanly, healthy and sanitary from one end to the other. We know nothing of the conditions in Chicago packing houses, but if they are as represented, they ought to be dumped into Lake Michigan. The packing business of our city is being injured by this agitation, and we want to make it clear that St. Joseph is not guilty."

The president suggested that he might make public a list of those concerns that were found, on investigation, to be conducted in an unhealthful and unsanitary manner. Such a publication, of course, would relieve the packing houses of St. Joseph.

INSURANCE MEN PLEAD NOT GUILTY.

New York, June 12.—Frederick A. Burnham, former president of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company and George Burnham and George D. Eldridge, formerly vice presidents of that company, were arraigned before Judge Cowing today on five indictments returned by the grand jury against each of them, charging forgery and grand larceny. Through their counsel they pleaded not guilty. The date of the trial has not been fixed.

MANY DISAPPOINTED

In Not Gaining Admittance to Ellen Terry's Jubilee Performance.

London, June 12.—The all-night vigil of the admirers of Miss Helen Terry, who were anxious to get into Drury Lane theater and witness her jubilee matinee performance this afternoon, ended in a disappointment to hundreds who after braving a 24-hours' wait outside the pit gallery doors failed to obtain admittance. When the overture of the remarkable program, containing the name of practically of every stage star now in London, was started, Drury Lane was packed from floor to ceiling.

CARTER CASE GOES OVER.

Chicago, June 12.—The case of the government against Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, former army officer, for return of money alleged to have been embezzled, was continued today, counsel for the government not being ready for the hearing. The case will be taken up about Aug. 1.

BOOKBINDERS MEET.

Washington, June 12.—The tenth annual convention of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders convened here today.

GATHERING IS SELECT

Electrical Contractors Are Holding Little Convention of Their Own.

Leave on Inspection Trip to Northern Power Company's Plant.

Overshadowed by the big Republican state convention, the gathering of the Minnesota Electrical Contractors' association, which is meeting in Duluth this week, passed almost unnoticed until this morning, when a Herald reporter heard that a man with a strange badge had been seen walking the streets of the city yesterday afternoon.

Thinking that the "dark horse" was about to be sprung, he followed up the clue hot foot, and ran the electrical contractors to earth, or at least struck their trail.

It appears that the convention is a small but very select one, and there are but eighteen visitors including the outside delegates and their wives. They got their business out of the way yesterday elected their officers, talked over matters which nobody but an electrician could understand, and this morning they decided to escape the politicians and enjoy a quiet little jaunt to Thomson and look over the power plant there, combining pleasure with the business of learning what they could from the work being done by the Great Northern Power company.

When the reporter, therefore, found their trail, the birds had flown, and there was nothing left to do but to return to the hopeless task of trying to learn the sentiment regarding the governorship nomination from politicians who won't give up what they know until the convention.

Meanwhile the electrical contractors and their wives are displaying the true convention spirit, and are thoroughly enjoying one of Duluth's rare June days, in a pleasant little jaunt up the beautiful St. Louis river, leaving the politicians to their task of trying to find somebody to buck Governor Johnson.

FARMERS WOULD AVOID MIDDLEMEN.

Chicago, June 12.—Representative farmers from the states of the Mississippi valley are here today to attend a two days' session of the American Society of Equity. The main object of the organization is the control of prices of all products of the farm. The plan is to build elevators and cold storage plants at various points throughout the country and to sell direct to the wholesale dealer in the city, thus eliminating the middleman.

MISSES HER GOWNS.

Kentucky Mayor's Daughter Who Eloped Mourns Clothes He Kept.

St. Louis, June 12.—Mrs. Edgar H. Gillam, the Kentucky bride of a young traveling man from New York, with whom she eloped last week, is more distressed over whether her father will "let her have her clothes" than she is over the unforgiving attitude of her sire. She was Miss Fanny Beach, belle of Covington, where her father is mayor. She came to St. Louis last Tuesday and married Gillam at a hotel, bringing no clothes with her except those she wore, her father having withheld her wardrobe.

GASH IN HEART IS MENDED; MAN LIVES.

Philadelphia, June 12.—For over forty minutes the pulsating heart of William Wyatt was held in the hands of two physicians at the Pennsylvania hospital Saturday night while Dr. Richard Hart, hospital surgeon, sewed six stitches in the organ and then replaced it in the body. Wyatt, who was at first thought to have been fatally cut, is reported to be resting comfortably, and the physicians say they have every reason to believe that the patient will recover. It was the third time such an operation has been performed in the city.

Wyatt and a friend were scuffling for possession of a long knife when the former slipped and fell on its point. Dr. Hart made an incision in Wyatt's left side long enough to put his hand through and, taking out the heart, placed it upon the palms of his two assistants, and there it lay, throbbing vigorously as it sent the blood coursing through the arteries.

Examination showed that the knife had inflicted a wound on the organ an inch and a quarter long. In order that the heart's action should not be interfered with, it was necessary for the surgeon to make stitches between pulsations. When the operation was concluded the organ was put back in its proper place.

Miner and Gang Could Not Realize on Stolen Paper.

Kamloops, B. C., June 12.—J. R. M. Greenfield, postoffice inspector, has checked up the money contained in the registered mail bags robbed by Miner and his band, and finds that the total in cash was $15.50. There were several checks and money orders, but payment was promptly stopped, and they were valueless to the robbers. No trace of the checks or orders can, however, be found. The camps of the robbers were carefully searched, but no sign of the papers having been burnt or otherwise destroyed could be detected.

MONEY WAS NOT IN BANK

Funds to Buy Mexican Land Diverted Under Voliva Regime.

Chicago, June 12.—Fielding H. White, secretary of the organization that had charge of the Mexican colonization scheme of John Alexander Dowie, today resumed his testimony in the trial of the Zion City controversy before Judge Landis.

He declared no concessions had ever been obtained from the republic of Mexico, but that concession had been under advisement with a leading family in Mexico.

"Why was not that purchase made?" asked Dowie's attorney.

"Well, at that time the money, over $130,000, in the Zion City bank, was not available."

"Why not?"

"The money was not in the bank."

The witness intimated that the fund which had been subscribed for the Mexican enterprise had been diverted to other uses under the Voliva regime. Voliva's attorney objected to this line of testimony, but it was allowed to stand.

OSTBY IS REPENTANT.

Asks Forgiveness and Station of Hauge Lutheran Synod.

Red Wing, Minn., June 12.—At yesterday's session of the Hauge conference, Rev. Theodore Hanson of Chicago and Rev. Ole Boyum of Peterson, Minn., led the devotional exercises.

A communication was received from Rev. O. A. Ostby, once a pastor in the synod, but who became a doctor and hypnotist. He asked forgiveness, and said he had decided to resume his work in the synod. The matter was referred to the church council for action.

It was decided to hold the next annual conference at Roland, Story county, Iowa. The work of the missionaries in China was highly commended, and it was decided to build a new hospital at Fancheng as soon as possible. Missionary Wold and family will be permitted to visit Norway and Sweden on their way to China.

In the afternoon reports were considered, and Rev. B. H. Barstad of Santa Rosa, Cal., delivered an address on his experiences during the earthquake.

RALLIES AT THE CLOSE

But July Option is Lower in the Duluth Market.

Flax is Fairly Active in Duluth, With Weaker Prices.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 12.—After a weak opening, caused by a government report which was more favorable than expected, wheat became firm in the American markets today and the July option closed higher everywhere except Duluth. The July option in the local market was ¼c off. The cause of the firmness was good buying and unfavorable crop reports from Kansas, Nebraska and other parts of the United States. Liverpool closed ⅝d to ½d lower; Paris and Berlin unchanged, and Budapest, ½c higher.

The July option closed ¼-⅜c higher in Chicago, ⅜c in Minneapolis, New York and Kansas, ½c in St. Louis and ¾c in Winnipeg. The September option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth, ½c in Chicago, 1c in Minneapolis, ¼c in New York, and ⅜-½c in St. Louis and Kansas City. The October option closed ⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

Corn was stronger in Chicago, the July option closing 1½-⅝c higher there. It was ¼d to ½d lower in Liverpool. July oats closed ⅜-½c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 78, against 19 yast year and at Minneapolis 139 against 167 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 217, against 186 last year. Chicago received 11, against 15 last year. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 107,700 bus.

Bradstreet reported a decrease of 5,247,000 bus. In the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 1,647,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat a decrease of 3,660,000 bus.

Clearances of corn were 576,000 bus. The world's visible supply of corn increased 567,000 bus.

Wheat was active during the session of the Duluth market. Prices were weak at the opening but stiffened as the close drew near, on good buying and continued bad weather reports from Kansas and elsewhere. July wheat opened ½c lower at 84⅝c, fell off to 84¼c at 9:48, advanced to 85⅜c at 11:40 and declined at the close to 85¼c, a loss of 1¢ from yesterday. The September option opened ⅜c lower at 82⅛c, advanced to 84¼c and declined at the close to 83⅞c, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday.

Flax was fairly active during the entire session. The price broke toward the close of the session on heavy buying at Minneapolis. This was probably caused by favorable weather in the Northwest. July flax opened 1¢ lower at $1.14, fell off to $1.12¾, rallied to $1.13⅞ and declined again in the close to $1.12¾, a loss of 1½c from yesterday.

September flax opened ¼c lower at $1.14¾, advanced to $1.14½ and fell off to $1.13¾, closing at that price, a loss of 1¼c from yesterday. October flax opened ¼c lower at $1.13¾, advanced to $1.13⅞, fell off to $1.12¾ and rallied at the close to $1.13, a loss of 1c from yesterday.

July oats and oats to arrive and on track closed ⅜c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Higher Government Report Has a Weakening Effect on Wheat.

Chicago, June 12.—The government report, which was made public late yesterday, and which showed a higher condition of winter wheat than had been generally expected, had a weakening effect today on the wheat market. Absence of rain in the Northwest was also a depressing influence. Commission houses and pit traders were quite free sellers. July opened ¼c to ⅝@⅞c lower at 83⅝c to 83½@83⅝c, sold at 83¼ and then rallied to 85⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 288 cars, against 522 cars last week and 202 cars a year ago.

Later a strong tone developed on urgent demand by commission houses and shorts. Reports from Kansas and Nebraska claiming serious damage by drought were the main reasons for the improved demand. The highest point of the day for July was reached at 84⅝@⅞c. Late in the session, there was a moderate reaction on profit taking, but the market closed firm with July up 1⅛@⅜c at 84¼c.

The corn market opened easier in sympathy with the weakness of wheat, but initial declines were quickly regained on active covering by shorts. July opened ⅛@¼c to ⅛@⅜c lower at 51⅜c to 51½c, and sold up to 52c. Local receipts were 416 cars, with 191 of contract grade.

As trading progressed the feeling became more bulish, light acceptances from the country having a strengthening influence. July advanced to 52⅝@⅞. The market closed strong with July up 1¼ at 53⅛@¼.

Trading in oats was active and the market had a strong tone. The showing of the government report was the chief factor. July opened unchanged at 37¾c and advanced to 37⅞@38c. Local receipts were 163 cars.

Despite a 5c advance in the price of live hogs, the provisions market was inclined to weakness. Liberal receipts

OPHIR

A LETTER TO INVESTORS.

Some months ago we undertook to handle a block of Ophir stock. Having gathered reliable information in regard to the merits of the Ophir property and being aware that there was a certain contract in existence, which placed the same value upon the Ophir property as upon the Buckhorn Mine, adjoining, (which all authorities agree is very valuable), we felt justified in calling the attention of our clients and others to Ophir Tunnel Company stock.

Demand for the stock soon caused the price to advance from twenty-five cents to seventy-five cents. Then the KNOCKER began his work. (See News Tribune of January 2, 1906, at our office.) This "knocking down to pick up," has continued ever since.

Thereafter, a certain concern of fakirs, which advertised (See News Tribune of December 17, 1905.) "We think that selling Ophir at fifty cents is like selling gold dollars at fifty cents," concluded that we had too good a thing in Ophir and (according to their own statement) entered into a conspiracy with some brokers of a little standing, to assist them in pounding Ophir Tunnel until we should be compelled to "divy up." The scheme was to get a contract from us at a low figure, then boom the Ophir away up and unload it upon the public. Having discovered this plot, we objected to being black-mailed and to having investors, fleeced, and consequently made a few uncomplimentary statements about Hold-up Brothers & Co. and their co-conspirators, which remain unanswered and unanswerable because absolutely true. (More to follow.) Don't let anybody scare you out of your Ophir. Buy it now. Buy it cheap.

STRENGTH WAS SHOWN

By the Stock Market and Substantial Advances Scored.

Later Became Dull and Sold Off on Profit-Taking.

New York, June 12.—Some reflection of yesterday's strength was shown in the opening dealings in the stock market today, particularly in the industrial specialties and granger railroads. Gains reached 1⅜ in Colorado Fuel, 1 in Northwestern and American Ice, ¾ in Locomotive and ½ in St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Smelting and Sugar. The Pacifics were quiet and Southern Pacific was slightly lower.

Pronounced strength was displayed by a number of the high-priced railroad stocks but there was little interest manifested in the specialties and moderate priced railroads. Business was of fairly large proportions in stocks in which there were apparently opportunities for successful "turns," but the list moved quite narrowly, such favorites as St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading and Copper not varying more than ½ point. St. Paul preferred jumped 4 points, Northwestern 2½, Delaware & Hudson 2¼, Northern Pacific 2, Illinois Central 1¾, Great Northern preferred 1½, United States Reduction preferred 1⅝, Baltimore & Ohio and Locomotive 1¼, and General Electric and Corn Products preferred 1.

Business expanded considerably in the second hour and there was a good manifestation of strength despite the continuous realizing in Reading, St. Paul and Union Pacific, which drove the two last named at one time to a fraction below yesterday's closing. Eastern trunk lines were heavy and there was a demand for the metal stocks. Northwestern increased its advance to 2⅜, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis gained 2¼, New York Central and Smelting 1½, Canadian Pacific 1⅜, Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western and Brooklyn Transit 1. Toward mid-day the market was dull and showed a good undertone and St. Paul was marked up a point. Bonds were steady at noon.

The market became heavy between 12 and 2 o'clock and a number of speculative stocks sold below yesterday's close. St. Paul, Illinois Central and Delaware & Hudson were among the leading stocks that had their forenoon advances wiped out. Near 2 o'clock St. Paul was marked up again to near 181 and the general market stiffened. New York, C. & St. Louis second preferred improved 3, Tennessee Coal 2, Hocking Valley and Mexican Central 1¼ and Atlantic Coast Line and Louisvaile & Nashville 1.

Intervals of strength and weakness prevailed in the afternoon market, but the market was more inclined to go down than up. St. Paul moved erratically within a range of a point but its periods of strength did not help the list much. Reading was sold steadily and its loss of over a point had an effect on professional operations. Delaware & Hudson and Gas were forced down 3¾, Illinois Central 1¼ and Wabash preferred 1. Chicago Terminal preferred improved 2.

St. Paul was lifted 2 points to 181½ in face of the general selling of other stocks. Meantime large amounts of Reading, Union Pacific and others were being held at concessions of a point or more from yesterday's closing. Early material advances in a number of high grade stocks were converted into large losses. Reading broke 2¼, Anaconda 2½ and Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific and Colorado Fuel 1 to 1½. The market closed weak.

Stock Gossip.

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market showed further strength this morning and some substantial advances were scored before noon. Later, however, there were further unfavorable crop advices which had great influence upon the grain markets and this checked the rise in stocks and brought about a selling movement. The noteworthy feature of the market was St. Paul which continued to advance in the face of a general reaction and closed with a substantial net gain. Except for the crop advices there was no unfavorable news. Much of the late selling was for the short account.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Trading in New York market was very light today. St. Paul was strong on talk of a new security issue, in which the old stockholders would be given rights. The public interest in the market is very small, and the professional element is said to be working for a reaction. There was not much change in the money situation, although the demand in the loan crowd was reported as better. Think the market will recede from present level.

* * *

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market at opening was inclined to be strong and there was some short covering. St. Paul was bid up sharply and seemed to be very scarce. During the middle of the day the market became dull and in the afternoon sold off on profit taking. It was nearly entirely professional and the early gains were lost in most cases. We look for a trading market for the rest of the week and with light transactions.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was dull and weaker again today, no special feature. Mass. Gas about the only strong active stock traded in today on the curb. Raven was the active feature, with sales at 2½, and later selling around 3, with heavy sales around this level. No news and see no reason to change our opinion on market as expressed for several days past.

The Cotton Market.

New York, June 12.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 4@9 points on renewed covering by shorts which were influenced by higher cables. The weather continued favorable in all sections except the southwest, where it is still dry and hot and July in New Orleans was easier after the opening. Prices here eased off also under realizing and bear pressure and in the middle of the morning were about 6 points higher on July and unchanged to 2 points lower on later months. Trading was quiet.

WHIMS OF REVELLERS.

The Jag Made Sleuth---From Highballs to Hansoms.

After joyous exhilaration has passed into intoxication many men display curious preferences.

One New Yorker invariably becomes a private detective after a certain stage of a jag. His business is then to shadow people. He doesn't care whom he shadows, but usually he prefers tall men, who show their guilt by sitting quietly in a hotel corridor reading a paper or a magazine, says the New York Sun.

Having picked out his victim he prepares for a long siege of shadowing. He selects a chair near the unsuspecting criminal and watches him intently. If the object of his suspicion goes to the cigar counter he is followed and his every move noted. Invariably the shadow admits his business to the hotel clerk in a tone which can be heard several yards away and usually the hotel clerk gets a cab and sends him home.

Another New Yorker becomes fond of theaters after he has passed into semi-oblivion. Ordinarily he never enters a theater.

On red letter nights he visits them all and shows his contempt for the play by waddling laboriously to his seat, removing his hat and coat and then immediately putting on his hat and coat again and proceeding outdoors and on to the next theater. He has been known to collect people he never met before and take them with him on his tour of inspection.

A clerk of 30, whose salary is modest, shakes off the ties of home and friends occasionally and drinks all the highballs he can. In the last stages his sole desire is to ride in hansom cabs regardless of cost.

He doesn't go home. He simply rides around New York. When he tires of one cab, or the color of the horse's tail, he climbs out and summons another. In the small wee hours, when his money is spent, and his pride is down on foot and wonders how he will feel in the morning.

The hobby of another convivial person of mature years is sea bathing. Rolling about merrily in the washing foam is his only ambition.

A little patch of green turf in front of a boarding house supplies as good bathing as any beach on the Atlantic coast for this reveller. He has been discovered several times sprawling about on the grass. He has folded up his coat, covered it with his hat and dived madly off the edge of the sidewalk.

The speech maker inebriate is too common to be interesting. The gentleman who suddenly

General Agents' Association Holds Farewell Dinner for G. H. Anthony.

Will Leave for Winnipeg, His New Field, Next Friday.

Farewells to George H. Anthony, general agent of the Wisconsin Central, were spoken today in a parting dinner held in his honor by his railroad co-workers at the Head of the Lakes. Mr. Anthony leaves on Friday to take the general agency of his company for the Canadian Northwest, with headquarters at Winnipeg, and the spread was tendered him by the Head of the Lakes General Agents' association, embracing a number of the leading transportation officials of both Superior and this city.

Charles L. Kennedy, commercial agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and president of the association, presided at the table, which was set with covers for twelve in the private dining room of the Commercial club, and the feast, which was provided with a strong tribute to the gastronomic instincts of W. J. Power, general agent of the Great Northern, and Thomas E. Blanche, general agent of the Northern Pacific, who not only arranged the testimonial to the departing member, but took direct charge of the invitations and menu as well. There were a lot of informal speeches made, including many sentiments of favor toward Mr. Anthony, and regrets at his transfer from Duluth.

Mr. Anthony expressed his thanks for all the kind words and for his courteous treatment at the hands of his railroad associates during his two years of residence in Duluth, which he said were two of the most pleasant years of his existence.

The invited guests, besides the above named, were: George M. Smith, general agent of the Omaha; Harry Hordon, general agent of the Grand Trunk & Northwest Transportation company; Andrew J. Perrin, general agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic; Seymour Jerome Bigelow, commercial agent of the Michigan Central; Charles D. Thompson, general agent of the Maple Leaf route; H. R. Grochau, general agent of the Omaha in Superior; J. D. Morrissey, general agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, Superior; and W. H. Smith, assistant general agent of the Northern Pacific, Superior.

Mr. Anthoy has made an enviable record in favor of his railroad company during his stay in Duluth, which dates from July 1, 1894. The business has increased materially during his administration and he has won for himself and the corporation a large number of strong friends. It is his success in Duluth and his familiarity with traffic, both freight and passenger, in this part of the continent, which led to his being chosen for the newly-established department to be quartered at Winnipeg. The company has been aggressive during the past two years in going after Canadian business through to the Middle West and to the East and the frequent trips which Mr. Anthony has made to the Western metropolis of Canada now reveal their significance by the creation of the new office.

Railroad men say that one of the chief difficulties in the establishment of the work there will be the arrangement of through tariffs, which will take a great deal of time and care to arrange.

Mr. Anthony expects to move his family from their home at 218 Fifteenth avenue east to Winnipeg as soon as possible. He says the talk about high prices for things in Winnipeg he has investigated and finds to be greatly exaggerated, and that any prospect on this score has absolutely no terrors for him.

"I've looked into that matter some," said he, "and find that, while houses and flats are to some extent scarce in Winnipeg, building is constantly going on to meet the demand. I have knowledge of some houses and flats about to be completed there, and they are very pleasant in appearance and reasonable in cost. As in the case of any rapidly growing city where prosperity is on top, everything is pretty well held, but within all reasonable limits, and Winnipeg is just as good a place for a family man as anywhere else.

"Of course, I regret leaving all the good friends I have made in Duluth, and shall not forget them. Although my stay here has been comparatively brief, even for a migratory railroad man, I have made friends here that I shall never forget, and have spent a pleasant period in a delightful, progressive city, that will be encouraging to me to recall in years to come."

For thirty years Mr. Anthony has been continuously in the railroad service. He entered the work in 1877 as agent and operator for the Kansas Pacific railway, and was with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe from 1879 to 1881 as material agent and station agent. He then went to the Mexican Central, where he remained until 1885 as assistant superintendent of construction and later assitant superintendent. In 1886 and 1887 he was superintendent of construction with the Kansas City, Wyandotte & Northwestern. The year following he went back to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe as assistant trainmaster. He was promoted to an agency with this company and later given the commercial agency at Detroit, remaining until 1894, since which time he has been with the Wisconsin Central. He was first traveling freight agent at Detroit and Chicago, then becoming general agent at Pittsburg, whence he came to Duluth two years since.

TAKES A BIG CROWD.

Second Detroit Excursion is Run Over South Shore Road.

The present spell of pleasant weather has engendered the excursion fever and the local railway ticket offices are receiving a large amount of inquiry as to special rates that are being made to various points. This afternoon the South Shore road started its second spring excursion cast for Detroit, Buffalo and intermediate points. The company, as has been its custom, has made a round trip rate of $12 to Detroit and $11 to Buffalo, effective certain dates during June and the resulting business has been heavy. The first excursion run a few days ago carried over 350 passengers from Duluth, Superior and the Copper country to St. Ignace, where they connected with the Detroit & Cleveland line of steamers. The excursion was by far larger than the opening spring excursion by the lake and rail route in any previous season. There has been a big sale for this evening's excursion, which connects with the steamer tomorrow, and an extra coach is being run clear through to St. Ignace in addition to the regular equipment.

Low Rates Now Ended.

This is the last date that the low rates are effective on the Omaha road for round trip tickets between Duluth and Chicago and St. Paul. There has been a large demand for transportation because of the ticket limitation and this evening's Omaha train was well filled with Head of the Lakes people. The travel during the season of low rates has been heavy beyond all expectation.

Promotion for Rayn.

It is rumored in local railroad circles that John Rayn, traveling freight agent for the Rock Island road out of Minneapolis, has been promoted to be commercial agent for the same company at St. Paul. Mr. Rayn is well known among the railroad fraternity at the Head of the Lakes and he is receiving the best wishes and congratulations of his friends if the report is true.

Railway Club to Meet.

The next meeting of the Northern Railway club, which occurs June 22, will be a most interesting one in several ways. Not only is a good program being prepared, but the club will hold its meeting at the Duluth Yacht club, on the invitation of Commodore Johnson. The guests will be met at Patterson's boathouse with launches at 7:45 o'clock in the evening. The meeting at the boat club will begin about 8 o'clock.

Railroad Personals.

H. B. Peterson, northwestern passenger agent for the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, was a visitor in the city yesterday and today.

Will Sail on the Fern.

The delegates to the convention will be given a short excursion on the bay on the U. S. S. Fern after the morning session tomorrow. The boat will start from the Lake avenue slip and the trip will occupy about an hour. The members of the party will be the guests of the Naval Reserves, and N. F. Hugo is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

AT WORK ON ELY SCHOOL

Contractors Building New Structure at Wisdom and Central.

Some Difficulty With Ground is Overcome and Foundation Goes in.

A crew of twenty-five men is at work on the new Ely school building on Central avenue and the work is being pushed as fast as possible. The contractors encountered one serious difficulty in the condition of the land where the building was to be erected. The center of the plot was occupied by a huge mound of eath, surrounded by a low lying and swampy strip. The mound in the center had to be removed, and the foundations of the building had to be sunk several feet deeper on account of the marshy condition of the lot.

These difficulties were overcome, however, and now the basement walls are nearly completed. The specifications call for ten school rooms, but the basement was planned so that in addition to a manual training department, there is room for five more school or kidergarten rooms to be fitted up there. The walls have been treated with a special coating of concrete and cement, which will prevent all penetration of dampness into the interior, and as the basement is twelve feet high and extends several feet above the ground there will be no difficulty about lighting.

The contract calls for the completion of the building by December, and while the work might be finished before that time by rushing, the contractors think best to occupy the whole time in order that the building may have plenty of time to dry before the finish is put on. It is probable that it will be occupied immediately after the Christmas holidays.

File on Timber Claims.

Another party of West Duluth men, comprising Emil Zanft, B. Stickney, E. Kreidler, W. J. Works and J. J. Frye, left this morning for Ely where they expect to locate on timber claims. This makes a total of fifteen West Duluthians who have filed on claims, and the indications are that a number more will do so in the near future.

REPORT ON THE STATEHOOD BILL

Withdrawn From Senate and Will Go Back to Conference.

Washington, June 12.—In the senate today Senator Beveridge sought to withdraw the conference report on the statehood bill so that the conferees might take up the compromise agreed upon yesterday, but the request was opposed by Senator Blackburn, who made the point of order that a conference report being the property of the two houses of congress cannot be withdrawn except by unanimous consent. Senator Carter replied that technically the report in this case had not been presented to the house. He contended that under the practice of the senate a conference report could be withdrawn at any time previous to action by the senate.

He took issue with a statement by Mr. Blackburn that the report is the joint property of both houses, saying that the papers are all in the senate and the matter has not been presented to the house.

Messrs. Lodge and Foraker took the position that upon objection to the withdrawal of a report such permission can only be granted by a voto of the senate.

Mr. Beveridge thereupon moved that leave be granted to withdraw the report and this was carried without division. He then formally withdrew the report, thus taking the bill back to conference.

VISIONS OF A SURPLUS PLEASES THE SECRETARY.

Washington, June 12.—Secretary Shaw is preparing to sell $25,000,000 worth of Panama canal bonds, and early in July the advertisements of the bond sale will be published. About $30,000,000 will be required for the canal work during the next year, but Secretary Shaw has decided that he will be able to finance the scheme with the funds now on hand and those realized from the bond sale. It will be a popular loan, and the denomination of the bonds will be small. Secretary Shaw expects to realize a small premium on the sale.

With the steadily growing surplus in the treasury, Secretary Shaw believes that all the expenses of the canal can be met without selling bonds, but it has been agreed by the administration and congress that the future generation should bear part of the cost of the ditch.

The condition of the treasury is a source of great satisfaction to the secretary, as it now appears certain that the surplus at the end of the fiscal year will be about $10,000,000.

INMATES BARRICADE PRISON.

A. L. COLE OF WALKER NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR; HENNEPIN PRECIPITATES THE LANDSLIDE

SWEPT IN WITH ABOUT FIVE VOTES TO SPARE

Bandwagon Movement to Walker Man Began After Third Formal Ballot.

Jacobson Failed to Show Predicted Strength and Could Not Gain.

THE BALLOTS.

	Informal	First	Second	Final
Jacobson	347	367	383	408
Cole	192	232	230	550
Stephens	103	76	73	16
Somerville	87	68	47	8
Block	181½	196	210	19
Lord	118	124	123	75
Diment	60½	26	23	13

Representative A. L. Cole of Walker was nominated at 1:20 this afternoon by the Republican state convention for governor of the state.

The affair came on the third formal ballot and was a complete surprise to almost everybody. Hennepin which was opposed to Jacobson led the break which came, and as soon as the calling of the roll was finished the band wagon movement started, Blue Earth county leading the van.

The informal ballot showed that Jacobson had just about the strength which he had claimed, the ballot showing 347 votes for him as against 192 for Cole, 103 for Stephens, 118 for Lord, 181½ for Block, 87 for Somerville, and 60½ for Diment. There was not much enthusiasm on that ballot until Isanti county was reached and when it threw its 10 votes to Jacobson, it came as something of a surprise and there was a little applause.

On the first formal ballot there were several breaks and Jacobson got an increase of 20 votes. Cole gained 40.

On the next ballot there was another increase for both of these, and after the third ballot the excitement started. On this ballot Hennepin county which had been voting its 99 votes for Block, switched 87 of them to Cole and 13 went to Jacobson.

This was what started the landslide. The calling of the roll had hardly ceased until the chairman of the Blue Earth county delegation arose and announced that its vote which had been scattering was to be changed to Cole, giving him another increase of 17 votes. Then they came in the following order: Dakota 10 to Cole and 3 to Jacobson; Le Sueur 12 to Cole; Red Lake 9 to Cole; Clearwater 8 to Cole; Ramsey 64 to Cole; Wabasha 12 to Cole; Polk 17 to Cole; Mower 12 to Cole and 1 to Jacobson; Brown 10 to Cole and 1 to Jacobson; Sibley 5 to Jacobson and 5 to Cole; Becker 11 to Cole; Roseau 8 to Cole and 1 to Jacobson; Carver 9 to Jacobson and 2 to Cole. It is evident that more wished to change one way or the other, but in the turmoil which succeeded and interrupted these changes, a great many of the changes were not heard.

It finally summed up as follows: Jacobson, 408; Cole, 550; Stephens, 16; Somerville, 8; Block, 19; Lord, 75; Diment, 13.

Senator Brower, as soon as the total vote was announced and he could be heard moved that the nomination be made unanimous, but the vote was lost.

The convention then adjourned until 2:30 p. m.

LATE IN GATHERING.

Caucuses of Some Delegations Cause Delay in Starting.

The Republican state convention opened this morning at the Armory. The delegates were slow in arriving at the convention hall and the opening was delayed nearly three-quarters of an hour beyond the time set. Several caucuses were held during the earlier hours of the day, delaying proceedings, and Ramsey and Hennepin counties were still caucusing after the other delegations had gathered in the Armory. The smaller counties were among the first to arrive.

The sunshine and fresh air of the streets appeared to appeal to the delegates and spectators stronger than the roomy interior of the big hall, and most of them delayed going inside until the last minute. Delegates were gathered about in groups on the corners, and candidates for office and those working for them passed from group to group, presenting a smiling face and a glad hand to them all.

It was close onto the hour of 10 o'clock before the corridors of the hotels were deserted in favor of the convention hall, and even after that the delegates who had been in caucus were to be seen hurrying across the lobbies and out into the street on their way to the convention. Between 9:30 and 10 o'clock the Armory began slowly to fill up, the delegates straggling in in twos, threes and bunches of half a dozen or more. The front doors of the hall were locked, and were not used at all, the entrance being at the northwest corner of the room, where there is a doorway opening directly onto the street.

No one was admitted who did not wear a badge of the kind required, or produce the proper credentials. No disorder was noticeable, and there was no congestion, except for a few minutes shortly before the meeting was called to order, and that was soon straightened out. The seats of the delegations were plainly marked, and they met with no difficulty in getting located. The services of ushers were scarcely necessary.

The hall was completely filled with chairs, except for the balconies, which contained two rows each, leaving standing room behind for a large number. This morning few people were standing, however. The chairs were well arranged, with enough aisles so the men could get about readily.

The hall was divided into sections, with districts and the counties marked. The stage, with five rows of raised seats at its back, afforded seating accommodations for a large number. At each side was left sufficient room for ten rows of seats, facing the stage, with their backs to the wall. Down the east side of the hall the First, Second and Third district men were seated, while the Fourth, Fifth and Eighth occupied the center, with the Sixth, Seventh and Ninth occupying the space on the west side.

Washington and Chisago counties had the choicest positions, in the center, directly facing the stage. Directly behind them, signs marked the chairs allotted Ramsey county, and still farther back, also in the center, came Itasca, Mille Lacs, Pine, St. Louis, Lake Cook and Kannabec, the last two bringing up the rear.

In the cross section of seats to the east of the stage were seated the delegations from Houston, Wabasha, Mower, Fillimore, Beltrami, Marshall, Clearwater, Norman, Roseau, Clay, Becker, Kittson, Wilkin and Otter Tail.

Beginning even with the stage and extending along the east side of the hall, in the order named, were the counties of Brown, Murray, Cottonwood, Blue Earth, Watowan, Rock, Nobles, Jackson, Faribault, Martin, Pipestone, Goodhue, Hennepin, Dakota, McLeod, Scott, Le Sueur, Nicollet, Sibley and Carner.

Hennepin, the largest delegation at the convention, occupied a position well back in the left center, with St. Louis still further back, but squarely in the center.

On the west of the hall, beginning with the stage, the counties were ranged in the following order: Lincoln, Redwood, Lyon, Yellow Medicine, Lac Qui Parle, Renville, Kandiyohi, Pope, Chippewa, Swift, Stevens, Grant, Big Stone, Traverse, Aitkin, Hubbard, Wadena, Todd, Anoka, Stearns, Wright, Carlton, Sherburne, Benton, Morrison, Isanti, Crow Wing, Cass and Douglas.

The interior of the building was attractively decorated with red, white and blue streamers and bunting. Large streamers in the national colors stretched from the center of the room to the edges of the balconies, and at the end of the hall. The upper gallery at the extreme south end of the Armory was reserved for the Third regiment band, which delighted the assembled delegates with its music for about twenty minutes before the opening of the convention. Before entering the hall it marched up from the down town district, playing a few selections in front of each of the hotels on the way, and acting as guide for the visiting delegates who hadn't yet acquainted themselves with the location of the Armory.

All the seats were filled when the convention was called to order, but there was plenty of standing room in the balconies, and at the rear of the main floor. Nothing of much interest was expected to transpire at the morning session, and the majority of the spectators preferred remaining away until afternoon, when the situation promised to contain more of general interest to the onlooker. At the extreme south end of the hall, on a raised platform, are two rows of chairs which offer a particularly good view of the hall, and these select seats are reserved for friends of the delegates and candidates.

Each candidate for governor was allowed two stage and three gallery seats, and candidates below that of governor were entitled to one stage and two gallery tickets. The balance of the tickets were distributed pro rata among the delegates. The demand for tickets was naturally very great, and there were ten or a dozen applications for every ticket issued. Several went to women, most of whom were the wives or daughters of visiting candidates, and these were to be seen scattered along through the balcanies, or seated

PATHOS OF WATTERSON

Beautiful Speech of Noted Editor to Kentucky Home Comers.

Louisville, Ky., June 13.—Cloudy skies and a pouring rain greeted the first official day of "home coming week," this morning. Fortunately the greater part of the exercises were scheduled to be held inside the armory on Walnut street and nothing could interfere with them.

Governor Beckham introduced Henry Watterson, who delivered the formal address of welcome. He said:

Once a Kentuckian, always a Kentuckian. From the cradle to the grave, the arms of the mother-land, stretched forth in mother-love—the bosom of the mother-land, immortal as the ages, yet mortal in maternal affection, warmed by the rich, red blood of Virginia—the voice of the mother-land, reaching the farthest corners of the earth in tones of heavenly music—summon the errant to the roof-tree's shade and bid the wanderer home. What wanderer yet was ever loath to come? Whether upon the heights of fortune and fame, or down amid the shadows of the valley of death and despair, the true Kentuckian, seeing the shining eyes and hearing the mother-call, sends back the answering refrain:

"Where'er I roam, whatever realms I see,
My heart, untraveled, fondly turns to thee."

Behold, in this great, exultant multitude, the proof!

Kentucky! Old Kentucky! The very name has had a charm, has wrought a spell, has made a music all its own; has woven on its sylvan loom a glory quite apart from the glory of Virginia, Kentucky's mother, and the glory of Tennessee, Kentucky's sister. It has bloomed in all hearts where manhood and womanhood hold the right-of-way. The dreams of the ages, told in pulse-beats, finds here an interlude which Fiction vainly emulates and History may not o'ercap. Not as the Greek, seeking Promethean fire and oracles of Delphos, nor as the Roman filled with the joy of living and the lust of conquest; not as the Viking, springing to the call of wind and wave, nor as the Latin, dazzled by the glitter of gold, mad with the thirst for glory; neither as the Briton and the Teuton, eager for mastership on land and sea, the Kentuckian, whom we, in filial homage, salute progenitor. He was as none of these. Big in bone and strong of voice—the full-grown man prefigured by the psalmist—never the ocean mirrored his fancies nor snow-clad peaks that reached the skies inspired; but the mystery in strange lands, the savagery of nature and the song of the greenwood tree.

> The star that shone above him and led him on was love of liberty, the beacon of his dreams, the light of his fireside. He cut a clearing in the wildwood and called it Home. He read not Romance, he made it; nor Poetry, he lived it—his the Forest Epic, the Iliad of the Cranebrake, the Odyssey of the frontier, the unconscious prose-poem of the rifle and the camp, the blockhouse and and the plow, the Holy Bible, and the Old Field School!

Happy the man who has sat in childhood upon a well-loved grandsire's knee, awed by the telling of the wondrous tale; how even as the Dardanae followed Aeneas, the Virginians followed Boone;

HON. A. L. COLE OF WALKER,
Nominated By Republican State Convention for Governor of Minnesota.

BRYAN VISITS ST. PETERSBURG

Will Study at Close Range the Great Political Struggle.

St. Petersburg, June 13.—William J. Bryan and Mrs. Bryan arrived here today from Berlin. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan will remain here until Friday, when they will leave for Stockholm and Christiania on their way to London, where Mr. Bryan will deliver an address on the Fourth of July. He expects to witness the coronation of King Haakon at Christiania, and is due to arrive at New York August 29.

Mr. Bryan came to St. Petersburg in order to get a glimpse of the Russian parliament and study at close range the epoch-making political struggle which is convulsing Russia. He has arranged to visit the house tomorrow and confer with the leader of the popular movement. Today Mr. and Mrs. Bryan were guests at luncheon at the Kleinmichel palace of Ambassador and Mrs. Meyer.

KING STARTS FOR TRONDJHEM

Haakon, Accompanied by Queen Maud, Leaves Christiania.

Christiania, June 13.—King Haakon, Queen Maud and Crown Prince Olaf left today on a special train for Trondjhem preparatory to the king's coronation June 22. The principal civil and military authorities were in attendance at the station, where a large crowd gave the sovereign a hearty sendoff. The royal party will travel by train to Otta and thence drive to the end of Romsdal Fjard, where they will embark on the gunboat Keimdal, escorted by three other warships to their destination, arriving there June 19.

NEGRO TAKES OFFICE.

Washington, June 13.—William T. Vernon of Kansas, the negro appointed some time ago by President Roosevelt to succeed Judson W. Lemon as register of the treasury, has taken the oath of office and entered upon the discharge of his official duties.

COLE TAKES THE POT ON A SHOWDOWN.

EXTRA!

SAM IVERSON RENOMINATED

For State Auditorship, Defeating Odin Halden By 695 to 394 Votes.

Eberhardt For Lieut-Governor and Schmahl For Secretary of State.

A. L. Cole, the nominee for governor, was presented to the Republican state convention when it reopened at 3:30 o'clock.

He was greeted with tremendous applause and made a short speech which was punctuated with the wild huzzas of the crowd.

He expressed his heartfelt gratitude and said he had but one sorrow and that was that six of the best men in Minnesota had been defeated.

"While there have been several of the most honorable of the citizens of this great state in this contest, each is willing to grasp the hand of every

SENATOR A. E. EBERHARDT,
Nominated for Lieutenant Governor.

other and say 'this is my brother.' We have no factions, but we have instead a united party that will push for success. I say to you that A. L. Cole will be elected governor in November next by a united Republican party. I do not want to know who voted for or against me. You all had your duty to do and you did it well and to my entire satisfaction." (Laughter.)

Concluding he said that when elected governor everybody would be given a square deal and the laws of Minnesota would be enforced without fear or favor.

Then came J. F. Jacobson, the Madison man who came so near to victory. "Jake" was greeted with applause no less hearty than that which fell to the successful candidate, and his speech convinced everyone that earnest as he was in his canvass for the nomination, he is a good loser. His speech made a hit, and, delivered as it was with a broad smile on his rugged face and the best of good nature beaming forth, it caught the crowd with great force.

"I have no regrets at what has taken place," he said. "I want to tell the others who have lost that they are no worse off than I and they are entitled to no more sympathy. I am friendly to Mr. Cole and I admire him. Any man who is capable of beating me in a fight is entitled to my admiration and he has it. Any man who can do that can make a good governor of any state."

He thanked his friends for the support they had given him and said the canvass had not cost him a cent.

"We are now through with the preliminary skirmish in our own party," he continued, "and we are going in a united party to lick the enemy. You will find me in the thickest of the fight doing everything I can for the nominee of this convention, who will have my heartiest support and most friendly feeling.

"I am not going to make a speech now," he concluded. "You have lost the best speech I ever made."

Amid the laughter created by this sally, Mr. Jacobson sat down, and the applause that followed fairly raised the roof of the armory.

Nominations for lieutenant governor were then called for.

Frank M. Eddy withdrew the name of C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center, stating that as the nominee for governor came from the Sixth district, Mr. Sprague could, of course, not be considered, and he released all pledges made to Mr. Sprague.

Mower county presented the name of W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow; Blue Earth county, A. E. Everhardt, and Hennepin county, W. S. Dwinnell.

When the balloting had reached Hennepin county there was a delay of about five minutes, there being no agreement in that delegation. William H. Grimshaw then arose and withdrew the name of W. S. Dwinnell and cast Hennepin's 99 votes for Eberhardt. The result of the ballot was:

Eberhardt, 633; Nolan, 440; Dwinnell, 16.

S. G. Iverson, the present auditor, was renominated. The ballot resulted in 695 votes for him to 394 for Halden.

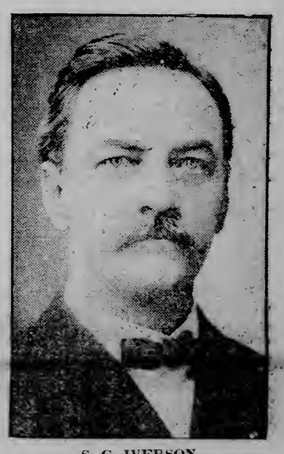

With the defeat of W. A. Nolan, the situation was admitted to be bad for Mr. Halden, for the First district was admittedly entitled to claim something.

Hennepin county divided its vote, giving 74 to Halden and 25 to Iverson, and Ramsey county went 50 for Halden to 14 for Iverson. The southern part of the state stood by Iverson pretty strongly.

One of the surprises was Carlton county, which split its vote evenly between the two.

as candidates P. J. Sjoblom and Thomas H. Girling, did not present their names to the convention. The first ballot resulted as follows: Julius H. Schmahl, 444; E. A. Nelson, 256; James Hunter, 144; J. J. Lomen, 137; S. B. Molander, 108.

On the second ballot, Julius H. Schmahl was nominated. The result was as follows: Schmahl, 703; Nelson, 280; Molander, 13; Lomen, 47; Hunter, 46.

HELD FOR ASSAULT.

Jackson, Minn., June 13.—Fred Knabe was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bail for assaulting Fred Wendlesdorf. The two boys were quarreling over a girl for some time and, last week, while attending a dance, Knabe struck Wendlesdorf unexpectedly, fracturing his skull. He is unconscious most of the time. His parents will take him to Rochester in hopes that an operation will cure him.

WEATHER FORECAST—Fair weather; northeasterly winds.

What $15 Will Buy in Men's Summer Suits.

What $15 will ordinarily buy will probably not suit you—if you are particular about your clothes, but it is a different proposition when you look at these values at the Oak Hall. These $15 Suits show a mastery of the clothing business that is distinctively ours. They show, too, the skill with which fabrics and styles are chosen. They will prove most decisively to any careful man that he can't afford to miss the Oak Hall when he's looking for his clothes. In all there are about 24 distinct patterns in two and three-piece suits—single and double-breasted models, besides blue and black serges—a variety sufficiently broad to meet the requirements of almost every man. Equally good clothing will not be found in any other store for less than $18 to $20.

DELEGATES ALL AT SEA BEFORE THE OPENING

Air Rife With Rumors of Combinations and Broken Ones.

Jacobson's Great Strength Made Him Center of All Rumors.

If a good reliable prognosticator had appeared in the lobby of the Spalding, or that of the St. Louis hotels last night and hung out his shingle, he would have done a business which would give him an income for some time to come. If ever a crowd ached, begged and demanded to be enlightened about how things were going, it was the one that surged in and out of the two hotels, and they would at times become almost frantic with eagerness.

There is no doubt that last night Jacobson stock was booming, and he was away in the lead. His nomination, to occur on the first, second or third ballots, according to the opinion of the person talking, was freely predicted, and to judge from the general talk, one would imagine that there was only a little cold comfort left for the other gubernatorial candidates. So strong was the Jacobson talk that it became rumored that Senator Stephens had withdrawn from the race. However, Senator Stephens denied that he had, or would. Said he:

"I don't see any good reason why I should withdraw now any more than at first. I have lost no ground, and have undoubtedly gained a little, so I guess I'll stick. The first ballot is likely to make some large and decisive changes of course, and we might benefit by them. Who knows?"

Rumored combines were so thick that they could scarcely be kept track of, but none of them could be substantiated. It was first reported that Halden and Jacobson had entered into a combine which would settle matters. A few moments afterwards it changed, and the story was to the effect that Iverson and Jacobson had combined, Iverson agreeing to deliver forty votes which he is supposed to control in the First district. First district men, however, laughed this to scorn, and said that the best that Iverson could do in the way of delivering from the First district was to turn over the delegation from Fillmore county, consisting of fifteen votes, and six of these were for Jacobson anyhow, so that his delivery, even if successful, would amount to only nine votes. Other combines are also reported and exploded. The air was thick with them, but the growing feeling at an early hour this morning was that the prediction that no combines would be successful, and that the matter would have to be fought out on the floor today, would come true.

This morning the air was again full of rumors of new combinations and broken ones between candidates for state offices. Just what is being done cannot be stated for certain for everything is kept under cover. It was generally reported for instance that the Halden-Jacobson forces had entered into a working agreement last night, but while this rumor seemed to be fairly well founded it was only a rumor so far as absolute fact was concerned.

This morning it is declared about the lobbies that this working agreement is in a rather shaky condition and may fall through before the convention hour is reached—at least the hour of nominations.

A new possibility has sprung up in its place. This is a Cole-Jacobson combine. One was talked of last night with A. L. Cole of Walker, mentioned for lieutenant governor, but this is changed and the talk this morning is that the Cole-Jacobson combine if put through will slate Dr. A. B. Cole of Fergus Falls, brother of the gubernatorial candidate and manager of that movement, for second place on the ticket. Just the exact condition of this cannot be stated at this time but there seems to be more than a rumor to it, and it is claimed among those who claim to be on the inside that there is a strong probability of it going through. Just how this will effect other candidates does not yet appear.

During the evening the St. Louis county delegation held a caucus in Kalamazoo hall. The caucus which was to have been held among Third district delegates did not come off last night, but there is some talk of a caucus today. It is understood that out of the 100 delegates in the Third, Block has a large majority. The Hennepin county delegation also caucuses and it is understood that a majority of the delegation is for Block, while the others are scattering.

As to the St. Louis county delegation but little is given out. The delegation went into executive session and all outsiders were barred. It is understood that an interesting dispute occurred within the room on the first ballot for the governorship. It was proposed to scatter the vote and this idea was fought in a lively manner, but that idea carried and that is what will be done at the convention today. A steering committee consisting of W. E. Culkin, E. B. Hawkins, L. M. Kilicuts, Simon Clark, H. B. Knudsen, W. P. Chinn and M. C. Woodard was named.

The Ramsey county delegation was to caucus today—maybe. The situation was pretty badly mixed in this delegation and it was claimed by the Iverson men that Dar Reese was knocked out and therefore the unit rule in favor of Halden for auditor was broken. This was vigorously denied and will be tested today when the caucus meets.

There will be a lot of caucuses today, but nobody expects much to be accomplished from them. They will go through the form of caucus and by counties may solidify for a first and second choice for governor, but as few have adopted the unit rule, it is expected that there will be very few ironbound cases.

The fight for lieutenant governor is up in the air and nobody knows anything. C. N. Cosgrove is strongly talked, but C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center, seemed to be rapidly gaining strength last night. This was made all the stronger by the practical elimination of W. S. Dwinnell from the race. This occurred when the Hennepin county delegation held a sort of informal caucus. The proposition of presenting and backing Dwinnell for lieutenant governor was broached and a vote taken on it. It was turned down with quite a heavy majority against it, so that it is believed that his name will not be brought before the convention at all. In consequence of this Mr. Sprague's stock has advanced and a little help for other candidates is also felt. W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow, says he is in good shape to make a fight for the nomination for lieutenant governor in case Lord and Diment fall of nomination for the head of the ticket.

For secretary of state the mixup is an interesting one and while Julius Schmahl is the most positive in his claims, the others are perking up a bit for they have hopes that with the convention getting close, last minute combines will be effected and maybe they will benefit thereby.

* * *

Last night H. B. Knudsen brought into the lobbies of the hotels the male chorus of the Normanna Singing society, with Jens H. Flaaten as leader. In each place the chorus gave two or three numbers which were well received and liberally applauded. The chorus is an excellent one. Mr. Knudsen is president of the organization and is laboring hard to do everything possible for the entertainment of the visitors and for the nomination of Odin Halden.

* * *

Among those present at the convention are three past grand masters of the Masonic grand lodge of the state. They are being entertained by local Masons. They are Henry M. Tussler of St. Paul, who was past grand master last year; A. T. Stebbins of Rochester, and W. H. Wells of Preston.

* * *

J. Hutchinson and Donald Grant of Faribault are among the delegates to the convention. This is the first time that Mr. Hutchinson has been here in thirty-four years. It is rather curious that on that occasion of a third of a century ago, Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Grant made the trip to the Head of the Lakes together also. At that time there was scarcely any Duluth to speak of and only a blotch where Superior now stands. Mr. Hutchinson says he cannot help but marvel at the change.

There is a large number of country newspaper men at the convention, and of course they are circulating about, talking this and that candidate and listening to what is going on. As a rule, they are taking a very active part in the work that is being done, and most of those on the ground are delegates, some are candidates. Among them is Peter Schaffer, editor of the Ely Miner, who is very much swelled up because of the fact that Mrs. Schaeffer presented him with a daughter on Saturday. Claude M. Atkinson, editor of the Mesaba Ore of Hibbing, is laid up at the St. Louis with consilitis.

Other country newspaper men are P. E. Dowling, editor of the Everleth Star; Sam A. Langum, Preston Times; P. G. Sjoblom, Minneapolis Telegram; John E. King, state librarian and editor of the Elk River News; J. C. Applegate, Cannon Falls Beacon; E. A. Olson, Cokato Enterprise; A. M. Greeley, Big Fork Compass; J. N. Kirsch, Crookston Journal; E. E. McCrea, Alexandria Post News; S. J. Huntley, Wyckoff Messenger; W. E. McKenzie, Crookston Times; Joel P. Heatwole, Northfield News; E. A. Nelson, Hallock News; Julius Schmahl, Redwood Gazette; Alvah Eastman, St. Cloud Journal-Press; Frank Eddy, Sauk Center Herald; J. H. Cross, Grand Rapids Magnet; E. K. Whiting, Owatonna Journal-Chronicle; Robert C. Dunn, Princeton Union; Fred D. Vibert, Cloquet Pine Knot; C. D. McKillip, Faribault Republican; C. C. Eastman, Wadena Journal; A. L. Hamilton, Aitkin Republican; A. L. Himley, Appleton Press; R. J. Bell, Rosseau County Times; R. H. Medicraft, Rosseau Regent, and others.

G. B. Wollin, formerly editor of the Glenwood Gopher, is here. He was also assistant secretary of the last senate. Mr. Wollin is now out of the newspaper business and is engaged in the coal business in St. Paul. During the campaign two years ago his paper was the mouthpiece of Frank Eddy, and the Gopher was one of the most widely quoted papers in the state.

Another bunch of Twin City newspaper men came up yesterday afternoon, and comprised the following:

George D. Mann of the Pioneer Press; Frank E. Force of the Minneapolis Tribune; Melville Bacheller of the Minneapolis Journal; Carl Wallace, Minneapolis manager for the Pioneer Press and a former representative; J. T. Mannix, representative from Minneapolis and dean of the reportorial profession in the Twin Cities; P. J. Carter, cartoonist of the Minneapolis Tribune; Frank Wing, the noted sketch artist of the Minneapolis Journal; G. E. Ives of the Minneapolis Daily News; C. E. Higgins and Edward Hosking of the St. Paul Dispatch.

The Advantages of Having Credit

OUR new stock is particularly well selected and complete. It has been gathered from all parts of the country, wherever we could find the best values and the best patterns; and we invite you to select from it, knowing that you will not find any doubtful qualities or undesirable pieces. Our assortment of

Furniture

Embraces all the new styles and a wide variety of patterns from the severely plain to the elaborately carved. These are handsome pieces for every room in the house, and many new designs of exceptional beauty.

We have received our importations of Matting, and do not believe you ever saw a prettier or worthier assortment. The patterns are excellent, the effects extremely artistic, and the qualities are all such as we can safely guarantee.

Go-Carts

We are quite sure that no better assortment of Go-Carts has ever been exhibited in this city. There is a host of different patterns and all of them so good that it will puzzle you to choose which you like best. All the newest styles are represented, and they contain all the most improved features.

Everything in Outer Garments—Hats and Shoes for men, women and children. $1.00 per week payments.

There is a great deal of difference between making wise use of your credit and running recklessly into debt. Few big undertakings would be possible except for mutual trust—and confidence between people interested. You admit that it is wise foresight to buy a home, but how many people would possess their own homes unless they could buy them by paying a little each month, or quarter, and living in them while they were paying for them? Furnishing a home comfortably necessitates a considerable outlay. If you wait until you have the money saved up to pay cash you are liable to miss the best years of your life, and it is very much harder to save money than it is to pay specific amounts at regular intervals. We offer to completely furnish a home for you, or to sell you as much or as little furniture as you wish on credit, and will arrange weekly payments in amounts that you will be able to pay without inconvenience.

Buying on credit has many advantages. You are not hampered in your selection. You are not confined to any special amount. You don't have to commit the extravagance of buying inferior qualities because your pocketbook does not permit you to pay for satisfactory grades. It enables you to buy furniture in complete sets to match instead of buying a piece at a time, and as furniture patterns change each season this is an important consideration. You don't have to wait; when you see a piece that just suits you can secure it before any one else has a chance of getting it—this too, is important for we show many pieces that are never duplicated.

All our prices are marked in plain figures, and a comparison will show them to be as low, if not lower, than can be obtained at any other store, even for cash.

the route from Troy to Tiber not wearier, nor flanked by greater hazard, than that of the shores of the Chesapeake and the Falls of the Ohio; the mountains standing gorgon-like across the pathless way as if defending each defile, to hold inviolate some dread, forbidden secret; the weird wastes of wilderness beyond; the fordless stream, the yawning chasm; the gleam of the tomahawk and the hiss of the serpent; yet ever onward, spite of Hallock News; Julius Schmahl, Redwood the haunting voice of the Elements, stripped for the death-struggle with man, spite of the Silence and the Softude of reluctant Nature, like some fawn-eyed maiden resisting his rude intrusion; ever onward; before him the promised land of the hunter's venison; in his soul the grace of God, the fear of Hell, and the love of Virginia!

God bless Virginia! Heaven smile upon her as she prepares to celebrate with fitting rite three centuries of majestic achievement, the star crown upon her brow, the distaff in her hand, nor spot nor blur to dim the radiance of her shield!

They came, the Virginians, in their homespun, in quest of homes; their warrant their rifles; their payment the blood of heroes; nor yet forgetting a proverb the Chinese have that "it needs a hundred men to make a fortress, but only a woman can make a home"—for they were quick to go back for their women; their wives and their sweethearts; our grandmothers, who stood by their side, beautiful and dauntless, to load their fowling-pieces, to dress their wounds, to cheer them on to battle singing their simple requiem over the dead at Boonesborough, and bringing water from the spring at Bryan's Station, heartbroken only when the news came back from the River Raisin.

I am here to welcome you in the name of the people of this lively city, in the name of all the people of the renowned commonwealth, to welcome you as kith and kin; but you will not expect me, I am sure, to add thereto more than the merest outline of the history of Kentucky, as it is known to each and every one of you, from the time when the pathfinders, under the lead of Harrod and Henderson, of Boone and Kenton, blazed their way through the forest, and the heroes, led by Logan and Shelby, by Scott and Clark, rescued the land from the savage, to the hour which smiles upon us here this day; a history resplendent with illustrious names and deeds; separating itself into three great epochs and many episodes and adventures in wood-craft and war-craft and state-craft; the period of the Clays, the Breckinridges and the Crittendens, with its sublime struggle to preserve the Union of the States, as it had come down to them from the Revolution, with always the Marshalls and the Wickliffes, the Boyles and the Rowans, the Johnsons and the Browns, the Adairs, the Desha and the McDowells, somewhere at the fore—"Old Ben Hardin" having a niche all to himself—none of them greater than in the period of the War of Sections, when even the Clays, the Crittendens and the Breckinridges were divided, when for a season the skies were hung in sable and all was dark as night, the very sacrifices that had gone before seeming to have been made in vain, the "dark and bloody ground" of barbaric fancy come into actual being through the passions and mistakes of Christian men; and finally the period after the War of Sections, when the precept "once a Kentuckian, always a Kentuckian," was met by the answering voice, "blood is thicker than water," and the Goodloes, the Ballards and the Speeds, the Harlans, the Frys and the Murrays, clasped their hands across the breach and made short shrift of the work of reconstruction with the Buckners, the Prestons and the Dukes. This is it that here, at least, the perplexed grandchild cannot distinguish between the grizzled grandfather who wore the blue and the grizzled grandfather who wore the gray.

> Kentucky, which gave Abraham Lincoln to the North and Jefferson Davis to the South, contributing a very nearly equal quota of soldiers to each of the contending armies of that great conflict—in point of fact, as many fighting men as had ever voted in any election—a larger percentum of the population than has ever been furnished in time of war by any modern state—Kentucky, thus rent by civil feud, was first to know the battle was ended and to draw together in reunited brotherhood.

Kentucky struck the earliest blow for freedom, furnished the first martyrs to liberty in Cuba. It was a Crittenden, smiling before a file of Spanish musketry, refusing to be blindfolded or to bend the knee, for the fatal volley, who uttered the keynote fo his race, "A Kentuckian always faces his enemy and kneels only to his God." It was another Kentuckian, the gallant Holman, who, undaunted by the dread decimation, the cruel death-by-lot, having drawn a white bean for himself, brushed his friend aside and drew another in his stead. Ah, yes; we have our humors along with our heroes, and laugh anon at ourselves, and our mishaps and our jokes; but we are nowise a bloody-minded people; rather a sentimental, hospitable, kindly people, caring, perhaps, too much for the picturesque and too little for the consequences. Though our jests be sometimes rough, they are robust and clean. We are a provincial people, and we rejoice in our provincialism. We have always piqued ourselves upon doing our love making and our lawmaking, as we do our plowing, in a straight furrow; and yet it is true that Kentucky never encountered darker days than can come upon us when the worst that can befall a commonwealth seemed passed and gone. The stubborn war between the Old Court party and the New Court party was bitter enough; but it was not so implacable as the strife which strangely began with the discussion of an honest difference of opinion touching a purely economic question, of national, not state, policy. Can there be one living Kentuckian who does not look back with horror and amazement upon the passions and incidents of those evil days?

Gen. Grant once said to me: "You Kentuckians are a clannish set. Whilst I was in the White House, if a Kentuckian happened to get in harm's way, or wanted an office, the Kentucky contingent began to pour in; in case he was a Republican, the Democrats said he was a perfect gentleman; in case a Democrat, the Republicans said the same thing; can it be that you are all perfect gentlemen?" With unblushing candor, I told him that we were, that we fought our battles, as we washed our linen, at home, but that outside, when trouble came, it was Kentucky against the universe. Mr. Tilden said of a lad in the Bluegrass country who had fallen from a second-story window upon a stone paving without a hurt and had run away to his play, that it furnished conclusive proof that "he was destined for a great career in Kentucky politics." Let me frankly confess that, peacemaker though I am, and at once the most amiable and placable of men, there have been times when I, even I, half wanted to go down to the crossroads "and swear at the court." That was when things did not swing to suit me. That was when the majority appeared to think they knew more than I did. We grow so used to blessings that we heed them not and look beyond. Yet, when trouble or danger assails us, or humiliation or sorrow—or when leagues, oceans, continents lie between ourselves and the vanished land from whose sacred lintels ambition has lured us—how small these frictions seem, how small they are, and how they perish from us. I have stood upon the margin of a distant sea and watched the ships go by, envious that their prows were westward bent. I have marked the glad waves dancing to the setting sun, heartsick with thoughts of home. And thus wistful, yearning, ready to take my dearest enemy by the hand and forgive him, yea, to sop gravy with him out of the selfsame dish, those the Deshas

Six Hundred Passengers in Train Wreck, Escape Miraculously.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—The wreck of the Soo coast train near Harvey was, according to the reports of passengers who have been brought here on a relief train, one of the luckiest that has ever occurred in North Dakota.

Although over 600 passengers were on the train when it went into the ditch, all escaped with but a few scratches and bruises of a minor character. Two of the trainmen were seriously hurt.

The train was going at a high rate of speed when the breaking of an axle threw the engine ito the ditch. The entire train, except the sleepers and dining cars turned bottom upwards in all directions.

For a moment it seemed as if a panic would ensue, but a few of the cooler-headed passengers quickly organized a relief party and those pinioned in the wreckage were taken out as quickly as possible. The loss of the company in rolling stock and damage to the track, 600 feet of which was torn up, was heavy.

George H. Selthers, who was the most seriously injured of the passengers, was brought to the hospital in this city. He will recover.

Bismarck—Eugene Morris, 14 years old, son of E. E. Morris, was nearly killed here in an attempt to board a moving freight train. With other boys he had been in the habit of stealing rides to Mandan. Yesterday he tried to get on the side of a car, and in so doing failed to see the standpipe for watering engines, which he struck with great force, and was knocked ten feet. When picked up he was unconscious. No bones were broken, but it is thought he sustained a fracture of the skull.

Fargo—The North Dakota State Association of Commercial clubs is an established fact. Secretary Follett of the local club has been working on the plan for some time and as a result an organization was formed with Wahpeton, Fargo, Grand Forks, Devils Lake, Bismarck, Minot, Kenmare and other towns. The apportionment of officers is, the presidency to Wahpeton, the vice-presidency to Jamestown, the treasurer to Grand Forks, and the secretary to Fargo, with a representative from each other town on the executive committee. It is planned to have all the clubs in the state in the association.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Mrs. Emma Kauffmann, wife of Moses Kauffmann, a millionaire brewer, was Tuesday afternoon arrested on a charge of manslaughter growing out of the death a few days ago of Miss Agnes Poireis, a 16-year-old girl who was employed in the Kauffmann household as a domestic.

The girl was a German-Russian and a member of the Catholic church, and had arrived in the United States from Austria only a short time before entering the employ of the Kauffmanns, about four months ago.

Notwithstanding the general expectation that the girl's death would have sensational developments, the arrest of Mrs. Kauffmann has caused a tremendous sensation. The Kauffmanns are very prominent and have been residents of the city for a quarter of a century or more.

It is charged that the girl died as the result of beatings administered by Mrs. Kauffmann, and that these beatings were due to Mrs. Kauffmann's inability to control a violent temper. The girl was buried as Parkston, and her remains have been twice exhumed so post-mortem examinations could be made by physicians. On her head and body were found numerous cuts and bruises.

It was also discovered that her legs were swathed in cloth, and when the bandages were removed the flesh had the appearance of having been scalded. This is alleged to have been due to attempts to revive her after she had been beaten into an unconscious condition. It also is hinted that the prosecution has a witness who will testify to having seen boiling water thrown on the girl.

ADJOURNMENT LAST OF JUNE

Can be Easily Accomplished by Congress, is General Opinion.

Washington, June 13.—The Republican steering committee of the senate met today and considered the question of the adjournment of congress as soon as possible after next week. The committee was in session for an hour, and adjourned convinced that nothing stands in the way of such a program. It was stated that every important matter before either branch practically is ready for conference except the sundry civil and general deficiency appropriation bills, and the isthmian canal type bill. If rapid progress is made by the house with the appropriation bills, Senator Hale, who will have charge of both of these measures in the senate believes they can be disposed of by Monday, June 25, or Wednesday, the 27th, at the latest. That would permit of an adjournment on the 27th or 28th. The program thus arranged contemplates a vote on the canal type bill in the senate, but no further action until the next session. Senator Spooner, with seeming authority, made the statement at the meeting today that an appropriation for the canal carried by the sundry civil bill, can be expended with equal advantage during the coming year for a lock canal, or a sea level canal, and that Chief Engineer Stevens can go ahead doing work which would be necessary to either type. It is agreed that congress cannot dispose of this question at the present session in view of the contrary opinion of the two branches.

Statehood, a railroad rate, meat inspection, and bills relating to a number of other subjects of great public interest, were considered by the steering committee, but it was the opinion that all of these matters had reached stages that would offer no obstacle to adjournment at an early date. The meat inspection bill is the only one of these that is not already in conference, and the house committee has about concluded its consideration of this subject. When that has been done it will go to conference.

GOVERNMENT RESTS CASE

Against the Burlington, After Examining Another Railroad Man.

Kansas City, June 13.—The trial of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, charged with granting a concession of 12 cents a hundred pounds on packing house products from the Mississippi river to New York for export, was resumed here this morning in the United State sdistrict court. H. C. Davis, general agent at New York of the Lehigh Valley railroad, was the first witness called. He was examined with a purpose of proving the contention of the government that the railroads which handled the shipments in question, had nothing to do with rates thereon from New York to Liverpool.

The government rested its side of the case after examining a few other railway officials as to tariffs. O. M. Spencer, counsel for the Burlington then addressing the court, asked that the case be taken from the jury. The newspapers had already, he declared, tried the case and if the defendant were found guilty it will have been wrongfully. Juge McPherson adjourned court for luncheon without passing upon the motion.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Calumet Man Found Dead on Tracks Near Winona Mine.

Calumet—Andrew Johnson was found dead on the railroad tracks near the Winona mine, where he lived. While the exact cause of death is not known, it is presumed it was due to excessive drinking. He had been seen intoxicated a short time before.

Ole Erickson was found dead in a room in the Scandinavian hotel. He had retired two days previous and when it was discovered something was wrong, it was necessary to break in the door. He evidently died of heart disease, and was a stranger in this section.

Capt. Trevarrow, of the Calumet Light Infantry, company E, Third regiment, M. N. G., has received orders transferring his company from that regiment and the infantry arm of the service to the engineering corps. The order was effected June 1, on which date the Calumet organization became company A engineers. The engineers company of Battle Creek and Saginaw is mustered out of the service by the same order.

Marquette—By removing a screen from a rear window in the meat market of William Dorais, South Marquette, thieves gained an entrance to the place and rifled the cash drawer of the safe, securing over $100 in cash. The combination lock on the safe was not in working order, and all the trouble the intruders experienced in order to secure the money was to turn the handle on the outer door and pry open the cash box.

Only this—that none but the "best" the world affords in women's apparel and furnishings is carried in our stock. It is not a question of price, but of quality. MARINE.

ABOUT READY TO SAIL.

Steamer Crescent City Will Leave for Lower Lakes This Week.

The disabled steamer Crescent City of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet will leave for some lower lake port tomorrow or next day in tow of one of the company's big boats—probably the Rockefeller. Captain W. W. Smith, marine superintendent of the company, will be in command.

Captain Smith was in charge of the wrecking operations which resulted in the release of the Crescent City from the rocks at Lakewood where she was hurled by the big storm.

The local officers of the company have not been advised as to the destination of either the Crescent City or the barge Manila, which left for the lower lakes Sunday.

HUMAN OSTRICH LOSES APPETITE

Nails, Glass and Wire Did Not Set Well on Stomach.

Minneapolis, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—E. Wallace, who has been traveling with a circus under the alluring sobriquet of "The Human Ostrich," has had to admit defeat and leave the field clear to bona fide birds with cast-iron digestive apparatus. Today he was operated on in the city hospital here because he had indigestion and other troubles in his gastronomic regions. Doctors took 57 nails, 3 or 4 pieces of glass and 5 pieces of wire from his stomach. They say Wallace will get well. Wallace said he had been eating this kind of dessert for several years, and had never experienced a twinge of pain until recently. He is not quoted as saying that he will again enter into active competition with regularly accredited ostriches for fame in circuses.

EDUCATION OF CHILDREN

Feature of Labor Committee's Report on Political Action.

State Federation Pledges Its Support to Eight-Hour Day.

Stillwater, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The State Federation of Labor this morning took up as a special order the report of the special committee on political action. The report was adopted, which provides that the federation is pledged to the passage of a complete educational law, which will secure the guarantee of the education of children and prevent the employment of children in factory, shop or mines. The passage of an eight-hour day law shall be urged, but shall not apply to farm labor. The passage of laws shall be urged for complete sanitary inspection and safeguards for machinery to make employers responsible for negligent injuries of employes, irrespective of negligence of fellow employes. Home rule for local government and municipal ownership of public utilities; the immediate establishment of the initiative and referendum; the disposition of labor in penal institutions to prevent interference with free labor; the establishment of a free bureau for employment of labor.

The federation declared in favor of the establishment of the central committee to take charge of political action and collect and disburse its own funds. For this year it was declared to be the policy to give attention to only legislative and judicial offices, and if necessary to contests for sheriff and county attorney. The placing of legislative candidates in the field was advised. Provision is made for naming a legislative union labor committee. The federation again declared in favor of increasing the per capita tax by 1 cent per month, and to submit it to the unions for adoption. The fund thus raised is to be devoted exclusively to organization and paying the expense of an organizer who shall not receive more than $25 per week for salary and expenses.

An interesting discussion was held over the report of the constitutional committee.

This was known as resolution No. 10, calling for vital and important change in the constitution. As the Federation council is now composed three each from St. Paul and Minneapolis are elected by the convention, with one from some outside city, and they meet monthly during the year. They propose to have a vice president elected from each of the congressional districts of the state with the exception of the Fourth and Fifth, which includes Minneapolis and St. Paul. These vice presidents would have all the power and the same titles as the present executive council, but would at the same time be the means of giving all sections of the state a share in their deliberations.

This resolution was introduced by the Duluth delegation, who stated that the Western Federation of Miners were making inroads on the iron range, and advertising their red label, which is directly antagonistic to the blue label of the cigarmakers. After much discussion it was moved by Delegate Guiney of St. Paul that the recommendation be not concurred in. The idea was to have the president of the State Federation act as chairman and the secretary-treasurer to act as secretary. The proposition required a two-thirds vote, but was defeated by a large majority with the understanding that the federation would send an organizer through the iron range in the near future.

A special resolution was introduced by Delegate Thomas of the Typographical union, St. Paul, recommending that the state of Minnesota own its printing plant, suggesting that thousands of dollars could then be saved for the people of the state and that text books could then be published at cost. This was carried and ordered sent to the Republican convention at Duluth and the Democratic convention, which convenes later.

Fourteen resolutions were introduced and those acted upon were as follows:

Resolution No. 1, introduced by Delegate Deacon, providing for co-operation with the farmers of the state, was referred to the committee on politics.

No. 2, introduced by Delegates Hall, Kirby and Chubbick, calling for delegates to instruct their locals not to be deceived by the anti-trust cigar label, and that all union cigars should bear the blue label of the Cigarmakers' union. Adopted.

Resolution No. 3, condemning trust tobacco, and urging all men to refuse the same and use tobacco which bears the label of the Tobacco Workers' union. Adopted.

Resolution No. 6, introduced by the Boot and Shoe Workers, that the State Federation would place themselves on record as against prison made goods when in competition with free labor and that the senators and representatives be notified of this fact. This was adopted and referred to the incoming federation council.

Resolution No. 8, of the Flour Mill employes, asking the convention to reaffirm a boycott which has been carried on for the last three years by both the State Federation and the American Federation of Labor, and that the secretary inform all local and central bodies of the state by circular letter, expense to be borne by the Flour Mill employes. This was adopted.

Resolution No. 9, introduced by the barbers of St. Paul, calling attention that number 4,962 of the 1905, revised laws of Minnesota, that a fine of $1 to $10 be imposed on any party convicted of Sabbath breaking. There is a provision that says a man is entitled to one holiday a week, and if this does not happen to come on Sunday, it makes the law ineffectual. They wish to have this changed and the state representatives and senators notified.

Resolution No. 12, introduced by the typographical union of St. Paul, that the attorney general of the state of Minnesota be apprised of the existence of an unlawful combination of printing interests. They recommend that all bids for state printing be made strictly according to the law and the state printing commissioner be also notified to that effect. This was adopted and it was moved and seconded that Delegate Johnson, who is going to Duluth, should present a copy of this resolution to Mr. Heatwole, of the Northfield News.

Resolution No. 13, was introduced in the form of a short paper, and throws an interesting light upon the condition of the Garment Workers. It said in part:

"The conditions of the United Garment Workers' local No. 27, of Minneapolis is improving. The roster shows an increase in membership, all of them being in good standing. More interest might be shown in attendance at the meetings, but inasmuch as the meeting hour is set for 6:15 p. m., immediately following work hours, the members are in a measure excusable.

"During the last month, Miss Day, of the general office has been with us and seemed surprised that Minneapolis would not support large union factories, the largest running only twenty-five hands, while there are non-union factories running 300 hands. She found conditions in those factories that used the label very satisfactory.

"The delegates would like to have a resolution introduced similar to the one pased at the last convention indorsing Minnesota union made garments, naming the maker and their brands."

A special committee of five, consisting of Labor Commissioner Williams and Delegates Thomas, Spencer, Rogers and Garfield, were appointed to act in conjunction with the citizens' committee in welcoming the governor, who spoke at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon.

Daniel P. Kelley of the United Hatters of North America gave an interesting talk on union labels. Although they have no locals in this state they are very strong in the East and Middle West. Only eight days ago they won a hard fight and succeeded in unionizing one of the largest hat manufacturers in the country.

The standing committee of the officers reported on the recommendations contained in the addresses that were given Monday. The officers were highly commended for the good work that they have done during the past year. The convention strongly concurred in the recommendation of the Federation council, which declared itself as against organizations of labor issuing advertising souvenirs and requested that local unions be more independent in raising funds and thus gain the respect of the business man. The report as a whole was adopted as read.

The organization committee reported the following action taken on communications refered to them.

The broom maker's request for help in the Twin Cities, an organization work, was referred to the incoming federation council.

The glass workers wish to secede from the federation unless some organization work is done for their craft. This was refered to the incoming federation council.

The iron moulders request that delegations should try to stop all structural work in the state as they are now on strike and patterns are being sent outside the Twin Cities. Delegates were instructed to take notice.

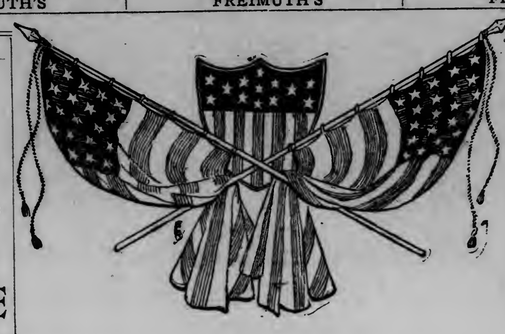

The convention passed favorably on all the above recommendations of the organization committee. Delegate Garfield, of the St. Paul clerks introduced a resolution which stated that in as much as manufacturers were trying to belittle the value of the union label, the delegates of this convention pledge themselves to union label goods. He wished a copy of this resolution forwarded to B. A. Larger of the United Garment Workers of North America.

CONDUCTOR LOSES LIFE

E. H. Roberts Falls Under Train at Proctor and Dies Later.

While trying to avert a smash-up 'n the Duluth, Missabe & Northern yards at Proctor early this morning, E. H. Roberts, one of the road's hill conductors, was so severely injured that he died three hours later at St. Mary's hospital.

Roberts was in charge of one of the ore trains coming from the docks at Duluth. When the yards were reached, his train well nigh came together with another at a crossing, and in trying to avert a wreck, Roberts in some manner fell beneath one of the cars. One of his legs was badly mangled, and he suffered internal injuries. No one else was injured.

The dying man was placed on a special train and whizzed to this city, and to the hospital, but he could not survive the shock he had experienced. The accident occurred at 5:30 a. m., and the injured man died at 9 o'clock.

He was a single man, 32 years of age, and had been working for the Missabe road for about two years. He made his home at Proctor. His relatives at New Orleans have been notified of his death.

RANCHERS PUNISH A WIFE BEATER

Yankton Man Hanged Until He Abjectly Begs for Mercy.

Meers, S. D., June 13.—Surrounded by thirty infuriated ranchmen, on the banks of the Bad river, with a rope tied around his neck and the end thrown over the limb of a dead tree, alternately pleading for his life and promising to do anything the crowd might require, Joseph Langner of Yankton, S. D., came near being lynched.

Langner was proceeding to his homestead west of here and Mrs. Langner, a frail, young woman, barefooted and scantily clothed, was being forced to drive the stock. When they reached Meers, she fainted and was found to have severe bruises which she said were caused by her husband beating her with a board, in spite of the fact that she was in a delicate condition.

Langner showed little concern, saying he would go on to his claim and return for her next day, were she still living. "And," he added, "if she is dead, all right."

This was too much for the ranchmen and they promptly lassoed the newcomer and dangled him from a tree until he begged for mercy and promised to return to Fort Pierre for a physician.

The physician came next day, but Langner has not since been seen. Mrs. Langner will live.

FIREMEN'S CONVENTION.

Six Hundred Delegates Are in Attendance at Le Sueur.

Le Sueur, Minn., June 13.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Minnesota State Firemen's association met here yesterday with about 600 delegates in attendance, representing the 322 fire companies of the state that form the association.

So large an assemblage of strangers in a town the size of Le Sueur places a considerable burden upon the people to entertain them, but all have taken hold enthusiastically, and everything is in perfect readiness.

The town has already been very lively for two days, Campbell Bros.' circus having arrived on Sunday morning, to the detriment of church attendance on that day, and given its performances on Monday.

A splendid program of entertainment for both days of the convention has been provided, and it will be the effort, as it is the expectation, of every citizen to make all the delegates glad that they came to Le Sueur.

Addresses will be given by T. D. O'Brien, state insurance commissioner, H. S. Walker of Stewartville, F. W. Lyons of Little Falls and Mayor J. H. Termath, President H. T. Empken and Ora J. Parker of Le Sueur.

JACOBSON A HUSTLER

One of Most Tireless and Energetic of All Workers.

Feels Kindly Toward Duluth for Cordial Reception Given Him.

The Jacobson headquarters at the Spalding hotel was a center of attraction last evening, and there was scarcely an interval from early until late that it was not crowded with callers. Duluth people have heard a great deal about Mr. Jacobson through the newspapers, and there were a great many of them among the visitors. It made no difference to Mr. Jacobson what part of the state a man came from, whether he was a supporter of the Jacobson cause or advocated the candidacy of somebody else. All were welcomed with cordiality and suavity that has proven a great surprise to those who knew Mr. Jacobson only through newspaper accounts.

Ever since Mr. Jacobson has been in the city his campaigning qualities have proven a source of surprise to all, but those from his own part of the state. He seems absolutely tireless, and at a very late hour was meeting and greeting visitors with the same energy that he displayed early in the day. No matter from what part of the state his visitors came, or what questions they had to ask him, the Lac qui Parle man was ever ready with an answer, and displayed excellent diplomatic powers.

One of Mr. Jacobson's ablest lieutenants has been his daughter, who arrived yesterday morning, and who, with several young lady friends remained at the headquarters right up to the last. Miss Jacobson has displayed all the powers of an experienced campaigner, and there were few that got away from the headquarters without a Jacobson badge pinned to them, and a word of advice as to the "best man" to support for nomination for governor.

The topic of pledges lay close to the hearts of many of the delegates who visited Mr. Jacobson last evening, but for these he had an unfailing answer, as follows:

"No, sir. I have made no pledges. I don't believe in making promises. If I am elected it will be a question of pure merit with me."

One of the pleasant features of the evening was the courtesy extended to Mr. Jacobson by the Normanna Singing society, which rendered a number of selections, at his room during the evening.

Absolute confidence in the outcome seemed to be the attitude of Mr. Jacobson and all his lieutenants. They ridiculed the necessity of any caucus, declaring that the "other fellows" might do so, but that Jacobson had no use for one. They were also as decided on the question of no combination, declaring that it was not necessary, that Mr. Jacobson had votes to spare without any combination.

"I feel very kindly toward the people of St. Louis county and Duluth," said Mr. Jacobson during a brief interval that he was not in the handshaking act. "The people here have certainly treated me well and I appreciate it. I believe they feel kindly toward me."

"Because Mr. Laybourn and myself used to shake each other up some down in the legislature, the people of this county got the erroneous notion that I was fighting their interests. Outside of the legislature Mr. Laybourn and I were on friendly terms. In the legislature if I took one side, of course he took the other. That was all right. It was a laudable idea. I thought I took the right side, and, of course, Mr. Laybourn had to take the only side that was left.

"I am not a sectional candidate. I don't believe in sectionalism. If a man is not broad enough to stand for the interests of each and every part of the state he don't deserve public office.

"I especially appreciate the kind manner with which the Duluth newspapers have treated me since I have been in your city. They have endeavored to be perfectly fair and I cannot help feeling kindly toward them."

RESCUED BY COLLIE DOG.

Farmer, Attacked by Vicious Boar, Saved by Canine Friend.

Hanley Falls, Minn., June 13.—L. K. Rowberg, a farmer near here, owes his life to the sagacity and fearlessness of thoroughbred collie dog. Mr. Rowberg entered the hog pen to feed his pigs and a vicious boar made a lunge at him.

Rowberg grabbed a two-by-four scantling, striking the brute over the nose, breaking the stick and for a second checking the attack. He attempted to gain the fence but the boar rushed at him and hurled him to the ground. The collie dog, hearing the commotion, leaped the fence and, seizing the hog by an ear, succeeded in pulling it away while Rowberg escaped.

Mr. Rowberg is a brother of E. K. Rowberg, whose family had a narrow escape from coal gas asphyxiation a year ago. It was a collie that saved their lives by jumping on Mr. Rowberg's bed and arousing him from a semi-conscious state.

THOUSANDS SPINSTERS BY GOVERNMENT EDICT.

Tokio, June 13.—Thousands of the most beautiful maidens of Korea are languishing in spinsterhood, owing to an edict of the government. The crown prince, who became a widower a year ago, has now decided to remarry. Government officials throughout the country have been instructed to forward to Seoul the names and full descriptions of the most eligible maidens.

Meantime, instructions have been issued that no young women of the better class shall be married until the crown prince has announced his choice.

The government of Kyerykye, Chungchulla and Kyongsang disobeyed the edict and allowed their daughters to marry. Consequently they are in great disfavor at court and are to be severely punished.

TO INSPECT GARRISONS.

Odessa, June 13.—Generals Kaulbars of Odessa, and Soukhomlinoff of Kiev, start tomorrow, accompanied by large staffs on tours of inspection of the garrisons in the Southern and Southwestern provinces, where the disaffection of numerous regiments is increased in gravity. The seriousness of the agrarian situation is enormously enhanced by this military discontent, which independent testimony avers is purely political.

HEIRESS SEEKER IS ARRESTED AS FLIRT.

New York, June 13.—Romaine Titter von Dolanski, count of Barranow, who fled to New York from Austria because of a duel with a brother officer of a Uhlan regiment, has been arrested in the monkeyhouse at Central park on the charge that he insisted on flirting with the pretty girls who came in to view the monkeys. Magistrate Finn fined the count $10.

Lawyer Spellberg appeared for the count and stated that the former army officer's father was very wealthy, that he gave the count a large allowance, and that the count desired to wed an American heiress. "One that would adorn the court of Austria," the lawyer said.

SWAMP LAND SURVEY DONE.

Work May Result In an Elaborate Scheme for Drainage.

Bemidji, Minn., June 13.—The topographical survey of state swamp lands, which has been going on under the supervision of State Drainage Engineer George A. Ralph of Crookston, since Sept. 1, has been completed, the corps of surveyors who have been working in St. Louis county having finished their work.

The survey covers all swamp lands owned by the state, and the engineer's reports will now be compiled from the field notes of the surveyors. These reports will be of great value for future drainage work.

The work of making the survey is merely preliminary. It is expected to result in an elaborate scheme providing for the drainage of all state lands, and the legislature at its coming session probably will make the first of a series of regular appropriations for this work.

PARK SUPERINTENDENTS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Washington, June 13.—The establishment near Washington of a national arboretum, a reserve for testing foreign plants of all varities was discussed by the American Association of Park Superintendents whose annual convention is in progress here. The plan was proposed by Jackson Dawson of Boston. William R. Smith, the superintendent of the botanical gardens at Washington presented a paper in which he advised the purchase by the government of the Appalachian mountain range to be used in the growth of the pine tree. The turpentine product from these trees, he said after being converted into camphor was a valuable asset in the manufacture of smokeless powder. These officers were elected: President, Byron Worthen, Manchester, N. H.; vice president, Frederick Nussbaumer, St. Paul; secretary-treasurer, F. E. Mulford, Harrisburg, Pa.

PRESIDENT RECEIVES RED MAN'S CERTIFICATE.

Washington, June 13.—President Roosevelt, who, a few weeks ago was made an honorary member of the Improved Order of Red Men, his being the only honorary membership in the order that ever was conferred, has received, by the hands of Senator Kittredge, of South Dakota, a beautifully engrossed certificate of membership in the order. In presenting the certificate to the president, Senator Kittredge expressed on behalf of the order, of which he himself is a member, the good will and best wishes of its members. President Roosevelt cordially thanked the senator and, through him, the order for the exceptional honor.

LIZARDS IN HER STOMACH.

Kaukauna, Wis., June 13.—A Birnamwood woman has long suffered from a mysterious stomach trouble. At times a "rising something" would almost choke her, the obstruction yielding only to copious draughts of water. The trouble finally became so alarming that a physician was called. To his prescription of physics and emetics the stomach of the sufferer finally yielded several lizardlike reptiles. One was six inches in length; the others, three in number, were very small. They have been preserved in alcohol and are attracting much attention in medical circles, as well as among the common people.

GOES TO STATE PRISON.

IMMIGRATION FOR THE SOUTH.

The problem of giving a proper distribution to the incoming flow of immigrants has not yet reached a stage so acute as to make it desperately serious, but it has become so marked that efforts to solve it are being made. The South, which gets no immigrants at all and needs lots of them, is trying to divert the flood that way, and if it is successful it will be better for the immigrants themselves, and for the cities of the North where the immigrants flock, with resulting congestion that is increasingly serious.

But now it appears, as a result of the investigation of a delegation of people from Southern states that has been in New York trying to see what can be done, that the immigrants do not want to go South, because they cannot get as high wages there as they can in the North.

The South has planned to form a Southern States immigration commission, with three representatives from every Southern state, and at a preliminary meeting in New York recently a start was made.

But when members of the commission visited Ellis island the other day to talk with the immigration officers, they received information that astonished them. They were told that the immigrants who are coming in are destined for Northern points, and that there was little use in trying to send them anywhere else. Southern wages are lower than Northern wages, doubtless because of the large supply of cheap colored labor, and in some way many of the immigrants appear to have learned this fact.

Of course labor, like any other commodity, is a matter of supply and demand. Wages are high in the North now because the demand is great; and an increasing demand in the South should lead to increasing wages there. But when the North is satisfied, as she must be soon with immigrants pouring in at the rate of a million a year and more, the inevitable result will be lower wages. High wages cannot withstand a surplus of labor, no matter what artificial methods are used to maintain them.

This result, though not a pleasant one, would divert the stream of immigrants, either back home or to the South provided Southern wages were as high as those of the North or higher. But unless some method is designed by which this new supply of labor can be spread over the country, instead of flocking into the labor centers, it is hard to see how lower wages for common labor, at least, can be avoided.

NAMES OF FOREIGNERS.

Congressman Burke of Pennsylvania has introduced a bill requiring immigrants with outlandish names to change them to something simple and easily tongued before they are allowed to enter this country.

This is rather a foolish bill, and there is probably not the remotest prospect of its becoming a law.

It is true that the strange names of those from Slav, Magyar, Greek and other races are burdensome to the tongues of Anglo-Saxon people, and that they would find it much easier if these names so crowded with puzzling consonants could be changed to plain Brown, Jones or Smith. But surely the owners of the names are entitled to some consideration, and if they like them better than our names, we have no right to adopt a law making them change them.

Very likely, since Mr. Burke is from Pennsylvania, where the coal mines are worked by immigrant hordes with names exceedingly formidable and tongue-twisting, the impulse of the bill comes from employers who find the payrolls cumbered with polysyllabic names which baffle their clerks. Naturally such employers would prefer it if their men had names of one or two syllables, and a proportion of vowels to consonants more easily managed by native tongues. But what they would like and what they can have are in this instance two different things.

Many foreign owners of long names change them of their own accord, and this is perfectly proper, if they wish to do so. If a foreign born citizen is going into business in this country, and wants to advertise and make his name a household word, it helps him a good deal if it is a name that is easily handled. In concession to the none too limber tongues of the American people, he goes before the court and has his name changed to an American one or to a shorter one by reducing the number of syllables and throwing out a few consonants.

But this must be voluntary, and not forced. Many of these immigrants with names that inspire Americans with awe, are proud of them because in their own country they mean something. They may be family names that have appeared in the history of their native land, and while they mean nothing to the people of this country, perhaps, it would be a real sacrifice to compel their owners to drop them and adopt a prosaic, meaningly, Smith, Brown or White.

UNIFORM MARRIAGE LAWS.

The senate has voted to indefinitely postpone the consideration of a joint resolution amending the constitution so as to permit congress to enact uniform laws for marriage and divorce.

It is hard to see what could have induced this action. Doubtless the senators had some reason for it. Doubtless Senator Nelson of Minnesota, who reported the resolution adversely from the committee on judiciary, had satisfied himself that the proposition was not a good one. Surely, too, the reasons that appealed to these senators must have been very strong ones, for this action practically means the defeat of the plan, for a long time anyway.

And the usual charge of corporation influence will hardly fit this case, since there is no reason why the corporations, which usually defeat reform legislation, should have any objection to uniform and suitable marriage and divorce laws.

Yet it would seem that it had been pretty conclusively shown that one great need of this country is just exactly what the senate has refused to give—uniformity in the law governing marriage and divorce. At present the utmost confusion exists. One state grants no divorces at all; another grants them for almost any petty reason; the divorces of one state are worthless in another. A man who is divorced and remarried in one state, may be a bigamist or an adulterer if he moves to another.

All this is worse than confusing; it is demoralizing. Each state, absolutely without reference to the action of other states, has from time to time added to its laws upon these important subjects, and the result is the most chaotic condition of legislation that any country can show on any subject.

It is as true of marriage as it is of divorce. One state requires marriage licenses and places certain wholesome restrictions upon marriage. An adjoining state has no restrictions whatever, and becomes the Gretna Green for all the hasty marriages thoughtlessly arranged in the more strict commonwealth. Marriage contracts arranged by minds clouded with the fumes of alcohol can be completed by going across the line before clear heads bring second thoughts.

Surely uniform laws on these subjects are needed. But the senate says there shall be none, for the present at least, and there is no recourse except to wait until another senate is in a different frame of mind.

TOO MANY HOMICIDES.

It is decidedly unpleasant to discover that in this country, above all others, there is a steady increase in murder that is greater than that of any other civilized nation furnishing statistics.

Judge William A. Thomas of Montgomery, Ala., has collected some interesting if rather discouraging data on this subject. He shows that with a population of five millions, Canada has 15 homicides per annum, and 3 per million of population; Germany, with fifty-three millions of people, has 249 homicides a year, or 4.85 per million; England and Wales, with thirty-two millions, have 322 murders or 10.15 per million; France, with thirty-eight millions of people, has 526 homicides or 14.22 per million; Belgium, with six million, has 94 murders, or 16 per million. Against these is the United States, with seventy-six millions of people, and 9,829 murders a year, or 129.3 per million.

This showing is appalling. It is a serious blot on our boasted civilization.

Here is a table showing the principal divisions of this country, with the percentage of foreign born in each, the number of murders per annum, and the number for each 50,000 of population:

Geographic divisions.	Per cent. pop. foreign born.	Per annum.	Per 50,000 popul'n.
New England	25	254	2.34
Middle Atlantic	18	1,688	4.30
Central	14	2,843	4.99
Southern	2	3,914	11.15
Pacific	18	1,191	14.71

The greatest number of homicides, according to this table, was in the Southern states, which have the smallest percentage of foreign born. The greatest number in proportion to population is in the Pacific states, while the least number in proportion to population is in the New England states, which have the largest percentage of foreign born.

On the racial aspect of the question, Judge Thomas says:

> Is it a question of racial differences? Texas, with a population of 2,500,000 whites and 625,000 negroes, has about the same number of homicides as Alabama, Louisiana and South Carolina, with 2,688,371 whites and 2,769,432 negroes; while in Nevada, with only 134 negroes and 1,352 Chinese, in a population of 42,335, the homicides are 39, the highest rate in the United States. That of Maryland, having four times as many whites as colored, is as great as Louisiana, where the races are nearly equal. It is noteworthy that the negro at the South does not kill the white man, nor the white man the negro, as often as the negro kills the negro. The Pacific states, with 4 per cent of population colored (96,522 Indians, 88,000 Mongolians and 16,500 negroes), have a much higher rate than the Southern, with 38 per cent negroes.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"If I were a moneyed man, and could do just about as I pleased, I think I would live in a little country town during the summer, and put in my time during the cold months in a big city," said C. I. Madison of Chicago, at the Lenox. "A country town situated on a pretty lake offers about as much opportunity for pleasure in the summer time as any place I know of. They have fun there in winter, too, but while the cold months are with us I prefer to live in a city.

"One generally finds a nice class of people in the smaller places, who are not too busy to enjoy themselves, and who like to see others have a good time. And then if the town is on a lake, it is something in the nature of a summer resort, and there are enough outsiders on hand to add variety to the thing, and keep one's interest aroused. Of course, if there is a lake, it is to be presumed there is fishing, and what more pleasant way to spend a few hours can one imagine than to lie around in a boat and wait for a bite, even if the bite doesn't come?

"A small town as a steady diet the year round would get pretty tiresome to me. The long winter evenings are a little more than I would want to stand. In the city there is always something to do and some place to go, and one gets a chance to see some good shows."

"A visit to an Indian school is an interesting event," said W. L. Joseph of Grand Rapids, Mich., at the McKay. "One of these schools is located at Mt. Pleasant, Mich., and it is frequently visited by outsiders, who display a keen interest in its operations. The school was established by the federal government in 1893. New buildings and departments have been gradually added, until now, in addition to the boys' dormitory and the girls' dormitory, there is a large dining hall, kitchen, bakery, steam laundry and hospital, school house and a power and light building.

"A few weeks ago there were 335 pupils enrolled at the institution. Their natural sharpness makes them quick to learn. Once a thing is learned it is never forgotten, and this faculty is noticeable in unimportant details. Pupils are taken in charge all the way from 5 to 18 years of age, and they are clothed, fed and taught only that which will help them to make their own way in the world. Everything is upon the most practical basis, and while there is plenty of study and work, there is also recreation. The old-er boys have a ball team which has taken all the scalps in the neighboring towns, and is looking for more. They also have a military band of forty-five pieces, which is the equal of many of greater pretensions.

"The purely educational work of the institution goes only through the eighth grade, but provision is made for those whose parents are sufficiently well to do to pay a moderate price for them to be carried through the local high school, as a number have done."

A Packingtown Tale.

Once on a time a fair-haired boy,
Whose name was Billy Gray,
Had worked in Packer's sausage mill
At fifty cents a day.
Now, Billy was a thoughtless lad,
And he was careless some,
So it was not surprising when
The chopper got his thumb.

The chopper didn't stop to think
How smoothly and complete
It took off careless Billy's thumb
But went on chopping meat.
All kinds of meat and Billy's thumb
The chopper chopped that day,
And Billy went to see the boss
To hear what he might say.

"I'm sorry," said that kindly man,
When Billy told his tale;
"And yet, my boy, it's not all bad.
There's good we cannot fail
To find in this, if we but try;
And though you suffer pain,
You know that what is loss to you
Is your employer's gain."
—W. J. LAMPTON in New York World.

An Echo That Is An Echo.

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune: President Murphy of the Chicago National League club told at a baseball dinner a remarkable echo story, according to an exchange.

"There was a man," he began, "who had a country house in the Catskills. He was showing a visitor over his grounds one day and, coming to a hilly place, he said:

"'There's a remarkable echo here. If you stand under that rock and shout the echo answers four distinct times, with an interval of several minutes between each answer.'

"But the visitor was not at all impressed. He said, with a loud laugh:

"'You ought to hear the echo at my place in Sunapee. Before getting into bed at night I stick my head out of the window and shout, "Time to get up, William!" and the echo wakes me at 7 o'clock sharp the next morning.'"

A Desirable Innovation.

New York Tribune: There may be room for deliberation and debate over specific details of the plan, but there can be no question that a parcels post system, in both domestic and foreign mails, is so desirable as to be little short of an urgent necessity.

THE WEATHER.

Can you beat it? The weather for the convention is absolutely perfection. The sky has been cloudless, the sun has shone merrily, a cool breeze from the lake has kept it from being hot, and altogether conditions have been flawless. This morning it was inexpressibly charming, and the weather man sees no likelihood of a change for the worse tonight or tomorrow. It will continue to be fair, with moderate temperature and northeast winds. Last night's lowest temperature was 42 degs., and yesterday's highest was 56 degs.

A year ago today was just about such a day as today has been.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Barometric conditions have changed but slightly during the past twenty-four hours. Low pressure areas overlying Georgia and Saskatchewan have caused light to heavy showers over South Atlantic and Eastern Gulf states and from Montana northward. Atlanta reports the unusually heavy rainfall of 3.82 inches in twenty-four hours. The barometer continues high over the lake region and Pacific coast states. A disturbance which is unattended by rain is stationary in the Southwest. Moderate temperatures and clear skies are the rule in the lake region, central valleys and Northwest, and indications favor a continuance of those conditions in this section tonight and Thursday."

THE HUMORIST.

Chicago Tribune: Deacon Hardesty—I'm sorry to hear that you are dissatisfied with your preacher. He is a most excellent man.

Brother McGinnis (of another congregation)—Oh, yes, and he's a good preacher, but he doesn't draw well. We have a chance now to get a man who has just been tried for heresy.

Washington Star: "Love," said the sentimental girl, "is the poet's greatest theme."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "Poets have had a great deal to say about love, but the subject does not appear to yield them the substantial rewards that it has for florists, confectioners and jewelers."

Boston Transcript: Hicks—Did you ever notice how women get more careful in their expenditures as they grow older? Twenty seems to be their spendthrift age, twenty-five their bargain age, thirty their economy age—

Wicks—And forty their rummage

Judge: Husband—Well, I hear old Goldman is dead and leaves a quarter of a million. Wouldn't you like to be his widow?

Wife—No, dear. Nothing could possibly delight me more than just to be yours.

Judge: "My husband selects all my hats for me," she said.

"But does he—" He certainly has good taste," observed the other woman.

"Oh, after he selects the ones he thinks I should wear I exchange them for the ones I want."

Houston Post: Free Prescription Fiend (meeting doctor)—Doctor, what can you do when you have a ringing in your ear?

Doctor—Answer the telephone.

The Cult of the Tilt.

(There are many shapes in the spring millinery, but only one angle.—Daily Paper.)

Attend while I lilt
Of the impudent tilt
Achieved by the hat of the day;
From the back rising high
It eclipses one eye
In a manner audaciously gay.
Whether toque, Louis Quinze or bergere,
It isn't the shape that you wear;
But, for damsel or aunt,
It's a question of slant—
On a cluster of ondule hair.

When the features are plain
Take some arcophane
And bunch it well under the brim;
If sufficiently thick
It will guarantee chic,
Then assume an expression of ease,
But remember it's fatal to sneeze,
For the least little lurch
Will unsettle the perch
Of a chapeau at forty degrees.

The Wife's Reproach.

New York Tribune: Admiral Capps, in an address to a temperance society, told how drink had once caused the downfall of a brave soldier.

In the course of the sad story he said:

"Sometimes after a debauch, the man would be repentant, humble. He would promise his wife to do better. But, alas! the years taught her the barrenness of all such promises.

"And one night, when he was getting to be an old man, a prematurely old man, thin limbed, stoop shouldered, with red rimmed eyes, he said to his wife sadly:

"'You're a clever woman, Jenny, a courageous, active, good woman. You should have married a better man than I am, dear.'

"She looked at him, and, thinking of what he once had been she answered in a quiet voice:

"'I did, James.'"

She Was Wondrous Wise!

There was a girl in our town
And she was wondrous wise;
She built a waist and put in sleeves
Of ordinary size.

At the elbow.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Le Sueur News: In former times, before the trusts owned so many congressmen and senators, the people's rights were respected, at least ancient history so tells us. When the people remove the hoodwinks from over their eyes there will be no more trust-owned representatives or senators in congress.

Anoka Herald: Do you know that very few of us say just what we mean? This is literally true from the busy housewife greeting a visitor Monday morning to the indifferent "hoss" trader reluctantly parting with the "finest bit of hoss flesh" in the state for twice its value.

Fairmont Sentinel: The muck rake has been a much-abused institution, but all the same there is nothing else so potent to make big grafters and corruptionists sit up and take notice. Keep the muck rake busy.

Greenbush Journal: This paper is willing to donate $1 (we can't afford more) towards erecting a "sympathy memorial" to the unlucky aspirants in the gubernatorial race at the Duluth convention, said memorial to be situated as near as possible to the convention hall.

Crookston Times: The South Dakota insurgents are in complete control, but their victory loses them their rights and titles as an insurgent reform party. They are now the machine, and to perpetuate their power will have to do things that will bring another insurgent party into being.

North Branch Review: Many men would describe an ideal wife as one who loves her husband enough not to ask him to do anything he don't want to.

Crookston Times: The great corporations which industrial conditions of the past fifteen years have given birth to have laughed at the idea of government ownership, and have fought every suggestion of government regulation. But the rate bill which will within a few days become a law declares for the principle of government regulation, and we may consider this principle now as fairly established in the minds of the people. It is inevitable, and it is met with too great resistance on the part of great business concerns, government ownership will be in just that proportion hastened.

Grand Rapids Herald-Review: There is more encouraging talk in behalf of the congressional candidacy of ex-Register Culkin of the Duluth land office than is necessary for the good and welfare of J. Adam Bede's political interests. More surprising things have happened than the retirement of Mr. Bede. It is said that Culkin is a good campaigner and that Culkin is a good campaigner and would substitute business and brains for foolishness and fun.

Ely Miner: If you want to be governor of Minnesota this fall you want to begin making noises like good roads, drainage and Northern development right quick.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: The Duluth gang is keeping Mr. Culkin prominently before the people, and the Duluth News Tribune is largely the means. Mr. Culkin wants to occupy J. Adam Bede's seat in congress, which is a laudable desire for any man to have. It is the opinion of this very respectable family journal that Mr. Culkin's peculiar talents would find in the United States senate a better field for operation.

Stillwater Gazette: If our president continues showing up such places as the Chicago packers have been running, he will make so many enemies among that class that the people, irrespective of politics, will unanimously nominate him for president and elect him.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man with an automobile doesn't have to be a bachelor unless he wants to.

Young people come home from school for their vacation so as to go away again somewhere else for it.

There's no use telling a girl she is pretty; to do the work you must tell her she is the prettiest one you ever saw.

A man can get a good deal more excited over a muffed fly at a baseball game than having his neighbor's house burn down.

June Temptations.

There's lazy clouds a-driftin'
An' Nature's just in keepin'
With this lazy afternoon.
I've strolled out through the meaders
To this pleasant little nook,
An' I'm loafin' in the shadders
An' a-listenin' to the brook.
But I ain't a bit contented—
Not a bit, an' that's a fac'—
For I can't help a-thinkin'
Of the long walk back.

The little brook's a-singin'
Kinder lazy-like an' low,
An' it's mighty cool an' restin'
Where its crystal waters flow.
An' its singin' charms a feller,
An' it seems ter say ter him,
As he's layin' nigh, a-dozin':
"Don't yer wanter take a swim?"
Now there's nothin' I like better
Than to take a swim, but then,
There's the trouble of a-puttin'
On yer clo'es again.

Country's Money Volume.

Springfield Republican: The money volume of the country goes on increasing faster than population—the per capita circulation on June 1 reaching the hitherto unequaled figure of $32.45. Even at the height of the inflation period of the Civil war the per capita circulation never rose above $21. The increase of some $23,430,000 in the circulation last month was due almost entirely to gold imports showing little expansion.

In Trouble.

Chicago Tribune: In these days the packers are utilizing even the squeal.

STATE DEVELOPMENT.

Moorhead Independent: More than ever should the farmers advocate drainage in this section of the country. It will be the means of bringing the community back to its former standard of prosperity.

Cloquet Pine Knot: Drainage, good roads and immigration is the only platform for legislative candidates to stand on in this neck-of-the-woods.

Little Falls Herald: No one has a monopoly of wishing that Minnesota will grow, prosper and develop. Every good citizen wishes that, though differing as to the best way to bring it about. Might as well make the decalogue a political platform as the matter of state development.

Isanti News: It is hoped that the friends of state development, now so active, will not become exhausted before the legislature meets. The future greatness of the state, when Northern Minnesota is the home of a million prosperous people, is something worth working for.

Warren Register: A more extensive and comprehensive system of drainage means more state lands suitable for farming; more farms mean more settlers and increased population, both urban and rural; more people and more occupied lands mean more taxable property, and all together mean a reduction of taxation for state, county and local purposes. State drainage makes for state development, which is, or should be, favored by every citizen of Minnesota.

Cass Lake Times: Listen to the call of Northern Minnesota newspapers. The papers are small, but their call is mighty, in demanding consistent legislation for good roads and thorough drainage.

Ripple Compass: It will require more than drainage planks to bridge the swamps. Spades in the hands of patriots, and not promises in the mouths of politicians, are most needed.

St. Hilaire Spectator: Drain and advertise Minnesota and see that we have state officials who will help. Is the battle cry of Northern Minnesota this year.

Crookston Times: The Fergus Falls Journal says we are all fanatics up this way because we demand drainage. They have all their ditches dug in Otter Tail county.

Red Wing Republican: There is no dividing line between the Northern and Southern parts of Minnesota. Here we have one grand state. What is good for one portion benefits another. The Republican is pleased over the development of the country to the north of us, and we share alike in its prosperity. Many thousands of dollars from this section have gone there to enrich and make it a land to be proud of. We do not begrudge the investment. Southern Minnesota has plenty and a lot to spare.

Ripple Compass: It is now announced that the Steenerson drainage bill will go over to the next session of congress. It is an excellent measure, but this state is not entitled to receive it soon. It should first show its faith by planking some of its own lands, instead of asking federal aid at this time. Minnesota is in the same position as the land owner of a gone position as the land owner of a moss grown farm, praying the Lord to remove the weeds from his neighbor's garden.

Brookston Herald: Among the many things favorable to Northern Minnesota, one of the most prominent is the fact that this section of the state is never visited by cyclones or tornadoes, which strike the prairie country quite frequently. Only this week a terrific wind storm broke loose and raised much havoc in Southern Minnesota, but in this portion of the state it simply rained, and no great damage is reported. Northern Minnesota is truly the settler's paradise, and homeseekers should not overlook it.

W. W. SIVRIGHT,
Chairman of the Convention.

COLE NOMINATED

on the raised seats at the back of the stage.

Even after practically all the delegates were in their seats, the gathering was a very quiet one, everything considered. Conversations were carried on in low tones, and speculations were indulged in regarding the chances of the numerous candidates for the several offices. Nothing in the way of exciting discussions or dispute was in evidence, and no very deep interest was manifested in what was happening or what was likely to happen.

THE FORMAL OPENING.

E. L. Millar Welcomes Delegates---W. W. Sivright Chosen Chairman.

At 10:46 o'clock, Conde Hamlin, chairman of the Republican state central committee, called the convention to order. He wasted no time in preliminary remarks, but introduced E. L. Millar, who delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the city and county. Mr. Millar was frequently interrupted by laughter and applause. His remarks were punctuated with flashes of wit such as have made him so popular as a speaker in Duluth. He made a hit with the delegates.

The speaker began with the early history of the Republican party in Duluth, and told how, in the year 1866, two delegates, pioneer Republicans of this part of the state, went down to St. Paul, to attend a state convention at which 122 delegates were present, and contrasted that situation with the present.

"In those days," he said, "Duluth was but a tiny village, insignificant and unimportant. Today the state convention, with 1089 delegates, is assembled in a city of 80,000 population, where formerly stood the little village.

"The remarkable growth and development of this city is but an indication of the further growth and development Duluth will enjoy in the future, and is a sample of the progressiveness of the great state of Minnesota as a whole. We hope you will remember Duluth as a city of glorious destiny, and we will all remember it as the birthplace in the year 1906, of a winning Republican ticket.

"Duluth and all here citizens extends to you a glad welcome, from the laboring men to the mine owners and copper magnates. We hope you will remain in the city long enough for you to grow tall enough so that you can hang your hats on the aerial bridge, and further hope you will stay long enough for you to grow short. We want you to stay long enough to see our city and what we have here, and to come to a realization that you have just as great an interest in our elevators, mines and terminals as we have ourselves. It is your grain that is filling our elevators, and the mines up here on the ranges are yours as well as ours.

"We warmly welcome Republicans from all parts of the state, not forgetting the harmony Republicans from Hennepin county. We also particularly welcome the delegates from Ramsey county. The growth of Minneapolis and St. Paul, the mighty twins of the Northwest, is unparalleled in the history of the United States. Neither is to be compared to Duluth, however. All of you are welcome, whether you be from the North, South, East or West, and we hope you will like our city so well that you will come again, and often."

After Mr. Millar's speech Senator W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson, McLeod county, was elected temporary chairman. Senator Thorpe of Kandyohin county nominated him. There was no opposition.

Mr. Sullivan of Washington county moved that to complete the temporary organization, George T. Simpson of Winona be appointed clerk, and John T. Jones of Hennepin, and J. A. Duffy of Red Lake be named as assistant clerks. This went through, and the temporary organization was perfected.

Committees on credentials, resolutions and permanent organization were appointed, but all but the resolutions committee were dispensed with. There was no contention regarding the credentials, which were last night placed in the hands of the central committee.

Chairman Sivright appointed the following on the committee on resolutions: W. E. Lee, Sixth district; L. O. Thorpe, Seventh district; W. E. Richardson, Eighth district; W. E. McKenzie, Ninth district; H. W. Childs, Fourth district; A. K. Ware, Third district; W. W. Retfellinger, Fifth district; Thomas Crawford, Second district, and C. S. Edwards, First district.

E. L. Millar for the Duluth people announced from the floor that the Fern was at the disposal of the delegates immediately after adjournment to take them out on the bay. Dar Reese of the St. Paul delegation, tried to induce the convention to adjourn, but the delegates would not listen to the proposition.

The committee on permanent organization was composed of the following: W. W. Dunn, Fourth district; J. C. Sweet, Fifth district; N. D. Marsh, Sixth district; J. O. Haugland, Seventh district; H. R. Wells, First district; George Mumford, Eighth district; G. Bradley, Third district, and C. N. Denniston, Ninth district.

The credentials committee was named as follows: J. A. Densmore, Eighth district; W. T. Strom, Seventh district; F. A. Tuxbury, First district; E. F. Comstock, Jr., Fifth district; W. H. Putnam, Third district; Alva Eastman, Sixth district; Hans Moe, Second district; Theodore Gronewald, Fourth district.

Senator George P. Wilson of Hennepin, moved that the convention nominate United States Senator Knute Nelson to succeed himself. In a short talk accompanying the motion he eulogized the senior senator from Minnesota and said that he has reached so favorable a stage in Washington that he commands the respect and influence of all from the president down.

W. E. Lee of Todd county, and P. E. Dowling of Eveleth, and Senator Durant of Stillwater seconded Senator Wilson's motion. Mr. Dowling was particularly strong in his remarks. In view of the fact that Mr. Dowling is one of the few candidates for either branch of the legislature who had not declared himself in favor of Senator Nelson, his talk created interest. Mr. Dowling said that the resolutions committee should make the endorsement of Nelson so strong that no legislator would dare do otherwise than vote for the present United States senator next winter. The motion to endorse Senator Nelson passed by a rising unanimous vote.

Following this C. E. Callagham of Brown county placed in nomination Chief Justice Charles M. Start to succeed himself on the supreme bench. There were various seconds, and Justice Start was nominated by acclamation.

Immediately following this George Welch of Morton, moved that an informal ballot for governor be taken and this was done. G. B. Wollan of St. Paul, and I. M. Ingerbritzen of Polk county ,were appointed tellers.

The informal ballot resulted as follows:

BAKKAS WILL RECOVER.

Man Who Was Shot at Hibbing, Steadily Improving.

Hibbing, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Jack Bakkas, the young Finn farmer who was shot in the breast at his brother's saloon on June 2 by Henry Anderson, is steadily improving, and attending physicians at the Rood hospital report that he will recover. Bakkas was wounded at the same time that John Kiverster, the bartender at the saloon, was shot and killed. During a struggle soon after, with Policeman Albert Brude, Anderson, the man who did the shooting, was accidentally shot and killed by his own revolver.

An inquest was held over the remains of the two men and facts were brought out, which show that Anderson was mentally unbalanced at the time he committed the terrible deed. Nothing further could be learned of the man, except that his name was Henry Anderson, and that he worked for a few days before coming to Hibbing, for a contractor at the new roundhouse at Mitchell, about three miles east of here, in the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company's train yard.

There was practically no provocation for the shooting. Bakkas received his wound in the breast while trying to assist his friend Kiverster, who was fatally shot in the stomach, dying two hours later. Anderson died at the same time as his victim, lying side by side on the operating tables of the hospital. Bakkas, the only man in the mixup who will recover, is a young farmer of Finnish nationality, having a valuable farming tract about thirty miles from Hibbing. He is unmarried, and a steady, sober industrious young man.

BOY DROWNED.

Pine City, Minn., June 13.—James Toman, 13 years old, was drowned in Pokegama creek Monday afternoon. He was a poor swimmer and was carried down by the current, which was very swift, owing to the recent floods. A stepfather, mother, four brothers and three sisters, residing three miles west of Beroun, survive him.

"LE TABAC EST L'AMI DE L'HOMME."

French Proverb That Proves Itself True In Duluth.

There is a French proverb, "Tobacco is the friend of man," that is more true than the average. Man is the only being that smokes. Monkeys have imitated man in all other ways, even acquiring a fondness for liquors, but they never could be taught smoking. Smoking is a distinctly masculine pleasure, and when man has a good cigar like Wadsworth Bros.' Chicos in his mouth, he is care free and ready for any trouble. S. F. Boyce, the local agent for Chicos, says that many of his lawyer customers will not take a difficult case until they have a box of Chicos at hand. From pure enjoyment any lover of a good cigar can be no more perfectly satisfied than with a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico.

Go to S. F. Boyce's drug store today and select one of these clean Havana filled cigars. The price, 5c straight, will not frighten you.

A Great Sale of Tailored Suits at Half Price Commences Tomorrow!

In accordance with our policy of closing out every suit in its own wearing season, we will offer the choice of our entire stock of Women's and Children's Spring Suits at just one-half of the actual selling price. And we can say that it is one of the cleanest and most desirable stocks which we have ever placed on sale at this time of the year, embracing many of the very best features of the season in Etons and fitted and loose coat effects in grays, blues, old rose and mixtures—splendid Panamas, voiles, broadcloth and eolienne suits. Every suit at half.

No summer suits are included, but every new spring suit in the house enters the sale without any reservation—not a suit is held back. No approvals or laybys during the sale. Any necessary alterations charged for. Coming practically at the beginning of the wearing season in the Northwest, this sale can prove nothing short of irresistable to every woman residing or visiting in Duluth tomorrow. A few days will play havoc with sizes—it's well to be early.

All Touring Coats at ¼ Off

For the same reasons we announce a generous price reduction in our entire line of fashionable long, loose coats in light and dark colors and mixtures—also in plain black. We include also all covert coats in this reduction.

$2.00 for Covert Coats up to $15

Not this season's garments—our only excuse for offering them at this ridiculously small price.

75c for Children's Coats values at $3, $4 and $5

A small lot of strictly wool coats for children 2, 3, 4 and 5 years of age. Not this season's coats, though excellent qualities.

Delegations to the Convention of Seasonable Goods Assembled Here.

White and Black Suitings

As the season advances the demand for these cloths grows decidedly stronger. They make very nobby summer suits and skirts and their newness offers an entire change. We are showing them in different sized checks and stripes in serges, mercerized warp mohairs, Lansdowne and Sicillians — most approved styles—priced from 50c to $1.25.

Crepe de Paris

Different from many cloths sold under this name in that it is one-half silk instead of one-quarter and because it has a harder finish—resembling the voile somewhat—which assures a non-wrinkling, dust repellant and long wearing cloth. It is very silky in appearance—a good fabric for dressy or general wear—40 inches wide. All colors and cream and black—an excellent value at $1.00.

Souvenirs of Duluth

We want every visitor in the city tomorrow to know what attractive souvenirs may be had for a small price—there are none of the souvenir dealers' double profits here.

Silver Souvenir Spoons with designs of the aerial bridge, the high school, the largest steamers on the lake, etc. in relief, at 25c to $2.50.

Souvenir Post Cards—representative views of many of the most interesting buildings and lake and scenic views in and about Duluth. 6 post cards for 5c.

Souvenir Post Card Albums—a splendid gift to take home, with some Duluth souvenir cards as a nucleus for a collection. From 35c to $2.75.

Inexpensive Souvenirs—work stands, cigar racks, stationery sets, sea shells, envelope holders, etc.—all marked as Duluth souvenirs and costing but 10c each.

Wash Goods Remnants ½ Price.

Including short lengths of organdies, dimities, batistes, ginghams, calicoes and many other seasonable wash stuffs. The sales of the past two weeks have left many desirable end lengths which are to be closed out tomorrow—buyers will reap rich returns in an early selection.

25c Porch Pillow Covers 15c.

Roman stripes make the most attractive sort of porch pillow covering. We have sold dozens of these covers at 25c—tomorrow 15c. All ready for the inside pillow.

35c Tapestry Pillow Tops 25c.

Rich effects in floral designs and character sketches. Require no working and are very effective. At the art work counter tomorrow.

Waists and Hats For Shadow Embroidery.

Summer days one wants some easy, dainty needlework for relaxation. Shadow embroidery is the thing. Purchase one of these beautiful waist patterns that are recently in—all stamped ready for working and with material enough for making the waist completed, at 50c.

Corset Covers stamped with very exquisite designs and plenty of material for making up—at 35c.

Embroidery Hats in a variety of beautiful patterns—stamped for shadow work, at 25c.

White Lawn Aprons trimmed with hemstitched ruffles and lace and with pockets for work—stamped for shadow embroidery —at 50c, 65c and 98c.

RAILROADS

BEGINS HIS NEW WORK

J. B. Rayn Now Commercial Agent of Rock Island.

Was Traveling Freight Agent and Knows Many in Duluth.

As foercasted in The Herald yesterday, J. B. Rayn, traveling freight agent of the Rock Island, with headquarters in Minneapolis, has been promoted to the office of commercial ageat and will have his offices at St. Paul. Mr. Rayn succeeds C. A. Hunter, who has been appointed general agent of the Rock Island-Frisco line at Portland, Or. Mr. Rayn has many friends in Duluth. He has already assumed his new duties.

He entered the St. Paul offices of the Minneapolis & St. Louis road as a stenographer in 1895. Four years later, he became a solicitor and in 1900, he was promoted to traveling freight agent. He went to the Rock Island when that road opened Twin City offices in 1902.

John Trewhela of St. Paul has been appointed to succeed Mr. Rayn as traveling freight agent.

NEW ROAD TO BE BUILT.

North Western Officials Are Interested in Another Wisconsin Line.

Madison, Wis., June 13.—The Wolf River Valley Railroad company filed articles of incorporation yesterday with the secretary of state. The line will be constructed from Crandon to a point in a southeasterly direction in Shawano county to connect with the Manitowoc, Green Bay & Northwestern railway. The estimated length is 71 miles, and the capital stock is $100,000. The incorporators are M. Hughitt, W. A. Gardiner, J. B. Leffifield, J. M. Whitman, M. M. Kirkman, all officers and directors and stockholders of the North Western railway.

Bill for 2-Cents a Mile Rate.

Washington, June 13.—Mr. Sherman of New York, introduced a bill yesterday providing that the passenger rates of all roads doing an interstate business should be two cents a mile, effective Jan. 1, next. Authority for a system of mileage books is provided for, which shall be on sale by all roads good on any road. The books are to contain coupons for 1,000 to 5,000 miles. They shall be good for the checking of baggage and for passage on all passenger trains.

The bill was referred to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

Trying to Sell Peerless.

It is reported that the Ashland Advancement association is trying to induce the Northern Pacific to buy the Peerless Logging road between that city and Port Wing. W. W. Sshenners & Company of Milwaukee were said to have an option on the franchise and other property of the line, but it expired June 1 and the road is now being torn up.

Ore Shipments Heavy.

This nice weather is greatly facilitating the handling of ore at the docks of the Missabe road in the West end and the Great Northern at Allouez. Many trains of ore have been unloaded since Sunday. The Missabe's new classification yard at Proctor is about completed and this is resulting in better time for the trains at this end.

DOUBLE HEADER WITH CALUMET

League Leaders Will Play Two Games for One Admission.

With the members of nearly every other team in the league looking on, the Duluth and Calumet nines will play a double-header for one price of admission tomorrow afternoon.

The two teams are now fighting it out for first place in the league, and the games tomorrow should be two of the most interesting contests of the season. The first one will be called at 2 o'clock, and the second at 3:30 p. m. The games must be called promptly at this hour in order to allow the players to catch a train for the Copper Country.

The members of the other Copper Country teams will be in the city on their way home from the Western trip, and they will attend the game and root for the Aristocrats.

Treadway will be saved for one of the games, and Kriek will probably pitch the other. If either team succeeds in winning both contests, it will secure a comfortable lead in the pennant race.

Three more games will be played between the two teams in Calumet on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, but tomorrow's games will be the last opportunity to see the White Sox perform for about two weeks to come.

APPROPRIATION REDUCED.

Washington, June 13.—Conferees on the omnibus lighthouse bill had a complete agreement today. The appropriation for establishing the Superior pier head range lights, Duluth harbor, was reduced from $28,000 to $20,000.

Cut Out Those Extra Steps

You take day after day in and around a hot kitchen. "It's not the actual cooking and baking that tires one so, it is the eternal running about," said one very good housekeeper.

She bought an—

and now she looks rested and has more time outside of the kitchen than she ever had. The Elwell is the most conveniently arranged cabinet made. There are many compartments, each one especially designed for the thing for which it is intended. An arrangement that places everything used in cooking or baking right at your fingers' end.

FIRST STEP IN CONTEST

For Government Control Over Rapids of the Soo River.

Proceedings to Prevent Encroachments by Power Company.

Washington, June 13.—The Lake Carriers' association took preliminary steps yesterday in a contest to restore to the federal government absolute control over the rapids of the Soo river at Sault Ste. Marie and oust therefrom the Chandler-Dunbar Water Power company. To this end a meeting was held before Secretary Taft, attended by William Livingstone, president, and H. D. Goulder, attorney of the Lake Carriers; Congressman Theodore E. Burton, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee of the house; Henry M. Hoyt, solicitor general, representing the department of justice, and Gen. Alexander McKenzie, chief of engineers of the war department. All spoke in favor of the position taken by the Lake Carriers, except Gen. McKenzie.

The purpose of the meeting was to convince the secretary of war that a great wrong was being perpetrated upon the people of the United States by allowing the army engineers to permit the Chandler-Dunbar company to erect permanent works in the rapids when the trend of events so surely showed that within a comparatively short time the government would need all of the American side of the river for additional locks, canals and other improvements to take care of the marvelous development of lake commerce.

"This is the most important matter before the government today," said Mr. Goulder to Secretary Taft. The most distinguished authorities tell us that it will take us at least ten years to complete the Panama canal, and that ten years after it is completed it will do well to have business amounting to 10,000,000 net tons a year. The increase in net tonnage passing through the American canal at the Soo in 1905 over that of 1904 was more than 11,000,000 tons—an increase in one year greater than the total business of the Panama canal is expected to be ten years after completion.

"The development of the Northwest has come from, and must in great measure depend upon the unrestricted navigation of these waters. We need at once a new lock of greater capacity than any there now, and preparations should be made without delay to regain possession of the river to the national boundary in order that future improvements may not be hampered by the necessity for first condemning and removing such great and permanent works as the engineers of the war department are now allowing the Chandler-Dunbar company to construct there.

"The engineer corps holds that the Chandler-Dunbar company is proceeding under a revokable license and that when the ground is needed the company can be removed, but the history of revokable licenses has shown difficulty in disturbing the rights under which fixed structures have been developed."

Mr. Goulder filed a brief in which the history of the commerce through the Soo canal was fully treated and the deduction made that by 1925, the net tonnage to pass through would be 202,000,000, there as last year, it was only 44,270,680 net tons and the capacity of the canal was taxed to care for it.

The question of the Clergue interests was brought up, and the water they use for power purposes fetched into the limelight. It was developed that Clergue and Chandler-Dunbar have no connection with each other.

"Then," said Mr. Burton, "we can treat them separately. The Clergue interests are there, and are acting under a law of congress. These other people are not yet there in such strength, but they will be and this is the time for the government to act and keep them from getting such a foothold as to make it impossible to get rid of them."

"I will say in behalf of the Lake Carriers," said Mr. Goulder, "that if we had known then what we do now, the Clergue people would not have gotten in, even under their drastic statute."

The solicitor general said his department was at the present time engaged on behalf of the interior department in trying to get a couple of islands away from the Chandler-Dunbar company, islands out in the rapids, and to which the company laid claim, as it did to the land along the shore, and under that to the riparian rights to the international boundary. A lawsuit over this had been decided against the government in the district court at Grand Rapids, and had been appealed by the government to the United States court of appeals at Cincinnati, where it is now pending.

Mr. Goulder asked the secretary to revoke all the permits that had from time to time been granted to the Chandler-Durbar people, and under which they are now proceeding to put in extensive works in the rapids, also that one branch of the government would not be standing in the light of aiding a litigant to hold property against whom another department of the government was prosecuting a suit in ejectment. The secretary took the matter under advisement, with the understanding that Congressman Burton is to write him a letter, giving his views as fully as Mr. Goulder set forth his in his brief.

From the secretary's attitude, it is a fair inference that he is not inclined to revoke the permits. Should this be his conclusion, the matter will be laid before congress.

In the meantime $1,000,000 is lying in the treasury ready to be expended under the authority of congress granted last year to widen the Soo canal above the locks. To enable the government to do this without condemning the property they claim to own, the Chandler people have made a deed of a strip of land along the canal to the government and that deed is now in the hands of the department of justice for ratification.

If that department does not ratify it until the lawsuit to oust the Chandler-Dunbar company is decided, the widening of the canal will necessarily be held up, although the war department has advertised for bids for the work and is ready to proceed the minute the department of justice passes upon the deed.

The war department does not think the deed ought to cut any figure in the litigation against the Chandler-Dunbar company, as it is only a quitclaim deed and relinquishes only such rights as the company may be found to possess.

As for the department of justice, the officials there show plainly that they regard the attitude of the war department as hostile to what the law end of the government is trying to do.

GAMES TODAY.

Hancock at Duluth.
Lake Linden at Winnipeg.
Houghton at Fargo.
Calumet at Grand Forks.

(The game as Henry James might have seen it.)

A game of baseball in which most of the runs are traceable to—I might say directly caused by—errors, is not to be considered the most desirable of exhibitions from the viewpoint of the spectator; that is, the disinterested spectator, and not the spectator who is blinded by partisanship, and who is willing, I might almost say anxious, to see his team win by fair means if possible, and if not by fair means, by foul.

Such a game it was, one witnessed yesterday afternoon at the baseball grounds between the teams of Hancock and Duluth—a game which was marked by frequent misplays by the members of both teams—misplays which a vulgar urchin who was seated beside me termed "rotten errors."

However, despite these much to be condemned bunglings, the game was not without its good points, of which not the least important and commendatory were the many long hits made by the members of both teams.

The game, in short, was a "slugging match," as the enthusiastic baseball spectators expressed it—a term, by the way, which I find to be singularly expressive and exceedingly well adapted to the situation, although it must be added that it is a colloquialism not to be too freely introduced into proper and correct English, and one which is not recognized by the more didactic dictionists, who con gems such expressions, as derogatory to the clearness and purity of the English language.

I am obliged to express my sentiments regarding the game rather brutally. I feel this to be the case when I say that the game was singularly lacking in most of the essentials of good baseball, as baseball is viewed today by the critical and keenly observant spectators, although I must confess that there was a certain element of uncertainty to the contest which tended to arouse in one's mind that peculiar feeling of exciteme nt attendant on the strenuous athletic contests of he present day.

(At this point Henry would probably have been informed that there was a state convention in progress, and that some of the space was required for political news.)

Duluth got two in the first, when after Livingstone and Summers were down, O'Dea got his base on an error by Hotten, and Barto drew a base on balls. McCormick scored both men with a clean two-bagger.

Another came in the third on Livingstone's home run drive with the bases empty, and two were added in the fourth on a hit by Helding, the new backstop, a double by Krick, and Livingstone's single.

Two more came in the sixth on hits by Helding, Adams and Summers.

Hancock scored in the third on a single by Foster, a base on balls, and Livingstone's error. Another came in the fourth on Stewart's home run drive, and still another in the fifth on singles by Cox and Hotten and Lovet's error. For the next three innings, Krick pitched good ball, but Hancock looked dangerous in the ninth. Wares led with a single, and Cox and Hotten were retired. Lagore got a clean hit and both men scored when Barto made his first error on the home grounds, on a hard chance from Cross. Cross was caught a moment later trying to steal second.

Helding, the new catcher and outfielder, showed up well, with two hits out of four times up, and a perfect fielding record. His whip was not working in good style, however, and there were seven stolen bases against him, although at least three of these were claimed by the Sox to be due to bad decisions on Bassen's part.

CALUMET BEATEN.

Grand Forks Springs Surprise on Aristocrats in Second Game.

Grand Forks, June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fans who journeyed to the park yesterday afternoon expecting a rather one-sided game, were badly fooled. Glencke had a little of everything and allowed the visitors just one little hit up to the eighth inning, and then one in the eighth and one in the ninth.

The only scores made by the visitors came in the eighth inning. Slear led off with a two-bagger. Mohan was issued a pass and stole second. Foulkes hit to Glencke and went out on firt. Corrigan came to bat with two men on bases, but he had an off day yesterday and a strikeout was credited to him. Leahey then hit a long fly to Miller who juggled it a moment and then dropped it, allowing Slear and Mohan to score.

The Tigers scored in the second, fourth and sixth innings. In the second they knocked Curzon out of the box, and Foulkes was substituted. The score:

PITCHER'S BATTLE.

Fargo's New Twirler Wins Close Game From Houghton Team.

Fargo, N. D., June 13.—(Special to The Herald:)—In a pitchers' battle here yesterday afternoon, McMillan, recently signed by Fargo from Burlington of the Three Eye, had the better of the argument.

Houghton found him for only four singles, one of them of the scratch variety. He fanned ten men, walked four and hit one.

A shift was made in the Fargo line-up, Grogan being brought into second and Mehl sent to left. Grogan is an experienced infielder and the change seems to strengthen the team, because of Mehl's short stature, which handicaps him in taking throws at second.

Fargo gave the new twirler errorless support, and the visitors had only one infraction behind Hastings.

Umpire Rudderham continues to give the poorest exhibition of any arbiter here this season.

MANY LAND SEEKERS.

Thousands Rush to Billings, Seeking Claims on Crow Reservation.

Billings, Mont., June 13.—Reports from Chicago say that several thousand excursion tickets have been sold from that city to Billings on account of the opening of the Crow reservation, and that this great crowd will arrive here this week. It is reported also that at least 6,000 people will leave the vicinity of St. Louis for the same purpose, and that they will arrive in this city at about the same time.

The great influx of people from outside places already had been anticipated, and the furniture dealers of the city have placed large orders for tents and cots, while all of the grocery stores of the city have ordered enough supplies to feed thousands of people for months.

This large amount of freight is beginning to arrive, as all the orders were placed by telegraph. Cruisers already have begun to go to the reservation for the purpose of picking out the best pieces of land there. They will be in active demand when once the drawing begins, as they will know all of the best land within the boundaries of the ceded strip, and it will be through the efforts of these men that the lucky ones will find where the best land lies and for what purposes it can be used after they once file on it.

A large number of people already are in the city for the purpose of filing on these lands, and the number is growing daily. By the time Thursday, the first day of registration, arrives it is expected that there will be close to 50,000 people in the immediate vicinity, with a smaller number at Miles City and Sheridan.

Most of the visitors will come to this city, as the drawing will begin here on July 2, and will continue at the rate of 125 a day until all the land is gone.

AHEAD OF NEW HAVEN.

Duluth Wags Do Not Much Annoy Numbers Twenty-Three.

Duluth is evidently considerably more refined than New Haven, although that Connecticut city harbors no less an institution of learning than Yale university.

A prominent resident of that city has been compelled to have his telephone number changed because coarse, persons called him up all the time and worked off rude jokes at his expense. His telephone number was 23.

There are two users of telephones in Duluth who are endowed with 23 as a call number. F. P. Hallock, the printer at 323 West First street, is number 23 on the new 'phone, and the Pioneer Fuel company's yard office is the same famous figure on the Bell line.

Up to date, however, neither has been annoyed so seriously by the practical jokers as to compel them to demand other numbers. So Duluth is hardly as rude as New Haven, even if that city does lie in the heart of the effete East.

Only once in a great while does some over-zealous wag call up Mr. Hallock or the fuel company's yard to jeer "skidoo for yours" after they have been assured that they had 23 on the line.

THROWN INTO DEEP WATER.

Runaway Goes Off Submerged Roadway and Driver Nearly Drowns.

Lester Prairie, Minn., June 13.—Emil Tucholke has had a narrow escape from drowning in a runaway. He was returning from Glencoe and had reached a point on this side of the Adams bridge, where the water was running over the roadway. Suddenly the team took fright and pitched off the roadway into the water, which is eight feet deep. The team was freed from the buggy by the breaking of the whiffletrees and managed to swim ashore. Tucholke was carried down stream by the swift current, but finally managed to catch hold of the limb of a partly submerged tree. He clung desperately to this and shouted for help. Farmers at work in a near-by field heard his cries and rescued him just as he was about exhausted.

Good Roads Association Puts in a Profitable Afternoon.

Resolutions Adopted for Presentation to Republican Convention.

The afternoon session of the St. Louis County Good Roads association was called to order at 2:30 yesterday afternoon by Vice President H. R. Patterson. About fifty members were present, including many of the prominent business men of Duluth and the Twin Cities, as well as a good representation from the farming districts of the county. The committee to increase the membership reported 1,100 members and the association is hopeful of reaching the ten thousand mark in the not far distant future.

The first business of the afternoon was the report of the committee to draw up resolutions for presentation to the Republican convention tomorrow. The resolutions as read by Chairman McManus were as follows:

"It is hereby resolved, that we favor a revision of the road and bridge laws with the object of obtaining better results in the expenditure of road funds.

"Resolved, further, that we advocate the establishment of rock crushing plants at various points in the state, and their operation by prison labor, provided that only such prison labor shall be used as cannot be employed in the manufacture of binding twine by that institution.

"Resolved, further, that we favor the proposed constitutional amendment increasing the aid for highways from one-twentieth to one-fourth of a mill, the fund realized to be expended under the direction of the state highway commission."

Upon Mr. McManus' resolution the report of the committee was unanimously accepted and the chair authorized to appoint a committee of three to present the resolutions to the convention tomorrow. The committee comprises L. B. Arnold, A. E. McManus and L. A. Barnes.

The first speaker was Senator Andrew D. Stephens, candidate for gubernatorial honors. He stated that he could not be expected to speak on the technical parts of the question of good roads, but that his talk would only be a confession of his favoritism for the good roads movement. He said in part:

"There are enough people connected with this movement to do a great deal if they have the sentiment of the people behind them, and I am sure that that is coming rapidly. I will do all I can to help you in this line in our section. The good roads commission can make no better monument to itself than to leave behind it a fine system of highways in this state. I believe that the time is ripe for this movement.

"In this proceeding as in all others a man must have some imagination. Let us imagine a little. When they have begun to manufacture aluminum on a large scale and have perfected automobiles consider what an advantage a perfect stretch of road from Duluth to the farming country of this state and the Dakotas, would be to the farmers. Starting early in the morning with a load of wheat the farmer could, by speeding his powerful machine, unload his wheat in Duluth by evening. Then, after a supper at the Spalding and an evening at the theater, he could start, early the next morning for home, and be at home for supper. Here, gentlemen, you have solved the railroad rate question and the grain inspection trouble. And all this is not so impossible as it may seem at first thought."

The address of the day was made by State Engineer G. W. Cooley who spoke at some length on hte various phases of the subject. Mr. Cooley's talk follows in part:

"I was present at the inception of this movement in St. Louis county, and since then I have attended from ten to fifteen other conventions of a similar nature, and I think I can state positively that the people are more enthusiastic over the good roads agitation than ever before.

"Gentlemen, I believe that the fundamental and essential thing in the construction of good roads is state aid! We can see roads built by state aid two thousand years ago, that are in perfect condition today, and I believe that the greatest monument which the Caesars left behind them were the magnificent roads they built. We can see English roads, built by state aid four hundred years ago, and the roads that Napoleon's army built are the most honorable relics that that great general has left us. It is impossible for the people to build good roads without state aid. Fifteen years ago the East began to place the road building under state supervision, and the result is that today the Eastern states have a system of highways of which they may well be proud. A large number of these states pay from one-third to one-fourth of the cost of constructing the roads.

"At present nearly one-half of what we raise for roads is wasted by our administrative system. In one county in this state I found the average number of road overseers to be eleven to each township, and one township boasted eighteen men in charge of her highways. The amount paid by Minnesota per annum for the maintenance of her roads would, under a practical administration, give a perfect system. There are 75,000 miles of roadway in Minnesota, and there have been $75,000,000 spent for roads in the state. When you consider that about half this mileage has never had a cent of money spent on it, it makes the cost per mile of road nearly $2,000, enough to build as fine a system as could be found anywhere.

"As to the practical side of road building. A good road can be built anywhere out of any material, provided the man who is building it knows how. I have one stretch of roadway outside the Twin Cities which has for one of its principal ingredients, old tin cans. This is the reason for the formation of the highway commission, so that we may benefit by what other men have done, and build practical roads out of the material at hand.

"There are two essentials to good roads,—good construction, and careful maintenance; there are two essentials to good construction,—good material and good drainage; and there are two essentials to good maintenance—keeping the road smooth and maintaining the drainage. Thus drainage becomes the most important factor in road building.

"Convict labor can be utilized to good advantage in road building. We have three or four good quarries in this state where the convicts could be employed without danger of escape, and with the free labor furnished by this means, and the well known liberality of the railroads in these matters, every county might be furnished with the best material on earth for road construction—crushed stone.

A good roadway reduces the cost of transportation by wagon from nearly 25 cents a ton per mile to 6 cents per ton per mile. In Europe the good roads have made the cost of transportation one-third of what it is in America. The intelligence of a community can be measured by the condition of its roads, and I am afraid that Minnesota would hate to be judged according to that standard.

Charles S. Mitchell of the News Tribune stated that he had very emphatic opinions on the good roads question and pointed out the fact that it is useless to try to convince each township separately of the necessity for better roads, because a good road in one township is useless if the road in the next is bad. The waste of the present system is not, in Mr. Mitchell's opinion due to any dishonesty or willful waste on the part of the men in charge, but to the system itself. It would be as easy, said he, for Minnesota to spend $10,000,000 on her roads as for New Yor kto spend $50,000,000.

Asa Paine, vice president of the Minneapolis Automobile club, confined his short address chiefly to the question of the farmers' dislike for automobiles. He argued that the class of men owning automobiles are the men who are willing to pay the most to get good roads. In view of the automobiles soon becoming a business proposition, Mr. Paine argued, "Soak 'em while you can!"

J. P. Galarneault of Aitkin, state highway commissioner, spoke of the Duluth-Minneapolis highway and enumerated its many advantages. Even if this road should not directly benefit the farmers it should go through, as a concession to the city population which pays 45 per cent of the taxes of the state. He stated that if it was possible, the one-fourth of a mill included in the constitutional amendment this year, will be increased to one mill at the next election, making a total road tax of $31,000,000 for the state.

A. E. McManus of this city was called upon for a talk and he kept the audience amused for some time with his description of how the farmers are accustomed to work out their poll tax on the roads, and of the resulting roadways. If the convention did not adopt the good roads plank in its platform Mr. McManus stated emphatically that none of its candidates ought to be voted for.

The meeting closed with a short plea for the Tri-City highway between Wrenshall and Duluth by the Fond du Lac route, by F. B. MacLaren of Wrenshall. Mr. MacLaren assured the meeting that, if the county would build a bridge over the river at Fond du Lac, the farmers of the Wrenshall district would cheerfully provide for the construction of the roadway.

IS THIS WHAT AILS YOU?

If the Symptoms Fit Your Case, Remember "A Disease Once Known is Half Cured."

Feel feverish? Have headache? Backache? In fact, "ache all over?" Have occasional chilly sensations? Appetite gone? Tongue furred? Bad taste, especially in morning? Bad, foul breath? Perhaps nausea, or "sickness at stomach" occasionally? Feel weak, tired, blue and discouraged?

The above are symptoms common to stomach and liver derangements and often precede attacks of fever and malarious affectious, grip, bronchitis, and "lung fever," or pneumonia.

Whichever ailment they point to, you may be sure that it is best to get rid of them as soon as possible by putting your system to rights, regulating, toning up and invigorating stomach, liver and bowels, and thus purifying your blood and system and enabling it to throw off the attack.

For the above purpose, medical science has as yet produced no better agent than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is not a secret, or patent medicine, all its ingredients being printed on the bottle wrapper. It is the prescription of a well-known and experienced physician. It contains no alcohol or other harmful, habit-forming agents—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used both as a solvent and preservative of the medicinal extracts of which it is composed. It is made from the following native, American medicinal roots: Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Bloodroot, Mandrake root and Black Cherrybark. The medicinal properties of these are extracted by exact and peculiar processes with the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, and by means of apparatus and appliances devised for this special purpose, and in such a way as to produce a most perfect pharmaceutical compound.

As to the superior curative properties of some of the above ingredients, we can only give room here for a very few of the briefest extracts from standard medical works, but more complete information will be sent you, free of charge, in pamphlet form, if you will send your address, plainly written on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., with a request for the same.

Of Golden Seal root Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College, says: "Very useful as a stomachic tonic (stomach tonic) and in atonic (weak stomach) dyspepsia. Cures gastric catarrh (catarrh of stomach) and headaches accompanying the same. * * * Chronic catarrh of the intestines, even if it has proceeded to ulceration, is remarkably benefited by Hydrastis (Golden Seal). * * * It may be given as a remedy for intermittent, chronic and malarial poisoning, and enlarged spleen of malarial origin."

From "Organic Medicines," by Grover Coe, M. D., of New York, we extract the following: "Hydrastis (Golden Seal) exercises an especial influence ever mucous surfaces. Upon the liver it acts with equal certainty and efficacy. As a cholagegue (liver invigerator), it has few equals. In affections of the spleen, and abdominal viscera generally, it is an efficient and reliable remedy.

SLAIN IN SHOP, NO CLUE FOUND

Boy Says He Saw Murder Victim Shortly Before Shooting.

Warren, Minn., June 13.—Andrew Linderoth, who was found dead in his shop last Saturday, beyond question was murdered. Apparently he left down town for his shop about 8 o'clock. A boy by the name of McGladry says he saw him looking out of the window of his shop some time between 9 and 10 o'clock, and that five minutes later he, McGladry, opened the door of the shop and saw Linderoth lying on the floor.

McGladry ran for help and the first man to reach the shop was John Halvorson, who testified before the coroner's inquest that the body was cold.

The bullet found in the body is about the size of a 44-caliber ball, but is only one-half as long. Lodged close to the bullet, but in the body of Linderoth, was found a paper wad, which when unfolded revealed the following words: "He Bane ——— Failer." "Popular Prices." Tonight;" evidently a poster from some "Yon Yonson" show which was in town during the early part of the winter. Careful search of the shop was made by the sheriff and two assistants, but they found no firearm with which Linderoth might have killed himself. An old shotgun was found on a shelf, rusty and worn, but had no appearance of having been shot off for the last ten years. The barrel alone of a rifle was found in a box covered with scrap iron, but that also shows no indication of having been shot off. No clue has been found which would tend to indicate who was the assailant. Linderoth was a drinking man, and, report has it, was cruel to his family. He was never known to have any money, as he spent it as fast as he made it. He carried a small amount of life insurance. His keys were found in the money drawer, but no money was found there or in Linderoth's clothes.

An adjournment of the coroner's jury was taken for one week, in the hope that in the meantime more light might be thrown on the matter.

USED CIPHERS TO MAKE

One and Two-Dollar Bills Resemble Tens and Twenties.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., June 13.—John Nolan, who was arrested in Milwaukee on a charge of counterfeiting is believed to be the man who circulated a large amount of spurious bills among merchants at Stanley and other small towns in Northern Wisconsin.

A description furnished by police of Northern Wisconsin towns is said to tally closely with that of the man under arrest. The manner in which Nolan is alleged to have operated in Milwaukee is identical with that used by the man who did business in this section. On $1 and $2 bills zeros were pasted in such a manner as to make the bills resemble, on casual examination, a $10 or $20.

The people of Stanley were victimized at a time when there was much excitement over the disastrous fire which wiped out most of the town. Many raised bills were taken in during the hurry and bustle and were not discovered at once, though the work is of the crudest.

If Nolan is not held on the charge preferred against him at Milwaukee, it is said he will be brought to Stanley.

TURPENTINE BURNS FATAL.

Iowa Druggist Succumbs to Injuries Received in Explosion.

Allison, Iowa, June 13.—Charles Goettle, a druggist, is dead from the effects of injuries received by the explosion of a bottle of turpentine on June 4.

Mr. Goettle was opening a bottle containing turpentine and allowed a few drops of the fluid to come in contact with the flame of a gasoline stove. There was an explosion and the bottle was shattered and the burning fluid thrown over Goettle's face and hands. The fire spread to his clothing and he undoubtedly would have been burned to death had not a bystander named Leverich torn o fthis coat and wrapped it about the blazing man, thus smothering the flames. Goettle's injuries were at the time said to be serious, but not fatal. He has steadily grown worse, however, and succumbed Monday.

Mr. Goettle was a young man and had been married just four weeks.

EDITOR HANGED IN EFFIGY.

Saloon Element Seeks Revenge for "Lid" Enforcement.

Woodstock, Minn., June 13.—The president of the Reform club, H. W. Haislet, was hanged in effigy to a pole while he was away from home serving on the United States petit jury, and it evidently was done by members of the saloon element to frighten his wife. The figure was cut down by citizens. The Reform club has caused the closing of the saloons on Sunday and has eliminated gambling. Haislet is editor and owner of the Woodstock News.

How to Exercise the Bowels

Your Intestines are lined inside with millions of little suckers, that draw the Nutrition out of food as it passes them.

But, if the food passes too slowly, it decays before it gets through. Then the little suckers draw Poison from it instead of Nutrition.

This Poison makes a Gas that injures your system more than the food should have nourished it.

You see, the food is Nourishment or Poison, just according to how long it stays in transit.

They do not waste any precious fluid of the Bowels, as Cathartics do.

They do not relax the Intestines by greasing them inside like Castor Oil or Glycerine.

They simply stimulate the Bowel Muscles to do their work naturally, comfortably, and nutritiously.

And, the Exercise these Bowel Muscles are thus forced to take, makes them stronger for the future, just as Exercise makes your arm stronger.

The usual remedy for this delayed passage (called Constipation) is to take a big dose of Castor Oil.

This merely make slippery the passage for unloading the current cargo.

It does not help the Cause of delay a trifle.

It does slacken the Bowel-Muscles more than ever, and thus weakens them for their next task.

Another remedy is to take a strong Cathartic, like Salts, Calomel, Jalap, Phosphate of Sodium, Aperient Water, or any of these mixed.

What does the Cathartic do?

It merely flushes-out the Bowels with a waste of Digestive Juice, set flowing into the Intestines through the tiny suckers.

* * *

But, the Digestive Juice we waste in doing this today is needed for tomorrow's natural Digestion. We cannot afford to lose it.

That's why Cascarets are the only safe medicine for the bowels.

Cascarets are as safe to use constantly as they are pleasant to take.

They are purposely put up like candy, so you must eat them slowly and let them go down gradually with the saliva, which is in itself, a fine, natural Digestive.

They are put up purposely in thin, flat, round-cornered Enamel boxes, so they can be carried in a man's vest pocket, or in a woman's purse, all the time, without bulk or trouble.

Price 10c a box at all druggists.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

TOM DUNN'S NEW LIFE

Anniversary Service to Celebrate It to be Held Friday Evening.

In Three Years Has Risen to Superintendency of Mission.

A unique service will be held at the Star of Hope Mission on Friday evening of this week, the occasion being the third anniversary of "Tom" Dunn's changed life. Much interest is being manifested in the service by some of the clergymen of the city and the young people's societies of the different churches have promised to be present and participate in the service.

Thomas L. Dunn, or plain Tom Dunn, as he is familiarly known to the Bowery types, in the lumber camps and among the sailors and to the Christian workers of the city of Duluth, was six months ago placed as superintendent of the Mission, at 622 West Superior street. Its doors are open day and night to those who need help. He has a straight and checkered story to tell of his life from the time of his childhood and young manhood, which was spent in an excellent home in Canada, until three years ago, when coming to Duluth and walking in an intoxicated condition on the Bowery, he met John Callahan, whose place he now holds, and who extended to him the "glad hand and kindly greeting," which spoke to his better nature, and from that date he started in to mend his ways.

TOM DUNN,
Superintendent of Star of Hope of Hope Mission.

The story of his career, from a good home to the gutter, from loving parents to the "far country," where for years he played the part of a prodigal, often thinking of his father's home where there was bread enough and to spare, while he almost perished with isolation, disgrace and a partly paralyzed physical, mental and moral life, stands out as a beacon to those who nightly and daily enter the Star of Hope Mission and listen to his story.

Born of Irish parentage, given a thorough college training, spending four years as a college tutor, was his experience while in his young manhood. Then a brief, successful business career, after that the insidious and insatiable desire for strong drink which came as a result of the social glass which proved his downfall and to which for twenty-five years he became its slave, suffering the remorse of those who find out from bitter experience Solomon's words, "it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Said he in a talk the other day, "God knows and I know, too, what I suffered even from a physical point of view; but when it comes to suffering the experience of a paralyzed will, a smothered conscience, the powers of the mind turning into judgment upon one's self, because my parents, my friends, my early training were crying out hourly in my conscious moments against my course, is the worst experience of hell possible to this existence. Drink fastened its fangs upon me and dragged me into police courts, county jails, forced me to walk along tie-paths, for several times I have walked from Duluth to Minneapolis; hay stacks have been my beds, hoboes my boon companions, the streams my laundries, stolen fruit from farmers' orchards my desert, and the free lunch of the saloon my restaurant. It may seem to you here that this description of my wanderings as a prodigal through eleven states of the union was romantic; but I tell you that it was to me a worse hell than Dante ever pictured. The thought that I and nobody else was to blame for it all, in my judgment, is a mental suffering which exceeds the drunkard's delirium. I have nobody to blame but myself, and while I am conscious of divine forgiveness, I do not think that in this life, I shall ever forgive myself."

Such are some of the expressions which nightly escape the lips of the reformed Tom Dunn as he speaks of the Christ whose love and teachings have proved Him to be the greatest Savior of mankind, whose teachings bade men if they fall and blotted the pages of life's book, to begin again and sin no more.

When John Callahan and his wife were called to New York to engage in rescue work after several years of indefatigable labors in this city, Mr. Dunn, who was then the janitor and a general helper of the work in the mission, was selected as the leader, and the success which has attended his efforts prove that no mistake was made. He is a fine singer, his terse and epigramatic utterances, his warnings to others from his own bitter experiences, his natural and rapid delivery coupled with a good voice when giving to his hearers the inspirational truths of the gospel of Christ, has influenced many scores who have manifested some desire to live soberly, righteously and justly.

He visits the poor, distributes cast-off clothing sent to him from all over the city, visits the sick in many a home unknown to the city pastor, visits the hospitals, preaches and sings to the prisoners in the jail and occasionally occupies the pulpits in Duluth. Very recently on a Sunday morning he was called upon to fill a pulpit in Duluth at a couple of hours notice, and among other things said of his message was one by a leading layman of the church, who said to the pastor, "His message of warning to the young men of the congregation to ring true to things that are moral, and shun the false and abstain from the very appearance of evil, was among the strongest and wisest utterances I ever heard, and I was glad that my son heard it."

The mission is supported by the leading business men of the city and others, and the work done is in the name of Christ, religious or denominational preference not being considered. Its mission is one of general and wise helpfulness. Different churches take one evening a week conducting the services. Mr. Dunn speaks highly of the kindness of the public in Duluth in helping along the good work of the Star of Hope Mission; has a kind and prayerful heart toward those who are trying to do good along the same lines as the institution he leads forward, and particularly those who tried to help him again and again in this city as he says, "To get me on my feet."

He was recently asked as to whether he found much skepticism in the minds of the people regarding the restoration of the erring and those who, through evil habits, become prodigals. Said he: "I find the same skepticism which I myself had about reforming people who had wandered from truth and sobriety and goodness, pervading many minds today. But my own experience is my guide in the mattor now. Were we to listen to the advice of some people with reference to some of our work, we would stop. I think I know types of human nature through and through. There may be some instances where state institutions can do better for some types than they can do for themselves; but there are scores and scores of characters who, through kindness and a little practical help, can be brought to a better life. When I look at the motley crowd that comes into this mission, I am sure of this, that despite their unkempt condition, their look of despair, their developed weaknesses, that they were not always so. Many have come from good homes as testified by this bundle of letters which I hold in my hand, for you see that this is a post-office to many a prodigal boy or a wandering father. So many of the stories to which I listen had their first start in some, perhaps, in the first glass of liquor, or some unpremeditated act, and then the "don't care" spirit came, and they have thrown away their opportunities as a result. You must remember, that more people are rescued in mission work from the evil of their ways—not by money or gifts, but by kindness and encouragement. They are looking for some one to believe in them, to trust them, and the spark of hope begins to burn. Some sweet, sacred song, or littl story have proved to many in this mission a new epoch in their lives."

Just then a respectably dressed man came into the office to speak with Mr. Dunn. After concluding his business and he had left the office, Mr. Dunn turned round and said:

"There is a living illustration of my point. That man came into this hall one evening and listened to what was going on, and repeated it several nights, finally making a start to do metter. He got employment, joined a church in this city, and is playing the man.

"In our work we follow the example of the Master of Men with shipwrecked people. Why should people spend more time in restoring statuary, old frescoes, paintings, tenderly regarding old historic buildings, or dig for buried cities, relics and mummies, spend thousands of dollars in getting a wrecked Mataafa or Crescent City from the rocks of the lake shore and forget the buried manhood and womanhood in many a life? I say nothing against such things. Antiquarians have a place in the world, old fossils have a value, and perhaps many a rich man has a right to get the skins of the animal world and stuff and place them in museums and institutes; but for humanity's sake let us not forget that no saner piece of truth was ever written by pen than that simple Sankey and Moody hymn, which reads:

"Down in the human heart, crushed by the tempter,
Feelings lie buried that grace can restore:
Touched by a loving heart, wakened by kindness,
Chords that were broken will vibrate once more."

"Do you think that American soldiers would leave their wounded comrades on the battlefield if opportunity was theirs to take them to some hospital? I do not care how many may pass over on the other side to leave their wounded countryman who falls among thieves and is wounded and helpless, I am going to play the part of the Samaritan, as others played the Samaritan act over me, by learning of Him who is the Samaritan of the ages. A man or a woman, though they have gone down in the moral scale, are worth as much as any picture, old frescoe, broken piece of statuary or a badly battered steel boat. There is much hope for many who have wandered, and my joy is telling and showing this truth in my own case."

The zeal of Tom Dunn in his work along the lines carried on by the Star of Hope Mission is appreciated, not only by those who give to the work, but also by the fact that his small remuneration by way of salary, which, after paying his board, is given here and there as the case demands, until each Saturday evening finds him "strapped." Praise is also due to Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Sedgwick, who give much time to the gifts given by the people at large for the running of the mission.

REFUSES A NEW TRIAL

Judge Cant Holds Against Railway Company in Everett Case.

Passes His Opinion on Statute Relative to Warning Signals.

Judge W. A. Cant has denied the motion of the Great Northern Railway company for a new trial of the action brought aganst it by William H. Everett of Hibbing.

The case was instituted by Mr. Everett to recover $15,000 damages for personal injuries received in a runaway at Hibbing in January last, his team having been frightened by a car that came up behind them suddenly while the railway employes were making a so-called "flying switch."

The jury returned a verdict for $500 in Mr. Everett's favor on the strength of his claim that while he was driving along the company's tracks the car was shunted on a siding and ran over written by pen than that simple Sankey and Moody hymn, which reads: with no engine was not attached to the car. The distant ringing of the locomotive bell is not considered by the court as compliance with the letter or spirit of the law.

"In my opinion," says Judge Cant, "a short form of stating what should be the rule is as follows:

"If the railway company fails to give the required signals when approaching and passing a crossing, it is negligent. If such negligence causes no injury to any one no cause of action accrues, but if, as a direct result of such negligence, injury results, a cause of action arises and the company is liable for damages. Any one relying on the signals being given has a right to complain if they are not, and if he is injured by reason of such failure he may claim damages."

Judge Cant says this is a critical point in the application of the law previously indicated, that some courts hold no one has a right to rely on such signals being given except those who are about to use a crossing.

"This is too narrow," says Judge Cant. "All are presumed to know the requirements of the law; all know that on a train's approach to the crossing the company is required to give warning.

"In my opinion, then, all travelers on the highway, at least, who may be injured if the railway company fails to perform its duty are within the class of those who have a right to rely on the performance thereof, and if the performance is not had and injury results, they have a right to complain."

The court cites certain limitations to the rule such as trespassers and persons who have no right to the highway.

DINE WITH THE KING

Mr. and Mrs. Longworth the Guests at Ambassador's Dinner.

Dukes and Duchesses and Other Notables Were Present.

London, June 13.—Seldom has the entertainment of the representative of any foreign government attracted the attention of the social, diplomatic and political world that did the dinner and reception given by Ambassador and Mrs. Reid at Dorchester house last evening for Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and at which King Edward, by his presence and attention to President Roosevelt's daughter, marked his esteem for the United States and the chief executive. Park lane, in the vicinity of Dorchester house, drew immense crowds as the carriages of distinguished guests passed through the fashionable thoroughfare to the residence which, since Mr. Reid took it a year ago, has welcomed the most famous Englishmen and visiting Americans and foreigners. In many respects, however, the gathering last evening was distinctive, for besides King Edward, who was attended by Lord Granard, lord in waiting, and Capt. Holdford, equerry, and Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, the company included cabinet ministers, political leaders of both parties, diplomats and persons of prominence in English society. At the dinner there were present to meet the king, beside Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, Miss Reid, the duke of Richmond and Gordon, the duke and duchess of Buccleuth, the duke and duchess of Marlborough, the duke of Roxburghe, Lord and Lady Crewe, Lord Tweedmouth, Countess Grey, wife of the governor general of Canada; Lady Townley, wife of the secretary of the British embassy at Washington; Lord and Lady Lansdowne, Paul Cambon, the French ambassador and dean of the diplomatic corps, with Admiral Fournier of the French navy; the earl and countess of Powis, the earl and countess of Gosford, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, Sir John and Lady Lister-Kaye, the countess of Yarborough, Mrs. Don Cameron, wife of the late secretary of war of the United States; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, J. Ridgley Carter, secretary of the American embassy, and Delancy Jay, private secretary to Ampassador Reid.

Premier Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Sir Edward Grey, foreign secretary, and Richard Burdeon Haldane, secretary of war, had been invited, but were unavoidably prevented attending.

Flowers of every variety, cut and potted, were used in profusion in banking the bases of the massive columns and railings of the grand staircase. Red and pink roses and scarlet ramblers, now so much in vogue in interior decoration, predominated, but were placed tastefully amid bowers of ferns and clusters of marguerites, carnations and other favorites of English horticulturists. Over the main entrance, which overlooks the Stanhope gate of the entrance of Hyde Park from Park lane, a marble eagle looked down upon the guests who, on entering, passed to the head of the stairway, where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Reid and presented in turn to King Edward and Mr. and Mrs. Longworth.

Dinner was served in the main dining hall, which contains many valued paintings. The table, however, stood out even amidst this grandeur with its simple, but artistic arrangement of Alexanser and other varieties of orchids. King Edward took out Mrs. Reid and, at the king's desire, Mrs. Longworth was seated at the other side of him, thus taking precedence of the duchesses. Ambassador Reid escorted the duchess of Marlborough, with the duchess of Buccleuth on his left side. There was less formality than at purely English functions attended by the king, who was technically, for the time, on American soil. During the dinner Herr Gottleib's orchestra played, Gottlieb conducting.

Dinner over, King Edward received the members of the embassy staff, who did not attend the dinner.

For the musical entertainment some hundred guests were invited, among them members of the diplomatic corps, the duke and duchess of Norfolk, the duke and duchess of Devonshire, the duke and duchess of Westminster, the duke and duchess of Wellington, the duke and duchess of Somerset, Consuello duchess of Manchester; the duke of Manchester, the earl of Clarendon, War Secretary Haldane, Lewis Harcourt and Mrs. Harcourt, Sir Charles and Lady Hardinge, Winston Churchill and Lady Chesterfield. The concert was almost as notable as the dinner, the program being provided by Mme. Eames, Mme. Kirby Lunn, Signor Caruso and Signor Gilibert, each of whom sang two songs, and the program concluded with a quartet from Rigoletti.

Supper was served at separate tables under a pavilion erected over the north garden, which was overlooked from a picturesque portico, a very pretty effect being produced. King Edward presided over one of the tables, at which there were fifteen guests. Some very striking costumes were worn by the ladies.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The Eleventh annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Missionary society of the Episcopal church of the district of Duluth was held today at Trinity chapel. The opening session was held this morning at 9 o'clock with a sermon by Bishop Morrison, and the celebration of Holy Communion. The bishop delivered greeting to the members of the auxiliary present, and spoke words of appreciation of their work and the value of their endeavor in the church. A review of the work of the past year was given, and he also spoke of the work that the church hopes to accomplish during the coming year. Four churches have been consecrated during the past year, and several more are on the way toward completion and consecration. In closing, the bishop said:

"I wish to leave with you the impression and belief in the indestructibility of truth. You never will know until the harvest, the great work you are doing. No effort of the sort you are making can fall to the ground, some how, some where, a harvest will come. I want you also to go forth in this missionary work with the feeling of joy and peace which must be the portion of those who serve the Lord."

Following the sermon a business meeting was held with the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. J. D. Morrison presiding. Auxiliaries from St. Paul's Trinity Chapel, St. John's, Holy Apostle's and St. Luke's churches of Duluth, and of Willow River, were represented. A letter of greeting from Miss Julia Emery of New York, general secretary of all the societies, was read by Mrs. Morrison, and following this were heard the minutes of the last annual meeting, and the reports of the secretary and treasurer, and chairmen of committees. Noonday prayers were said at 12 o'clock and adjournment taken until this afternoon.

The president's address was given at the opening of the afternoon meeting. Mrs. Morrison spoke of the work that had been accomplished during the year, and on the whole, the workers were encouraged. Although in some places the zeal of the societies has not been so great in other places, new societies have been organized and interest reawakened. Mrs. Morrison spoke of enrolling and interesting children of the Sunday schools in the missionary work if the society is to continue prosperous, and to this end she suggested that in every branch, a committee be appointed which shall approach the rector and the superintendent of the Sunday school once each month, and ask permission to speak on the subject of missions.

The president also suggested that uniform study should be perused by the branches during the coming year, and also desired that "The Negro Problem" be taken up by the members not only as churchwomen, but as Americans.

An address on "The Women of India" was the closing feature of the afternoon program.

Were Not Married.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Julia Toben and John D. Carey, which was made last evening in the Herald is denied by the young people today. Mr. Carey and Miss Tobin visited in Ironwood at Miss Tobin's home over Sunday and upon their return to the city announced their marriage to their friends. The announcement was given to The Herald by one of the friends who believed the statement. Miss Toben and Mr. Carey announce today that the announcement was a joke.

Wedding.

A pretty wedding took place last evening at the old Masonic Temple hall when Miss Delia Seigel and Benjamin Sher were married. The hall was prettily decorated in ferns and pink carnations, and the wedding music was played by La Brosse's orchestra. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Teplitz. The bridesmaids were Miss Rose Lenty of Fargo, Miss Anna Sher and Miss Mae Seigel. The groom's attendants were Jacob Sher, Frank Sher, and Julius Seigel. The little flower girls were Ruth and Pearl Seigel. The bride wore a pretty gown of white silk trimmed in lace and ribbons, and carried white roses. After the ceremony a wedding supper and dancing party followed. Mr. and Mrs. Sher will be at home in this city.

Picnics.

The children of Trinity Sunday school will picnic tomorrow. The girls of the Sunday school will go to Park Point with Mrs. J. D. Morrison as chaperone and enjoy the day there. The boys will leave Sixth avenue west at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning and go up the river to Fond du Lac. The chaperones will be Rev. A. H. Wurtele and Rev. E. R. Alleeson. A baseball game between Mr. Wurtele's class and Richard Close's class will be the feature of the day, with Mr. Alleeson as umpire. A delightful day is anticipated.

What Retail Markets Offer

Peaches, 35 cents a dozen.
Sour cherries, $2 per case.
Strawberries, 2 qts. for 25 cents.
Watermelons, 50 cents each.
Fresh mackerel, 60 to 75 cents each.
Head lettuce, 10 cents.
Peaches, same near relations of the one Johnny Jones and his sister Sue spied in the orchard are in the market, and considering that they are the first of the season, a respectable amount of pinkness adorns their side cheeks. Watermelons have come down 40 cents, and if anybody wants to "put up" sour cherries, now is the time to do it.

A man contributed a receipt to this column the other day. He said that this thing he called German gravy, when properly made, would, while it was being consumed, make one think he was a millionaire. The process is reasonably simple for such an ecstatic inward feeling only temporarily. He said: "You dice up slices of delicious breakfast bacon and fry it a gentle brown by tossing and tumbling it about. You take some vinegar and dilute it one-half, and get it hot, and then pour your bacon, meat and gravy and all, into the vinegar, and then pour it all over crisp dainty green leaves of head lettuce." Well, ma-y-be. But we think we would rather feel financially embarrassed with crisp tender lettuce leaves tossed untiringly with luscious olive oil, a drop of vinegar and a bit of salt and pepper.

Utilizing Cheaper Cuts of Meats

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Utilizing Cheap Meats.

Now that the price of chops, steaks and roasts make them so nearly prohibitive in many families where they have heretofore been the standbys, the American housewife may be glad to borrow ideas from her foreign born neighbors, who know how to utilize the cheaper cuts of meat in preparing dishes both appetizing and nourishing. And first the marketing! Watch a thrifty German or Italian housewife at the butcher's and the seriousness with which she enters upon the business in hand. Marketing is a weighty matter with her, for is she not the custodian of Hans or Tomasso's hard earned money, and should she not make it go as far as possible? She does not come in airily and say, as does the average American housewife, "Oh, just send me around a niece porterhouse steak for dinner, something for soup and a veal cutlet for breakfast. Charge!" and exit. No, indeed.

The foreign born housewife enters deliberately, seats herself ponderously, takes account of the stock in sight and prepares for an extended seance with the obsequious butcher, who is always obsequious when he realizes he has a customer who knows what she wants and will have it or go elsewhere.

Now one piece of meat after another is brought forth for her inspection, is looked over fore and aft, upside down and down side up, then is promptly retired or laid aside for further consideration. At last the cut suited to her purpose is found. Then she waits to see it cut and weighed, examines the scales herself, orders a piece of suet thrown in or a bunch of mint, with a kidney or bit of liver for the little cat, but not until all are done up and in the basket ready for delivery does she tear herself away for the rest of her marketing. There is no waste in such shopping, no disputing of bills or aftermath of debt.

Pointers in Marketing.

In a large family with normal appetites it is economy to buy in quantity; as, for instance, a forequarter of lamb. With a small family and poor storage facilities purchase a little at a time.

In buying Hamburg steak do not take that already chopped, no matter how attractive it may look with its marbled red and white and parsley garnish. Select your own piece of beef (preferably from the round) and see it chopped by itself, adding, if you desire, a bit of suet or an onion. In this case you generally get better meat, and the suet thrown in.

Where a saddle has been cut from a side of mutton it leaves a leg shorter than an ordinary cut. This is a great bargain. In buying round steak the third cut is best.

The chuck of beef, which is the part of the animal above the prime of ribs and running up into the neck, has many virtues which housekeepers in general know not of. It is the part the butchers themselves patronize in their own families. The first rib, which sells for 8 or 10 cents a pound, is equal to the prime rib in nutritive value, though not quite so tender. This deficiency is easily supplied with twice or longer cooking and attractive flavoring, and the average family will accept this cheaper cut without a murmur.

The chuck roast or tenth rib is often cut in two, the "eye" part making a delicious roast. Chuck steak is excellent. The leg in the hind quarter and the shin in the fore, sell at 5 cents with the bone and 7 without. It is best to buy the meat and tell the butcher to send the bones.

The breast of lamb or veal (a part usually scorned in this country) can be made into delicious roasts by boning. Many of the bones do not need taking out, but become tender in the cooking, when they can be readily slipped out.

For meat to serve cold try a plate piece at 10 cents a pound.

A Good Cold Cut for Tea.

Buy two pounds of plate beef, and cook very slowly in just enough water to cover. When the bones slip out and the meat is tender, season with salt and pepper, and turn with the broth that is left, into a mould or large bowl. Put a plate on top and a weight on the plate, and leave until cold, when the liquid will be found to have jellied. In very hot weather it is sometimes advisable to add a tablespoonful of gelatine that has been soaked twenty minutes in cold water; then dissolved over the teakettle. When hard and firm, slice thin and garnish with a little parsley.

Grilled Breast of Mutton.

Put into a saucepan with just enough hot water to cover and simmer gently until half done. Take out, score, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and rub well over with yolk of egg.

Cover with fine minced herbs and bread crumbs, place on a greased gridiron and broil over a clear fire, until a golden brown, and well cooked through. Measure out a pint of the broth in which the meat was cooked and add to it a minced onion, a little chopped parsley, a tablespoonful of capers and two tablespoonfuls of pickled cucumbers; also chopped. Thicken over the fire with a tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed together, cook five minutes, lay the meat on hot platter and pour the hot gravy over it.

Refreshments for Home Lecture.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

I have had but little experience in home duties, but I am going to give a lecture at my house in aid of the San Francisco sufferers, and wish to serve cake and lemonade. Will that be proper, and what kind of cake shall I serve? There is to be ten cents admission. By letting me know what will be appropriate you will greatly oblige

RICHARD M. LEE.

Cake and lemonade will make the best kind of refreshments on such an occasion, as almost every one likes them and they are easy to serve. I should use little cakes instead of large ones, and here is a very nice and economical way to make them.

In the first place, bake two sheets of sponge cake, using a dripping pan to bake them in. The rule for a light sponge cake calls for four eggs, one cup fine granulated sugar, the grated yellow rind and juice of one lemon, and one scant cup of flour. Separate the whites and yolks of the eggs, then beat the whites and yolks until so stiff they will remain in the bowl even if inverted. Now beat into them one half cup sugar. Beat the yolks until lemon colored and thick, then add to them the rest of the cup of sugar and beat vigorously for five minutes. Add to the beaten yolks the grated rind of the lemon and juice, and then slide the whipped whites into the bowl with the yolks and heat together. This finishes the beating. The next thing is to fold in a scant cup of flour, stirring only enough to mix lightly. Too much stirring would break down the air cells and the cake would be tough and heavy. Now turn into the pan, lined with buttered paper, sprinkle a tablespoonful granulated sugar over the top and bake twenty-five minutes in a moderate oven. Bake two of these cakes, which should be about an inch in thickness. When quite cold, turn out on the moulding board, and with a sharp knife cut into small diamonds and squares. Split each of these through the center and spread one-half of each with soft frosting, jelly, preserve or a chocolate or mocha filling. Put the other half on top and ice top and sides with a delicately colored and flavored icing. Some may be tinted a pale pink with cochineal and flavored with rose, some with pale green colored with spinach juice and flavored with pistache, others yellow colored and flavored with orange. White icing or cocoanut filling may be flavored with vanilla or almond.

Some of these dainty cakes may be left with a plain icing, while on others may be pressed before the icing hardens a candied violet or cherry, a half nut meat or tracings of chocolate pressed on through a paper tube. Tiny comfits are also pretty on these cakes. If preferred, one sheet of the sponge cake may simply have a plain frosting and then be cut in diamonds without any filling.

Lemonade.

For your lemonade select lemons, wash carefully and roll until soft. Allow three lemons to each quart of water and the thinly peeled rind of one, with three or four tablespoonfuls of sugar, according to taste. Having put the rind of the lemon in a cup, cover with a little boiling water and let stand a few moments to get the peculiar zest of the lemon. Extract the juice from the lemons, using a glass lemon squeezer and rejecting pulp and seeds. Have ready freshly boiling water, pour over the lemons, add the strained water from the shredded yellow peel, cover and leave to cool. After it is cold, set on the ice until ready to serve. In serving add a little cracked ice and a strawberry or slice of lemon to each glass.

LOVE IN A MOTOR CAR

By Ralph Henry Barbour.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Hubbard shifted to the low speed and drew up in front of the hotel steps. There was a livery outfit there already, but Hubbard shouted it out of the way and took his place at the entrance. Hubbard's sole companion, Billy Stone, climbed out of the car carefully and sprang up the steps.

As Hubbard calmly lighted a cigarette a very charming voice rippled from the steps. He glanced around, prepared, in fact rather anxious, to have his senses ravished by visions of feminine loveliness, and he was not disappointed. A girl all in white came down the steps. At the lowest step she turned and Hubbard saw that she was accompanied by two older ladies.

"You and auntie had better sit back, Mrs. Perry," directed the girl in a rippling voice. "I'm going to get in front."

Hubbard stared. Around to the back went the trio. Bill Stone had left the door open and in climbed the stoutest of the three. It speaks well for Hubbard's presence of mind that he was out on the ground like a shot and was helping the second of the elderly pair into the car before the exhaust had chugged thrice.

"Where to, please, Miss?" asked Hubbard, trying to look as much like a chauffeur as possible.

"Didn't they tell you at the stable?" she asked, settling herself in the front seat by his side. "We want to go over to Magnolia to the Oceanview."

"I thought it was Magnolia," he said promptly, as the car shot forward, missed the telegraph pole by three inches and shot down the hill, "but I like to be sure, you know."

He smiled at thought of Billy's perplexity when that youth found his vehicle gone. It was rather a shabby trick, Hubbard acknowledged, inviting a chap out to ride and then leaving him marooned on the plazza of a summer hotel at the mercies of a horde of cannibalistic summer girls. Well, Billy would be pained and grieved, but—Hubbard had his excuse with him. He shot a side glance at the excuse and found it all that could be desired. Perhaps the girl had seen his smile and misunderstood the cause of it. At all events, she said suddenly with some dignity:

"You needn't think I'm frightened. I've gone twice as fast as this old car ever could go, but I don't like hills."

"Well, for a livery car, miss, this one can hike along pretty smartly," he said, deferentially. "And when we get over on the Magnolia road I'll let her out, if you like."

"Thank you," she answered indifferently, wondering the while why she should want to make a good impression on this chauffeur, and feeling rather contemptible because she did. "I should like to see what it can do."

Really he didn't look the least bit in the world like a hired motor car man, she thought. And he had three awfully interesting looking rings on his sunburned hands. Then, too, he was frightfully handsome, with stunning features and steely eyes and an expression that suggested calm fearlessness, capability and—yes, positively, audacity. He was just the sort of man, she reflected with a pleasurable thrill of excitement, that wouldn't hesitate a minute to—well, to do cheeky things. He swung around in front of a gasoline runabout, turned and surprised her gaze fixed speculatingly on him.

She dropped her eyes, felt a blush creeping into her cheeks and broke into rather incoherent questions as to the process of drying and salting fish. He didn't know a great deal about it himself, but what he told her was undeniably interesting even if it sometimes ran wide of the facts. By the time they were rumbling through Gloucester each was very much interested in the other.

"Why don't you speed a little here?" she asked, finally.

"Mercy for the ladies behind," he answered smilingly. "If they hadn't been along, now—" He looked the rest.

"I wonder," she said, musingly, "if some time—Oh, I know! I'll get Mr. Stone to come and then you can go as fast as you like! Will you, just—just let her sizzle?"

So the girl beside him, then, was Miss Carson, of whom he had heard Billy speak so often, and he had stolen her away from under Billy's very eyes.

At the Oceanview, to the crowded veranda of which fashionable hostelry he swung up dashingly at break-neck speed, the ladies alighted and he was instructed to wait for them while they made a call. He trundled over to the shade, lighted a cigarette and stretched his legs.

An hour latter—when they had threaded their way skilfully down the drive—she asked:

"Have you been doing this long?"

"Doing—?"

"Running automobiles," she explained.

"Oh, yes, I have—about three years."

"Are you—are you making a profession of it?"

"Well, to an extent, yes," he replied; at least that was about his mother's idea of it, he reflected amusedly.

She asked questions about the machine, and Hubbard did his best to be interesting, and was so successful that when they were once more inhaling the aroma of drying fish she was almost sorry.

"I wish," he ventured when the end was in sight, "I wish you would allow me to take you out again before long. You see, there's lots worth seeing."

She turned and held a hurried consultation with the others. Then, "could you come for us tomorrow afternoon?" she asked.

"Yes, miss. At what time?"

She agreed to say 2.

Hubbard was relieved to find that Stone was not in sight about the hotel when they drew up if only Billy could be kept out of the way!

The next afternoon the big blue Farwell chugged up to the Harborside.

Hubbard waited ten minutes, and then, just as he had decided to send word to the ladies, his heart gave a bound. Through the front door stepped the girl. It was all right! He leaped out of the car, raised his cap and—found himself staring at Billy Stone.

There he stood, smiling at the car and pulling the end of his ridiculous brown mustache. Hubbard groaned. But—well, he would try to carry it out as best he might. He tried to get Billy's eye, but Billy wouldn't look. What did it mean?

"The others aren't coming today," said Miss Carson, "and so you can drive it as fast as you like. Can't he, Billy?"

"Certainly," answered Billy, but without enthusiasm. Hubbard ground his teeth over that "Billy," it sounded so very chummy! He bowed and held out his hand to help her into the front seat, but she drew back, stifling a little smile, and:

"I shall sit back today," she said with dignity. "Come on, Billy."

Well, they went to Rockport and they came back again. It was a very uninteresting ride.

When they rolled into Gloucester Miss Carson asked him to stop at one of the stores for a moment. She alighted, and Billy announced his intention of seeking a book store and buying some magazines. Hubbard felt instinctively that he had gone for candy. He waited glumly. But almost instantly Miss Carson returned.

"They haven't got what I want," she said despairingly.

"If you will get in," said Hubbard, "I will take you to another store around the corner. They have everything there."

"But Mr. Stone."

"We'll come back for him."

"We-ll, all right," she consented.

As they passed the next corner there was a hall and Hubbard had a fleeting glimpse of Billy Stone, his arms piled high with packages.

"Isn't the store a long way off?" she inquired uneasily, when they had left the main street and were speeding up a hill.

"Some little distance," answered Hubbard.

"Where are we going, please?" she asked presently, with cold dignity.

"Anisquam. It's about three miles over there. It's very interesting, Miss Carson."

"Mr. Hubbard!"

"Yes?" But he didn't look around.

"I want you to turn instantly and go back to Gloucester!"

He shook his head.

"Not until you've promised to go out riding with me the day after tomorrow and every second day thereafter during your stay here and in the mountains."

"What? Are you crazy?"

"No, Miss Carson, not at all."

"Then what do you mean," she demanded, "by asking me such a thing? Take me home at once. If you don't I shall call for help."

Hubbard stirred uneasily. She was taking it much worse than he had expected her to. Something was wrong somewhere.

"The idea!" she continued scathingly. "I shall report you to your employer!"

He turned and looked at her in bewilderment.

"My employer?"

"Certainly. I shall tell them at the stable how you have forcibly compelled me to listen to your insults and—"

"I beg your pardon, but hasn't Billy told you?"

"Billy? Mr. Stone? Told me what?" she asked more quietly, somewhat impressed by his expression and manner.

"Why, told you— Look here, won't you please tell me what he has told you?"

"About what?"

"About me."

"He has told me nothing about you except that your name is Hubbard and that—"

"Well?" he asked grimly, as she faltered.

"That you are a very good chauffeur, and popular on account of your good looks," she said defiantly, "but that you were somewhat of a—of a masher."

"Oh, Billy said that, did he? Good for Billy!" He slowed down. They were running along under the Willows and she knew from the lengthened shadows that it was growing awfully late.

"Miss Carson, I'm going to make a clean breast of it and throw myself on your mercy," he said. And he did so, to her mingled confusion and mirth. When he had finished—

"And Billy lied, didn't he?" she asked, thoughtfully.

"Well, Billy wasn't taking any chances."

"What do you mean?" she asked, innocently.

"I mean that Billy didn't want anyone to help him at his job."

"Job? What job?"

"Admiring you, Miss Carson."

"Oh! I—now can't we turn back?"

"Of course, I have your promise?"

"Don't be foolish!"

"But have I?"

"Mr. Hubbard, it is very, very late."

"And it's getting later."

"You're awfully mean."

"And I'm getting meaner." He turned and surprised a smile on her lips.

"You're awfully silly—and stubborn," she laughed.

"Well, I'm stubborn, I'll grant you. And unless you want to see Anisquam from top to bottom, and portions of Bay View, and Lanesville, and—"

"Oh, stop, please! I—I promise!"

"Thank you," he said earnestly. His right hand swooped down on one of hers and squeezed it ecstatically.

"There!" she said to herself, with a gasp, as they swung around and started homeward in the face of a glorious sunset, "I knew all along he was just that sort!"

But she didn't seem to care.

BIG CLASS GRADUATED

Many Eighth Grade Pupils Get Diplomas at Cathedral School.

Dramatic Episode in Life of Joan of Arc Given.

The graduating exercises of the eighth grade of the Cathedral school took place last evening in the auditorium of the institution, and before a large crowd of the relatives and friends of the happy pupils.

The feature of the entertainment was a dramatic episode in the career of that famous woman of history, Joan of Arc, in seven scenes. This bit of the drama was very finely done by the pupils and they were rewarded with an avalanche of applause at its conclusion.

"The Dignity of Labor" is the title of a well conceived and forcefully read essay by Charles Young. His paper would have done credit to a person of more mature age. Richard Carroll also contributed an excellent essay on "The Passing of the American Indian."

Others who appeared in the dramatic sketch and gave recitations were Mary Maloney, who essayed the role of Joan; Charles Kelly, Josephine Clara Dillon, Ambrose Fogarty, Charles Thomas, Edward Twohy, Margaret Dodd, Willard Campbell, Victor Windle, Meinard McDonnell, Gertrude Mackey, Harold Kelly, Annie Lydon, Magdalene Rogers, Loretta Reilly, M. O'Donnell, Anna Risatti, A. McLaughlin, Anna Furlong, John McGreevy, Fern Reilly and Elizabeth Monahan.

Rose Sullivan gave the valedictory address and Rose Myrtle Casey responded for the seventh grade.

Rev. J. J. O'Mahoney delivered the principal address of the evening. He paid a glowing tribute to the class and to the head of the Cathedral school, Sister Jeremia. Very Rev. Monsignor Buh of Hibbing also gave a short talk to the graduates and presented the diplomas.

AN ITALIAN IS FATALLY STABBED

Abel Sorpori Killed by Pietro Canalli Near Monroe Mine.

Chisholm, Minn., June 13.—A stabbing affray which resulted fatally took place on the road near the Monroe location. The principals are both Italians, the aggressor being Pietro Canalli, while Abel Sorpori is the victim. Though onlookers claim the men were not under the influence of liquor, it is conceded that they imbibed sufficient to make at least one of them—Canalli—quarrelsome. At all events they began with argument, which gradually progressed until foul imprecations were exchanged.

Then, suddenly, Canalli white with rage, whipped from his hip pocket a butcher knife and plunged it into Sorpori's abdomen. The man fell with an agonizing scream, and again Canalli plunged the keen blade into his vitals.

It all happened so quickly that nobody made an attempt to capture the murderer, who coolly walked away, hissing through his clenched teeth a Neapolitan oath at the prostrate man. Entering his shack nearby, he armed himself with a shot gun and a stiletto, and started down the track towards Hibbing.

Meanwhile Dr. Smith had been summoned. He found two cuts, one three and one seven inches long, the latter trust having penetrated the liver. He pronounced the wounds to be mortal, and Sorpori died a few hours later. Canalli has not been captured.

HAIL AND WIND.

A Terrific Storm Causes Great Havoc at Havre, Mont.

Havre, Mont., June 13.—At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon a heavy wind storm broke here, causing considerable damage and injuring three persons. The wind was accompanied by heavy rain and hail, the hail stones being of enormous size. Almost every window in town was broken, the Great Northern shops and roundhouse especially suffering in this respect. Engines standing outside the roundhouse had their headlights broken by the hail. Eight coaches were unroofed and a string of cars was blown off a siding. The roof of the two story brick building occupied by the Havre Commercial company was blown away, and one side of the building caved in. The persons injured were on the streets and were hit by flying missles. Their names are not yet obtainable, nor the extent of their injuries. It is reported here that severe damage was done in the surrounding country, but no difinite news yet has been received.

GREATER PITTSBURG

Favored by Pittsburg But Is Opposed by Allegheny.

Pittsburg, June 12.—While the city of Pittsburg returned a majority of over 25,000 yesterday in favor of consolidation with Allegheny into a Greater Pittsburg, Allegheny opposed the movement and rejected the proposition with a majority of about 5,600. Not one of the wards in the city of Allegheny returned a majority in favor of the movement, while almost every ward in Pittsburg favored it. This was a special election on the consolidation act authorized by the legislature and it was hoped would settle for all time the question that had been agitated in both cities. While a majority is returned in favor of consolidation, however, the election yesterday is not the end. Allegheny having expressed its objection to consolidation, the matter will now be taken up to the supreme court to test the constitutionality of the law.

DEMANDS AN ACCOUNTING

John McAlpine Sues John Mullen for $150,000.

Judge Dibell began yesterday the trial of the $150,000 damage action brought by John McAlpine against John Millen, a case in which Mr. McAlpine claims that Mr. Millen acquired more than his share of the proceeds of a large lumber deal.

It is claimed that Mr. McAlpine and Mr. Millen bought 40,000,000 feet of standing pine from Richardson & Avery, in August, 1902, for which they paid $240,000. Half of the timber was sold and the remainder was sawed into lumber under Mr. Millen's charge. Mr. McAlpine claims that by some manipulation of the figures and records Mr. Millen got $150,000 more than he was entitled to and he asks an accounting.

Both sides have a large number of witnesses and it is expected that the trial will last several days.

MINER ASKS DAMAGES.

Niko Wiita Claims Interstate Iron Company Was Negligent.

Niko Wiita has instituted a $50,000 damage case against the Interstate Iron company in the United States circuit court, alleging personal injuries received while in the company's employ and through its negligence.

Wiita claims that Oct. 12 last he had put in two dynamite charges for blasting in an underground mine. He claims that only one of the charges exploded, but that owing to the smoky condition of the drift and lack of fresh air, he was not able to determine the condition of the other charge. Wiika alleges that after waiting a reasonable length of time he started to investigate, when the second charge exploded and he was severely injured about the face and body.

The damage case of G. W. Decker against the Virginia Lumber company was dismissed in the federal court yesterday. The action was brought to recover judgment for $2,293. It was filed last March.

CANDIDATES

For Governor of Michigan Nominated at New Primary Election.

Detroit, June 13.—Governor Frederick Warner, Republican, was renominated yesterday without opposition at the first general primary election in this state. Patrick H. Kelly of Detroit, was nominated without opposition for lieutenant governor. The Democrats nominated Woodbridge N. Ferris of Big Rapids for governor and C. H. Kimmerle of Cassopolis, for lieutenant governor.

Under the primary election law enacted by the last legislature, the remaining candidates on the state ticket will be nominated at party conventions.

FOUR BOYS BURN TO DEATH IN FIRE.

Ottawa, Ont., June 13.—A shocking tragedy has just occurred at Ialo, a town ninety-four miles from Ottawa. Four sons of Daniel Dickson were burned to death by a fire, which at midnight destroyed their home. The dead are:

DANIEL DICKSON, aged 12.
CARROLL DICKSON, aged 9.
WILLIAM DICKSON, aged 5.
JAMES DICKSON, aged 2.

Mrs. Dickson, mother of the victims, and Irene, her only daugher, aged 4, had narrow escapes.

Two Men Are Released.

John Loytty and John Johnson have been released from the county jail, the cases against them having been dismissed by the county attorney. Loytty was indicted for assault in the second degree, but the evidence against him was not regarded as sufficient to warrant a trial. Loytty was implicated in a fight in a saloon on Lake avenue with Ed Hill and was convicted on an assault charge and sentenced to the state reformatory. John Johnson was brought down from Ely on a grand larceny charge. He was released because of insufficient evidence.

GERMANS WILL COLONIZE HERE

Kaiser's Representative Looking Over Northern Wisconsin Lands.

Nickola Kaumnans, imperial agricultural attache of the German empire, has been at the Head of the Lakes during the past two days and is looking over the cut-over timber lands in Northern Wisconsin to the end of locating a site for a colony of German agriculturists.

Herr Kaumanns was sent to the United States by Kaiser Wilhelm, who has given his hearty support to the scheme of forming a colony of German farmers in this country. He will look over the lands during the netx fews days and it is expected that he will give a favorable report to the emperor, as he has already announced himself as well pleased with the country.

A colonization company with a capital of $10,000,000 is said to be behind the plan to transplant the Germans, and it is understood that American capital is heavily interested in the project.

Mr. Kaumanns is looking over the lands in company with a number of representative men of Northern Wisconsin.

TOWNSEND A SUICIDE.

Iowa City, Iowa, June 13.—Bert Townsend, formerly city editor of the Iowa City Republican, and late press agent of the Parker Amusement company, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at the home of his uncle, Dr. J. C. Shrader, by shooting himself through the temple. Mr. Townsend was unmarried. He was widely known throughout the state. It is thought he was temporarily insane through ill health.

PLUM PIT KILLS FARMER.

Herman Lempke of Minnesota Dies in a La Crosse Hospital.

La Crosse, Wis., June 13.—While eating plum preserve, Herman Lempke, a prosperous Minnesota farmer, who resided on South Ride, swallowed a plum pit, resulting in his death in a hospital in this city. The pit worked into his lungs and all efforts to save his life failed. He was 35.

DIVORCED WIFE AIDS MAN AGAINST "NO. 2."

New York, June 13.—The curious situation of a man's first wife, who had obtained a decree of absolute divorce, coming to his aid and making affidavit in his behalf, in opposition to the second wife's application for alimony and counsel fee in a suit for separation, was presented in the supreme court when Justice Giegerich heard argument on the alimony motion brought in behalf of Mrs. Matilda von Horn against her husband, George von Horn.

George von Horn is credited with being worth nearly $500,000. He is also said to have been a friend of the German emperor, formerly a colonel in the German army and a member of the advisory council.

In her affidavit, which was submitted to Justice Giegerich today, the first Mrs. von Horn says:

"The awful charges made against the defendant by the plaintiff are false and untrue. The defendant is of noble character and not capable of doing the things charged against him. The defendant is almost without means. He is indebted to me in the sum of $1,800."

Mrs. von Horn declares on Dec. 25 last her husband attacked her with a razor in their rooms in the Hotel Severance, driving her from the apartment; and that on May 25 of this year he struck her in the face and used abusive epithets toward her.

FIRE AT VIRGINIA.

Virginia, Minn., June 13.—Fire of unknown origin yesterday morning destroyed the large warehouse and barn of the Fitger Brewing company, Duluth. Three large and handsome draft horses were burned to death and one that was rescued alive was so badly burned that it had to be shot. The loss is about $10,000, partially covered by insurance.

THE CATHOLIC MISSIONARIES

Hold Third Conference and Discuss Successes in the Field.

Washington, June 13.—At the session of the third Catholic missionary conference yesterday, a number of papers bearing on the successes attained in the missionary field were read. Rev. Antonio Subenfoercher's topic was "A Missionary in Parish Work." For years he was parish priest at Kenton, Ohio, and during the years of his ministry he has made a large number of converts. Regarding the difficulties encountered by him in his work he said that "Many years ago undue national feeling menaced our unity, but the act, prudence and time removed this problem. The other difficulties were cleared away with equal success. Nothing helped more to stem the unfortunate drink habit than the example of a total abstainence priest, and the organization of temperance societies for young as well as for the old."

Considerable discussion followed concerning the question as to how far a pastor is bound in justice toward the non-Catholics of his parish, which developed much difference of opinion among the delegates. Father McCarthy, thought that a good pastor, like St. Paul was a "Debtor to all."

Fathers Osmund and Sutten detailed their experiences in Alabama, the former saying that "Descendants of Catholic immigrants in many places have lost the faith of their fathers." The districts in which he labored, he said, were almost entirely non-Catholics.

Father Bresnahan said that Florida was a good field, but it needed more workers, while Father Waters of Virginia, reported that he found the people everywhere ready to listen and eager to learn.

Judge Robinson spoke concerning the New Englander, and said that a proper presentation of Catholic truth would find an attentive ear in that section.

BURSTS ARTERY WHILE WORKING AT THE FORGE.

Bemidji, Minn., June 13.—Last Saturday morning Andrew Linderof, a blacksmith of Warren, was found lying in a pool of blood in his blacksmith shop.

The persons who found the man in this condition became suspicious that Linderof had been the victim of foul play, but this opinion was dispelled after Coroner D. Melby had made his examination and discovered that loss of life was due to the bursting of an artery.

The supposition is that Linderof overtaxed himself in some way.

KILLED BY FLYING STONE.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, June 13.—Ed Oakes, foreman at the Barber asphalt plant here, was instantly killed at noon. Oakes was in the engine room, and while going to another part of the building to adjust a belt passed an open window, and was struck squarely in the forehead by a small piece of rock that was thrown by a blast that had been set off a moment before. The stone was so deeply imbedded in his forehead that the physician's probe failed to locate the missile. Oakes was a young man and unmarried.

THE CLASS PLAY AT WISCONSIN U

Proceeds for Loan Fund for Self-Supporting Students.

Madison, Wis., June 13.—The senior class of the university of Wisconsin has decided to give the proceeds of the class play, which is always one of the most important features of the commencement week program, to the loan fund maintained to help self-supporting students attending the university. Students who are working their way through college may borrow from this loan fund money necessary to pay their expenses until they have an opportunity to earn the amount borrowed and repay it to the loan fund. Sheridan's "School for Scandal" has been selected for the class play, which will be given in the opera house on class day, June 18. The production promises to be the most elaborate in costume and staging ever attempted for a class play. The play is under the direction of Walton H. Pyre, '99, who has been on the professional stage for some years, and was a member of Ada Rehan's company when she last produced this comedy. In order to accommodate the many alumni who will attend commencement, the management has arranged to reserve seats by mail.

LAWYER PATRICK GETS A STAY UNTIL OCTOBER.

Canton, Ohio, June 13.—Application was made to Justice Day of the United States supremo court yesterday afternoon by Attorney Lindsay, for a writ of appeal, and consequently a stay of execution in behalf of Lawyer Albert T. Patrick of New York. Justice Day, after hearing the reasons of Patrick's counsel, decided the case appealable and granted a writ to that effect. It will be heard by the supreme court in October. The action was brought before Justice Day because Chief Justice Fuller and other members of the supreme court are wholly scattered on their vacation trips and it was most convenient to reach him.

S. S. S. FOR THE BLOOD

The demand for S. S. S. has steadily increased since it was first placed on the market until it is now recognized as the greatest of all blood purifiers, It has won its way to success because IT CURES DISEASE, and there are few homes where "S. S. S. for the blood" is not a household saying. As the blood is the very life of the body, nourishing and supplying strength to every part, disease in some form is sure to follow when it becomes contaminated. Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Boils, Pimples and the various skin affections are due to an over-acid and impure blood-supply. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Chronic Sores and Ulcers, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood diseases and will continue to grow worse and more dangerous as long as the impurities and poisons which produce them remain in the blood. In all blood disorders S. S. S. has proven itself a perfect remedy, and well earned the right to be called the greatest of all blood purifiers. It goes down into the circulation and forces out all poisons, impurities, humors, and unhealthy matter, and makes this life-stream rich, pure and health-sustaining. S. S. S. reaches inherited blood taints and so enriches the circulation that diseases of years standing are permanently cured. It contains no harmful minerals and is nature's real blood purifier. Book on the blood and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

A telegram from Boston says:

The statement of the North Butte company as filed in Montana for the year ending June 1, 1906, settles the disputed question of the company's cost per pound of copper. This cost, excluding the $1,164,000 of improvements charged to operating expenses, was as follows: Cost of mining, $1,160,766; freight, $52,017; cost of reduction, $1,255,753; total, $2,468,536.

"As the recently issued annual report of the North Butte company for the year ended March 31, placed the output of the company at 30,954,788 pounds, for the year ended June 1, the output must easily have been 32,000,000 pounds as it has not been until recently that the company has shown its largest production. The above cost divided by 32,000,000 pounds gives a cost per pound of copper of 7.7 cents, which figure, we understand, has been reduced to slightly over 7 cents per pound. The company's ores averaged $21.11 per ton, by far the richest ore mined in the Butte camps."

UNEXPECTED SNAG STRUCK

Type of Canal May Have to be Settled This Session.

Washington, June 13.—An unexpected snag was struck today in the movement for an early adjournment, and it is possible that the type of the Panama canal must be settled before congress closes its business. Secretary Taft was in conference with Senator Cannon and Chairman Hepburn of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce which handles the canal legislation, and there is a disposition to settle the type of canal before the adjournment of congress. Secretary Taft is in earnest in his efforts to have this matter settled before work proceeds much further. It is possible that when the appropriation of $25,000,000 for continuing the work on the canal is reached that an amendment for an 85-foot lock canal may be made, which would mean a determination of the type before this great supply measure could become a law.

SUPERSTITIOUS GUEST.

Kansas City Star: "There's the most superstitious man I have ever known," said W. E. Gardner, clerk at the Coates house, this morning as a guest left the lobby.

"He won't even call us up on the 'phone because our number is 3559, and three and five are eight and five are thirteen. He refused the only room we had one convention week because its number was 319, and those figures added up make thirteen, and yesterday he nearly went off his head when he found that he had written his name on the thirteenth page."

A. L. COLE IS HAPPY MAN

Nomination Came With Suddenness That Quite Overwhelmed Him.

Has Not Been Well—Makes Brief Statement.

It is needless to say that A. L. Cole, his brother, Dr. A. B. Cole of Fergus Falls, and all of the Cole supporters are jubilant. It is also useles to attempt to hide that they are surprised at the suddenness of the event. A Duluth man who was with Cole when the word came of the nomination says that Mr. Cole almost collapsed. He has been ill for some days and has kept himself up by sheer force of will, his brother, Dr. Cole, keeping guard over him and compelling him to take some rest.

Mr. Cole was seen for a few moments this afternoon by The Herald. He has been lying on his bed at the Spalding, since the news had been conveyed to him, and had received only a few of his closest political allies, talking to them from a reclining position, while trying to recover his strength for the trying ordeal of the afternoon.

"I don't want to say anything for publication just at present," he informed the reporter. "I would much prefer to wait for a little and write out a statement which you can use if you care to. This will prevent misunderstangings arising.

"I have been sick for several days and if it had not been for this canvas, I would have been in bed. But my nerves are all right yet, and I am 'all in' as people might suspect.

"But I would much rather not talk about political matters yet, until I have had time to get my bearings and prepare something in writing."

Mr. Cole looked pale and weak from his illness, but his eye was bright, and he had a contented smile as if the result of the convention had not been displeasing to him.

He spent a few moments in his parlor shaking hands with the crowd of visitors waiting to see him and congratulate him, and then returned to the Armory.

COST IS HIGH

Of Handling the Investments of Life Insurance Companies.

Milwaukee, June 13.—The cost of handling the investments of the Union Central Life Insurance company was the basis of the examination of the Wisconsin legislative committee today. According to Mr. Marshall's testimony it cost the Union Central, $226,783.23 to carry its investments last year.

Mr. Marshall said it was undoubtedly a fact that life insurance expense loanings, were not conducted on a very scientific basis in this country. The companies, Mr. Marshall said, had recognized this fact and had attempted to partially remedy the situation by returning higher dividends on the high premium policies. The total taxes of the Union Central Life Insurance company are $146,000.

ORIGIN OF WORD BOSS.

London Spectator: Is the origin of the word "boss," used in the sense of a master, definitely settled? In South Africa the term "baas" is commonly supposed to be the same, and the Hottentots call the head of the family "ou bass," or old boss, and the eldest son is the "yong bass." "Ou bass," however, is a term of respect, and may be used in addressing a beardless youngster who is in a position of authority, and there are grounds for suspicion that the words have been taken over by the Dutch from an original native source.

It is significant that Cicero ("De Natura Deorum") states that the god Vulcan was called by the Egyptians "Obas," who was the son of Ceilum, "Skelm," in Cape language, is the same as Burns's skellum ("Tam o' Shanter"), and indicates an unruly person—Bacchus and his various synonyms, who in a sense was the father of all. It seems extravagantly far fetched to trace back the Hottentot's "ou baas" to the Egyptian "Obas," but I have so frequently come across classical customs among the natives of South Africa that the connection does not seem improbable.

I have seen the wailing for the dead Adonis among the Basutos performed as ceremoniously as among the ancient Greeks, while some of the folklore tales of this nation, given by Cassalis, can be paralleled, incident for incident, with some of the Greek tales, which in many instances were borrowed from the Egyptians. I should explain that I am thinking of the god Obas (Vulcan), not as the blacksmith of later mythology, but as the very essence of supreme being. We learn that this was the sense in which he was once thought of from the inscription on the portal of the temple of Heliopolis.

W. A. NOLAN GETS BUSY

Grand Meadow Man Actively After Lieutenant Governorship.

Nomination of Jacobson Brings Him Actively Into Field.

Immediately after adjournment of the convention, the canvass for the nomination for lieutenant governor began with a rush. W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow, who has been ready at any time to go after the nomination if things shaped themselves so as to admit it, jumped into the game aggressively. The nomination of A. L. Cole, a Sixth district man, eliminated any possibility of C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center getting the plum, for he is from the same district.

Nolan was making his strong argument that the First district is entitled to it, and that the second place should go to the Southern part of the state because the first place had gone to the Northern.

Senator Eberhardt of Mankato is a candidate, and is from the Southern part of the state, and because of his nationality has been strongly supported for the place. This afternoon, however, some of the Jacobson men were displaying considerable anger toward his delegation because Blue Earth county was the one that climbed on the Cole band wagon after Hennepin county started the movement.

When the convention convened again at 3 o'clock it looked like a fight between Nolan and Eberhardt, with the possibility that some of the unsuccessful candidates for governor might be brought out.

ENGINES LIKE WOMEN.

New York Sun: "Now, it's funny, ain't it, that engines have little twists 'n' turns in their behavin' same as human bein's," said the fat engineer. There was the 135 and 136.

"They were just as much alike as two peas in a pod when they first came from the locomotive works 'n' were put in commission. I had the 136 and Bill Sykes ran the 135. 'Twa'n't very long before I began to notice a spirit of rivalry between 'em, as it were, just as if they were a couple of cooks after the attentions of the cop on the block.

"An' they did fine work, too. If Bill Sykes made a particularly fine run with the 135, then I'd come along 'n' go him a little better with my engine.

"I got to know the 136 just like a book 'n' was onto her every whim 'n' curve. One day there came orders for Bill Syke's enjine to go in the shop for extensive repairs. It seemed to kinder affect the 136 first along 'n' she'd go over the road as if she missed a friend, but after a week or two she was just as good as ever 'n' doin' great work.

"One fine day the 135 came out of the repair resplendent in a new coat of paint 'n' lookin' fine 'n' dandy. She'd been completely overhauled 'n' the master mechanic had determined to experiment in the new style of stack 'n' extension front boiler which were just becomin' fashionable on the roads them days. So he had equipped the 135 with the new make-up to see how it would go. She certainly did look like available cash when she came down the pike her first trip out from the shop.

"The new fangled apparatus seemed to put a haughty spirit into her, too, 'n' as she flirted past her sister, the 136, she shot the steam out of her cylinder cocks as if to say, 'Well, I guess I got you backed off the boards now, sure pop.' I just mused 'n' said to myself, 'Pride goeth before a fall.'

"I'd had experience enough with enjines to know that they were a good deal like a women 'n' the eqippin' of the 135 with the up-to-date finery would make my engine as sulky as a women whose neighbor has a princess dress 'n' she hasn't. An' it sure enough did raise Old Ned with the 136.

"She'd work all right when I'd first start on a trip with her, but if we'd chance to meet 'n' pass the 135 on the way it was all off with my old girl for the rest of that run. The enjine despatcher came back on me about the 135 goin' off her feed 'n' not doin' her usual good work.

"'Now,' I says to him, 'you needn't jump all over me about it. That enjine is just eatin' her flues out with jealousy. Look how that 135 is decked out in a straight front 'n' the 136 still wearin' the old style diamond stock basque.'

"But he just gave me the cold stare 'n' told me to beat it with my sentiment 'n' deliver the merchandise with the 136 or mebbe I would like to go back firin' 'n' complete my primary education on a locomotive.

"On top of this foolish rumors were bein' circulated among the men sayin' I was jealous 'n' was layin' down on me job, bein' sore because they wouldn't fix up my enjine. However that may be there wasn't much improvement in the cuttin' up of the 136. It was gettin' so that when the 135 would pass the 136 my enjine would slip 'n' slide her wheels 'n' the very steam in her pipes would hiss.

"One slippery mornin' I was just leavin' the roundhouse with my sulky machine 'n' makin' for the turntable when I saw the swell apparin' 135 glidin' off the table to come into the house. I reached for the throttle to shut off my enjine 'n' give 'em the right of way when bango! kabust! went something on top of the boiler 'n' in an instant my side of the cab was filled with steam.

"I was so startled by the sudden explosion, which on investigation proved to be caused by the breakin' of the water glass on the injector, that I pulled the throttle the wrong way 'n' under a full head of steam like some wild animal leapin' on its prey, we jumped toward our spick 'n' span rival. Smash! we came together head-on 'n' when the wreckers pulled the engines apart the stylish headpiece of the 135 was all knocked to smithereens 'n' the boiler head 'n' stack of my enjine were also knocked off.

"When both engines came out of the shop they each had been equipped with the up to date front piece 'n' there was no further trouble with the 136. Some evil minded persons declared that I broke the water-glass at the critical moment just on purpose so's I could ram the 135 without suspicion restin' on me, but the future good performance of the 136 after the alterations were made only goes to bear out my theory that in the heat of her passion against her rival the water glass bursted, just as a human bein' in anger will burst a blood vessel.

"Now, don't it?"

COMMERCIAL POKER.

Philadelphia Press: I'm out of a job. And the strange part of it is that I wasn't discharged, or even dismissed, and I didn't resign. In fact, there's no word to express what happened, unless you say I was promoted. But how can a man be promoted and be out of a job at the same time? I'll tell you.

I met Jack Sharer on the street yesterday, and that's what caused all the trouble. We left college the same year, Jack and I. He has succeeded; I have not.

"Jack," I said, after we had asked each other about our respective relatives, "you look as if you were making a mint of money."

"Well," he replied, casually, "I don't know about the mint; but I get a check for $150 every two weeks."

"You have risen rapidly," I continued, "and no more quickly than you deserve. A man of your ability cannot be kept at the bottom."

"Bill," he replied, in a confidential whisper, "I'll tell you something that may do you a world of good. It's a fraud, a bluff. Furthermore, lots of men secure big wages the same way I do—bluff."

"Do they?"

"You bet they do," he replied with fervor. "Why, I've seen a hundred examples. Take my own case, for instance. A year ago my salary was $175 a month. But I went to my employer, looked him in the eye and said: Mr. Charlesworth, I received an offer this morning of a position with the Pierson people.' He jumped as if I had hit him. 'How much?' he inquired, anxiously. 'Three hundred a month.' Then the old man began to tremble and turn pale. His knees shook like saplings in a hurricane. 'We can't spare you,' he faltered, 'we can't spare you even for a day. You're the only man in our employment who knows exactly how the business is conducted. You could take complete charge this minute and run things as well as I can myself. We can't spare you. Will you remain with us at the same figure?' I stood there in his office and thought hard for ten minutes. Then I told him that as there seemed to be opportunity for advancement in the near future, I'd stay."

"Had the Pierson people offered you the position of which you spoke?"

Jack snapped his fingers. "Nit!"

On the way back to our office, I considered Jack's remarks from every viewpoint, and concluded he was right. Employers are not philanthropists. They don't appreciate a man's value until about to lose him. So I stepped into see the head of the firm.

He looked up from a pile of papers with a tired smile. "Well, Mr. Johnson?"

"I just dropped in to say," I announced, "that I am in receipt of a proposition from the Atwater Electric company."

"Well, well!" said my employer, pushing back the papers on his desk. "How much do they offer?"

"One hundred and fifty dollars a month."

"You don't mean it!" he exclaimed, as astonishment overspread his features. "Let me see; you're getting only a hundred here? Well, well. When do they want you to start?"

It was my desire to have any increase in salary to begin to take effect at once. "Tomorrow," I replied.

"Johnson," the old man continued, laying his hand on my arm, "we can't afford to lose you. The firm appreciates your faithful, earnest efforts during two years' service. But such an unusual opportunity as this may never come your way again; you had better grasp it now. I assure you we will miss you greatly, Johnson; but I suppose after awhile we can learn to get along without you. It is for your own good. That thought will comfort us. Good by."

So I'm out of a job.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Chicago and the Southwestern Markets Are Weakest at Close.

Flax Active During Entire Session and Rallies at Close.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 13.—Wheat closed considerably weaker in all the American markets today, after opening stronger. Heavy selling and favorable weather predictions for Missouri and other places where it is needed badly was the cause for the declines. The close was weakest in the Southwesern markets and in Chicago. Liverpool closed ⅝d higher, Berlin ½c lower and Budapest ¾c higher.

The July option closed ⅞c lower in Duluth, Minneapolis and New York, 1¼c in Chicago and Kansas City, 1¾c in St. Louis and ¼c in Winnipeg. The September option closed 1c off in Duluth and Minneapolis, 1⅛c in Chicago and Kansas City, ⅞c in New York and 1⅜-½c in St. Louis. The October option closed ⅝c lower in Winnipeg.

July corn closed ⅝c lower in Chicago and ⅞d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed ⅜-½c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 18 against 2 last year and at Minneapolis 101 against 103 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 119 against 105 last year. Chicago received 3 against 3 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 223,000 bus., last year 167,000 bus. Shipments 299,000 bus., last year 185,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 224,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 750,000 bus., last year 399,000 bus. Shipments 599,000 bus., last year 668,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 90,000 bus.

Wheat was strong at the opening of the Duluth market but became weak as the close drew near. Trading was not heavy. July wheat opened ¼c higher at 83¾c, advanced to 85½c at 9:40, declined to 84⅞c at 10:50, rallied to 85¼c, declined to 84½c at 12:48 and closed at 84¼c, a loss of ⅞c from yesterday. September wheat opened ⅝c higher at 84¼c, advanced to 84⅝c, declined to 83⅜c, rallied to 83¾c, declined to 83c, rallied to 83¼c and declined at 8:5c, closing at that price, a loss of 1c from yesterday.

Flax was active during the entire session, weak during the first part and strengthening during the last part, and at the close on higher cables from abroad. July flax opened ¼c lower at $1.12⅜, declined to $1.11½ and ranged between that and $1.13 during the rest of the session, closing at $1.13⅜, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. September flax opened 1c lower at $1.12¼, advanced to $1.12½, declined as low as $1.11⅜ and ranged between that and $1.13 during the rest of the session, closing at $1.13⅜, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. October flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.12¾, sold as low as $1.11½ and ranged between that and $1.13 during the rest of the session, closing at that price, unchanged from yesterday.

The coarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Advance in Price at Liverpool Causes Strong Tone in Local Wheat.

Chicago, June 13.—A sharp advance in the price of wheat at Liverpool caused a strong tone in the local market at the opening today, shorts and local bulls being active bidders. Later, however, the market eased off on selling by pit traders, who were actuated by a weather bureau forecast which predicted rain tonight in the southern and eastern portions of Missouri. July opened ½c to ⅝c up at 84⅜c to 84½c and sold off to 83⅝@⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 122 cars, against 171 cars last week and 108 cars a year ago.

During the remainder of the day there were one or two slight rallies, but the tendency of prices was toward a lower level. The lowest point of the day for July was at 82⅞@83c. The market closed weak, with July off 1⅝c at 83c.

An advance of nearly 1d a bus in the price of corn at Liverpool was followed by substantial gains in the local market at the opening. The initial advance, however, was soon lost on selling by commission houses and local longs. The weather bureau predicted showers tonight over the southern and central portions of Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, and this was the main reason for these increased offerings. July opened ¼@⅜c to ½@⅝c up at 53¼c to 53⅜c, and declined to 53⅛@¼c. Local receipts were 280 cars, with 111 of contract grade.

The weakness of wheat caused free selling of corn the last half of the day. In consequence the price of the July delivery declined to 65¼c. The close was weak, with prices near the lowest point of the day, final quotations on July being down ½@⅝c at 52⅝c.

Little relief from drought conditions was in sight for the oats crop, and, in consequence, the market was excited and strong. There was a good general demand and offerings were very light, even at advanced prices. July opened ½@⅝c to ⅝@¾c higher at 38¾c to 38⅞c, sold at 39c and then reacted to 38¾c. Local receipts were 106 cars.

Trading in provisions was quiet and the tone of the market was easier in sympathy with a 5c decline in the price of live hogs. September pork was unchanged at $16.65. Lard was off 2½@5c at $8.97½. Ribs were down 5c at $9.25.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The wheat trade today was marked by considerable liquidation on the part of long holders. There is no reason for deserting wheat no more than there has been for ten daypast. The forecast is for dry weather over Kansas and Nebraska and other states where crops are badly in need of moisture. Nebraska points were today reporting further lowering of the condition of wheat in that state. Kansas City wires that there is little prospect of Oklahoma wheat coming to that market, as there is an urgent demand from Texas. Rains are delaying the Oklahoma harvest somewhat. Until there is a change of weather and crop conditions in the Southwest, believe this wheat should be bought on any reaction such as it had today.

Corn—Prices look high, and there is no doubt that those taking the buying side at this level should keep watch on the weather over those states where drought is beginning to affect the new crop. There was considerable long corn sold today, and the market after a very strong turn the first hour showed some heaviness towards the close. The net loss, however, for the day was only about ½ cent. Country acceptances are no better on bids of 48 and 50 cents than at much lower prices. Stocks are small. The country is holding corn very firmly. It is a big speculative market with the greater chances for profits on the buying side, should there be a continuation of the unfavorable weather.

Oats—The leading bulls stood by their lines. Very bad crop reports are coming into the pit from different states, from Ohio across to Nebraska. The country is bullish and inclined to buy oats.

TO SUMMON PRESIDENTS

Of Railroads to Appear Before Interstate Commission.

Philadelphia, June 13.—The interstate commerce commission today wired to its secretary in Washington to notify the railroad presidents that the commission will be ready to hear them on June 21, in Washington. The presidents who will receive notification are: A. J. Cassatt, president Pennsylvania road; Oscar J. Murray, B. & O.; George W. Stevens, Chesapeake & Ohio; L. E. Johnson, Norfolk & Western, and W. H. Newman, New York Central & Hudson River railroad.

The officials will be permitted to make any statement or present any defense they may desire. Their appearance is optional as no subpoenaes will be issued.

Charles Heebner, counsel for the Berwin-White Coal company today filed with the commission as requested, statements of the coal shipments by the company to Harsimus pier during 1905, together with the car numbers and stencilled weights.

W. T. McCullough, auditor of freight receipts of the New York Central, gave technical testimony concerning the company's system of auditing coal and oil charges. He was asked if the New York Central ever made use of "blind billing."

"No, sir; we don't believe in it."

"You know what it means?"

"Oh, yes. Some roads use the term. It is a charge which does not show the rate and is marked 'S. G. O.', which means that settlement is made through general offices."

Unexpected information was volunteered by Francis I. Gowen, counsel for the Pennsylvania road, concerning private cars. W. Bierman, secretary of the Standard Steel Car company, and H. E. Swartz, chief clerk in the sales department of the pressed steel car company were examined concerning orders from the Pennsylvania road for cars intended for independent mining companies. Mr. Bierman professed to have no knowledge on the subject.

COLLISION AT FRAZEE

Passenger Train Runs Into a Freight—Biwabik Man Injured.

Frazee, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Passenger train No. 6 ran into a freight train on the main line near Frazee depot this noon. Jacob Tourie of Biwabik had his left leg broken and a cut in the head. Two cars were damaged and the passenger engine badly demolished. The passengers were badly shaken up. The engineer and brakeman jumped as the engines met.

Sometimes "the price of peace" is the same as the rate charged for Herald want advertising.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

There Was Crumbling Away of Prices Throughout Session.

The Strength in St. Paul Early Was Subsequently Lost.

New York, June 13.—The market opened under slight pressure today but rallied almost immediately under the lead of St. Paul, which advanced 1 from the lowest. Consolidated Gas rose 1¾ but changes otherwise were not significant.

The irregular movement of St. Paul which was the feature of yesterday's market continued this morning on about the same scale. The price fluctuated between 180¾ and 182, the top figure indicating an overnight rise of 1⅜. In the general market strength and weakness alternated also with the heaviness general on the drive against Brooklyn Transit and Reading. Around 11 o'clock the market was showing firmness with St. Paul at the best. Northwestern and Iowa Central preferred improved 1½ and D. & H. 1. Tennessee Coal ran off 1½, Brooklyn Transit 1⅜ and Reading, Pressed Steel Car and Corn Products preferred 1.

Reduced dealings gradually brought about a narrower swing to prices until the market got into something of a rut. Three or four stocks monopolized the dealings. St. Paul retained its feverish characteristics, but rallied easily when profit taking ceased. Reading retrieved its loss, but Brooklyn Transit remained heavy and there was some pressure against the United States Steel stocks. The midday market was almost lifeless and yielding. B. & O. advanced a point while Great Northern preferred declined 1½ and Pneumatic Service 3½. Bonds were steady at noon.

Effective buying was withheld until Erie, Locomotive and the Hill stocks had been lowered materially. Subsequently the general market gained slightly, when Reading and St. Paul rose to 142 and 182, respectively. Interest was very slight and dead. Pressed Steel Car and Pacific Mail rose 1½ and Northern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Locomotive, Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Distillers' Securities 1 to 1¼.

Minutes elapsed between trades in the afternoon, and there were few fluctuations of more than ⅛ per cent.

More impression was made on prices in the decline of the last hour than during the earlier spasmodic selling. The entire absence of support to some of the important stocks and general dissatisfaction with the character of the day's speculation induced selling for both accounts. Brooklyn Transit dropped 3 points, Reading lost over a point and the day's rise in St. Paul was more than wiped out. Great Northern preferred ran off 3½, Northern Pacific 2¼ and Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Northwestern, Kansas & Texas preferred, Louisville & Nashville, United States Steel preferred and American Car 1 to 1½. The market closed weak.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Company: The market is closing lower. Throughout the session there seemed to be a crumbling away of prices, which was quite pronounced in the last half hour of the session. The action of the grain markets and news received from the crop country does not inspire the average trader with confidence in the market. We are running into the period where money will be required to take care of the crops, and it is a well known fact that the banks are not in position to permit any extensive bull operations. Strength in St. Paul early was subsequently lost. The tip has been out for several days to buy St. Paul for 190. Market still looks like a trading affair.

The Cotton Market.

New York, June 13.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2@4 points in response to lower cables and increased the loss to a matter of 5@10 points, the decline being led by July under liquidation and bear pressure, while the market rallied at 3 or 4 points during the middle of the morning, no fresh demand passed beyond the covering of shorts, and prices eased off before midday.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 5 points decline. Mid ups, 11.20; do gulf, 11.45; sales, 35 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: June, 10.59; July, 10.62; August, 10.45; September, 10.37; October, 10.33; November, 10.37; December, 10.38; January, 10.83; February, 10.44; March, 10.51.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, June 13.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $163,534,436; gold, $86,129,606; gold certificates, $40,967,060.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Very little doing in the Boston market today, and what little activity displayed was on a lower range. There was no special feature, and selling was done by disgusted holders more than anything else. Raven was sold to a standstill on the curb down to 2½, on reports of a shutting down of the mine. Osceola is expected to declare $5 at their next meeting in a few days, and the stock looks cheap around present prices. We still look for a dull, uninteresting market for the immediate future.

EXPENSIVE PAPERS.

Little Made by Hand in the United States.

American users of imported paper have to pay high prices because of the duty, yet a great deal of foreign made paper comes into New York every year. Hand made papers form the bulk of these importations, for while American paper mills are not far behind their foreign competitors in making machine paper, there is no comparison to be made in the hand-turned kinds.

Almost all hand-made papers come from Japan, with Italy and France following in the order named. Imperial Japan paper is one of the finest of the Japanese brands, with numerous imitations because of its beauty, says the New York Sun.

Experts decide whether a paper is genuine imperial Japan or an imitation by looking along the surface toward the light. If it is genuine it presents a woolly appearance, though the surface is perfectly smooth. This paper is as tough and firm as a piece of light cloth.

Most expensive of the hand-made papers imported from Japan is the imperial Japanese vellum, the cost of which is $115 a ream of 500 sheets.

A curious way of determining whether a paper is hand-made or produced by machinery is to drop it on still water. If it is hand-made it will lie flat, if not the paper will quickly curl.

A New Yorker of poetic inclinations published a volume of his verses. He ordered the printer to use the most expensive paper procurable. An edition of 1,000 copies was printed and a few were distributed by the proud author to his admiring friends. Each book cost the poet $7.50.

He is one of the few poets who have gone in for very expensive printing. The paper used was hand-made and the decorations were gorgeous. About 80 per cent of the edition is in the hands of a New York bookseller, and if he sells a book occasion

WANT HALL KEPT OPEN

Fond du Lac and New Duluth Citizens Raise Protest.

Claim Fire Board Should Not Remove Their Only Protection.

New Duluth and Fond du Lac citizens do not take at all kindly to the proposed removal of W. H. Miller who is in charge of the fire hall of New Duluth, and they are disposed to make a strenuous fight to prevent the measure going into effect. Rev. P. Knudson of New Duluth, talking on the subject this morning said:

"It is a downright shame to remove the only fire protection which the people of the section have. We have had but one paid fireman in charge of our apparatus, the machines being handled by volunteers in case of fire, and the salary of this one man was not a very serious item in the expense account of the department. The citizens of New Duluth, Fond du Lac and Smithville are entitled to an adequate fire protection nearer than West Duluth and we mean to have it.

"I know that there are a number of our factories vacant, but we also have a number of live factories, and the vacant ones are far from valueless. You have seen a large number of vacant manufacturing plants in West Duluth occupied within the last few few years, and when the Power company gets in working order I am confident that the vacant buildings in New Duluth will all fill up. The danger of fire is all the more serious because of their being unoccupied. The people of New Duluth will not submit to this action without a fight. We realize that New Duluth was heavily bonded when it was absorbed by Duluth, and that our present taxation hardly pays the interest on this debt, but now that we are a part of the city we shall insist on some protection."

Spend Summer Here.

Adelaide Thurston, Duluth's noted and favorite actress is expected home tomorrow morning, for an extended visit. Her sister, Miss Eva Sawyer, expects to return with her to New York, and will probably play in her company during the coming season. Miss Sawyer has made a reputation locally for her work in recitation and in amateur theatricals, and should the company visit this city it can be assured a warm reception.

West Duluth Briefs.

The West Duluth fire department received a call last night at 7:13 for D. J. Keene's tailor shop at 5407 Ramsey street. A hot flat iron had been placed on some rags which caught fire. The damage was very slight.

Yesterday morning J. Wick met with a painful accident at the St. Louis mill. His hand was caught between two rollers, and the thumb crushed. It is not thought that amputation will be necessary. Dr. Seashore attended the injured man.

Ansel Pravna and Jacob Vocula, Austrians employed by the Zenith Furnace company, got into a serious hand to hand mixup yesterday over a girl whom Pravna had been paying attentions. The men were separated by friends, but both are threatening to take up the combat at the first opportunity.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Tyo Monday, at their residence at the corner of Raleigh street and Fifty-first avenue west.

PETITION SIGNED TO PARDON BOARD

By Hibbing Men for the Parole of Richard Hannon.

Hibbing, Minn., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—A petition to the state board of pardons, praying for the parole of Richard Hannon of Hibbing, is being circulated by Robert Maxwell and others of this city. Several hundred names are already on the list, and as soon as it is completed it will be presented to the board. Hannon is serving a fifteen-year sentence at the state prison at Stillwater, having been found guilty of killing Charles Ness in Hibbing on Nov. 26, 1902.

Bob Hannon had a boarding house and saloon on Pine street, and at the time of the shooting, it is claimed by his friends, he was defending his property and life from Ness, who tried to climb over the bar to strike Hannon. Hannon shot at the man's leg, intending only to wound him, but because of lack of proper surgical aid blood poisoning set in and Ness died. Mr. Hannon always bore a fairly good reputation here, and at the time of the trial it was the general opinion that the court sentence was unnecessarily severe.

While repairing a part of the floor of the light and power plant at Hibbing, William G. Williams, superintendent of the city light and power plant, unearthed a number of large rolls of copper wire, reaching a valuation of several hundred dollars, which should be the property of the village. This was found under the floor near the alley, where it could have been easily reached. It has further developed that the wire was not on the inventory of the city's possessions, which was taken this winter, while Ole Finnis was superintendent of the plant. There appears to be considerable mystery about the matter, and a further investigation has been put in motion with the expectations of finding other happenings of similar character.

Chief of Police Peter Wring and his wife, on Monday, celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary at their little home on Superior street. During the evening hours they were taken by surprise by a large number of their friends, who came prepared for a jolly good time, and made merry until a late hour. A very beautifully carved center table was presented to the happy couple by the guests as a token of friendship. Mr. and Mrs. Wring have lived in Hibbing ever since the town existed, and are very popular with a large circle of friends.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY.

Philadelphia, June 13.—Abraham L. English, former director of public safety, Philip Johnson, former city architect, James D. Finley, a building inspector and Henry A. Batton, a contractor, were placed on trial today charged with conspiracy to defraud the city in connection with the construction of a municipal hospital.

MONUMENT TO ROGER WILLIAMS.

Providence, R. I., June 13.—On the spot where Roger Williams and five companions are supposed to have first landed after banishment from Massachusetts 270 years ago and founded Providence, a monument of granite with bronze panels and appropriate inscriptions was unveiled today.

FRANTIC RUSH AT A WEDDING

Strong Force of Police Called to Control Curious Women.

New York, June 13.—Five thousand hysterical, struggling women, some of them bearing helpless babies in their arms, pressed around the doors of Grace church and fought with the police in their efforts to see Miss Cynthia Burke-Roche married to Arthur S. Burden. Not since the duke of Roxburghe wedded Miss May Goelet has the police department been obliged to handle such a mob of frantic women.

Many of the women fainted. One, clinging tightly to a wailing infant, fell beneath the feet of her excited sisters and was badly trampled before she was dragged to safety.

Up and down Broadway on both sides, from Ninth to Fourteenth streets, the women struggled and fretted and loudly screamed at one another under the hot noon sun.

Not a man was in the crowd. The policemen tried kind words and the pressure of their hands to keep something like order.

The wedding was the great social event of the year. A list of the 500 guests would read like an index to "Who's Who." The women guests were, of course, exemplifications of what's what in summer styles. That may have been why the women on the sidewalk had come from Harlem and the Bronx and Brooklyn to stand two hours in the sun and squabble with the men in blue and brass.

When the bride's carriage drew up there was the wildest confusion. The women lined up alongside, the awnings were held back by ten policemen, but hundreds pressing behind them sent them stumbling and clawing out upon the sacred precincts of the carpeted pathway. Two women with babies in their arms rolled headlong under the awning. They were quickly dragged to their feet by policemen and led away.

Miss Roche looked beautiful. She was attired all in white and carried a great bunch of white orchids. Her blue eyes sparkled and her plump cheeks were flushed under the veil of lace that was caught about her head and swept back almost to the end of her long train. Her dress was of white satin and cut with a high girdle. It was not the princess cut that has recently been so common among brides.

The bride was not given away by her grandfather, Frank Work, as had been expected. He was unable to be present on account of illness. Instead, she was led to the altar by her brother. William P. Burden was his brother's best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Huntington, rector of the church.

It was noticeable that the Townsend Burdens were absent. The reason for this was not explained.

While the ceremony was going on the mob of women sweltered in the streets and made things unpleasant for police. Half a dozen mounted policemen came up to help the others. They were hissed by the women when they cavorted with their horses along the curbs to trim off the crowd.

Finally, the police took the law into their own hands in a way that brought applause from the few men who were trying to dodge the crowd and go on their way to business. The police began to pick out of the mob the women who carried babies and tell them that if they didn't take their little ones away they would be locked up. Several of the children seemed almost squeezed to unconsciousness when the police dragged their mothers and hurried them off.

At last the chimes of the church began to ring in token of the conclusion of the ceremony. Then there was more trouble with the crowd, but by this time there were enough police to handle the disturbance.

Varnishes

After using a good Varnish people often wonder how they were induced to put a cheap Varnish on their house. We recommend the following high grade lines.

PRATT LAMBERT'S NO. 6 and MURPHY'S TRANSPARENT FLOOR.

These Floor Varnishes have no equal on the market for floors, The durability and economy combined in these Varnishes make them a safe and profitable investment.

PRATT LAMBERT'S NO. 38 PRESERVATIVE and MURPHY'S TRANSPARENT INTERIOR.

These are for all interior work. They bring out the natural beauties of the woods and still retain the wearing qualities which are so essential to the finishing of a modern home.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

MILES SEES A SERIOUS PROBLEM IN DIFFERENT ELEMENTS OF PEOPLE

Red, Black and Brown Men Have Had Their Troubles.

Future Effect on Form of Government is Problematic.

Only Hope of Nation is Education and Patriotism.

Lincoln, Neb., June 14.—The annual commencement exercises of the university of Nebraska were held here today, the senior class and the graduates of the several colleges, numbering about 300, being addressed by Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Gen. Miles, referring to the race problems this country has to solve, said:

"There are some matters concerning our past history, our present condition, and the probabilities of the future that it may be well for us to consider. The natives of this country who were dwelling in peace, contentment and happiness when our ancestors landed upon our eastern shores, have been driven from every valley and mountain crest until their race has been nearly annihilated. The Ethiopians, whose ancestors were kidnaped on the coast of Africa and sold into slavery along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, were subjected to unrequited toil for more than 200 years, and have now increased to between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 souls. More than 8,000,000 of Malays are now held by the arbitrary power of our government, with no immediate prospect of relief or independence.

"The red man, the black man and the brown man have had a hard time under our civilization. Whether this will have an effect of changing our form of government from a pure democracy to a more restricted liberty and centralized power the future alone can determine. In fact, whether these different elements of our great population will continue as homogenous in the future as in the past is a serious problem.

"The only hope and salvation for this nation is universal education and deep-seated, strong patriotism that shall permeate and control every community and influence the destiny of the entire nation."

GEN. NELSON A. MILES.

OPPOSED TO A REDUCTION

Thirty-Two Insurance Companies Would Pay Frisco Losses in Full.

San Francisco, June 14.—The following is a list of the thirty-two insurance companies that are standing out against the proposition which has been advanced by sixty of their associates in the underwriters' bureau to order a cut of 25 cents right down the line and compel policyholders to accept 75 cents on the dollar: Aetna Insurance company, California, Mercantile of Boston, American Central of St. Louis, St. Paul, Manchester, Atlas of London, Kings County, Springfield of Massachusetts, New Zealand, North British and Mercantile, Liverpool and London and Globe, Sun of London, Northern Assurance of London, Phoenix of London, Pelican of New York, Continental of New York, London Assurance, New York Underwriters, Teutonia, London and Lancashire, English-American Underwriters, Orient of Hartford, State of Liverpool, Hartford of Hartford, Citizens of St. Louis, Home of New York, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Queen of New York, Royal of Liverpool, Industrial Underwriters.

Of the representatives present at the recent meeting of the underwriters in Oakland when the 75-cent proposition came up for vote, there remained then, seventy-two companies to be accounted for. Of these, sixty-one declared in favor of the 75-cent compromise, while ten were not represented at the meeting, and so far have not recorded their position in the matter. One more insurance company yesterday signed the stipulation sent out by the state insurance commissioner granting an additional sixty days time during which policyholders may file their proofs of loss. This company was the Prussian National. Fifty-four insurance concerns have now granted the extension of time, and many more are expected to follow within the next two days.

Three insurance companies—the Continental, Austin of Texas, and Scottish Union—have filed a description of all their policies with Insurance Commissioner Wolf.

HOSPITAL EXPENSES

For Caring for Sick at Isthmian Canal Are Very Low.

Washington, June 14.—Col. W. C. Gorgas, the chief sanitary officer on the isthmian canal zone, has compiled a report for the isthmian canal commission on hospital expenses which shows that the average cost of caring for a patient on the isthmus is $1.51 a day. This includes all expenses such as food, wages of employes and salaries of physicians, but does not include any interest allowance on the money invested in equipment.

At present the number of patients in the isthmian hospital is only about 100. The total capacity of the hospitals is 1,300 and if they were filled Col. Gorgas estimates that the cost of caring for each patient would be reduced to about one dollar a day.

As compared with expenses in Bellevue hospital and other well known institutions in the United States Col. Gorgas says the expense of caring for patients in isthmian hospitals is low.

SUN FAILS TO SHINE

Although Thousands Sing That it Does in Old Kentucky.

Day Given Over to the Memory of Stephen Foster.

Louisville, June 14.—It would tax the ability of the most accomplished mathematician even to estimate how many times this week the music of "My Old Kentucky Home" has floated on the air of Louisville. Delegation after delegation from abroad has trooped through the streets behind bands that have informed everybody within hearing "The Sun Shines Bright in My Old Kentucky Home," the orchestra in hotels and cafes impart the same intelligence every few minutes—people sing and hum it in the streets, and it is all a delightful bit of humor.

The sun has not shone brightly or otherwise since the "Home Coming week" was formally opened and shows no intention of doing so.

Today the skies are dark and lowering; there is further promise of an abundance of rain, and the bands with an optimism equalled only by their lack of veracity are still tooting to the world that "The Sun Shines Bright in My Old Kentucky Home."

Despite the tremendous drawback, however, the home coming week has so far been an unequalified success. Today was given over to a program in memory of Stephen C. Foster whose simple words, set to music, have made Kentucky's name a household word throughout the world. It is doubtful if any composer ever received a more flattering tribute than that accorded to Foster today, when 1,000 of the school children of Louisville, who by their contributions have made possible for him a monument of bronze which is to stand in the new capitol at Frankfort, sang his music in chorus, and cheered every mention of his name.

Shortly after noon the children gathered at Third avenue and Broadway and escorted by the Louisville light infantry marched to the armory on Walnut street.

After an invocation by Rev. E. L. Powell and addresses by Jerry South of Arkansas and R. W. Miller of Richmond, Ky., the model of the Foster statue was unveiled by Mrs. Marion Foster Welsh of Allegheny, Pa., daughter of Mr. Foster. Standing beside Mrs. Welsh as the drapery fell away, revealing the statue were Mrs. Jesse Welsh Rose, granddaughter of the composer and his two great grandchildren, Dorothy Jane Rose and Stephen Collins Foster Rose. The chorus of children, accompanied by an orchestra, sang in a manner which brought enthusiastic cheers, "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Folks at Home," "Old Black Joe" and other of Foster's melodies.

The feeling they evoked was happily expressed by an aged home comer, who remarked:

"If you jest drawl them Foster songs a mite when you sing 'em, they'll make the richest man in the world feel mighty poor."

Solos were sung by Mrs. Jesse Bowman Webb of Louisville and J. Victor Foster of Fulton, N. Y. The rendition of a few of Foster's melodies on the flute which he used during his lifetime brought the exercises to a close.

The floral parade which was yesterday postponed because of rain will be seen on Friday morning, provided the sun by that time concludes to justify the opening words of "My Old Kentucky Home."

MARRIAGE ANNULLED.

Kenosha, Wis., June 14.—Judge Belden yesterday annulled the marriage of Mrs. Daisy Frasher and Frederick M. Frasher. She alleges that he was married when he wedded her in 1892. He was president of the Frasher Foundry company and cannot be found. He admitted recently, says the complaint, that he wedded in Danbury, Conn., and the first wife is now living in Ohio. No bigamy charge is to be made.

TO OFFER NO REPLY

Standard Oil Will Give No Testimony Before Commission.

Hold That Statement Already on File is Sufficient.

Cleveland, June 14.—The interstate commerce commission reopened the investigation of the Standard Oil company here today. C. A. Prouty was the only member of the commission present. J. T. Marchand, chief counsel for the commission was assisted by S. S. Mehard, of Pittsburg.

In opening the session Commissioner Prouty, said that he had received a letter from Virgil P. Kline, chief counsel for the Standard Oil company, of Ohio, on June 7, in which it was stated that the Standard Oil company did not desire at this time to offer any testimony. Mr. Kline, who was present, corroborated this statement, and said that this course was decided upon because he believed that a full reply to all the charges against the Standard Oil company was now on file in the office of the commissioner of corporations.

SACRIFICED TO BEAT ADDICKS

Story of McCardy's Resignation From Washington Position Comes Out.

Washington, June 14.—The election of Col. H. A. Dupont as United States senator from Delaware, defeating "Gas" Addicks, is of interest to Minnesota Republicans.

When Capt. J. J. McCardy of St. Paul resigned his position as auditor of the postoffice department, it was announced from the White House that his successor would not be appointed from Minnesota.

On inquiry it was learned that arrangements had been practically completed whereby a man from Delaware, who had for years been the right hand man of Addicks, was to be given the position of auditor for the state and other departments, and that Mr. Timme of Wisconsin would be transferred from this position to the place vacated by Mr. McCardy.

This deal went through, but the man who was named to succeed Timme deserted Addicks and went over to the opposition, thereby selecting Col. Dupont. And hence it happened that Clarence Dayton of Delaware, auditor for the department of state, received his reward in a good government job, and the state of Minnesota, which for several years enjoyed the honor of having one of her citizens at the head of a great auditing department of the government, lost the place to little Delaware.

It is understood that Postmaster General Cortelyou engineered the deal.

REVOLUTION OF KOREANS

Men of Hermit Kingdom Rebel Against the Japs.

Mikado's Warships Are Ordered to the Scene of Trouble.

Victoria, B. C., June 14.—The steamer Tydeus, which arrived yesterday from the Orient, brought news of an insurrection in Korea, commenced on May 25, when the walled city of Hongju was attacked and seized by Korean insurgents. Hongju, in Chun Chiong province, Southeastern Korea, was garrisoned by Japanese gendarmes and police. The Japanese being short of ammunition, retired at night. The refugees reached Yzan and telegraphed to Seoul for assistance. A Japanese vessel is being sent to their assistance. Meanwhile 300 insurgents occupied Hongju and began a revolutionary propaganda which resulted in their force being greatly augmented, and outbreaks occurred also at Andong and Ponghawi in Kiong Song province to the westward, the rebel ranks being filled with former Korean soldiers armed with moredn rifles, mostly fired with rebellion against the recent Japanese seizures of land, etc., following the occupation of Korea. A force of Korean soldiers was dispatched against Hongju, but retired after a demonstration before the walls, and a force of Japanese under Capt. Komori was detached from Seoul. The insurgents prepared the city for defense, and the Japanese assaults were repulsed with rifle fire from the walls. Capt. Komori has sent for reinforcements, asking that some field pieces be sent, and was awaiting their arrival before attacking. The insurgents were strongly entrenched, and defied attacks without artillery. It was in this province that previous revolutionary movements aimed as now against the Japanese, have begun.

London, June 14.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Tokio sends the following: "The Korean rebellion is extending. The insurgents have looted Tamyiang and Sunchang, and are threatening other towns. Japanese warships at Yokohama have been ordered to assist the protected cruiser Chiyoda, the torpedo vessel Patsuta, and the torpedo flotilla to suppress piracy on the southeast coast of Korea."

BIWABIK HIGH SCHOOL.

Five Graduates---Supt. Denfeld of Duluth to Deliver Address.

Biwabik, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The class play of the Biwabik high school took place last evening at the village hall before a large audience. The title of the piece was, "Tompkins' Hired Man," and, as its name indicates, was full of rollicking fun and humor. Those in the cast did excellent work. The play was presented under the direction of Supt. T. E. Grae.

This evening will occur the closing exercises of the grades at the school building and tomorrow evening the commencement exercises of the high school. Five young ladies will graduate from the high school this year, as follows: Huldah Fritzberg, Winnifred Chinn, Sofia Thomas, Caroline Shimmin and May Quayle. Supt. R. E. Denfeld of the Duluth schools will deliver the principal address at the commencement, and rMs. J. S. Lutes will sing.

MURDERED BY NATIVES

British Officers Attacked in the Village of Tantab.

One Killed by Bludgeon, Several Others Badly Beaten.

Cairo, June 14.—Capt. S. C. Bull of the Sixth (Inniskillin) dragoons, was killed and four other British officers were badly injured by natives, near Tantab, yesterday, during the march of a detachment of British troops from here to Alexandria. The five officers, apparently on the invitation of a village official, went to a hamlet to shoot pigeons. The villagers surrounded the party, deprived the officers of their guns, and attacked them with bludgeons, with the result that Capt. Bull was killed, another had an arm broken and the others were badly injured. The affair appears to be the outcome of the recent pan-Islamic campaign, carried on during the anglo-Turkish dispute over the Tabah boundary.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS

To be Subject of Treaty Between Ecuador and United States.

Washington, June 14.—Preliminary negotiations have been concluded between the United States and Ecuador for quarantine regulations which which will lessen the possibility of interchange of yellow fever infection between Panama and Guayaquil, the chief port of Ecuador.

Governor Magoon of Panama will probably go to Quito with Col. Gorgas, the chief sanitary officer on the isthmus, frame a treaty satisfactory to the United States and Ecuador.

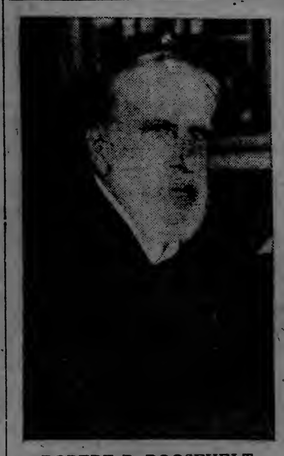

Rio Janciro in July will have international quarantine, as one of its chief subjects for discusion and it is likely that an agreement will be effected between all the American republics for uniform quarantine regulations and for the proper sanitation of all ports. But pending this general quarantine agreement a temporary treaty with Ecuador is stated to be necessary as the west coast of South America is a constant menace to canal construction on the isthmus because of the prevalence of yellow fever.

HANGED IN CHURCH BELFRY

Battle Lake Farmer Uses Bell Rope for Self Execution.

Fergus Falls, Minn., June 14.—Alois F. Gruber, a farmer of the vicinity of Battle Lake, was found hanging in the belfry of the Catholic church here yesterday morning. He had come to town Tuesday and was terribly worried over the prospective loss of his farm, which was heavily mortgaged. He spent the night with Father Welp, arose in the morning and hanged himself, using the bell rope as a noose.

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION ON AN OCEAN STEAMSHIP CAUSES DEATH OF NINE

ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT.

Five Killed Instantly, Their Bodies Blown Into Fragments.

Forty Others Were More or Less Seriously Wounded.

The Catastrophe Believed to Have Been Due to Gas.

Liverpool, June 14.—Five men were instantly killed and about forty were wounded as the result of a terrific explosion today on the British steamer Haverford of the International Navigation company. The vessel, which is commanded by Capt. Nielsen, arrived here yesterday from Philadelphia, June 2, landed her passengers and proceeded to Huskison dock, early today, in order to unload. The stevedores were in the act of loosening the steamer's hatches, when suddenly a most violent explosion occurred. It blew off the hatches, rent the docks and hurled dead and wounded men in all directions. Several bodies were dismembered, and the deck resembled the floor of a charnel house. The explosion, which was heard for many miles, and was, according to rumor, caused by an infernal machine, was followed by the outbreak of fire. The cargo, consisting of linseed oil cake, in hold No. 2 and hold No. 3, was soon blazing fiercely. Firemen and police hurried to the spot, and the injured were quickly taken to a neighboring hospital, while the work of searching for further possible casualties proceeded with vigor, in spite of the fierceness of the fire, which soon assumed alarming proportions, owing to the inflammable nature of the cargo. After two hours' hard fighting, however, the firemen obtained the mastery of the flames. It is believed that a number of the men taken to the hospital will succumb to their injuries.

The cause of the disaster has not been ascertained.

Later it was said that the disaster on board the Haverford was apparently caused by the explosion of a barrel of naphtha.

The death list now totals nine.

The report that the explosion on the Haverford was due to an infernal machine arose from the finding of a wooden box a foot square in one of the holds. This box, which was only partially shattered, contained pieces of steel machinery. It was prominently marked, "For Manchester, Eng." The officials of the International Navigation company have taken charge of the box, but they do not attach importance to the theory of foul play, and say that the fact of the box being in the hold was a mere accident. The officials say they believe that the explosion was due to ignition of gas given off by naptha soap, which formed part of the cargo.

Outwardly little harm has been done to the vessel beyond the rents in the deck, but inside the damage is extensive, both by the explosion and the fire.

Several of the victims of the disaster are unfound. One body was headless and armless, and in another case the head was picked up, but the body had disappeared.

BIWABIK MAN IS BADLY INJURED

Jacob Touria in Railroad Wreck on the Northern Pacific.

Frazee, Minn., June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two men were seriously injured, one passenger engine was badly demolished, and two cars seriously smashed by passenger train No. 6 running into a special freight train on the Northern Pacific main line just outside Frazee depot yesterday noon. The special freight had just gone past the depot on the main line and was trying to back down to a sidetrack when the passenger train from Fargo, due at Frazee at 11:27, ran into it. Fortunately the engineer had shut off the steam to stop at the depot, but the two engines met with terrific force. The engineer and fireman just saw the freight train as the two engines met and they jumped from the cab. The passenger engine was locked into the front of the freight engine, the cab shot forward over part of the engine and was badly smashed. Jacob Touria of Biwabik, Minnesota, was stealing a ride home and was pinned between the engine and the baggage car. He could not pulled the cab away from him. His left leg was smashed to pieces and will need amputation. He was cut on the head and internally injured, and may die. He was brought to Frazee depot and at 3 p. m. was sent to Detroit hospital to have the leg amputated. The baggage-master was badly hurt. The passengers were just getting ready to leave the train and they got an awful shaking and shock.

REJOICING IN OKLAHOMA

Great Demonstration at Guthrie Over Report on Statehood.

Guthrie, Ok., June 14.—Whistles screamed and bells all over the city rang for fully half an hour last night when the news became generally known that the conference report on the statehood bill had been accepted by the senate and that statehood seems assured. Nearly every inhabitant of the city went into the streets and joined in the demonstration by discharging firearms and fireworks.

In a number of counties, primaries and conventions have been held by both political parties and full county tickets nominated. If the bill, as signed by the president, contains the clause authorizing officers to hold over until statehood is in force, there will be no elections in Oklahoma this fall, and all the nominations will have been in vain.

Muskogee, I. T., June 14.—Here and throughout Indian Territory there was great rejoicing last night over the apparent near approach of statehood. A movement has been started to set aside the day following the signing of the bill as a holiday.

MILES SEES A SERIOUS PROBLEM IN DIFFERENT ELEMENTS OF PEOPLE

Red, Black and Brown Men Have Had Their Troubles.

Future Effect on Form of Government is Problematic.

Only Hope of Nation is Education and Patriotism.

Lincoln, Neb., June 14.—The annual commencement exercises of the university of Nebraska were held here today, the senior class and the graduates of the several colleges, numbering about 300, being addressed by Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Gen Miles referring to the race problems this country has to solve, said:

"There are some matters concerning our past history, our present condition, and the probabilities of the future that it may be well for us to consider. The natives of this country who were dwelling in peace, contentment and happiness when our ancestors landed upon our eastern shores have been driven from every village and mountain crest until their race has been nearly annihilated. The Ethiopians, whose ancestors were kidnaped on the coast of Africa and sold into slavery across the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, were subjected to unrequited toil for more than 200 years, and have now increased to between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 souls. More than a million of Malays are now held by the military power of our government, with no immediate prospect of relief or independence.

"The red man, the black man and the brown man have had a hard time under our civilization. Whether this will have an effect of changing our form of government from a pure democracy to a more restricted liberty and centralized power, the future alone can determine. In fact, whether these different elements of our great population will continue as dangerous in the future as in the past is a serious problem.

"The only hope and salvation for this nation is universal education and deep-seated, strong patriotism that shall permeate and control every community and influence the destiny of the entire nation."

GEN. NELSON A. MILES.

OPPOSED TO A REDUCTION

Thirty-Two Insurance Companies Would Pay Frisco Losses in Full.

San Francisco, June 14.—The following is a list of the thirty-two insurance companies that are standing out against the proposition which has been advanced by the sixty of their associates in the board of fire underwriters in order a cut of 10 per cent from the face and compel settlements on the basis of 75 cents on the dollar: Insurance company, California, Metropolitan of Boston, American, Continental of St. Louis, St. Paul Mercantile, Assurance of London, Kings County, Springfield of Massachusetts, New Zealand, North British and Mercantile, Liverpool and London and Globe, Sun of London, Northern Assurance of London, Phoenix of London, Pelican of New York, Continental of New York, London Assurance of New York, Underwriters, Home, Insurance and Lancashire, Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Queen of America, State of Lancashire, Hartford, Hartford, Citizens of St. Louis, Home of New York, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Queen of New York, Royal, Union Assurance and Underwriters.

The representatives present at the meeting of the underwriters in session when the fifteen proposition was voted for said there remained but a few more companies to be accounted for, of these sixty-six declared it was the fifteen compromise, while thirty-six had not responded at the meeting, so far have not recorded their decision on the matter. One large insurance company yesterday stated the opposition would be met by the state authorities, the latter granting an additional sixty days time during which passengers may file their proofs of loss. This company was the Prussian National. Fifty-four insurance companies have signed the extension of time, and many more are expected to follow within the next two days.

Three insurance companies—the Continental Assurance of Texas and Scottish Union—have filed a description of all their policies with Insurance Commissioner Wolf.

HOSPITAL EXPENSES

For Caring for Sick at Isthmian Canal Are Very Low.

Washington, June 14.—Col. W. C. Gorgas, the chief sanitary officer on the Isthmian canal zone, has completed a report for the Isthmian canal commission on hospital expenses which shows that the average cost of caring for a patient on the isthmus is $1.51 a day. This includes all expenses such as food, wages of employes and salaries of physicians, but does not include any interest allowance on the money invested in equipment.

At present the number of patients in the Isthmian hospital is only about one-third the total capacity of the hospitals, but if they were filled to capacity Gorgas estimates that the cost of caring for each patient would be reduced to about one dollar a day.

Contrasted with expenses in Panama hospital and other well equipped institutions in the United States, Col. Gorgas says the expense of caring for patients in Isthmian hospitals is low.

SUN FAILS TO SHINE

Although Thousands Sing That it Does in Old Kentucky.

Day Given Over to the Memory of Stephen Foster.

Louisville, June 14.—It would tax the ability of the most accomplished mathematician even to estimate how many times this week the music of "My Old Kentucky Home" has floated on the air of Louisville. Delegation after delegation from abroad has trooped through the streets behind bands that have informed everybody within hearing "The Sun Shines Bright in My Old Kentucky Home," the orchestra in hotels and cafes impart the same intelligence every few minutes—people sing and hum it in the streets, and it is all a delightful bit of humor.

The sun has not shone brightly or otherwise since the "Home Coming week" was formally opened and shows no intention of doing so.

Today the skies are dark and lowering, there is further promise of an abundance of rain, and the bands with an optimism equaled only by their lack of veracity are still tooting to the world that "The Sun Shines Bright in My Old Kentucky Home."

Despite the tremendous drawback, however, the home coming week has so far been an unqualified success. Today was given over to a program in memory of Stephen C. Foster whose simple words, set to music, have made Kentucky's name a household word throughout the world. It is doubtful if any composer ever received a more flattering tribute than that accorded to Foster today, when 1,000 of the school children of Louisville, who by their contributions have made possible for him a monument of bronze which is to stand in the new capitol at Frankfort, sang his music in chorus, and cheered every mention of his name.

Shortly after noon the children gathered at Third avenue and Broadway and escorted by the Louisville light infantry marched to the armory on Walnut street.

After an invocation by Rev. E. L. Powell and addresses by Jerry South of Arkansas and R. W. Mabry of Richmond, Ky., the model of the Foster statue was unveiled by Mrs. Marion Foster Welsh of Allegheny, Pa., daughter of Mr. Foster. Standing beside Mrs. Welsh as the drapery fell away, revealing the statue were Mrs. Jesse Welsh Rose granddaughter of the composer and his two great grandchildren, Dorothy Jane Rose and Stephen Collins Foster Rose. The chorus of children, accompanied by an orchestra, sang in a manner which brought enthusiastic cheers, "My Old Kentucky Home," "Old Folks at Home," "Old Black Joe" and other of Foster's melodies.

The feeling they evoked was happily expressed by an aged home comer, who remarked:

"If you jest crawl them Foster songs a mite when you sing em, they'll make the richest man in the world feel mighty poor."

Solos were sung by Mrs. Jesse Bowman Webb of Louisville and J. Victor Foster of Fulton, N. Y. The rendition of a few of Foster's melodies on the flute which he used during his lifetime brought the exercises to a close.

The floral parade which was yesterday postponed because of rain will be seen on Friday morning, provided the sun by that time concludes to justify the opening words of "My Old Kentucky Home."

MARRIAGE ANNULLED.

Kenosha, Wis., June 14.—Judge Belden yesterday annulled the marriage of Miss Daisy Frasher and Frederick M. Frasher. She alleges that he was married when he wooed her in 1902. He was president of the Frasher Foundry company and cannot be found. He obtained recently, says the complaint, that he wedded in Danbury, Conn., and the first wife is now living in Ohio. No bigamy charge is to be made.

TO OFFER NO REPLY

Standard Oil Will Give No Testimony Before Commission.

Hold That Statement Already on File is Sufficient.

Cleveland, June 14.—The interstate commerce commission reopened the investigation of the Standard Oil company here today. C. A. Prouty was the only member of the commission present. J. T. Marchand, chief counsel for the commission was assisted by S. S. Mehard, of Pittsburg.

In opening the session Commissioner Prouty said that he had received a letter from Virgil P. Kline, chief counsel for the Standard Oil company, of Ohio, on June 7, in which it was stated that the Standard Oil company did not desire at this time to offer any testimony. Mr. Kline, who was present, corroborated this statement, and said that this course was decided upon because he believed that a full reply to all the charges against the Standard Oil company was now on file in the office of the commissioner of corporations.

SACRIFICED TO BEAT ADDICKS

Story of McCardy's Resignation From Washington Position Comes Out.

Washington, June 14.—The election of Col. H. A. Dupont as United States senator from Delaware, defeating "Gas" Addicks, is of interest to Minnesota Republicans.

When Capt. J. J. McCardy of St. Paul resigned his position as auditor of the postoffice department, it was announced from the White House that his successor would not be appointed from Minnesota.

On inquiry it was learned that arrangements had been practically completed whereby a man from Delaware, who had for years been the right hand man of Addicks, was to be given the position of auditor for the state and other departments, and that Mr. Thome of Wisconsin would be transferred from this position to the place vacated by Mr. McCardy.

This deal went through, but the man who was named to succeed Thome deserted Addicks and went over to the opposition, thereby selecting Col. Dupont. And hence it happened that Clarence Dayton of Delaware, auditor for the department of state received his reward in a good government job, and the state of Minnesota, which for several years enjoyed the honor of having one of her citizens at the head of a great auditing department of the government lost the place to little Delaware.

It is understood that Postmaster General Cortelyou engineered the deal.

REVOLUTION OF KOREANS

Men of Hermit Kingdom Rebel Against the Japs.

Mikado's Warships Are Ordered to the Scene of Trouble.

Victoria, B. C., June 14.—The steamer Tydeus, which arrived yesterday from the Orient, brought news of an insurrection in Korea, commenced on May 25, when the walled city of Hongju was attacked and seized by Korean insurgents. Hongju, in Chun Chiong province, Southeastern Korea, was garrisoned by Japanese gendarmes and police. The Japanese being short of ammunition, retired at night. The refugees reached Yzan and telegraphed to Seoul for assistance. A Japanese vessel is being sent to their assistance. Meanwhile 500 insurgents occupied Hongju and began a revolutionary propaganda which resulted in their force being greatly augmented, and outbreaks occurred also at Andong and Ponghawi in Kieng Song province to the westward, the rebel ranks being filled with former Korean soldiers armed with moredn rifles, mostly fired with rebellion against the recent Japanese seizures of land, etc., following the occupation of Korea. A force of Korean soldiers was dispatched against Hongju, but retired after a demonstration before the walls, and a force of Japanese under Capt. Komori was detached from Seoul. The insurgents prepared the city for defense, and the Japanese assaults were repulsed with rifle fire from the walls. Capt. Komori has sent for reinforcements, asking that some field pieces be sent, and was awaiting their arrival before attacking. The insurgents were strongly entrenched, and defied attacks without artillery. It was in this province that previous revolutionary movements aimed as now against the Japanese, have begun.

London, June 14.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Tokio sends the following: "The Korean rebellion is extending. The insurgents have looted Tamyiang and Sunchang, and are threatening other towns. Japanese warships at Yokohama have been ordered to assist the protected cruiser Chiyoda, the torpedo vessel Patsuta, and the torpedo flotilla to suppress piracy on the southeast coast of Korea."

The play was presented under the direction of Supt. T. E. Grace.

This evening will occur the closing exercises of the grades at the school building and tomorrow evening the commencement exercises of the high school. Five young ladies will graduate from the high school this year, as follows: Huldah Fritzberg, Winnifred Chinn, Sofia Thomas, Caroline Shimanin and May Quayle. Supt. R. E. MURDERED BY NATIVES

British Officers Attacked in the Village of Tantab.

One Killed by Bludgeon, Several Others Badly Beaten.

Cairo, June 14.—Capt. S. C. Bull of the Sixth (Inniskillin) dragoons, was killed and four other British officers were badly injured by natives, near Tantab, yesterday, during the march of a detachment of British troops from here to Alexandria. The five officers, apparently on the invitation of a village official, went to a hamlet to shoot pigeons. The villagers surrounded the party, deprived the officers of their guns, and attacked them with bludgeons, with the result that Capt. Bull was killed, another had an arm broken and the others were badly injured. The affair appears to be the outcome of the recent pan-Islamic campaign, carried on during the anglo-Turkish dispute over the Tabah boundary.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS

To be Subject of Treaty Between Ecuador and United States.

Washington, June 14.—Preliminary negotiations have been concluded between the United States and Ecuador for quarantine regulations which will lessen the possibility of interchange of yellow fever infection between Panama and Guayaquil, the chief port of Ecuador.

Governor Magoon of Panama will probably go to Quito with Col. Gorgas, the chief sanitary officer on the isthmus, frame a treaty satisfactory to the United States and Ecuador.

Rio Janeiro in July will have international quarantine, as one of its chief subjects for discusion and it is likely that an agreement will be effected between all the American republics for uniform quarantine regulations and for the proper sanitation of all ports. But pending this general quarantine agreement a temporary treaty with Ecuador is stated to be necessary as the west coast of South America is a constant menace to canal construction on the isthmus because of the prevalence of yellow fever.

GERMANS SAY IT IS HORRIBLE

The Way the Slaughter Houses of Chicago Are Conducted.

Berlin, June 14.—Crown Prince Frederick William and Gen. Von Podbielski, the Prussian minister of agriculture, opened the agricultural fair in a suburb of Berlin today. They both made speeches eulogizing German farming and the wisdom of the state in protecting the people's food by law.

Gen. Podbielski, in connection with the opening, gave an interview to the Lokal Anzeiger regarding the Chicago meat packing sensation, during the course of which he was quoted as saying:

"What was taking place at Chicago was well known in the United States. One can only be filled with horror by the information. I cannot express publicly what I know, and can only seek to protect our population.

"Daily in Chicago 25,000 cattle are slaughtered, and numerous animals are brought to the slaughterhouse already dead.

"Only three veterinarians are assigned to examine 10,000 hogs daily. What can they see? With us, one veterinarian or inspector does not investigate more than twenty animals."

MEDICAL OPINIONS OF BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Experience "Fully Demonstrates the Value of Buffalo Lithia Water as a Solvent of Uric Acid, and a Valuable Therapeutic Agent in the Treatment of Gout."

L. H. Warner, A. M., Ph. G., M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y. In a paper entitled "The Treatment of Gout, Uric Acid Diathesis and super-induced Cystitis in the cases of two idiosyncratic Patients," gives full clinical notes of these interesting cases, and in a lecture before the recent meeting of the Alabama Medical Association showed stereopticon views of the blood and urine of these patients in different stages of improvement. He says: "My former good results from the use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in cases of Rheumatism due to Uric Acid intoxication led me to suggest this agent to my patients. The use of nitrogenous foods was restricted and a full half gallon of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER per day was ordered to be taken. I was more than surprised at the amount of Uric Acid sand eliminated with each urination, and three weeks from the beginning of treatment not a trace of the former cystitis existed. BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as the only medication used, we find an increase of 5% Hæmoglobin, 200,000 red cells and a normal count of white cells, while the urine appears without any pathological factors. These cases fully demonstrate the value of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER as a solvent of Uric Acid and a valuable therapeutic agent in the treatment of Gout."

"THE MOST RELIABLE SOLVENT IN CHRONIC INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER AND RENAL CALCULI."

Louis C. Horn, M. D., Ph. D., Professor of Diseases of Children and Dermatology in Baltimore University, writes: "Having used BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in my practice in the past eight or nine years, I find it the most pleasant and most reliable solvent in Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder and Renal Calculi; also in gouty and rheumatic conditions. It is a remedy of great potency."

"UNDER A DEBT OF GRATITUDE TO THIS MOST EXCELLENT WATER FOR WONDERFUL RELIEF."

Wm. C. Wile, A. M., M. D., LL. D., of Danbury, Conn., reports the following (New England Medical Monthly, December 15, 1888): "In a recent outbreak of Nephritic Colic in our own person, BUFFALO LITHIA WATER was speedily cut the attack, under the use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, short, the stones quickly passed, and the debris which followed showed a thorough cleaning of the kidneys and bladder of all foreign substances. All of the reflex symptoms and sequelæ were promptly relieved, and we feel under a deep debt of gratitude to this most excellent Water for wonderful relief."

State Disposes of Brown, Malloy and Benzein.

Nolan and Stahl Will Plead Guilty on Information.

Several pending criminal matters were disposed of today by County Attorney McClintock.

Robert Brown who, with Frank Malloy and Joseph Benzein, alias Joseph Martino, was bound over to the September grand jury on the charge of larceny, will not be held. Brown was released from the state school at Red Wing on parole, some time ago, and it has been decided to return him to that institution. The agent arrived for him this morning. Malloy was much wanted by the Minneapolis authorities on a charge on which they are sure they can secure a conviction, so he was turned over to them today. Benzein pleaded guilty, and was sent to the state reformatory.

The three young men are charged with stealing a suit case from the St. Louis hotel, and some other articles from a place on Lake avenue.

Two other men, held at the county jail to await the action of the grand jury next September, decided to plead guilty on information, and will appear for sentence this afternoon. August Stahl had made application to plead guilty to the charge of grand larceny in the second degree, and Charles Nolan has signified his wish to plead guilty to the charge of burglary in the second degree.

Stahl is claimed to have stolen some money and a knife, but the county attorney places little reliance in the story given by the complaining witness, and would only be able to prove, it is claimed, the theft of the knife.

Nolan is said to have been caught in the act of breaking into a building, owned by Adam Snyder, at Hibbing. As Nolan is only 26 years of age, and eligible to punishment, consisting of a term in the state reformatory, he has the privilege of pleading guilty on information, otherwise he would have to await the action of the grand jury.

FILES HIS FINDINGS

Judge Cant Orders Judgment in the Brigham Case.

Judge Cant has made his findings and order for judgment in the action brought by John H. Brigham, the attorney, against the Stewart Livery company to recover for services rendered in his legal capacity. By the court's ruling, judgment is directed in favor of Mr. Brigham for the balance found to be due him after a comparison is made of several items in the accounts of each party against the other, with interest computed.

The suit involved an accounting of the business relations between Mr. Brigham and the livery company. The former performed certain legal services which the court finds were reasonably worth the sums of $212.50, and $60. The court finds that the livery company reimbursed Mr. Brigham either in cash or livery rigs in a sum totaling $222.46, not including the interests on several amounts for the time they have remained as an indebtedness on Mr. Brigham's part.

Judge Cant granted a 20-day stay of judgment.

EVIDENCE IS BEING TAKEN

John McAlpine Has Many Witnesses to Support Claims.

The trial of the alleged conversion case of John McAlpine against John Millen has settled down to the routine of taking technical evidence in Mr. McAlpine's behalf. Yesterday and today a number of timber men and cruisers were called to the stand to testify as to their knowledge of log scaling and give their opinion as to the percentage of "over-run" when pine logs are converted into lumber.

Mr. McAlpine who was interested with Mr. Millen in the purchase of a large quantity of the Richardson & Avery timber that was sawed at the Scott-Graff mill, claims that Mr. Millen came out ahead in the deal by taking advantage of the overrun. Mr. McAlpine sues for $150,000.

The repairs to the south approach of the ferry bridge have now reached such a stage that the bridge will have to be closed to teams for a day or two, while the temporary approach is removed, and the concrete on the new structure allowed to set.

The engineer has not fixed upon a day for the work yet, but it will be done when it will cause the least possible inconvenience to residents of the point. There will be no interruption to passenger traffic.

ECHO OF KOCH TRIAL.

Citizens' Committee Closes Its Books and Gives Up Task.

New Ulm, Minn., June 14.—The citizens' committee which was appointed at a mass meeting Nov. 19, 1904, to assist in the investigation concerning the death of Dr. E. A. Gebhardt, who was brutally murdered on Nov. 1, 1904, has finished its labors and closed up all accounts. The sum of $1,564.80 was received by the committee through voluntary contributions and of this sum they expended $1,391.50, leaving a balance of $173.50, which has been returned to the donators, pro rata. In a report which they have made public and which is signed by Mayor Charles Silverson, F. H. Retzlaff, W. D. Elbner, Fred Crone and Albert Pfaender, the committee says: "We deem it best to look upon the circumstances which brought the committee into life as a closed chapter, deserving of a citizen's deepest regret, and therefore simply take this opportunity to give the assurance that we have tried to do our duty fearlessly and fairly according to our best understanding, and to express our sincere thanks to those who contributed to the fund and assisted the committee in the severe task which was laid out for it. The murderer has thus far escaped punishment."

LACKING IN GRATITUDE

Young Man Robs Aged Woodsman Who Befriended Him.

Dons Benefactor's New Suit of Clothes, Leaving His Rags.

The role of good Samaritan nearly proved a disastrous one for Nels Oberg, an elderly woodsman, and nothing but the prompt action of a lodging housekeeper kept the object of his friendly interest from robbing the old man of everything he possessed.

Oberg had just come in from the woods with quite a sum of money in his possession, and had purchased an entire new outfit of clothing, including a suit of clothes, a new pair of shoes, shirts, a hat and other small articles. He had quite a sum of money left over, which he placed in the pockets of the new trousers.

Last evening, while walking along Superior street, he met a young man, named Thomas Wilson, and fell into conversation with him. They struck up a sudden friendship, as woodsmen frequently do, and Oberg finally invited the young man to spend the night with him. Wilson had a very seedy appearance, wearing nothing but a pair of old overalls, a shirt and an old pair of river shoes. He was broke, and the old man offered to stake him to a bed. Wilson promptly accepted the offer, and the two retired to the old man's room, in one of the best of the West Superior street hotels.

Early this morning the clerk saw the young man come down stairs wearing the new suit of clothes which Oberg had purchased yesterday. He recognized the suit, and promptly slipped out and summoned Officer Roberg. The policeman placed Wilson under arrest before he got away from the building, and took him back to the room where the old man was still asleep, knowing nothing of the attempt to rob him.

The old clothing worn by Wilson was found in the room, and it was evident that he had simply made an exchange while his benefactor slept, carrying off not only the clothing, but the money and personal belongings contained in the pockets.

He was arraigned in the municipal court, before Judge Windom this morning, on the charge of grand larceny, and waived his preliminary examination. Judge Windom bound him over to the next grand jury, fixing his bail at $500.

The Cleverest Woman in Australia

By Guy Boothby.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Thomas Guilfoy of Melbourne, Australia, had only one fault—he was just the least bit in the world too weak. I don't mean weakness in either a moral or a physical sense, but in the little insignificant trifles which go such a long way towards building up a man's character. And he fell in love—as men of his kind always do—with a girl as ambitiously strong as he was weak. She was a splendid creature in every way—better fitted, his friends said, to adorn an embassy than to rule the middle class home of young Tom Guilfoy. But Guilfoy's father was in ecstasies.

"That's the proper sort of girl for my boy Tom," he would say. "You mark my word she'll make a man of him yet!"

His allowance to the young couple was on a par with his enthusiasm.

During the engagement and for three golden months after the wedding day Tom Guilfoy bragged of what he was going to do in the future. He was going to show his friends, he said, that he was made of the right stuff. His wife said nothing; she looked after his buttons, sung his praises and formed her own plans for his reformation.

Before Christmas he had quarrelled hopelessly with his father over some trival question. The "governor" had his own pet theories and his son should have had sense to humor them; but he failed in this as in everything else, consequently he suddenly found himself cut off. I can tell you he was more than surprised.

Then Mrs. Guilfoy rose up and took matters into her own hands. She didn't rant, she didn't rave, she simply talked quietly but firmly to her husband. She saw that his self-esteem had received a shock, but she knew her man too well to imagine that he would remain very long depressed.

Acting on her flattering advice he applied for admittance to the Victorian bar, and in due course he secured elegantly furnished chambers and commenced the practice of his profession. He had no clients, but his wife had scored one point.

Now to my certain knowledge there are no less than three cleverest women in Australia, but neither of the other two are fit even to button the boots of Mrs. Thomas Guilfoy. She made herself popular everywhere for her husband's sake, and a certain witty governor once said in my hearing that of all women he'd ever met she the most resem— but there, it was all very pretty, and classical, and suited her exactly.

A fornight later Mr. Thomas Guilfoy was briefed by Kelton & Quiddie for Philpot, in the action of "Bell vs. Philpot, Mathews intervening." It was a mixed-up case, just the sort of thing that would either make or break a man.

Guilfoy lit a cigar and looked the brief over with the air of a man capable of mastering its difficulties at once. Reading it a second time he confessed that it certainly was involved, so he finished that cigar, lit another, and read it again. This time the point grew still more obscure, and he began to have a hazy idea that he was not quite so clever as he thought himself.

Putting his papers into his bag he took them home, after dinner made some lame excuse and went to the club. His wife saw through it, but held her peace. She wanted to get hold of the brief.

When he returned about 11 she had with her quick womanly perception found a way out of the difficulty, and she had also invited Mr. and Mrs. Kelton to dinner on the following evening. (Mr. Kelton was the managing partner of the eminent firm.)

While brushing her hair that night she drew her husband on to speak of the case, and he confessed his inability to grasp the all-important point.

Then for five minutes she spoke.

When she had finished he said, effusively, "By Jove, Emily, that's the very point which has been puzzling us all. I believe you are the cleverest woman in the world!"

* * *

It was quite a little dinner, but an enormous success. Mrs. Kelton told her husband afterwards that Mrs. Guilfoy's cook must be an angel. (Mrs. Guilfoy had cooked the greater part of it herself.) When the ladies had retired Mr. Kelton drew his chair up to the table, and over some undoubted port broached the subject of the case, as Mrs. Guilfoy knew he would.

Then, one by one, as a man drives tacks into a board, Tom Guilfoy drove his wife's ideas into the senior partner's head. The partner was delighted, he rose and shook hands with his barrister, and they finished the bottle in great good fellowship. Then they went up to the drawing room.

When the carriage was announced, and after Mrs. Kelton had kissed Mrs. Guilfoy, Mr. Kelton said warmly to his hostess:

"Madam, I congratulate you on your husband's ability. He's a clever fellow, madam; he's solved a great difficulty for us. An enormous difficulty. I see a future before him, madam. I'm proud of his acquaintance! Good-night."

A week later the case was heard, and Guilfoy made his first appearance. He was nervous, but confident, for his wife had drilled the line well into him. He was no fool, nor was he wanting in oratorical powers, and, backed up by the peculiar nature of his defense, he was soon at his ease. His argument was a great success, and his honor, in giving judgment for the defendant, referred in highly complimentary terms to the ability of his learned brother. Thomas Guilfoy's fortune had commenced.

Soon afterwards his wife presented him with a son and heir, and the senior partner stood godfather. The doctor, shaking his head solemnly, said: "Mrs. Guilfoy must not be worried," consequently her husband lost a big will case in a most unaccountable manner; he took the wrong line, his solicitors affirmed. Then the medical man ordered a sea voyage, and Mrs. Guilfoy and the baby went to England. She looked terribly careworn and pale, and her husband naturally felt anxious.

He put up at the club during her absence, and for the first two months wrote regularly by every mail. Then she began to figure in his eyes as a tall, thin, dark-eyed woman, who cried on the promenade deck, and told him to be a good boy, to work hard, and above all, to write often. After this he only wrote once a fortnight.

Somehow or other things began to go very wrong with Tom Guilfoy. He neglected his work and lost three important cases through pure carelessness. His solicitors remonstrated, but he took no notice. He lost another.

Then he began to take a "nip" occasionally. All men and a good many women know what that means. He scarcely went near his office, but played pool at the club until his hand grew too shaky and he could hardly see the balls. After that for three weeks he disappeared into the black valley altogether.

His wife had been gone six months, and he only wrote when he felt inclined—which was not often. His handwriting must have been a revelation to her, for she suddenly wrote announcing her return. Taking the letter out of the club rack he put it in his pocket, intending to read it when alone. About a month afterward he chanced to find it. The Oratava was expected that day, and he went down to Williamstown to meether, taking just a nip or two to prepare himself for the interview. He could not trust himself to shave.

Arriving on board, he hunted about for his wife. She was in the salon, and two stewards, counting spoons at a side table, looked out of the corners of their eyes at him and winked at each other.

I have said before that Mrs. Guilfoy was a clever woman. I withdraw that statement and say that she was the cleverest woman that breathed. Another wife would have shrieked and fainted on being welcomed by such a husband as Tom Guilfoy looked at that moment, but she did neither; she was far too wise. Conceive it if you can! But I tell you that that radiant, majestic creature, beautiful as Aurora, floated up the salon towards him with her hands outstretched, and before he knew where he was she had kissed him on either cheek, crying:

"Tom, Tom, my dear, dear boy! Oh, how glad I am to be with you again!"

Then she took him home, and he felt like a bad little boy who, anticipating a whipping, had been unexpectedly forgiven.

Now, how that woman worked, no one will ever understand; but she slaved, she toiled, she fought, she struggled night and day to lift her husband back to his lost position. She was popular before she left; she was a thousand times more popular when she returned. Nobody could deny her anything; and even old Kelton began to think that after all perhaps he'd been just a little too hard on Tom.

A small brief followed. She brushed her husband up, gave him his cue, and he won two more cases, and his nerve returned. By this time he could run downstairs without using the banisters.

His cure was complete, and everyone said that Tom Guilfoy was a better man than they had thought him. Of course he got all the credit—that's what is called the justice of life.

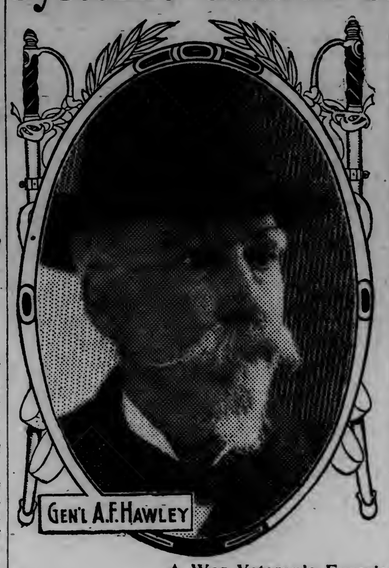

Since then he has left the club severely alone, and his wife takes precious good care that he takes "nips" no longer. He trusts to her judgment for everything.

Today there is not a more popular barrister in Melbourne than Thomas Guilfoy, and as for his wife—well, I'm not going to say what I think of her. The English language does not allow a man sufficient words to do her justice.

HOWE ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Buffalo, June 14.—Thad H. Howe of Chicago today was elected president of the Travelers' Protective association.

Systemic Catarrh of Summer Effects Every Organ of the Body.

"There is no better remedy in the world than Pe-ru-na for systemic catarrh."
S. B. Hartman, M. D.

A War Veteran's Experience.

General A. F. Hawley, 1336 25th street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have used Peruna and find it very beneficial for kidney trouble, and especially good for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."

Spring and Summer Catarrh.

There is a form of catarrh especially prevalent in spring and summer, called by Dr. Hartman systemic catarrh.

This form of catarrh especially deranges the stomach, bowels and other organs of the abdomen. The whole mucous tract lining the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys is in an inflamed condition, and these organs fail to perform their proper function.

Systemic catarrh may be or may not be accompanied by catarrh in other parts of the body. In some cases there is a hacking cough. It may be also associated with catarrh in the head.

But, in typical cases of systemic catarrh all the organs of the abdomen are in a weakened and sluggish condition.

Dyspepsia and Biliousness.

Sometimes it is called dyspepsia, at other times biliousness, or the patient may be suspected of having kidney disease or appendicitis.

Systemic catarrh presents symptoms which resemble closely a great many different diseases.

Peruna has for a long time been regarded the remedy par excellence for conditions of this kind.

The accompanying testimonials are sufficient to indicate the promptness with which Peruna relieves these symptoms and the satisfaction which people express concerning the use of Peruna.

We have a multitude of such testimonials. They are from all parts of the Western Hemisphere. They fairly represent the sincere and unbiased testimony of the people.

Catarrh of Stomach.

Mr. W. R. Callahan, proprietor of Big Hill Farm, and a prominent fruit grower and stock raiser, Glenvar, Va., writes:

"I write to express my kindness toward you and your good medicine, Peruna.

"I had a very bad spell of sickness and could not eat anything at all.

"My head, stomach, in fact, my whole body ached, and it looked as though nothing would do me any good.

"I had almost given up. I decided to try a bottle of your Peruna and before I had taken half the bottle my appetite came to me and my head became all right.

"In fact, I was all right all over. Peruna cured me."

Liver and Kidneys.

Mr. Joseph Klee, 215 E. 4th street, Topeka, Kas., writes:

"My wife took Peruna for liver trouble and a rundown condition incident to the same. A few bottles built up her health and strength.

"I took Peruna for a cold which settled in my kidneys, giving me much pain. In two weeks I was much better and in a few months I was well."

PARSONS' TROUBLES.

Forgotten Sermons and Texts---Odd Questions They Are Asked.

London Daily Mail: A parson's nightmare (when he is unfortunate enough to suffer from one) generally takes the same form—a crowded church, an expectant congregation and the unhappy dreamer striving, in a perfect frenzy, to make sense of a hopeless rigmarole which ought to be his sermon but is not.

Every clergyman has experienced such episodes. Even the Archbishop of Canterbury himself has not escaped. Probably, amid all the many incidents of his Grace's life, he remembers one Sunday, some years ago, when he was preaching at Twickenham.

In addition to the sermon, the Dean of Windsor (as he was then) had the first lesson assigned to him. He stepped to the lectern to read it. A pained expression of suspense was visible throughout the congregation; something was wrong.

The psalm ended, the Dean's mouth was in the very act of forming the opening sentence, "Here beginneth," when—another psalm was commenced by the organist.

The future Archbishop had been a little premature, and it is quite safe to say that not one of the many portraits published of his Grace gives the slightest approximation of the expression his face wore.

There is the possibility of going to the other extreme, and not being prepared when the moment comes. In a church not many miles from the one last mentioned a very nervous curate stepped out to read a lesson.

The place was not found; the lesson was from the "Lamentations," so short a book that it is very easy for a nervous man turning the pages rapidly to miss it altogether. He did miss it—badly—and every fresh miss added to his consternation and to the pained intensity of the silence.

The vicar came to the rescue by finding the place in a small Bible and handing it to the curate, but by that time the poor man was reduced to such a state that he could not utter a word. Of course, parsons suffer from nightmare: who wouldn't under the circumstances?

There is a certain much advertised volume of excellent outline sermons which a certain young clergyman, distrustful of his own resources, determined to use.

He gave out his text boldly, as it was printed, "Proverbs xviii." A look of interest came over the faces of the young ladies of the congregation.

The preacher repeated the reference in sonorous tones, and then looked at his Bible to read it out. The interest was explained; the words confronting were: "Whoso findeth a wife, findeth a good thing"—a bold subject to choose for a first sermon! Now that book is still in print, the error still remains, and if young clergymen would avoid raising false hopes they had better verify their texts.

The disconcerting incidents of clerical life, however, are not confined to services in church. A few years ago a clergyman of very solemn aspect and most serious intentions was ministering to one whom we will call Jones, who lay upon a sickbed seriously ill.

Now Jones had not been a model character, and the parson knew it. It was clearly necessary to bring Jones to a repentant frame of mind, but it was equally clear that the sick man did not intend to "give himself away." At last he replied to his spiritual adviser, "Now, look 'ere, sir; I tell 'e straight I ain't got a sin on my mind."

The clergyman looked at Jones searchingly. I wish I could say that, but I am afraid I can't," he observed solemnly. Jones viewed him with a new interest. "Ah! I shouldn't wonder," he remarked after a pause, "you be out and about, but here be I; what can I do?"

One more sickbed reminiscence to illustrate a parson's perplexity. A certain ancient dame in a country village has listened during a long period of illness, to the exhortations of her vicar. She was devout and attentive, but hinted more than once that she had something on her mind.

There was a question she wished to ask. She hoped to have it answered before she died, but she wasn't quite sure whether the vicar could do so.

It was quite clear from the clergyman's encouraging manned that whether he could or not he meant to try but when the question came it was a little disconcerting—"Ought pass'ns to swear?"

Anxious to gain fuller knowledge of the reasons behind this extraordinary question, the vicar inquired why she asked it.

The old lady was quite serious, quite in earnest; it was a question she had wished answered ever since she was a little girl, and now—well ,perhaps she could get her answer at last. Her reason? Yes, she would tell the reason, which she did in the following words:

"When I was a little maid the rector of —— was a terrible fine preacher, for sure. When he did come to preach at our church, glad enough we was, I reckon. Now, the pulpit was a girt high place as big as ever you see, and pass'n used to go up the steps wearing his spurs, just as he had ridden over, and a girt gownd. One day, when I was in the front seat just by the foot of the pulpit stairs, Pass'n —— was to praich. Up the steps he went, as fine a figure of a man as ever I did see; but when a raiched the top step, the spur did catch in his gownd and down a fell, topsy-turvy like. Well, sir, I du assure you 'twas a proper mix up. You couldn't see pass'n for the gownd that had rolled round and round 'nu.

"By and by his spur did tear a hole where he did kick and scrummage, and I don't know for sure, but I thought as out of the thicey hole there come a word a pass'n shouldn't say."

UNSATISFACTORY CHANGE.

Los Angeles Times: "Such a change," said Senator Tillman, apropos of a certain bill, "would be about as satisfactory as the change that a landlord once made.

"A woman came to see this landlord. She wanted to look at a house that was to let. The man sent a clerk to show her over the house, and on her return she said:

"'I like the house very well. There is only one thing that I object to.'

"'Well, madam, any reasonable alteration,' the landlord murmured suavely, 'would, provided you took a three years' lease—'

"'I'd take a three years' lease,' said the woman, 'if only the house had more closets.'

"'The number of closets shall be doubled,' said the landlord.

"'Very well,' said the woman, in a pleased voice, and she signed the lease then and there.

"After she was gone, the landlord called in his clerk again.

"'John,' he said, 'take a carpenter over to No. 37, and have him divide each of the closets in two.'"

CHARLES HAWTREY'S SHAVE.

Boston Herald: Charles Hawtrey told the following during his last stay in Boston.

"During one of my trips through Europe I found myself in a small village with no razors. They had been packed in my handbag, which I had left at the hotel where I had stayed the day before. There was no barber's shop in the place, and I wah in a quandry as to how I might get shaved. The innkeeper told me that there was a man in the village who occasionally shaved people, and I determined to risk a cut or two, and sent for him.

"The amateur barber arrived, and after a little hesitation he said to me: 'Will you please, sir, lie down flat on your back while I shave you?'

"Thinkin' that it was probably the custom of the country, I stretched out comfortably on my back, and nearly went to sleep while the fellow shaved me, so light was his touch.

"When he had finished I said: 'I am curious to know why you asked me to lie down to be shaved?'

"'Because, sir,' was his ingenious reply, 'I never before shaved a live man!'"

SHOOTERS' BIG EVENT

Great American Handicap Will Soon be Held at Indianapolis.

Tournament Under the Auspices of the Interstate Association.

The Grand American Handicap at targets, the blue ribbon event in the trapshooting world, will be held on the grounds of the Indianapolis Gun club, Indianapolis, Ind., June 19 to 22 inclusive. The selection of these grounds for the third time needs no explanation to those who attended the last two handicaps. The grounds contain 16 acres of level grass land. Five sets of traps, facing north, are in place, and the background is perfect. There is ample shelter for 500 contestants in case of stormy weather, and the appointments are not equaled by any similar place in the world.

The Grand American is given by the Interstate association, which, since its organization, has been noted for its policy of progressiveness and liberality n all matters of interest to trap shooters. A history of trap shooting in the United States would show that the association's efforts have met with a very gratifying success and have been thoroughly appreciated. The rules formulated by it are now accepted in all parts of the country by gun clubs. In every department of trap shooting the association has always advocated that which was good and which made the best sportsmanship. Incorporated "for the encouragement of trap shooting," the aim of the association in giving tournaments has been to promote a deservedly popular sport, to bring together experts, semiexperts and novices, guard their interests and to show how a big tournament should be conducted.

The growth of trap shooting in the United States has been so phenomenal in the past few years, and trap shooters have so multiplied in all sections, that the G. A. H. is no longer equal to the public demand. Each of the four great natural divisions of the United States is able to support an event of its own run on the lines of the G. A. H. In order to meet all the requirements of this improved condition the association, with its usual liberality, has arranged four new handicaps, similar to the G. A. H., for 1906, and has appropriated $1,000 for each. The first of these, the Southern Handicap, was held at Nashville, Tenn., on May 15 to 17, on the grounds of the Cumberland Park Gun club. It was very successful. Others to be given are the Eastern Handicap, under the auspices of the Florists' GGun club at Philadelphia, Penn., July 7 to 10; Western Handicap, under the auspices of the Denver Trap club, Denver Colo., August 21 to 23, and the Pacific Coast Handicap (the second at San Francisco, Cal., September 7 to 9, under the auspices of the San Francisco Trap Shooting association.

Following, in brief, is a history of the G. A. H. since its inauguration:

The first Grand American Handicap at targets was held on June 2, 1900, at Interstate Park, Queens, L. I., New York, and had seventy-four starters. Rolla O. Heikes, a professional, of Dayton, O., won the event with a score of 91 out of 100 targets, shooting from 22 yards.

In 1901 the event was held on July 18 at Interstate Park, and had seventy-five starters. E. C. Griffith of Pascoag, R. I., an amateur, was the winner, breaking 95 out of 100 targets from the nineteen-yard mark.

The third Grand American was held on May 8, 1902, at Interstate Park. The interest in this event was increasing, and there were ninety-one starters this year. Charles F. Floyd, an amateur, of New York, standing at eighteen yards, won with a score of 94.

After this tournament a determined effort was made to have the next Grand American held somewhere in the West. It was felt that a more central location would result in a large increase in attendance, as there was a large number of shooters who could not spare the time nor stand the expense necessary for a trip to the extreme East, but who would attend it if it were held at some more central point. At the annual meeting of the association it was decided to try the experiment, and go West, in 1903, and the result proved that the decision was a wise one.

The Handicap was held on April 16, at Kansas City, Mo., and there were 179 starters. M. Diefenderfer, an amateur of Wood River, Neb., won with a score of 94 out of 100 targets, standing at sixteen yards.

Several cities bid for the Handicap of 1904, but it was finally decided to hold it on the grounds of the Indianapolis Gun club, Indianapolis, Ind.

The fifth annual G. A. H. was a record-breaker, and was the largest target tournament ever held in this or any other country. In the Preliminary Handicap, on June 22, there were 273 starters. L. A. Cummings of Bunker Hill, Ill., at eighteen yards and W. H. Clay of St. Louis, Mo., at sixteen yards, both amateurs, tied on 98 out of 100 targets. In the shoot-off of 20 targets, Cummings won with 18 to Clay's 16.

The Grand American Handicap was shot on the next day. There were 236 entries and 21 7starters. R. D. Guptill of Aiken, Minn., and W. M. Randall of Telluride, Colo., at seventeen yards, both amateurs, tied on 96 out of 100 targets. The first shoot-off at 20 targets resulted in a tie on 17. The second shoot-off was also a tie on 17, but on the third trial Guptill broke 19 to Randall's 15, and won.

In the Consolation Handicap on the 23rd there were 163 starters. This was won by W. H. Heer, a professional of Concordia, Kan., with a score of 98 out of 100 targets, from 20 yards rise.

The sixth annual Grand American Handicap was held on the same grounds, beginning June 27 and ending June 30, 1905. The Preliminary Handicap on June 28 had 307 starters. R. R. Barber, an amateur of Paullina, Iowa won with 98 out of 10 0targets, from the sixteen-yard mark.

The Grand American Handicap was shot on the following day. There were 250 entries and 333 starters. R. R. Barber, winner of the preliminary, also carried off the honors in this event with a score of 9 bout of 100 targets, missing his ninety-sixth target. Mr. Barber is the only man who has won the two principal events since the Grand American was inaugurated, and his score of 99 stands at the head.

There were 181 starters in the Consolation Handicap on June 30, J. T. Atkinson, of Newcastle, Pa., standing at 18 yards, and Claude Binyon, Lowell, Ind., standing at 16 yards, both amateurs, tied on 99 out of 100 targets. In the shoot-off, at 20 targets. Atkinson won with 18 to Binyon's 16.

In the three handicap events R. R. Barber, from 16 yards, led the field, breaking 294 out of 300 targets, an evareg of 98 per cent.

The following figures give an idea of the great improvement which has been made in shooting since the first Grand American Handicap: In 1900 there was but one score of 90 or better, with 75 starters; in 1901 there were six scores of 90 to 95, with 75 starters; in 1902, four scores of 90 to 94, with 91 starters; in 1903, 15 scores of 90 to 94, with 179 starters; in 1904, 74 scores of 90 to 96, with 317 starters, and in 1905 there were 100 scores of 90 to 99, with 323 starters.

In 1905 the Interstate association added a new feature to the Grand American which proved to be most interesting. This was the amateur state team championship, five men on eac hteam, 100 targets per man; members of them to be residents of the same state. Seventeen teams were ntered, representing ten states. The Ohio team: Rhoades, 93; Upson, 95; Snow, 97; Orr, 96; Alkire, 93; total, 474, won the first prize. Illinois team: Graham, 96; Willard, 89; Dunnell, 95; Soace, 97; Powers, 96; total, 473, won the second prize. The other teams in order were: Iowa, 458; Nebraska, 456; Chicago, of Illinois, 458; Missouri, 456; Indianapolis, 448; Pennsylvania No. 1, 445; Illinois No. 3, 436; Indiana, 426; Michigan, 424; National Cash Register of Dayton, Ohio, 420; Illinois No. 4, 404.

This year the association has still further broadened the competition by replacing the Consolation Handicap with an individual championship contest for amateurs and professionals respectively. Each contest is at 150 targets per man and will determine the question of individual superiority under scratch conditions.

The great success of these tournaments may justly be credited largely to one man —Elmer E. Shaner, secretary-manager of the association. His long experience in managing tournaments has enabled him to handle large numbers of shooters with absolutely no friction. He is familiar with the minutest detail of the work and is perfectly impartial in his enforcement of the necessary rules. Add to all this unfailing courtesy in his hearing toward all who approach him, a willingness to give any assistance in his power to all who ask it, regardless of any inconvenience to himself, and we have an ideal man for the place, and one whom all the shooters swear by.

NO EVIDENCE

That Houser Offered Host a Cent, Says Former's Attorney.

Madison, Wis., June 14.—"There is not one scintilla of evidence that Mr. Houser offered to pay Mr. Host one cent." The foregoing statement of Attorney R. W. Jones, together with testimony of Insurance Commissioner Host, that Host had talked over with Attorney General Sturdevant, the alleged bribery attempt of Secretary of State Houser constituted the features of Houser's preliminary examination which was begun in the municipal court today before Judge Donovan. Upon the contention that Mr. Host would not be the "present or prospective beneficiary" of the alleged offer of $200,000 for the Republican campaign fund, Attorney Jones bases a motion for acquittal of Mr. Houser.

Asks New Trial.

The Alger-Smith company has filed a motion for a new trial in the case against them by Peter I. Anderson, tried in the recent term of United States court. The motion is made on the grounds of newly discovered evidence and the belief that the damages granted by the jury were excessive and allowed while the jury was under the influence of passion or prejudice. Anderson was hurt in the Rice's point mill of the company some time ago, and sued, recovering heavy damages.

Peru, Ind., June 14.—Mrs. Elizabeth Tresch, aged 51 years, was choked to death by a burglar last night.

MRS. HOPSON'S ADVENTURE.

Perkins Hears About a Trunk With No Burglar in It.

New York Sun: "Mrs. Hopson's just been telling me a most remarkable story," said Mrs. Archibald Perkins to her husband at dinner. "If I'd seen it in a newspaper I'd never've believed it. Such a narrow escape! Dear me, the soup's burned to a cinder! I've warned Katy again and again. She's scarcely got over the shock yet."

"Who, Katy?" asked Mr. Perkins.

"Katy? No! Mrs. Hopson. If she didn't make such good bread and cook vegetables I'd get rid of her."

"Who, Mrs. Hopson?" asked Mr. Perkins.

"No, Katy. She's been away all the spring."

"Katy?" said Mr. Perkins.

"No, Mrs. Hopson. Most of the time at Hoffiver's Inn. Let's go there next year. She says it's the nicest place for muffins she was ever at. She got back last Tuesday and she couldn't get her trunks. Next time, she says, she's going to send on one or two trunks several days ahead, but I think she'd need her things at the hotel till the last minute; wouldn't you?"

"I need her things?" said Mr. Perkins. "I can't see it. But what was her narrow escape?"

"Oh, she'd just been reading about a burglar that had himself locked into a trunk and taken into a house and got out and robbed it the same night. She was three days getting only one of her trunks, and she thought to herself—what a lovely sunset tonight; did you notice?"

"What made her think of a lovely sunset?" asked Mr. Perkins.

"She didn't. I was thinking of it. When it came she was sure it was hers."

"Her sunset?" asked Mr. Perkins.

"Her sunset! No, her trunk. There were the initials and the foreign labels. They say she pasted most of 'em on herself. But when she went to open it, the key wouldn't fit. I saw Mr. and Mrs. Hatterson on the avenue this afternoon. The last time we saw them they were having trouble about their trunk in Boston. But now they were walking along together, laughing and as happy as possible."

"Why not? Trouble over a trunk shouldn't last forever."

"Oh, dear, how stupid you are! I meant it didn't look's if there was anything to that talk about their getting a divorce."

"Looks more's if they had got one already," said Mr. Perkins.

"Well, she tried it again and again."

"Tried getting a divorce?"

"Mrs. Hopson try getting a divorce! Why, how silly! They get along beautifully together. He always lets her talk without interrupting. And she just adores him. And they've been married five years!"

"Oh, you meant Mrs. Hatterson tried it again and again?"

"Mrs. Hatterson! No, Mrs. Hopson tried the key, I meant. You ought to've known. It wouldn't fit. She knew 'twas the key, 'cause she remembered taking it out of the lock and putting it into her bag. They're carrying 'em much bigger now. I saw one today as big's a sofa pillow."

"A key?" asked Mr. Perkins.

"No, no, a bag. At any rate, she couldn't get it open. She sent for a locksmith. He fussed and fssed, but couldn't open it, and he made her nervous by asking her over and over if she was sure 'twas her trunk. She was thinking all the time of the burglar. I've told her over and over again not to cook her beef so long. It's like chips. It doesn't seem to do the least good. He said he'd have to break it open. He never knew a trunk that he couldn't open before."

"I never did, either," said Mr. Perkins. "At least I never heard of one that opened behind."

"I don't know what you mean," said Mrs. Perkins. "My; what poor gas! We'll have to have candles. That frightened her. She was almost sure that the burglar was in there. She wanted to send for the police. But the locksmith kept at work. She couldn't bear to think what might be in it. She didn't want to stay and see it opened. She was bound to leave the room and was just going to ask the locksmith. Do you think it's going to freeze tonight? I've a dozen plants outside. But he told her he'd look in first. Finally, he managed to turn the lock. 'No, no, don't open it!' said she. 'Peek in first anyhow!' So he raised the lid just a little and said—Mary, take Mr. Perkins' plate; don't you see he's done with it? And he said—How awkward you are! Didn't they teach you better at your last place? Well—Oh, where was I? Oh, yes, he lifted the lid, and what do you think he saw?"

"The burglar, of course," said Mr. Perkins.

"Oh, how can you speak out like that?" almost screamed Mrs. Perkins. "I'll have a nightmare all night now. But it was worse than a burglar."

"Worse'n a burglar!" exclaimed her husband, interested. "What then?"

"She was so frightened she was going to run out of the room. But the locksmith called her back and she pecked in. There was nothing but Mr. Hopson's clothes!"

"What was there so dreadful about that?"

"Why, there wasn't one of the things she wanted for the reception to the prince that night and she couldn't go. That's why the key wouldn't fit. But she's hardly had a decent night's rest since, thinking of what might have been in it, and the burglar's getting out and frightening her to death. She says she never had a narrower escape in her life, except when she missed the steamer by only five minutes."

"And what happened to that? Founder on an iceberg?" asked Mr. Perkins.

"Oh, no; how absurd! She'd got mixed on the date. It didn't sail till next day." "Closest call I ever heard of," remarked Mr. Perkins.

"Weren't they?" said she. "I knew you'd be interested, but I wish you wouldn't interrupt; you mix me up so."

SOME STAGE MEALS.

Actors nowadays do not have to dine before performances, for almost every play affords them the opportunity to eat and drink on the stage.

Realism in most cases demands that the actors really eat, and many ingenious plans have been executed to make it possible for the performers to eat and enunciate clearly at the same time. In the "Girl From the Golden West," the girl and her bandit really consume "a leming turnover," and a "charlotte rusk" at every performance, but many actors fake the food. In "The Duke of Killicrankie," where the actors talk all through breakfast, the dishes are made of spun sugar, browned, that appeared real, but melted as soon as placed in the mouth, so the performer could masticate and talk easily. One night a practical joker substituted the toughest and stickiest caramels he could find, and came near breaking up the performance.

James A. Herne, a stickler for realism, served the most realistic and appalling of stage meals—and then played every night, and some times four matinees a week. At the famous dinner in "Shore Acres" the actors ate real turkey, cranberry sauce, celery, mashed potatoes and pumpkin pies until they dodged Thanksgiving feasts and sought corned beef. One actor, notoriously improvident, wrote: "Three turkey winters, two corned beef summers, and no relief in sight."

Sponge cake, extremely light and molded and colored like roasts or fowls, is a favorite stage trick, and sliced bananas are the saviors of the property man called upon to cater to stage feasters. Once when Ward Kidder and James were doing "Macbeth," a green property man served the banquet and put a dozen bananas, whole, in a fruit dish in the center of the table. Even Banquo's ghost grinned at the sight of the tragedians trying to act while peeling and eating the bananas.

Once an entire company landed in Wichita, Kas., on a train just in time to rush to the theater without eating, but feeling thankful that the big corned beef and cabbage feast served in the first act—the same which they had detested all year—would stay their appetites until the performance was over. That night "props" served a feast of leather and cotton batting.

There is graft in stage food, too. When Forbes Robertson was presenting "Caste," a slice of ham was used, and every night there was an expense item, "ham—10c"—until late in the season some one discovered that the ham was a painted piece of leather.

Richard Mansfield is said to be the only actor who uses real champagne on the stage. The others use fakes, such as diluted Rhine wine with bicarbonate of soda, costing 4 cents a quart, aerated celery tonic, cider champagne, and charged water with brown sugar. The cowboys in "The Squaw Man" drink whisky made of water and brown sugar or tea—and each has his individual bottle.

Almost all the newer plays have eating or drinking in them. The lost boys in "Peter Pan" have a noisy supper of bread and milk, while in "Mlle. Modiste" there is a gorgeous feast, with flunkies and elaborate glass and silver.

Table Linens For Brides.

Nothing in her trousseau gives a bride more pleasure than fine table linens, daintily embroidered. And in nothing should she exercise greater care in selection, for good linens are destined to last until she tires of the pattern, but poor linens, be they ever so showily patterned and starched, will give out before she has barely started on her housekeeping course. The store you buy linens from has much to do with this problem. Here none but the best linens obtainable are carried, and all of them in patterns not to be found elsewhere. For instance, the "Narcissus" pattern, the same as used on the Thanksgiving table at the White House in Washington, is here. Also the Vienna "Empire," one of the most elaborate and ornate patterns ever conceived or shown.

For the coming week these Specials are offered:

2x2½ yards—excellent quality Damask Pattern Cloth—soft and heavy—value $5.00—Special $4.00.

ALBERTSON'S

LIKE LOTS OF HUSBANDS.

Los Angeles Times: "The late Alfred Lee, author of the famous 'Champagne Charlie' song," said a musician, "outlived his popularity by some forty years. Of the song 'Champagne Charlie' everybody had heard, but Alfred Lee, its composer, was an unknown man. Why, this poor fellow made only $30 out of the most famous comic song of the last century.

"I once met Lee in England. He was quiet and mild and absent minded. His wife, to tell the truth, found his absentmindedness rather a trial.

"She began, one day at dinner, to tell him an interesting experience she had had. He sat gazing straight before him. In the middle of her story she broke off.

"'But I see your mind is elsewhere, Alfred,' she said, with a sigh. 'I'll tell you this some other time. I'm only bothering you.'

"'Oh, no. Keep right on, my dear,' said Lee. 'I'm not listening.'"

STRONG SENSE OF HUMOR.

Los Angeles Times: "There's nothing like a sense of humor," said Rear-Admiral Bubbler at Atlantic City. "In a woman, in a soldier, in a sailor, in a clerk, a sense of humor is a help and a blessing through life.

"At the same time, even a sense of humor may exist in excess. I, for my part, shouldn't care to have too great a sense of humor as a British soldier I once heard about.

"This soldier was ordered to be flogged. During the flogging he laughed continually. The lash was laid on all the harder, but under the rain of blows the soldier laughed like a man at an R. H. Davis farce.

"'What are you laughing at?' the sergeant finaly asked.

"'Why,' the soldier chuckled, 'I'm the wrong man.'"

WHAT TO SAY.

Philadelphia Ledger: One afternoon a Sunday-school was about to be dismissed, and the youngsters were already in anticipation. They relaxed their cramped little limbs after the hours of confinement on straight back chairs and benches. Then the superintendent arose, and, instead of the usual dismissal, announced: "And now, children, let me introduce Mr. L—— who will give us a short talk."

Mr. L—— smilingly arose, and after gaing impressively around the classroom, began: "I hardly know what to say," when the whole school was convulsed to hear a small, thin voice in the rear of the class lisp:

"Thay amen and thit down."

An Error Corrected!

In the notice to merchants appearing in The Herald of June 11, the little word "not" was in some unexplainable manner left out.

The notice should read:

Merchants are hereby notified to charge no goods to my account or the Gopher Shoe Works, or deliver good to anyone (not including my wife and members of family), unless the order for same is signed by me personally

HER LOAD ENORMOUS

Steamer J. P. Morgan Breaks All Ore Carrying Records.

Smashes Gary's Mark by Nearly One Thousand Tons.

On Tuesday last the steamer J. Pierpont Morgan loaded 13,294 gross tons of ore at Escanaba and smashed all cargo records. The cargo will be delivered at South Chicago, and she carried 956 tons more than the steamer E. H. Gary did when she made the record between the two ports. The Morgan was loaded to 21 ft. 6 in.

The Gary holds the record from Lake Superior. She carried 11,093 tons through the Sault river. The Morgan will probably be sent to Lake Superior on her next trip, when a new record for that trade will be made. In a full season trading between Escanaba and South Chicago, where she could be loaded to her full depth, the Morgan would move 797,640 gross tons of ore.

The steamer Maritana, says a Cleveland paper, which is regarded as a small ship now, made a cargo record between Escanaba and Chicago in 1892, when she carried 4,200 gross tons of ore. That was fourteen years ago, and the record made by the Morgan on Tuesday shows that the capacity of the boats have been tripled in that time.

The Maritana is 348 feet over all, 45 feet beand 24½ feet deep, and the Morgan is 600 feet over all, 58 feet beam and 32 feet deep. The fuel consumption of the two steamers is about the same.

It took about 350 cars of forty tons each to bring the Morgan's cargo from the mines to the shipping point. The Morgan is the first 600-foot vessel to go into commission on the lakes. She was built at the South Chicago yard of the American Shipbuilding company for the Pittsburg Steamship company. Capt. A. P. Chambers is master of the Morgan.

The Morgan is the first of four steamers 600 feet long under contract for the United States Steel corporation, and went into commission a few days ago. The second ship, to be known as the Henry H. Rogers, will be launched at South Chicago next Saturday.

Cleveland, June 14.—One of the steamers now under construction by the Toledo Shipbuilding company has ben sold to G. A. Tomlinson of Duluth. The ship is of the 7,500 ton class and will be 458 feet long, 52 feet beam and 30 feet deep. It will come out this season.

IS OPPOSED TO A SEA LEVEL CANAL

Senator Dryden Makes Strong Argument for Lock System.

Washington, June 14.—Senator Dryden today addressed the senate at length in opposition to the bill providing for a sea level canal across the isthmus of Panama, and in support of a lock canal. After a very exhaustive history of the investigations bringing the canal project to its present state. Mr. Dryden said:

"Congress is asked to regard with preference the judgment and opinions of foreign engineers, and to disregard the judgment and opinions of American engineers. We are seriously asked to completely disregard American opinion, as voiced by the isthmian commission, responsible for the enterprise as a whole; as voiced by the secretary of war, by Chief Engineer Stevens, and finally by all the engineers now on the isthmus who have a practical knowledge of the actual conditions. I for one believe that it will be a fatal error for the nation to commit itself to the practically hopeless and visionary sea level project, and to delay for many years the opening of this much-needed waterway connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific.

I for one am opposed to a waste of untold millions and to additional burdens of needless taxation, while the project of a lock canal offers every practical advantage, offers a canal within a reasonable period of time and at a reasonable cost, offers a waterway of enormous advantage to American shipping, of the greatest possible value to the nation in the event of war and the opportunity for the American people to carry into execution at the earliest possible moment, what has been called the 'dream of navigators' and which has thus far defied the engineering skill of European nations."

On the question of cost, he said:

"The estimated saving in money alone by adopting the lock plan—that is, on the original investment, to say nothing of accumulating interest charges, would be at least $100,000,000. Granting all that is said in favor of a sea level canal, it is not apparent by any evidence produced that such a canal would prove a meaterial advantage over a lock canal."

HONOR AMONG THIEVES.

Crooks Ready to Rob Crooks, Says a Detective.

New York Sun: "Some time ago I saw a story in The Sun which sought to puncture the erroneous notion that there is any such thing as 'squareness among gamblers,'" said a detective of extensive experience. "I thought then that it was about time a fall should be taken out of another one of those bogus maxims—the maxim that there exists any such a thing as 'honor among thieves.'

"I never yet knew a crook who wouldn't do a fellow crook with as little compunction as he'd eat a plate of ham and eggs, and I'll just run over a story or two to prove this.

"Five or six years ago three class A cracksmen of New York framed up a promising bank job in Trenton, N. J. The job went through on greased skids —up to a certain point. The cracksmen put the bank's watchman under the gun when he stepped to the banic's front grating to get a breath of fresh air—it was in the summer time. He had to let them in and they had him cordaged up and gagged before he knew where he was.

"The vault safe was an ordinary combination affair, without any time lock contrivances, and it was easy for experts with the nitro and the blowpipe. They got her open after an hour's work. Then it looked pretty soft for them, for there was about $40,000 in new currency in plain sight. They let the metal money alone and made a leisurely job of dividing the swag into three equal parts.

"The lookout or outside man abandoned his post in front of the grating of the small bank to be in at the division of the loot. The three cracksmen were sitting inside the vault, stuffing the currency into their kicks and planning for their different hiding places, when two cops suddenly appeared at the entrance to the vault and covered the three of them. It was all so sudden that the hands of the three cracksmen went straight up.

"While one of the cops kept the three covered by the gun-fanning process the other went behind them and deftly removed their shooting tools. Then he quite as deftly abstracted their bundles of swag. This done, 'March,' said two of the cops to the three disarmed cracksmen. The three were marched to the basement, where the watchman was still cordaged up. Then the two cops executed a walking backward stunt, still covering the three cracksmen, got out of the steel door at the back leading into the alley, slammed the door, which they closed with a spring lock and the three cracksmen were neatly imprisoned.

"The imprisoned cracksmen had no tools and so they couldn't pry their way out. They untied the watchman and ordered him to turn them loose but they had collared the watchman's keys upstairs before dragging him to the basement, and the keys were still upstairs. So the three cracksmen and the watchmen were found together in the basement at opening up time the following morning.

"The cracksmen's story that they themselves had been stuck up by a pair of cops was scouted, and when the watchman chimed in and stated that the story was true he was immediately suspected of being himself in cahoots with the blowpipe men. The watchman had a hard time to square himself, and came mighty close to going to prison. He stuck to the cop story so persistently, however, that the policeman on the bank beat and the one on the adjoining beat had to get to the front with all sorts of explanations as to where they had been while the robbery was in progress. To square themselves both of the cops had eventually to own up that they had been taking naps at the time, and they lost their badges. The three cracksmen got their bits in Trenton prison.

"Now those two chaps in the rigout of cops were Chicago bank burglars. They'd sailed East to wait for their graft to pick up a bit in their headquarters town of Chi, and in some mysterious way they learned of the details of this proposed Trenton job. It looked like ready money, and no work worth mentioning, and so they went to one of the fence costumers of New York and got themselves diked out in cops' rigs.

"Then they went to Trenton on the appointed night, and just waited around till their moment arrived. Then they made their play, and it was a neat and profitable one at that. They got away with the goods, and the story didn't get out for four years afterward. Then one of the Chicago cracksmen got drunk one night and blew the yarn. Now, if there was ever anything in this 'honor among thieves' fake you'd naturally have supposed that these two Chicago cracksmen would have been ostracized by their pals who heard of their profitable masquerade as cops in Trenton. Nothing of the sort happened. Their pals patted them on the back and called them smart fellows, and ha-ha'd over the picture of the three trapped cracksmen locked in the bank basement with the watchman.

"Spark grafters are very rarely on the level with each other, even when they're working as a team. I recall one case of this sort particularly well, because one of the crooks involved told me of the incident most picturesquely.

"A pair of topnotch Philadelphia spark grafters got on to the fact that the proprietor of a certain Walnut street restaurant started for his home on a Walnut street car every night about 11 o'clock, and that he generally had a souse on him at this time. They had sized this restaurant man up, because he always wore in his four-in-hand tie a huge, flashy four stone diamond pin. The stones were the white boys, as the crooks call them, and each of them looked to weigh about four karats.

"The old restaurant man, as they noticed, was usually pretty well lit up when he took the car to go home, and he looked good to the pair of spark grafters. So they arranged a night to get that pin. They boarded the car in which the restaurant man sat, half dozing, in the enjoyment of his regular going home bun, and waited for the car to fill up with folks from the theaters.

"The old restaurant man, very gallant, got up to give a lady his seat. Then one of the spark grafters gave him the elbow in the small of the back, and when he turned to put up a growl the other one neatly copped the diamond pin.

"It looked like a good two thousands worth, anyhow, to the crook, who had done the elbowing. They got off the car and made directly for the plant of the fence with whom they did business. The crook who had the pin handed it over to the fence, and named his smallest figure with a confident grin. The fence took the pin, looked at it just once, and remarked:

"'Nothin' doin' in the ice line just now. Stop your kiddin'.

"The crook who hadn't collared the pin looked tremendously surprised, and the crook who had collared it simulated a look of equal surprise.

"'Do you fellers mean to hand it to me that you don't know that this is a phony?' said the fence to them, holding up the pin.

"Well, sure enough, the pin was a bogus, just fairly well sawed Brazil brilliants. The crook who hadn't swiped the pin looked disappointed and gloomy, and said that his eyesight must be failing—that he'd never been in piping off the real thing in rocks the other crook chimed in, and added that he'd never felt so cheap in his life. Then the two spark grafters separated.

"The one who had collared the pin, and who had it in his kick all the time, took it to another fence and got $1,500 for it without a hitch. You see, he'd had a bogus of the genuine pin made before the job was pulled off, and the bogus was the one he ran in on the first fence when he went there with his pal. The pal tumbled after a somewhat prolonged period of thoughtfulness. When he found out that his suspicions were correct, he chased after his ingenious pal and demanded his bit. All he got for his was the mirthful hoot, and that partnership was dissolved. The crook who had been done by his pal passed the word around about it among his friends in the profession. They handed him the long chuckle, and the other spark grafter was looked upon as the real thing for his foxiness.

"If there's any honor among thieves it exists in about the ratio of gold to sea water, and you can figure out that for yourself."

HOW HE SAVED MONEY.

Chicago Record-Herald: A Kenwood man consented the other day to go to the millinery department for the purpose of helping his wife decide on a hat. After much trying on the lady decided on two hats from which to make her selection. One of them was $24, the other $16.

"Now I want you to tell me honesty, George, which one of these two would you advise me to get," she said.

Then she put one on after the other and permitted him to view her from the front, each side and from behind.

"Well, I'll tell you," he said, at last, "the one you had one first looks to me as if it might be more stylish and all that, but the second one makes you look much younger than you do in the other."

He had wasted an hour, but he saved $8.

Princess Model Makes Stout Women Look Small

BY ELIZABETH LEE.

Perhaps no other class of women are called upon to give up to so great an extent their personal tastes and inclinations in regard to styles and colors as the women possessed of too solid flesh, for strangely enough it is the stout woman always, especially those of the florid type, who keep hankering for bright plaids, checks and tartans, as well as the fluffy styles and light tones, which if indulged in their own good sense tells them will render them ridiculous.

Speaking generally, however, never have the styles been kinder to the woman of almost every type than they are this season. Take the princess models; only the exceptionally stout need hesitate to adopt the style, so many variations are there to choose from, each one suited to the individual types, and then the yokes of light materials seen on nine gowns out of ten are so universally becoming that there is really no reason why the stout woman may not be turned out as smartly as her more slender sister. The short Eton or bolero coats are a perfect boon, which of course means height, and so incidentally apparently decreasing breadth. Straight up and down lines must therefore always be aimed at from the top of the head, beginning with dressing the hair, to the hem of the gown. Breadth she must religiously avoid. Stripes lengthwise may be chosen, but never in horizontal effects. The lengthwise stripes, however, in my opinion, do not take the first place in apparently decreasing the size, as given by some authorities. I prefer a plain dark color, made and cut exceedingly well, relieved about the face by some light shade in a thin fabric, after a heart-shaped yoke model, the only trimming flat folds about the hem and outer edge of yoke.

If only the princess models do away with the belt women should be thankful. Given a well cut princess, pintucked vertically at the waist line, springing from the line of the hips, concealing their possible prominence, no one can tell whether the wearer is long or short waisted, nor, in fact, its size in inches, which points the belt will loudly proclaim when the two-piece gowns are worn. The plump woman may, if she wishes, have her princess to fit smoothly at the waist line and over the hips. The stouter figure will find the tucks more becoming, provided a plain panel is arranged down the front.

Shirt waists, side pleated from the shoulders tapering to the waist line, and skirts many gored, the seams plain or showing a finish of strapping or a tuck will be a good model, while a band of trimming from shoulders to hem will be an aid to the stout woman who is also short. Sleeves are an important detail, and surely never before has there been so much latitude allowed in making a choice, that all types and figures may be easily suited and at the same time appear up to date.

For coats the medium leg o' mutton and the coat model will be found the most becoming; bishop sleeves fairly full, draping rather than exposing a too plump arm, for shirt waists, and fairly full puff sleeves brought in below the elbow for better, or perhaps dressier, gowns, will be a good guide. Some stout women imagine that the puffs at the elbow increase their breadth, but this is not so if the puff is allowed to droop; on the contrary, the drapery about the waist line will break up and conceal this circular line, as to apparently decrease its circumference.

The bats of the season, too, neither too large nor too small, but "just right," as the story of the three bears has it, will be especially becoming to stout figures of average height. In regard to colors, as far as hats are concerned, any shade may be chosen that will accord with the gown worn, but when whole suits are in question, then the greatest care is required. Pale grays should be passed by without as much as a glance, and so must champagnes, pale blue, pale pink, mauve, pale green and yellow. White and cream may be safely chosen if left entirely by itself. No "touches of color" such as a girlish figure may indulge in should be attempted. Next on the list of "large" colors comes brown, though on account of its dark shade many people class it with such colors as navy blue and dark green, both shades of which appear to reduce the size of the wearer.

The short woman's best colors are black, navy blue, dark green, deep plum color, very dark red and rich gobelin blue. Of course, it goes without saying that the daintier shades, as pink or blue, may be worn by the way of relief to a dark gown, but when a whole light dress is required white will be far and away the best choice.

If the hands are large or pudgy, then it seems unnecessary to say that dark gloves should be chosen in preference to light ones for general wear; and going to the pedal extremities, if the feet are a little less dainty in shape than their owner would wish, then the white canvas shoes that will soon be abroad in the land should only be worn when the gown is white also.

Following this rule, the feet will actually appear smaller than when clad in black shoes. Such trifles may seem hardly worth mentioning, but only by the strictest attention to each detail can the stout woman hope to make an attractive appearance, for she is of the type requiring the most careful dressing. She should have her garments neat, trim, smart and well fitting, at the same time they must not be tight, or they will only accentuate the fact that she carries a little superfluous flesh. On the other hand, loose, floppy modes are equally fatal, while flounces and a superabundance of trimming of any sort whatever should be absent entirely from the wardrobe. Skirts should be worn as comfort will allow. A medium or short train will be an aid to height, though a very short woman, stout or thin, will only make matters worse by wearing a train too long.

Suppleness and Grace Attained by Exercise

Raising Knees Alternately Reduces Hips

Bending Sideways With Arms Over Head Makes Waist Tapering

Bending at the Waist Reduces Abdomen

"How can I reduce my hips?" is more often the plaint of women than any other one relating to their physical wellbeing, and while it is one of the hardest conditions to overcome and relieve, it is not altogether hopeless, if a woman possesses the requisite persistence and stick-to-it-iveness.

It is quite possible for a woman who has developed an unbecoming embonpoint, a thick waist and large hips, to return to something like her former suppleness, but it means work, and hard work; for muscles grow during rest, and when for a period a woman has become careless about her eating, drinking and daily exercises she must pay the forfeit which nature demands.

Like the mechanism of a fine clock is the body, and its parts are so intricately put together that one part getting out of order affects all the rest. All told, there are something like 500 muscles in the body demanding daily attention. To keep them all in good running order appears on the face of it like a tremendous task, but little by little, if one set of exercises is followed by another and the process kept up, in time there will result if not a perfect body, at least one as nearly right as human conditions will allow.

Fifteen minutes practice at morning and night, before retiring and upon arising in the morning, when the clothing is loosened, will accomplish wonders. First of all, one must beware of over-exertion and not be too impatient to attempt too much at one time.

Taken altogether there are several exercises that are specific for reducing the muscles about the waist that have become thick and unwieldy from lack of exercise. One of these, brought by a well known society woman from her Parisian instruction and now generally adopted in the smart set, is that of raising the knees alternately as high as possible. Stand firmly on one foot, then, with the hands placed on the hips, the other knee is raised as high as possible. The action is quick, and if possible the knee should strike the chest. One not used to physical exercise may find some difficulty in doing this at first, but constant practice will bring about perfection. After having exercised one limb thoroughly the other should be tried. This exercise wears out the fatty accumulation about the hips, reduces the muscles and, as well, has a tendency to lengthen the waist.

To make the waist long and tapering, as well as to acquire a graceful walk, the swaying exercise is excellent. Stand with one foot forward a few paces. Raise the arms perpendicularly over the head, holding the hands outstretched as high as possible.

Then taking a normal position with the feet, bend the body to the right as far as possible, then far to the left. At first great care must be taken not to strain oneself, for the position and action call many ordinarily unused muscles into play.

Another trying position which is the direct result of careless posture, improper eating and drinking, or the position in sitting at a desk or table consists in the large abdomen which causes so much discomfort as well as annoyance to the person afflicted. For this difficulty there are several exercises which form a part of a reduction regime prescribed by a well known New York physician.

Placing the hands over the abdomen, bending forward as far as possible, then backward, not so far as to strain oneself unnecessarily. Practice this a dozen times, allowing the same time to each of the preceding exercises.

What Retail Markets Offer

Iowa strawberries, 2 quarts for 15 cents.

Russet apples, 80 cents a peck.

Frogs' legs, 20 cents a dozen.

Soft shell crabs, $1.50 a dozen.

Green peppers.

Soft shell crabs and frogs' legs, russet apples and green peppers are recommended to the attention of the housewife. Not in combination, necessarily, but one at a time. The apples look rather out of season, and with cherries and berries and grape fruit and oranges, are not likely to be in much demand.

The strawberries, which are coming from Iowa, are smaller and look as if their taste would be like those most delicious of all things, wild strawberries. The green peppers are smaller than those which have been in the market for some weeks, and ought to meet a crying need.

Making the Hands Beautiful

By MARGARET MIXTER.

Women who do their own housework complain that they are unable to keep their hands in good condition and to a certain extent this is true, but if they would only invest in a pair of rubber gloves, which can be bought of any druggist for $1, for washing dishes, a pair of chamois gloves to use in dusting about the house, for about the same sum, it would pay in the long run fifty times over.

At least one size larger gloves than is usually worn should be selected, so as to give free play to the muscles, and if care is taken to cleanse the rubber gloves after using with soft, warm water they will last a long time, while the chamois gloves wash beautifully.

One little New York woman who does her own housework and sews for two small children, by following preventives such as these, and by the judicious use of cold cream and other ungents, is able to present a pair of hands that would put to shame the most idle of society women, and she accomplishes it all by simply giving up fifteen or twenty minues a day to the care of her hands and nails.

And this is how she does it. When the dishes from the morning meal have been washed, dried and put away she cleanses her hands with warm water and a good pure soap and dries them partially. Next she rubs in a little dab of the cold cream thoroughly, washes the hands quickly in warm water and dries quickly. This treatment leaves the hands smooth and pliable, with no grease or irritating, chapped condition, which sometimes results. If glycerine agrees with the skin, a few drops of this may be used in preference to the cream, but the sort of ungent best suited to one's skin can only be discovered by experience.

Soaps of an inferior make can do more damage to a sensitive skin than almost any other agent, but if the word of a reliable druggist is taken it will be possible to obtain one free from alkali.

Red hands are the bane of some women's existence, and while this condition is often the result of physical conditions it again is caused by the effect of an excess of alkali contained in some soaps on a sensitive skin. To overcome this very trying appearance there is a lotion which is excellent and may be applied at any time with good results. Take of lanolin, fifty grams; liquid parffin, twelve grams; five drops extract vanilla, four drops oil of roses. Mix thoroughly, and if the "blushing" of the skin is not due to poor circulation or some other internal cause, the remedy will be efficacious.

It isn't pleasant to wear gloves at night, but the disagreeable feeling may be endured for the delightful result that follows the annointing of the hands with cold cream at night before going to bed.

For this purpose take of white petrolaum three and one-half ounces; paraffin wax, one-fourth ounce; lanolin, one ounce; water, one and one-half ounces; oil of rose, three drops; alcohol, one-half dram. Melt the wax, add the petrolatum and lanolin; stir constantly, beating the water in during the process; add the oil and alcohol when nearly cold. Spread the cream over the hands and cover with gloves. This cream is not desirable for the face.

If the hands are rough and inclined to chap a lotion made from fifty grams of rosewater, ten grams of glycerine, twenty-five centigrammes of tannin. By applying a few drops night and morning, rubbing well into the hands, the roughness will disappear.

Money invested in an occasional manicuring will be money well expended, and with a few moments daily attention to the nails at home there is no reason why a woman's nails need not be kept in the best of condition. But every workman must have his tools in order to do good work, and this is especially true regarding the art of manicuring. A few implements of warfare are positively indispensible.

Among the really indispensible things necessary are an orangewood stick for pushing back the cuticle, a box of emery boards, a nail clipper, nail powder, salve and a buffer, which may be covered with chamois skin or of thin rubber. The latter is now used by many manicurists and is considered more sanitary. It does not gather or absorb germs and can be replaced when broken.

Very few women of good taste wear their nails long and sharply pointed, a style formerly in vogue. An almond shaped nail is now considered the best form. After trimming the nails in this shape, and using the emery board about the outer edges to remove any roughness, the cuticle is pushed gently back, using the orangewood stick. If the latter be covered with a bit of antiseptic gauze, and in order to remove any discolorations dipped into lemon or a bit of peroxide of hydrogen.

Next comes the soaking of the fingers in a warm soap suds. While in the manicure's hands one hand is done at a time; in the case of a woman being her one manicure, it is best to do both at once. Fewer special preparations are now used by manicures than formerly, and when once the hands are softened in the warm water, just a touch of cold cream is rubbed over the surface of each nail to soften the cuticle still more. Then with the orangewood stick work all about the nail, cutting with the nail scissors any hang nails or other roughness that may be apparent.

Dry the nails thoroughly, rub on a bit of white nail chalk, which is now used in preference to the pink nail powder, and which lends a beauty and gloss to the nail that is more like the natural brilliancy. Wash in warm water and dry thoroughly and gently. Do not use liquid enamel, as some manicures believe it has a tendency to crack the nails. A final polish with the palm of the hand will be sufficient to bring out the natural gloss.

FIRE AT MANKATO.

Mankato, Minn., June 14.—Fire destroyed the large factory of the Mankato Interior Manufacturing & Lumber company yesterday morning. The building and stock was owned by Conrad and Gustave Klenschmidt, and not a thing was saved. The firemen woked until a late hour in the morning in their efforts to save the adjoining buildings. The loss is $12,000; insurance, $1,200.

MAY MANAGE CAMPAIGN

George L. Matchen of Minneapolis Slated to Head Central Committee.

Said to be Good Organizer—New Deal in Managers Urged.

Many of the delegates to the Republican state convention are still in the city, but they are leaving on each train that goes out, so that the crowd is thinning out and the hotel lobbies are not presenting the appearance which has been their wont in the last few days.

It was reported that Chairman Sivright and the nominees would get together today and try to decide upon a state central committee, but this has not been done, and probably will not be done for some days. A meeting will be called to be held in St. Paul within a week or so, and at that time some attempt will be made to frame a state central committee. The committee is to consist of a member from each judicial district, and five at large. Of course, the various candidates will want men whom they know to be favorable to their interests, and the committee will be constructed along that line.

It is talked here that George L. Matchen of Minneapolis will be made chairman of the state central committee. He is a close personal friend of A. L. Cole, the nominee for governor, and is claimed to be one of the best political organizers and workers in the state. Several this morning, on hearing that he is talked of, grew quite enthusiastic about Mr. Matchen, and said that a better choice could not be made, and that he will take off his coat and make a fight which will be memorable. He was surveyor general of logs and lumber in the Minneapolis district while Samuel Van Sant was governor, and is now a candidate for municipal judge of Minneapolis.

There is considerable talk among the Republicans these days in favor of having a new deal, and a new lot of managers of the party. Those who are workers of the party and a great many of the delegates who are left here today, are saying that the old managers have gotten into such a wrangle among themselves that nobody has a show, and the party should be put into younger hands and start anew.

This may be attempted in the forming of the state central committee, and some of the men labeled "prominent politicians" may find themselves on the outside of the fence without the price of admission to the game.

CAME NEAR TO BLOWS

Thomas Shevlin, Lumber Baron, and S. F. Fullerton Clash.

State Game Warden and Minneapolis Man Talk Saucy.

There was only one instance of a clash reported in connection with the convention after J. A. Peterson of Minneapolis and City Clerk Lydiard of that city came together on last Monday. The other instance occurred last evening in the lobby of the Spalding hotel and Thomas H. Shevlin, the lumber baron of Minneapolis, and Sam F. Fullerton, state game-fish warden, were the principals. It was quite evident that Messrs. Shevlin and Fullerton are not enamored of each other and last night with the excitement of the convention in the air, when they approached each other it did not require much to set fire to the situation.

Mr. Fullerton had been a strong supporter of Samuel G. Iverson for state auditor, and Mr. Shevlin had been against him. It is charged that Mr. Fullerton was mostly responsible for the split in the Ramsey county delegation, which resulted in 14 votes for Mr. Iverson coming from that delegation, when it was supposed to be solid for Halden. Last night when Mr. Shevlin approached Mr. Fullerton on the floor of the Spalding, he said something rather warmly to the effect:

"I suppose you're satisfied now that you have your dear friend Iverson nominated."

Sam happens to be hotheaded and is not the kind who will lay down easily. He fired up at once:

"Well your dirty work did not succeed against him, you big stiff" said Sam, shaking his fist at Shevlin.

Shevlin shook his fist at Sam in return and intimated that he was not through yet.

"Yes, you're against Iverson," said Fullerton, "because he would not let you steal any more timber."

The rest of the language exchanged between the two would be too hot for printing even on asbestos sheets. They kept approaching each other with fists clenched but friends seized them and dragged each away.

Fullerton said afterwards:

"That man has something coming from me one of these days and if he monkeys around my territory much he will get it."

In regard to his opposition to Halden, Fullerton said last night:

"Halden was not the logical candidate this time, and I for one am sorry that he came out. He would have had a cinch four years from now. You fellows up here are all stuck on Bob Dunn. Well you see what Dunn did. He tempted Halden, and Halden fell. It was like the story of Satan taking Christ up on a high mountain and promising him the whole works when he did not control an acre of it."

THE STAGE

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—Sunday afternoon and evening, "Why Women Sin."

"WHY WOMEN SIN."

Will C. Murphey's powerful melodrama, "Why Women Sin," will be given at the Metropolitan Opera house Sunday afternoon and evening, June 17. Only the two performances will be given. The play has been mounted with care; and the company is said to be large and well balanced. The play tells an interesting story of love and hate, and there is not a dull situation throughout, according to the comments of newspapers in towns which the play has visited this season. Popular prices will prevail at the Metropolitan during the engagement of "Why Women Sin."

PAINTERS LOCKED OUT.

Pittsburg, June 14.—Differences between the master painters' association of Pittsburg and the unions of the brotherhood of painters over the payment of car fare, culminated today in the declaration by the master painters of a general lockout against their employes. This means a suspension in 35 per cent of the shops in Pittsburg and Allegheny until the matter is settled. About 1,200 painters are idle.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Commission to Investigate Alleged Tax Dodging at Ironwood.

Ironwood—Charging that four iron mines at Bessemer have been materially underestimated in value by the city board of review, and their worth is much greater than shown on the assessment rolls, City Attorney Rice and Supervisors Green and Lugvell of the municipality concerned have filed complaint with the state tax commission at Lansing. The allegations refer especially to the Tilden mine of the Steel corporation. It is cited that in 1900, when the state board interfered in the interest of greater equality in assessment, the Tilden was given a valuation of $1,700,000, since which the figure has steadily been reduced until it has been brought down to $485,000. The other mines are the Colby, owned by Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland, which is given a total valuation of $138,000; the Palms, owned by the Schlesinger syndicate of Milwaukee, valued at $16,900, and the Yale, owned by the Ashland Iron & Steel company of Ashland, Wis., valued at $68,000. Concerning all properties, the complainants say they are prepared to furnish "competent evidence and proof that their values are far above what the board of review has determined." An investigation will be made by the state tax commission.

Gladstone—David Bailey of Gladstone recently received from New York, a consignment of books and silverware, won by his daughter Grace in a puzzle contest. The little girl died two years ago, and the belated and unexpected arrival of the prize occasioned much surprise.

Manistique—Rarely does it happen that two men absolute strangers and not related to each other, but who have the same name, meet each other. Such a coincidence occurred the other day at Manistique, when William Henry Needham, representative of the Indiana Road Machine company, met William Henry Needham, who is employed as electrician by the Manistique Light & Power company.

Escanaba—The Rev. Frederick Spence, who recently assumed the pastorate of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Escanaba, has, ever since his arrival in that city, agitated a movement for the construction of a larger and more commodious church edifice, and the official board of the society has at last given its sanction to the project. Mr. Spence has undertaken the work of raising funds and has secured subscriptions amounting to over $5,500. When the sum of $7,500 has been assured, the contract will be let and the construction work begun.

Sault Ste Marie—All doubt as to the fate of John Povey of the Soo has been cleared by the discovery of his body in St. Mary's river. The corpse was found by a party headed by David Povey and E. T. Partridge, brother and brother-in-law of the deceased. In the river opposite Riverside cemetery and was brought to the surface with grappling hooks. Hope for the recovery of the body of the unfortunate man had almost been given up and relatives and friends are much relieved.

Munising—Francis, 8-year-old son of Sylvester Raymond of Munsing, was drowned in Munising bay. The little fellow had been sent to drive home the family cows as soon as they were brought in by the herder from Bay Furnace. While waiting for the cows he and several other boys about his own age played "hide-and-seek" on a dock east of the Burtis planing mill, and while so engaged the youngster fell off a high pile of shingles into the water. His body was recovered promptly, but life had departed.

STATE I. O. O. F. IS IN SESSION

Grand Master Hugo Caustic in Condemnation of Barnacles.

Minneapolis, June 14.—Minneapolis is in the hands of the Odd Fellows and their sister order, the Rebekahs. The grand lodge of the I. O. O. F. of Minnesota, consisting of about 4,000 delegates, is in session at the Nicollet hotel, and the Rebekah assembly, 350 strong, is meeting at the A. O. U. W. hall on Seventh street south.

Grand Master T. W. Hugo of Duluth reported upon the condition of the I. O. O. F. He was particularly caustic in his condemnation of the "barnacles," and asserted that unless they were removed, the progress of the order would never be great.

Northern Light lodge, No. 121, of Minneapolis, the banner lodge of the state, according to the report of Grand Secretary A. L. Bolton of St. Paul, has a membership of 750, which puts it among the leading lodges of the order in the world. The net gain of the order throughout the state for the past year was 430, and its present total membership is 18,200. This report also showed a total of $3,495.15 contributed to the relief of the San Francisco members of the order.

The financial statement made by Grand Treasurer C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center shows receipts of $22,093.06, and disbursements amounting to $17,475.21.

J. C. Belding, superintendent of the Odd Fellows' home and orphan asylum at Northfield, Minn., reported that the home had thirty-five residents on June 1, and that the combined cost of the home and the hospital had been $10,033.82.

An oil painting representing the Good Samaritan, the work of a Duluth artist, was presented to the grand lodge by T. W. Hugo in behalf of the Duluth lodge. The painting will be hung in the Northfield home.

Last evening the past grand masters and past grand patriarchs of the order were guests at a dinner given by the Commercial club. Among those who attended were T. W. Hugo of Duluth, G. S. Ives of St. Paul, C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center, Dr. J. C. Cockburn of Minneapolis, W. K. Reed of Preston, D. H. Stimpson of Anoka, Judge Newsalt of Owatonna and Wallace G. Nye of Minneapolis.

One hundred and eighty-eight delegates were given the assembly degree at the opening session of the Rebekahs. The 350 delegates present represent the 174 lodges in the state. Four past grand presidents are in attendance.

The Very Best Remedy for Bowel Trouble.

Mr. M. F. Burrougha, an old and well-known resident of Bluffton, Ind., says: "I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as the very best remedy for bowel trouble. ST. LUKE'S KIRMESS.

Large Audience Enjoys Entertainment at Lincoln Park Rink.

A Kirmess was given last evening at Lincoln Park rolling rink under the auspices of the women of St. Luke's church and the affair was a delightful success. The fancy dances which are always one of the most delightful features of this kind of entertainment were well executed, and the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Miss Kenny during the evolutions of the flag dance was enthusiastically received. The solos by Mrs. J. E. Goodman and C. A. Applehagen were also warmly applauded and the entertainment closed with a cake walk, the prize being taken by Miss Eva Crosier and Edward Manson.

WHITE EARTH LANDS OPENED

Important Provisions of the Indian Appropriation Bill.

Washington, June 14.—The Indian appropriation bill which was finally acted upon by the house carries some of the most important legislation affecting the Chippewas of Minnesota, enacted since the Morris bill became a law. One amendment put in the bill in the senate will result in opening up the White Earth reservation to white settlers. It provides that all trust patents issued to mixed bloods on the reservation shall have full force and effect of fee patent, carrying with it the right to sell land now tied up. It is said that under this provision, 1,800 Indians will be enabled to sell their holdings.

As fullbloods, they are to receive fee patents, when the secretary of the interior is satisfied that they are capable of managing their own affairs. The second amendments extends the time when purchasers of Red Lake lands shall make the prescribed payments, by one year. Another amendment of interest in all the Indian country, provides that no land acquired under the provisions of the general allotment act shall become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issue of the final patent, and that no money accruing from any lease or sale of lands held in trust for any adult or minor Indian, shall become liable for any debt contracted during the trust period, except with the approval and consent of the secretary of the interior.

Provision is made for the transfer of Cooper island, known locally as Star island, in Cass lake, to the state of Minnesota for park purposes, with the proviso that it may be transferred to the state upon terms to be agreed upon between the secretary of the interior and the governor.

An appropriation of $15,000 is made for drainage investigation on Indian lands in the state. The above provisions are in addition to the ordinary appropriations for the maintenance of schools and carrying out treaty obligations with the Chippewas.

SIGHT-SEEING ON THE RANGE

Some Delegates Go There While Others Look Over Duluth.

Many of the delegates are staying over and looking at the mines on the range or taking in the many beautiful sights in Duluth, today. The morning trains out of the city over the range roads were crowded with delegates returning to their homes and with others going up to see Minnesota's mineral wealth for the first time.

The livery stables did a flourishing business both this morning and this afternoon. The visitors were so busy yesterday and the day before that they had no time for sight-seeing, but many of them remained at the Head of the Lakes today just to look around at the interesting things Duluth contains.

Several tally-ho parties and others in less pretensious rigs made the trip over the boulevard. Others rented launches and looked at the water front sights and the lake.

PINCHOT MAY TAKE WILSON'S PORTFOLIO.

Washington, June 14.—It is reported in circles which sustain close relations with the White House that Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forestry service, would succeed James Wilson as secretary of agriculture within the next few months. No confirmation of the report could be obtained.

It was stated in support of the rumor that the president regarded the Neill-Reynolds report as an indictment of the agricultural department, of which the bureau of animal industry is a part.

FIGHT YELLOW BUTTER, FEARING POISON GERMS.

Chicago, June 14.—The task of cultivating a taste for white butter among the women of Chicago has been shouldered by members of the Chicago Woman's club. As a result a "white butter campaign" will be inaugurated in the fall.

The club women have been aroused to active warfare against colored butter by a newspaper clipping telling of the death of a farmer's boy as a result of eating some of the dye with which the butter was being colored at the farm. Following the appearance of the item an investigation was begun by several members of the Chicago Woman's club.

Before the inquiry had been carried to any great length the club women had secured data proving that most of the butter sold in Chicago—the nice, yellow butter that housewives always buy—is colored with aniline or coal tar dyes.

The clubwomen declare that if they find one concern in Chicago which sells white butter, all the clubwomen will be asked to patronize the firm until the other dealers fall into line.

REPUBLICANS COMPLETE THE STATE TICKET

RECORD FOR QUICK WORK

Nominations Are Rushed With Celerity Unusual for Conventions.

All Profess to be Well Satisfied With the Result.

With the Republican state convention over, retrospection and aftermath take its place.

The convention was a record breaker for speed. It was a strictly business gathering, and went through with all the celerity of modern improvement. When the convention met shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning, it was expected that there would be the usual recess after the appointment of committees. But this did not happen. After the committees had been appointed, the convention started business with a rush that gave candidates and others scarcely time to catch their breath.

The first thing after the committees were appointed was their dissolution. It was presented that there were no contesting delegations, and therefore no need of a credentials committee, so the credentials committee was put out of business. Then there seemed to be such unanimity of opinion that the temporary organization was all right that it was made the permanent organization, and the committee on permanent organization immediately lost its job.

Before there could be anything done in the way of a motion to take a recess, a motion was made to take an informal ballot on governor. After that, the fever of the fight got into the blood of the delegates, and they proceeded to take formal ballots. As a result of this no nominating speeches were made, and this time was saved. At 1:20 a candidate for governor had been chosen in a whirlwind finish. Then the convention took a short recess, but no more than was necessary to get luncheon. At 3:20 the convention was again at work. Every nomination had been made to 6:15 in the evening, and then followed the report of the committee on resolutions, which took about fifteen minutes, and the convention adjourned sine die.

The delegates consider the work remarkable. Few came here expecting the work to be finished yesterday, and felt sure that it would stretch over today. But the delegates set a standard for future conventions to follow, and did its work quickly.

It would be useless to deny that the nomination of A. L. Cole came as a surprise to many, although yesterday morning, before the convening of the delegates there was a strong and growing Cole feeling. This, it is said, evidently was caused by the fact that Cole, outside of Jacobson, seemed to be the only candidate who had any powerful solidity of support. He had uncompromising supporters, and the result of this steadfastness was his nomination. On the first ballot his strength showed second to Jacobson, and on the next ballots he made big gains, the second ballot, for instance, showing a gain of 40, as compared with a gain of 20 for Jacobson. On the third formal ballot, Hennepin, which had been voting its 99 delegates for Block, swung out of the Block column and 87 of them landed in the Cole ranks, while the others went to Jacobson.

This was caused, it is claimed, solely because of the steadiness of the Cole support. It was well known right along that the three cities were against Jacobson, and were not alone, for a good many of the country members did not want the man from Lac qui Parle. Therefore, when it was seen that Cole was gaining, Hennepin's greater strength jumped to Cole as a man who could be centered on, and that started the band-wagon movement. Blue Earth county led this movement, although the change of Hennepin caused it. As soon as the calling of the roll was through, Blue Earth changed its vote to Cole, Dakota county followed; and then the rest began to pile in.

The motion made by Senator Brower of St. Cloud, one of the strong Jacobson supporters, to declare the nomination of A. L. Cole unanimous, was defeated. This is much regretted among the delegates now, even among those who voted against the motion. It seems to have been a case of hot-headedness in view of the bitter disappointment caused the Jacobson men when they thought they had the game in their hands. The thing came so suddenly that they hardly had time to collect their wits.

* * *

About the hotels last night however, the Jacobson men, while confessing bitter disappointment, claim that now that the discouragment has worn off, they are feeling better and are satisfied with the candidate. Mr. Jacobson showed himself in his speech before the convention yesterday to be a good loser and seems to have sounded the keynote which his followers say they propose to follow. They declare they will support the ticket from top to bottom and will do everything possible to cause success at the polls next November.

* * *

The nomination of Senator A. O. Eberhart of Blue Earth county, for lieutenant governor, was the result of geography and nationality, it is conceded. Senator Eberhart, a former Duluthian, by the way, is of Swedish extraction, and at the same time is from the southern part of the state. The north having secured the head of the ticket it was a foregone conclusion that the southern part of the commonwealth would be given second place on the ticket. W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow, was in the field. He is a First district man and therefore from the southern part of the state and was considered for a short time as dangerous to Senator Eberhart's candidacy, but the nationality matter, it is claimed, tipped the scale in favor of the senator.

This undoubtedly had a weakening influence on Odin Halden's candidacy for state auditor, together with the nomination of A. L. Cole for governor. Mr. Cole being a Northern man weakened Mr. Halden's chances and then an effort was made by the Halden interests to have Mr. Nolan nominated. Had this been done, the First district, to which Mr. Iverson is credited, would have had two candidates on the ticket. Chief Justice Start of the supreme court being the other one. That would have taken the geographical wedge away from Mr. Iverson. But with Nolan's defeat for lieut. governor, Mr. Cole's nomination for governor and the fact that Mr. Iverson has had only one term, formed the combination which caused the slaughter of the St. Louis man for state auditor. Previous to that, it is generally conceded, he had been stronger than Iverson.

Probably the most gleeful bunch in Duluth last night was the Hennepin county delegation. To a man they rejoiced. While they did not take home with them any office—and it is said that down in their innermost hearts they did not expect to—yet, they claim, they took home some scalps. As a result, last night they had a powwow in the shape of an impromptu banquet at a popular cafe and headed by Thomas Shevlin of Minneapolis, made the welkin ring. About the hotels and the streets they were openly boasting that they have tied a can to R. C. Dunn of Princeton, and Joel P. Heatwole of Northfield, beside burying Jacobson. In view of the terrific political enmity which sprung up between the Hennepin county and Dunn and Heatwole two years ago, a defeat of the latter by the former, would seem to warrant celebration. Hennepin county men feel that they have scored more times in this convention than any other delegation.

The Ramsey county delegation regrets the defeat of Walter T. Lemon for clerk of the supreme court, but give it out complacently that it puts Walter in line for the office for four years from now anyway and in view of the fact that he made lots of friends this time, they are comparatively satisfied.

In general the Republicans profess to be well satisfied with the ticket as a whole and it is claimed, that because of the lack of bitter feeling which as prevailed during the past conventions the party is in better shape than it has been in some time to control the state.

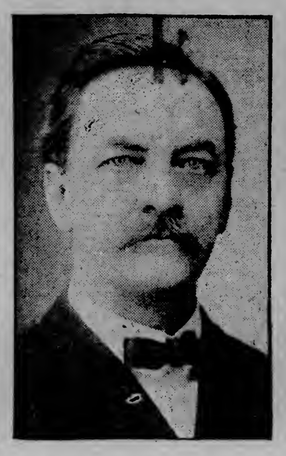

TICKET NOMINATED BY MINNESOTA REPUBLICANS

A. L. Cole, Walker. Governor.

A. E. Eberhart, Mankato. Lieutenant Governor.

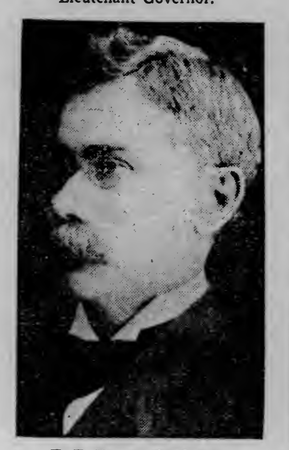

S. G. Iverson, Rushford. Auditor.

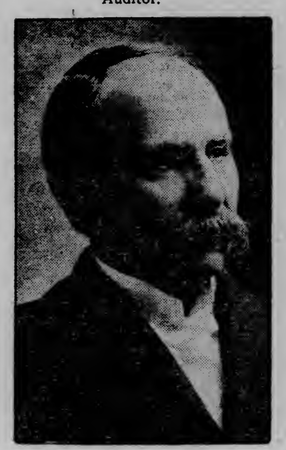

J. H. Schmahl, Redwood Falls. Secretary of State.

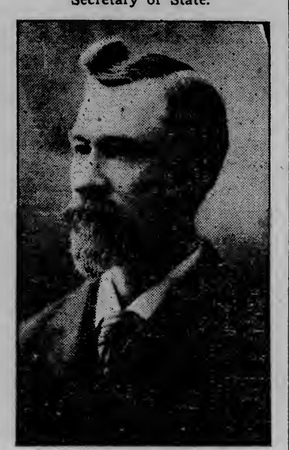

C. C. Dinehart, Slayton. Treasurer.

E. T. Young, Appleton. Attorney General.

Charles M. Start, Winona. Chief Justice.

C. F. Staples, Hastings. Railroad Commissioner.

AFTERNOON IN DETAIL.

Nominations Made Swiftly, Only One Contest Requiring Two Ballots.

A. L. Cole, the nominee for governor, was presented to the Republican state convention when it reopened at 3:30 o'clock.

He was greeted with tremendous applause and made a short speech which was punctuated with the wild huzzas of the crowd.

He expressed his heartfelt gratitude and said he had but one sorrow and that was that six of the best men in Minnesota had been defeated.

"While there have been several of the most honorable of the citizens of this great state in this contest, each is willing to grasp the hand of every other and say 'this is my brother.' We have no factions, but we have instead a united party that will push for success. I say to you that A. L. Cole will be elected governor in November next by a united Republican party. I do not want to know who voted for or against me. You all had your duty to do and you did it well and to my entire satisfaction." (Laughter.)

Concluding he said that when elected governor everybody would be given a square deal and the laws of Minnesota would be enforced without fear or favor.

Then came J. F. Jacobson, the Madison man who came so near to victory. "Jake" was greeted with applause no less hearty than that which fell to the successful candidate, and his speech convinced everyone that earnest as he was in his canvass for the nomination, he is a good loser. His speech made a hit, and, dellvered as it was with a broad smile on his rugged face and the best of good nature beaming forth, it caught the crowd with great force.

"I have no regrets at what has taken place," he said. "I want to tell the others who have lost that they are no worse off than I and they are entitled to no more sympathy. I am friendly to Mr. Cole and I admire him. Any man who is capable of beating me in a fight is entitled to my admiration and he has it. Any man who can do that can make a good governor of any state."

He thanked his friends for the support they had given him, and said the canvass had not cost him a cent.

"We are now through with the preliminary skirmish in our own party," he continued, "and we are going in a united party to lick the enemy. You will find me in the thickest of the fight doing everything I can for the nominee of this convention, who will have my heartiest support and most friendly feeling.

"I am not going to make a speech now," he concluded. "You have lost the best speech I ever made."

Amid the laughter created by this sally, Mr. Jacobson sat down, and the applause that followed fairly raised the roof of the Armory.

Nominations for lieutenant governor were then called for.

Frank M. Eddy withdrew the name of C. M. Sprague of Sauk Center, stating that as the nominee for governor came from the Sixth district, Mr. Sprague could, of course, not be considered, and he released all pledges made to Mr. Sprague.

Mower county presented the name of W. A. Nolan of Grand Meadow; Blue Earth county, A. E. Eberhart, and Hennepin county, W. S. Dwinnell.

When the balloting had reached Hennepin county there was a delay of about five minutes, there being no agreement in that delegation. William H. Grimshaw then arose and withdrew the name of W. S. Dwinnell, and cast Hennepin's 99 votes for Eberhart. The result of the ballot was:

When the state auditorship came up there was considerable of a stir. No nominating speeches were made, and the delegates simply started off balloting. It was a foregone conclusion that Halden was beaten and the first ballot resulted in a vote of 695 for Iverson and 394 for Halden. Following the announcement of the result, E. L. Millar of St. Louis moved to make S. G. Iverson's nomination unanimous, and this was done. The ballot follows:

For secretary of state there were five candidates and it took two ballots to decide the contest, Julius A. Schmahl winning out on the second ballot with 158 votes more than he needed. E. A. Nelson was the first nominated, Polk county present in his name. Then J. J. Loman was presented by Norman county. Julius A. Schmahl by Redwood county, Capt. James Hunter of Faribault was put in the field and so was Swan B. Molander.

On the first ballot, St. Louis county gave Julius no votes at all, although it was generally supposed that he was the favorite here. Nelson and Hunter were the favorites on the first ballot and the other two big counties scattered their shot. On the second ballot, however, when Hennepin threw all of its 99 votes to Schmahl, a cheer went up, for with the small increases obtained before that, it was known that he was elected, as he needed only 101 votes more than given on the first ballot to nominate. Then Ramsey gave him an increase of 6 votes and St. Louis bunched her 38 and gave them to Schmahl, which put him away in the lead. The votes of the two ballots were as follows:

Clarence C. Dinehart of Murray county was placed in nomination for state treasurer by Watonwan county. Meeker county nominated P. C. Koerner and Brown county presented the name of L. G. Vogel.

George Martin of Beltrami county, the youngest delegate at the convention, showed his loyalty to Julius Block, the present incumbent to the office, by presenting his name in renomination to succeed himself. Mr. Martin's enthusiasm was received with applause and laughter, but as Mr. Block's nomination was not seconded it was not voted on.

The vote was so overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Dinehart that it was not counted and on the motion of Meeker county Mr. Dinehart's nomination was made unanimous.

Swift county presented the name of E. T. Young for attorney general to succeed himself. In view of the fact that Mr. Young had no opponent, his nomination was made unanimous.

* * *

The fight for clerk of the supreme court produced more fireworks in the way of speches than any other affair during the day. When the nomination for this office came in order, Senator Ripley P. Brower of St. Cloud arose and placed in nomination Carl A. Pidgeon to succeed himself. Senator Brower in his speech said that Mr. Pidgeon has been one of the most faithful officers the state has had and he believed had thoroughly earned a second term. He urged the convention to "stand by Mr. Pidgeon as we all stood by the valiant son of Ramsey for years."

That "valiant son of Ramsey" made a lot of the delegates smile as it was considered under the circumstances as a clever hit at Dar Reese, who held the office for several terms and is now fighting Mr. Pidgeon.

One of the surprises of the day came in the speech of Mr. Edgerton of St. Paul, who placed Walter T. Lemon of St. Paul, in nomination. Many took his opening as a threat. Said he:

"Gentlemen I wish to present the name of a man from the city of St. Paul. On this entire ticket so far nominated, the cities have not one single nominee. Gentlemen, you want to beware and be fair. The cities should have something and if you wish to enstrange them, you are going to have the fight of your lives to carry them true through the ticket. We have hard work to carry Ramsey county, and this fall another hard campaign confronts us. If we have Walter T. Lemon for candidate for a place on the ticket it is going to make the matter considerably easier to carry the county. Gentlemen, you must figure on the cities."

Mr. Edgerton then formally presented the name of Walter T. Lemon of St. Paul for clerk of the supreme court. The vote was very much one-sided, the total result being: Pidgeon, 765½; Lemon, 323½. St. Louis county voted with Ramsey for Lemon, but Hennepin three its 99 votes to Pidgeon. Out of 83 counties Mr. Lemon carried only 8, outrightwhile Pidgeon carried 44 outright, dividing the rest with Lemon and getting the best of the split in most cases.

The matter was so one-sided that Mr. Pidgeon's nomination was declared unanimous.

The only remaining nomination was that for state railroad and warehouse commissioner. Mr. Staples, the present incumbent whose term expires next year was the only candidate and Speaker Frank Clague said that it would be useless for him to eulogize Mr. Staples or to attempt to tell of his excellence as a public servant, for his record and his personality are known to all and speak for themselves. Mr. Staples' nomination was made unanimous with a cheer.

Following C. F. Staples' unanimous renomination as state warehouse and railroad commissioner, Dar F. Reese of Ramsey county, moved that Chairman Sivright, after consulting with the candidates elected to the ticket, name the state central committee, each judicial district to have one representative and five delegates at large to be chosen. The motion was passed without opposition.

* * *

All nominations being over, delegates began leaving the hall in large numbers and Chairman Sivright was compelled to use his gavel vigorously to bring about order so that the committee on resolutions could report.

The resolutions were presented by Chairman Lee of the committee.

Goodhue county desired to amend the resolutions by offering another pledging the Republican party in Minnesota to the policy of extending the primary election law to include all state offices, the argument being that there was a strong sentiment for the abolishment of the state convention.

This offer perciptated a lively parlimentary skirmish and while it was favored by a number of delegations the convention decided that it would stick by its rule that no resolutions would be considered except those turned over to the committee on resolutions.

The resolutions, adopted by a unanimous vote, were as folows:

"The Republican party of Minnesota in state convention assembled, adopts the following declaration of principles:

"We approve and support the distinctive and progressive policies of the present national Republican administration as exemplified in the message, the acts and the achievements of Theodore Roosevelt, and we hereby endorse his consistent efforts to enforce the laws against trusts, monopolies, and combinations in restraint of trade.

"We approve the action of the national administration with respect to the Panama canal, as its construction will prove of the greatest utility in the furtherance of commerce, and the world's advancement.

"We believe in free and open competition in all industries as the surest road to the development of our country and our resources, and the protection of private and individual rights.

"The offices of President Roosevelt in effecting the cessation of hostilities between Russia and Japan, not only reflects great honor on this country, but will also exert a powerful influence in maintaining the world's peace.

"The Republican party of Minnesota reaffirm the policy of protection to American labor and American industry. It recognizes the fact that no human wisdom can frame a tariff measure adapted to all time and conditions; and that the schedules must from time to time be revised, and we believe that the time is now ripe for revision.

"We recognize the necessity of co-operation in order to meet new conditions in the industrial world, and to compete successfully for the world's markets; but the combinations which stifle competition, limit production, control or unduly increase profits or values, and especially the prices of the necessaries of life, are opposed to public policy, and should be repressed. We favor legislation, national and state, to present such a basis, and secure to every citizen a square deal.

"The Republican party now stands where it has always stood, in favor of the gold standard as the best basis for a firm and stable currency, thereby insuring a safe, reliable medium of exchange.

"The adulteration of foods is a crime against the people, and we therefore recommend such legislation as will properly safeguard the people against such acts, and the vigorous prosecution of all offenders.

"We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"We believe that the same beneficent policy ever advocated by the Republican party in recognition of the services of the old soldiers should be maintained.

"We express anew our confidence in the sterling character, distinguished ability and invaluable public services of the Hon. Knute Nelson, and the Hon. Moses E. Clapp, senators from this state. During their entire congressional career they have reflected honor upon the state and nation. We hereby nominate the Hon. Knute Nelson to succeed himself.

"The public services of our representatives in the lower house of congress are here commended.

"We cannot view without concern, the continued exodus from the older counties and the gradual but certain decrease of the rural population, and many of them without any corresponding advantages to the vast and fertile territory in our state still unsettled; and we, therefore, pledge the Republican party to the adoption of a vigorous and systematic policy of state development.

"We hereby pledge ourselves to further promote the development of our landed resources by providing for a comprehensive system of drainage of state lands, and a more effective exploration of their mineral resources and the proper safeguarding of the rights of the state in its mineral lands.

"The policy of the Republican party in advancing the industrial interests of the state, as witnessed by legislation regulating the inspection of grains, the establishment of a twine plant, the protection of the farming and dairying interests, the drainage of state lands, the encouragement of immigration, the protection of our forests, the education of our youth and the care of the wards of the state.

"We favor a further reduction in passenger fares, to two cents per mile, and the abolition of the free pass evil, the abolition of discrimination and favoritism in the furnishing and hauling of cars, and such a readjustment of freight rates and charges as will afford to every shipper, producer and consumer the impartial services of our public highways.

"We recognize the value of forestry for this state, and recommend legislation to promote reforestration of waste non-agricultural lands wherever practical.

"We recommend most heartily the proposition to commemorate in 1908 the semi-centennial of Minnesota's admission into the Union.

"We heartily approve the amendment to the state constitution passed by the last legislature, the purpose of which is to permit market gardeners and farmers to sell or peddle their produce to consumers.

"In view of the fact that some other states have established state printing offices, we recommend an investigation by the legislature of the question whether or not the state of Minnesota shall adopt the policy of doing its own printing.

"We favor such laws as shall secure better results in the expenditure of road funds, and we favor the proposed constitutional amendment increasing aid for highways.

"We are in favor of all just measures tending to the advancement of the cause of temperance, morality and good government."

The hospitality of the city of Duluth was acknowledged by a vote of thanks, on the motion of Dar Reese, and the convention adjourned.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Well, the momentous Thirteenth of June has come and gone, and while the smoke of battle still clings over the scene of carnage, it is fading away, and in a few days Minnesota will get back to business again until the real campaign begins.

The chief thing of interest, of course, was the nomination for governor. The successful one of the seven candidates, A. L. Cole of Walker, was not picked as a winner by very many political prophets before the convention. Indeed, when the delegates gathered yesterday morning the redoubtable Jacobson of Lac Qui Parle seemed to have the nomination in his grasp. It was a fight of the field against Jacobson, and the field did not appear to know just what to do. A ballot or two settled that, however. It was plain that it was Jacobson or Cole. Both were gaining, and when it became clear that if the field did not flock to somebody pretty soon Jacobson would get it, Hennepin county headed the movement into the Cole camp, and in a few seconds it was all over.

The nominee is a very clean, pleasant gentleman, though not so strong as a candidate as the needs of the situation appeared to demand. His running mate, Senator A. O. Eberhart of Mankato, was another rather unexpected result.

On the minor offices the principal local interest was in the auditorship. St. Louis county and Duluth are naturally greatly disappointed in Odin Halden's failure to land, but apparently the second term argument was too strong, particularly as Mr. Iverson has made a very acceptable official. This corner of the state has never had a candidate on the Republican state ticket, and yesterday's result does not give very strong promise that it ever will have one until it gets it by main strength through natural growth.

From the field of six or eight candidates for secretary of state, the convention picked in Julius A. Schmahl of Redwood by all odds the strongest man. Mr. Schmahl has been for several sessions chief clerk of the house of representatives, and there is probably not a man in the state with a wider circle of acquaintances or more strong personal friends regardless of politics than he. He will add strength to the ticket and will make a splendid official.

It is a pleasure to note that at the close of the convention there was not a dissenting voice in the general expression that Duluth had handled the convention in an uncommonly handsome manner. From the weather down to the decency of the hotel men in not taking advantage of the rush to demand more than ordinary rates, there was not a flaw in the arrangements.

The Herald acknowledges with thanks many complimentary comments on the manner in which it has reported the convention. Its reports have been in fullest detail and abundantly illustrated, and it is glad to know that its efforts have been appreciated.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

The retail price of coal is always a thing of great interest to the householder. It is rather a baffling thing, too, because the consumer has so fearfully little to say about fixing it. If there is a coal strike, the price goes up If there isn't a coal strike, it goes up anyway. It goes up and keeps on going up, utterly regardless of the law of supply or demand or of any other law. But all the consumer can do about it is to be indignant and ask questions.

Sometimes these questions are pertinent. Recently somebody had a communication in the Springfield, Mass., Republican, quoting the Montreal Witness and asking why the Canadians are able to buy anthracite from the American mines cheaper than the citizens of Springfield. The Montreal paper quoted a coal dealer as saying that while some dealers were trying to collect $7, $7.50 or $8 a ton, there was no difficulty in getting all the people wanted at $6.50 a ton .It costs more than that in Springfield, and the citizen who wrote the communication wanted to know why it was. The Republican could not tell him.

Again, the other day this communication appeared in the New York Sun:

> To the Editor of the Sun: I note in your yesterday's issue that the average cost of anthracite coal per ton mined in 1905 was $2.25. I paid $6.75 for mine. It might interest a good many of your readers similarly situated to know who got the other $4.50. It ought to be possible to distribute a staple commodity like coal on less than 200 per cent profit. No wonder the miners want a share of the swag.

To this inquiry the Sun returned a dignified silence. Out here it is even worse. The present price of hard coal in Duluth is about $7.45 a ton, or $5.20 more than it costs. There isn't much use in complaining about it, apparently. There is the hard, stubborn fact, and there is no way of getting around it. Coal that costs $2.25 a ton, but a small proportion of which goes to the laborers that get it out, sells in Duluth for $7.45, and Duluth consumers can't get angry and patronize somebody else, because there is nobody else to patronize. Nobody cuts the price of coal, in spite of the vast margin of profit that separates cost price and retail price. All the consumer can do is to ask pertinent questions, mutter unprintable things under his breath, and pay.

THE NEGRO FARMER.

In no other field has the negro made so good a showing as in farming. Booker Washington, with his institute at Tuskegee, is working to make the colored man independent by teaching him how to farm, and in the opinion of many he has hit upon the most feasible method of solving the race problem.

In 1860 the negro did not own an acre of land, but in 1900 negroes operated 769,528 farms, or 13 out of every 100 farms in the country. Farms operated by negroes are divided as follows: Farm owners, 174,147; part owners, 30,589; farm managers, 1,860; cash tenants, 275,820; share tenants, 284,820.

In 1860 there were in the so-called slave states 301,840 farms, practically all operated by white owners or managers. In 1900 there were 633,354 farms operated by white owners in the same states. In forty years the number of farms operated by white farmefs increased 371,415, and of that number 148,601, or 40 per cent, were owned by the white farmers and 227,813, or 60 per cent, were rented to white farmers.

While this increase of white farmers was going on, 287,933 negroes had acquired control of farm land, of whom 202,578, or 70 per cent, were tenants, and 85,335, or 30 per cent, were owners. Of the 371,415 white farmers added since 1860 many inherited their farms or the money to buy them, while practically no such good fortune befell the negroes.

Considering the difference in the industrial conditions of the two races in 1860, it is a noteworthy fact that in 1900 the relative number of owners among the negroes was practically three-fourths as great as the relative number among the white farmers.

Of course these figures deal only with the number of farms, without consideration of acreage. On this point, naturally, the white farmers have the advantage, for few large plantations are owned or operated by negroes. Most of these negro farmers are satisfied with small tracts of land which they can operate themselves, without outside help. This, however, does not detract from the fact that the negro has made a great showing for himself in agriculture. It would appear that when a negro, industrious and capable, becomes the owner of a bit of fertile ground, so far as that negro and his family is concerned there is no race problem. He will take care of himself, and need ask no favors of anyone.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

It is not quite clear how it is going to help us any, but at the same time it may be some comfort to know that this is not the only country where scandalous tales of meat-handling methods have been told by official investigators.

Germany has the most stringent set of rules in the world designed to bring about clean and pure food and drinks, yet even that empire is occasionally caught napping.

A recent consular report tells the story of a Germany sausage factory where conditions were discovered so unsavory as to make the Neill-Reynolds report smell like a breath of June time. It was found that sausages were made from the following ingredients, to quote the American consul who described it: "Spoiled hams, decayed sides of pork, sausage covers that had been used before, intestines of cattle, scraps of dog meat, and animal refuse taken from garbage barrels."

There. Maybe that will make your American-made sausage taste better. It is interesting to note that the sausage maker was arrested, tried, convicted and fined. It would have seemed more fitting if he had been sentenced to thirty days' confinement on a diet of water and sausage out of his own factory.

Another interesting feature was this German sausage maker's defense. He did not deny that these ingredients had been put into his sausages, but he said that that was the way to make sausage. He said all the makers used them, and intimated that it was an unwarranted interference with private business for the government to break in that way and interrupt the peaceful and economical and profitable making of fine sausages.

Indeed, he said that sausages would not be sausages without the snappy flavor—which he called "scharfen Geschmack"—given them by the sour hams and carefully selected garbage scraps.

We have heard nothing like this about American sausages. It has been sometimes intimated that they are not all their fair and inviting surfaces would indicate them to be. It has even been a common joke that they are sometimes made of dog. But it has never been charged that they were made of anything but the finest, cleanest, and freshest kind of dog.

But a man that begins to inquire into the composition—or decomposition—of his sausage meat and hash is treading upon dangerous ground. His peace of mind, if not his digestion, will be more settled if he takes them for granted, and refuses to believe anything but the best of them.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

George Markham of Bemidji, Minn., who has been registered at the St. Louis for the past few days, as a delegate to the Republican state convention from Beltrami county, has the distinction of being one of the youngest successful business men in the state, aside from the other distinction of being the youngest delegate at the convention.

Mr. Markham is only 21 years of age, and reached this mark the day before the county convention was held which elected him a delegate to the Duluth gathering. His father, now deceased, established the Markham hotel in Bemidji, which is still one of the best paying hostelries in Northern Minnesota. He was for several years one of the most prominent and progressive citizens of the Beltrami county town, doing as much as any other one man toward putting it in the front rank of the smaller live cities of the Northwest.

While George Markham is in business, it is not in the hotel business. The latter is being run by another of the Markham boys, and George is a member of the lumber firm of Markham-Schisel, the leading company of the kind in Bemidji, with a business that leaves a comfortable margin of profit for its backers. Mr. Schisel and Mr. Markham are alone in the venture, and are conducting their affairs in a manner which is entirely successful. The latter is an enthusiastic boomer of his home town, and never loses sight of an opportunity to speak a good word for it.

"Bemidji is one of the most modern and progressive towns in the entire Northwest," he said the other evening at the St. Louis. "It is a little quiet up there just now, for this is naturally a quiet season, but we look for exceptionally good times this summer, with a large number of visitors from outside points. The town is pretty much of a summer resort, and is growing in popularity in this respect right along. A number of pretty summer cottages owned by outsiders are to be seen along the shores of Lake Bemidji, and a mile or two above town there is a Grand Forks colony, which is almost a town in itself. Wealthy Grand Forks people and their friends make it their custom to spend the warm months there.

"Fishing is pretty good in the lake this year, and that fact is quite an advertisement for the town, attracting numerous enthusiastic disciples of the rod from other sections. There are plenty of boats and launches on the lake, and visitors can easily find some one who will direct them to the choicest fishing grounds."

C. W. Higgins is another Bemidji man who is registered at the St. Louis, although he is not here as a delegate. Mr. Higgins is city editor of the Bemidji Daily Pioneer, which has the reputation of being one of the best dailies in the state, outside of Duluth and the Twin Cities. He was formerly connected with the Minneapolis Tribune, and has held his present position only seven weeks. He says he likes the Northern town first rate, however, and intends to stick there.

Fred Carlson, the predecessor of Mr. Higgins, who is well known to a number of Duluth traveling men who visit Bemidji regularly, has literally taken to the woods. He became affected with a pulmonary weakness, and sought out one of Northern Minnesota's lakes in search of better health. "Freddie's" many friends are wishing him every success in this mission. He has the reputation of being an all-round good fellow, and a hustler in the news field.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Whitewashing reputations are a terribly sloppy jobs.

The only practical use for poetry is to quote it to girls.

A woman always means what she meant to say and didn't.

It would seem mighty queer to have a rich relative who was fond of you.

There is never enough money in reforming to make up for how miserable you are.

What He Struck.

Woman's Home Companion: One day in Washington recently a group of politicians were talking, when "Uncle Joe" Cannon was reminded of a story.

"There was a friend of mine in Ohio," said he, "who once joyfully sought an oil expert, declaring that he had struck this fluid on his land. He brought a sample in a bottle. Now, evidently my friend had been in a great hurry, hastily grabbing the first bottle at hand, for, when the chemist had duly analyzed the sample submitted, he sent the following telegraphic report:

"'Find no trace of oil. You have struck paregoric.'"

THE WEATHER.

The convention is over, but still the fine weather holds on. If anything, this morning was a little finer than yesterday. Conditions were technically about the same, except that the northeast wind was less definite, and perhaps the temperature was a trifle higher. Last night's lowest temperature was 46 degs. and yesterday's highest was 64 degs. The weather man expects the northeast wind to keep up tonight and tomorrow, and he rather expects that there may be showers.

A year ago today it was hot and sultry, after a night of sharp electrical disturbances, accompanied by an uncommonly hard rain, amounting to 2.66 inches.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Showery weather prevailed Wednesday or last night in the lower Mississippi and Ohio valleys, south Atlantic and eastern Gulf states, western North Dakota, Montana, Saskatchewan and Alberta, as a result of barometric disturbances, central over Eastern Missouri and upper Saskatchewan. The Arizona low pressure remained stationary and is unattended by rain. Temperatures are cool in the far West and generally moderate elsewhere. The barometer continues high over Pacific states and the Lake Region, but the disturbances in the middle South and extreme Northwest rather favor the development of showers in this section tonight or Friday."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Abilene	80	Memphis	74
Atlanta	72	Miles City	76
Battleford	76	Milwaukee	64
Bismarck	80	Minnedosa	84

Anent complexion's fairness is revived,
And dins our ears, flab-dab and tommyrot!

The candidate upon the corner speaks
Of "duty to the peepul;" fairly reeks
His talk with patriotism; an altruist he?

But, were the rule applied, the offices
Would permanently be vacant, there's no doubt.

We've tried them all, and find that by "reform"
They merely mean—another bit of "pie."

And yet we note that howsoe'r we vote,

Whistler's Joke.

Detroit Journal: Of Whistler, the famous American painter, an artist said at the Grolier club in New York:

"I knew and admired Whistler in the early days of my career in Paris. He lived luxuriously. I lived in a garret. Though he like me none the less for that, he did not permit any false delicacy to keep him from joking me about my poorhouse ways.

"One day, in a very shabby suit, I was strolling on the Boulevard des Italiens when some one hailed me from the rear. I turned and saw Whistler hastening toward me in his tall hat and his lemon-colored gloves, waving his long black cane.

"'Ah,' said I, rather flattered, 'so you recognized me from behind, did you, master?'

"'Yes,' said Mr. Whistler, laughing maliciously, 'I spied you through a hole in your coat.'"

Would Land Them.

If twenty men loved twenty maids,
And the maids they loved them not,
How many bachelors all forlorn
Would woefully wish they had never been born
To mourn their single lot?
Twenty!

If twenty maids loved twenty men
And the men came not to woo,
How many brides in the briefest while
Would bring to the altar those men and smile
At the neat job carried through?
Twenty!

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Roseau Region: Another millionaire hurled to death by his automobile. A reasonable inheritance tax and a few more autos, and the problem of concentrated wealth will be solved.

Detroit Record: Rockefeller is off for a trip to Europe. As a preliminary to this up went the price of gasoline a cent and a half a gallon. It was our pleasure yesterday to chip in 9 cents towards the spending money that is being collected for the bald headed old reprobate, dod gast his picture.

Fergus Falls Wheelock's Weekly: There is a cry all along the western line of Republicanism for a lower tariff on all products used by the common people; on lumber, for instance. Will the Republican platform of Minnesota this year take heed?

Moorhead Independent: So long as the muck raker confines himself to muck that needs raking, so long will he find that public sympathy is with him.

Virginia Enterprise: A prize pup is always locked up at night to keep him from becoming lost. A boy is frequently allowed to run loose. As a result, the world is full of unpublished want ads for boys who are lost forever.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: Since the alcohol bill has passed more than half the towns and cities in the country are planning on the establishment of plants for the manufacture of this product. This is a business that ought to prove profitable in an agricultural country such as this. There is an abundance of raw material, and the industry would benefit town and country alike.

Little Falls Herald: If rebates and graft were out of the way, possibly railroad rates would be reduced.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The stand patters are having much fun in congress these days with tariff revision and showering how prosperous everybody is. But the day of the man who pays the tariff is at hand, and before another year has passed he will occupy the spot light in congress and his voice will be a voice of thunder and before its insistent demands the stand patters will lmelt away as did the opposition to the rate bill and the alcohol bill.

Ortonville Herald-Star: County politics will soon occupy the center of the stage.

Pine City Pioneer: The Anoka Herald man says: "Fishermen should remember that it is unlawful to take pike under fourteen inches in length." To hear some fourteen inch pike talk, one would imagine it a disgrace to catch a pike under a yard long.

Red Lake Falls Courier: It is one thing to make a trust be good and another to make it stay good.

Princeton Union: While there is but small chance in either case to reap a harvest, it is far safer to buck the slot machine than back the federal machine.

Optimism.

You may reap your harvest of wheat and tares,
You may gather your cockle and barley,
You may husband a harvest of joys and cares,
Laboring late and early;
The grain of gold
And the poppy bold
And the corn flower blue for adorning;
But the fullest ears of the seven fat years,
Will be gleaned by the gleaner next morning.

You may draw your nets, you may draw your line,
Find silvery fish in plenty;
You may angle for honor, hook titles fine,
And of places and posts fill twenty;
The fish of weight
Swallows up your bait,
Your lures and your wiles not scorning;
But the lustiest trout, there's no manner of doubt,
Will be caught by the fisher next morning.

You may think out thoughts that are witty and wise,
You may think some deep, some shallow;
You may store your brain with truth or with lies,
You may let your brain lie fallow;
Thought is good,
Be it understood;
But this fact on your mind must be borne in,
That the latest thought that mankind can be taught,
Will be thought by some thinker next morning.

You may cling to this world of time and sense,
You may think of another rarely;
You may sigh, ah, whither? and ask, ah, whence?
And find life puzzling, fairly,
Yet life is sweet,
We will repeat,
On this dear old earth we were born in,
Good bettered to best changed into blest
When we wake to God's cloudless next morning.

God means every man to be happy, be sure,
He sends us no sorrow that have not some cure;

Wasted Melody.

A youth went forth to serenade
The lady he loved best,
And by her house at evening,
When the sun had gone to rest,
He warbled until daylight,
And would have warbled more,
But morning light disclosed the sign
"For Rent" upon the door.

POINTED REMARKS.

Washington Star: "Why do you yell at a baseball game?"

"Because," answered the man who is evidently dignified, "I dislike to hear the yelling of other people. I sacrifice my throat to save my ears."

Chicago Tribune: "My! How offensive!" exclaimed the visitor. "Why don't they keep things cleaner here?"

"What's the use, ma'am?" said the foreman. "This is the soap-making department."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Yer honor," protested the seedy prisoner, "dis is jist a case o' perlice persecution. Dey'se tryin' ter keep me down, yer honor. You ain't goin' ter let 'em keep me down are yer?"

"Certainly not," replied the magistrate. "I'm going to send you up for ninety days."

Chicago Record-Herald: "So you're going to marry Miss Dizzington? I thought you said when you and she quarreled last winter that you'd never forgive her for the way she treated you."

"Yes, but I didn't know then that she knew how to get up a good, satisfying meal without using meat."

Washington Star: "Do you think that municipal ownership would eliminate graft?"

"I am not quite sure," answered Senator Sorghum, "whether it would eliminate it or simply originate a new kind."

Chicago Tribune: "Is the bookkeeper strictly honest and trustworthy?" asked the silent partner.

"You bet he is!" said the business manager. "He saw so much graft and corruption in the last place where he held a job that he acquired a large disgust for all kinds of crookedness. In fact, I consider him almost offensively straight."

Couldn't Mistake Her.

Ladies' Home Journal: An old farmer was skeptical as to whether people who were miles apart could really talk to each other over a telephone wire.

One day his wife went to make a visit to a distant friend who had a telephone in her house. During the afternoon the farmer visited a near neighbor who also boasted a house telephone and who persuaded the farmer to call up his wife as a little surprise.

Following the instructions he put the receiver to his ear, and, after the usual preliminaries, he shouted:

"Hello, Jane!"

Just then a flash of lightning caused by the heat of the summer day struck the wire, and he fell sprawling to the floor. The neighbor was chagrined that the old man should meet with such an accident on his first trial of a telephone, and assured him that such a thing would not happen except in case of storms. But the farmer was convinced of the posibilities of communication, however, and would not try again. He rose to his feet, and shaking his head knowingly, said:

"It's wonderful; that was Jane, all right."

By Proxy.

"O President Gouge of the Mutton Combine,
O doesn't it make you quite sad
To think that your meat is unwholesome to eat
And your sausage most fearfully bad?"
"Pray, why should I worry at trifles like that?"
Asks virtuous President G.
"My mutton may rot and be sold with the lot,
But I don't have to eat it," says he.

"O, President Bloat of the Railway Combine,
O, doesn't it give you a pain
To think how you live by the rebates you give
To the magnates who ride on your train?"
"Nay, never a qualm of discomfort I feel,"
Says generous President B.,
"For the public may hate my discriminate rate,
But I don't have to pay it," says he.

"But, President Claw of the Saccharine Trust,
O, aren't you unhappy because
You do all you can to maintain a Hired Man
In the senate to garble the laws?"
"Nay, never a twinge, for my conscience is clean,"
Says pious old President C.,
"The fellow I hire may be close to the mire,
But I don't have to touch it," says he.

"O, thank you, O, thank you, ye presidents all,"
I cry more in pity than fun,
"'Twill ever be so that the Man with the Hough
Can hire his uncleanly jobs done.
The man out of luck cleans the worst of the muck
From the dollars as upwards they fly;
Their fingers they stain in pursuit of your gain—
But I don't have to do it," says I.

GREATEST ON RECORD

Will be Our Foreign Commerce During Present Fiscal Year.

Both Imports and Exports Exceed Any Earlier Year.

Washington, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The foreign commerce of the United States during the fiscal year which ends with this month promises to exceed in both imports and exports that of any earlier year. The details of ten months of the year's commerce have been announced by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, and should May and June show as large a monthly average as that of the ten months for which the record has been made, the imports will be $1,225,000,000, and the exports $1,785,000,000, or a total of a little more than $3,000,000,000. Whether the two months for which the record has not yet been received will show as large an average as that made during the ten months is quite uncertain, as May and June figures are usually slightly below the average, both as to imports and exports, but it seems quite apparent that both imports and exports will be larger than in any preceding year.

The figures of the fiscal year 1905 exceed, both as to imports and exports, those of any prior year, and the fact that the recorded imports of ten months of 1906 exceed by nearly $100,000,000 those of the corresponding months of last year, and that exports exceed by over $200,000,000 those of the corresponding months of last year, suggests that there can be no doubt that the fiscal year 1906 will make the highest record ever shown in both imports and exports, and therefore the largest total of foreign commerce.

The remarkable growth of about $100,000,000 in imports and $200,000,000 in exports presents some interesting facts. In imports the increase occurs in all classes except foodstuffs, and in exports the increase occurs in every class, but especially in foodstuffs and manufactures. In the class of imports designated "articles in a crude condition for use in manufacturing," the increase in the ten months ending with April amounts to $25,000,000, a gain of about 8 per cent over the corresponding months of last year. The articles wholly or partially manufactured for use in manufacturing show also an increase of $25,000,000, a gain of about 21 per cent. The group "articles manufactured ready for consumption" shows an increase of $35,000,000, a gain of nearly 25 per cent. The group "articles of voluntary use and luxuries, etc.," shows an increase of $25,000,000, a gain of about 19 per cent, while "articles of food and live animals" show a reduction of $22,000,000, a loss of about 9 per cent.

The decrease in the importation of articles of food occurs chiefly in sugar and coffee. The value of the sugar imported in the ten months ending with April fell off about $12,000,000, being $70,000,000, against $82,000,000 in the same months of last year. This fall, however, is due wholly to a reduction in the price, the quantity of sugar imported having actually increased about 50,000,000 pounds as compared with the same months of last year. Coffee shows a fall of about $13,000,000, the figures for ten months being $64,000,000, against $77,000,000 in the same months of last year; the reduction occurs in quantity as well as value, the quantity of coffee imported for the ten months being being about 743,000,000 against 954,000,000 pounds in the same months of last year. Tea imports also show a slight reduction, being $13,500,000 in value in ten months of 1906, against $15,330,000 in the same months of last year; the reduction occurring in quantity as well as value.

The increase in the value of articles imported for use in manufacture occurs in several great classes. Chemicals, largely used in manufacturing, show a gain of about $7,000,000, raw cotton a gain of about $1,500,000, hides and skins a gain of about $15,000,000, tin a gain of about $5,000,000, tobacco a gain of about $4,000,000, copper an increase of about $4,500,000. This indicates an increase of about $37,000,000, while the total increase in all articles of this class was but about $25,000,000, due to the fact that raw silk shows a reduction of about $4,000,000, wool a reduction of about $2,500,000, and India rubber a reduction of about $5,000,000. In the articles partially manufactured for use in manufactures, and in manufactures and luxuries, growth occurs in a large number of classes. Iron and steel increased about $5,000,000, manufactures of fibers about $9,000,000, manufactures of cotton about $11,500,000, and manufactures of wool about $5,000,000. Imports of diamonds and other precious stones also continue to show a largo increase, the total for the ten months ending with April being about $33,000,000, against about $27,000,000 in the same months of last year.

The exports show increases in every group, agricultural products showing a gain of $150,000,000 compared with the same months of last year, and manufactures an increase of practically $50,000,000 compared with the same months of last year, while products of the forests show a gain of $10,000,000, those of the mines about $3,000,000, those of fisheries nearly $1,000,000, and the miscellaneous group over $1,000,000. The increase in agricultural products occurs chiefly in corn, $16,000,000; oats, over $14,000,000; wheat, about $23,000,000, and flour, about $17,000,000, while provisions show a gain of nearly $36,000,000. In manufactures by far the largest increase occurs in iron and steel, in which the increase is $20,000,000. Cotton manufactures show an increase of about $6,500,000; leather and manufactures thereof, an increase of about $2,500,000; cars, carriages, etc., an increase of about $5,500,000; agricultural implements, about $2,000,000; scientific instruments, nearly $2,000,000; mineral oil, about $3,000,000; paper, about $1,000,000, and paraffin, about $1,000,000.

Trade with the noncontiguous territories of the United States also shows an increase in the grand total, but not in merchandise received from sections thus designated. The total value of merchandise shipped to the noncontiguous territories in the ten months ending with April is $42,000,000 against $35,500,000 in the same months of last year; but the value of the merchandise shipped from those territories to the United States is somewhat less than in the same months of the last year, having been in the ten months ending with April $54,000,000, against $57,000,000 in the same months of last year, this decrease being due to the fall in the price of sugar. The value of the sugar shipped from the Hawaiian islands to the United States in the ten months ending with April is but $19,000,000, against $24,000,000 in the same months of last year, the average value per pound during the ten months of 1906 being about three-fourths of 1 cent per pound below the average for the same months of 1905, thus accounting for the decrease in value of this one item of shipments from the noncontiguous territory to the United States. The figures for the ten months indicate that the total commerce with the noncontiguous territories will amount to about $115,000,000, exclusive of approximately $10,000,000 worth of gold which will be received from Alaska during the full year, the gold figures for the ten months ending with April having aggregated over $35,000,000.

Summarizing commercial probabilities for the fiscal year, which ends with the present month, it may be said that both imports and exports will certainly exceed those of any preceding year, and the aggregate of trade with the noncontiguous territories will also exceed that of any preceding year; that the increase in imports occurs in all the great groups except foodstuffs; and that the increase in exports occurs in all the great groups, but especially in agricultural products and in manufactures.

THE KAUFMANN CASE GOES OVER

Wealthy Sioux Falls Woman Held in Custody for Manslaughter.

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 14.—The hearing of Mrs. Emma Kaufmann, the wife of Moses Kaufmann, a wealthy brewer, who is charged with manslaughter, by having caused the death of Miss Agnes Polreis, her maid servant, was adjourned late yesterday afternoon until next Wednesday, after the state had offered what was believed sufficient evidence to bind Mrs. Kaufmann over to the circuit court. In the meantime Mrs. Kaufmann will remain in the custody of Sheriff Philips, as the offense charged will not permit of her being released on bail.

The continuance was taken for the purpose of allowing Judge Aikens, the attorney for the defense, time to procure a transcript of the record and prepare a motion for the dismissal of the case.

The main event in the case yesterday was the cross examination of Peter Ericson, the hired man of Moses Kaufmann. He reiterated his previous statement that the girl on one occasion was seen by him lying in a pool of water and that Mrs. Kaufmann said she had poured hot water on her to get her up, because the girl was stubborn. The girl was conscious. After getting her out to the back hallway, the witness testified, Mrs. Kaufmann shook the girl and when she fell down, Mrs. Kaufmann struck her with a broomstick. The witness stuck to his original story of having on a number of occasions seen the girl on her knees before Mrs. Kaufmann, with her hands upraised as though pleading with her mistress.

DAVIDSON GAINS RECRUITS.

Opponents of Lenroot Claim That Their Candidate Will Win.

Madison, Wis., June 14.—Friends of Governor J. O. Davidson declare that the tide has set in irresistibly in favor of his nomination for governor at the Republican primaries in November. They refuse to admit that Speaker I. L. Lenroot of Superior, the candidate said to have been chosen by Senator La Follette, is a possible obstacle to the success of their leader, now in the executive office. There are indications that the close friends of Senator La Follette are apprehensive, but the fight is by no means abandoned. It is expected that Senator La Follette will return to Wisconsin in about three weeks and that he then will set to work to swing the table around in favor of Speaker Lenroot.

The last important augmentation to the Davidson ranks is that of Gen. George E. Bryant, who was chairman of the Republican central committee, and conducted the first two successful La Follette campaigns. W. D. Connor of Marshfield, present sate Republican chairman, is already out for Davidson and it is claimed that whatever can be done in the party organization in the pre-primary campaign will be done in the interests of Governor Davidson.

Will Not Repair Break.

The government will take no steps at the present time to repair the break in Minnesota Point at the barrens. During the storm of last November the wind and waves broke a shallow channel through the sand bank at that place, but as the storm subsided the water receded and left a low, sandy strip again separating the bay and lake. The government engineers have reported at Washington that the break is not considered a menace to the harbor and no steps will be taken to put in a fence or riprap barrier unless some future contingency arises.

TO MAKE RACE ANNUAL EVENT.

Los Angeles, June 14.—Initial steps have been taken to make the ocean yacht race to Honolulu an annual event. If the plans as suggested by those interested are followed, the contest will be over a course from San Francisco to the Hawaiian islands instead of from San Pedro for a trophy which it is said will be offered by the Hawaiian yacht club. It is expected that should the plan carry, at least ten vessels will be entered for next year's race.

STARTS DREDGING WORK.

Contractors Begin Excavating Trench for New Concrete Pier.

Dredging for the trenches for the south pier extension at Superior entry was started yesterday under the supervision of the United States engineering department. There remains about 1,200 feet of the new concrete pier to be extended out into the lake and the trench is being excavated along the bed of the lake preliminary to the driving of foundation piles. The piles will be cut off three feet above the top of the trench and the concrete blocks will be moulded around and above them.

The contract for the work which was released by the Lake Superior Contracting & Dredging company, has been taken by the Great Lakes Dredging & Dock company and it is expected that the dredging will be completed by July 1, unless northeast storms should prevent operations.

Will Do Excavating and Foundation Work for Y. M. C. A. Building.

The board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. held a meeting yesterday afternoon and awarded the contract for the excavating and foundation work of the new building on Third avenue West of Second street to J. A. Johnson, whose bid was $8,965. Mr. Johnson has agreed to give a rebate of $6.50 per cord for all the stone that is removed and which is available for building the foundations. It is believed that a large amount of rock will be encountered in the excavation work.

George H. Lounsberry's bid was $8,880, with $3.75 for the rock taken out; H. F. Tredin's bid was $9,970 and L. D. Campbell & Co.'s bid was $9,150.

The excavating wark is to be started immediately and the construction of the new building will be rushed through to completion as soon as practicable.

MISSING BOY FOUND.

Johnnie Nihalifsky Alive After Four Days of Wanderings.

Chisholm, Minn., June 14.—Johnnie Nihalifsky has been returned to his anxious parents after four days of anxiety and fear that he had been devoured by wolves. He was found about 4 p. m. yesterday near the Kinney mine, three and a half miles northeast of Buhl, and nine miles from Chisholm. He was devouring a dirty crust of bread which he had picked out of a barrel behind a boarding house at the Kinney location when the woman in charge of the house first saw him. She immediately recognized him as the lost child, took him in fed him and administered to his torn and tired little body.

R. S. O'Neil and Mr. McGinnis immediately set out for the Kinney location to bring back young Nihalifsky. The father of the boy was one of the party that was in the woods hunting high and low. He did not learn of the boy's safe return until after his arrival here last night, himself exhausted from sleepless anxiety and travel. The searching party was more than five miles from where the boy was found.

The boy's clothes were torn by the briers and brambles, his legs were scratched and bleeding, and he was badly bitten by mosquitoes. Had he not found some partly cooked fish in a fisherman's deserted shack, he would have died of starvation.

BODY DANGLES FROM TREE.

Corpse of Former Insane Patient Is Found in Woods.

Alexandria, Minn., June 14.—The body of a man, identified by the clothing as Louis Emil Larson, has been found hanging to a small elm tree in the woods north of Nelson. The body was terribly decomposed, and is supposed to have been hanging where it was found since April 17, the day on which Larson disappeared.

The spot where it was found is not much frequented, and the discovery was made by a man who was searching for a stray cow. Last February Larson was committed to the Fergus Falls insane asylum, but was released on April 17. He came home the same day and said that he was going to visit a friend. That was the last time he was seen alive.

Larson was despondent, and it is believed that he committed suicide. The tree to which he hung was barely three inches thick.

Shoal Has Been Removed.

Advices received at the local office of the government engineers indicate that the dredging work in Ontonagon harbor is nearly completed and will probably be accepted by the government inspectors Saturday. A shoal formed at the entrance of the harbor, and no boats except those of light draught were able to enter. A great deal of the lumber shipments have been held up by the conditions of affairs. The dredging work was done by the Zenith Dredge company of Duluth.

Women Who Wear Well.

IT is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate womanly organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in renewed comeliness. Nearly a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs, made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken-down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine nicely adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.

Dr. Pierce may be consulted by letter free of charge. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

* * * * * * * * * *

Open Publicity

Characterises the policy of Dr. Pierce as relates to the composition of his time-proven and most popular medicines. Their ingredients are on each bottle-wrapper, attested under oath and printed in plain English.

Is this not significant?

"Favorite Prescription" is safe for women to take in any condition of the system, as it assists Nature in restoring the healthful functional action of all the organs distinctly feminine. In fact, it is Nature's own cure for the many derangements and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is advised for no other diseases.

If you are a weak, tired, nervous, over-worked, broken-down, pain-racked, woman, either young, old or middle-aged, suffering from frequent headaches, backaches, dizziness or fainting spells, gnawing or distressed feeling in stomach, perhaps see imaginary specks, or dark spots floating before the eyes, have dragging-down or heavy feeling in lower abdomen, or pelvic region, with, perhaps, pelvic catarrh, or other symptoms of functional or organic affections of the distinctly feminine organs, then you will make no mistake if you resort to the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The most advanced medical science knows no better agents for the cure of all such diseases than are happily and harmoniously combined in this widely-famed "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce.

You can't afford to accept any secret nostrum of unknown composition and of questionable merit as a substitute for this professionally endorsed and time-tested remedy OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, simply that some unprincipled dealer may make a little larger profit. Don't expect it to perform miracles but give it a fair, persevering trial and it is not likely to disappoint you. It won't "dissolve tumors"—no medicine will. It will cure a larger percentage of all curable ailments which especially afflict womankind than any other medicine sold by druggists for that purpose.

It is the one medicine especially, designed for the cure of woman's maladies that does not contain even a drop of alcohol. It is also free from injurious, habit-forming drugs.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

The modesty of women naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It cures bad cases of female weakness, prolapsus, anteversion and other displacements in the privacy of the home.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy. They are the original Little Liver Pills, first put up over 40 years ago by old Dr. Pierce. Much imitated but never equaled.

You pay the postage. Dr. Pierce gives you the book. The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, 700 illustrations, is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray cost of mailing only. THE FARMER'S WIFE

IS very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are exactly akin to the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach churn is foul it makes foul all which is put into it?

The evil of a foul stomach is not alone the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour and foul stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every tainting or corrupting element. In this way it cures blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings, sores, or open eating ulcers and all humors or diseases arising from bad blood.

If you have bitter, nasty, foul taste in your mouth, coated tongue, foul breath, are weak and easily tired, feel depressed and despondent, have frequent headaches, dizzy attacks, gnawing or distress in stomach, constipated or irregular bowels, sour or bitter risings after eating and poor appetite, these symptoms, or any considerable number of them, indicate that you are suffering from biliousness, torpid, or lazy liver with the usual accompanying indigestion, or dyspepsia and their attendant derangements.

The best agents known to medical science for the cure of the above symptoms and conditions, as attested by the writings of leading teachers and practitioners of all the several schools of medical practice, have been skillfully and harmoniously combined in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That this is absolutely true will be readily proven to your satisfaction if you will but mail a postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a free copy of his booklet of extracts from the standard medical authorities, giving the names of all the ingredients entering into his world-famed medicines and showing what the most eminent medical men of the age say of them.

* * * * * * * * * *

The Badge of Honesty

IS upon every bottle of Dr. Pierce's medicines in the full list of their ingredients, duly attested under oath, which is printed on each bottle-wrapper. Thus does Dr. Pierce take his patients into his full confidence.

If you suffer from coated tongue, foul breath, frequent headache, constipated or irregular bowels, gnawing or distressed feeling in the stomach, high colored urine, feel weak or tired most of the time, poor or variable appetite and kindred symptoms you are bilious. Your liver is lazy or torpid and digestion deranged. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the most potent anti-bilious medicine extant and will not fail to relieve and cure such derangements if given a fair trial. It invigorates and regulates stomach, liver and bowels. It is made entirely of the roots of native American medicinal plants, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles. The glycerine possesses valuable medicinal properties and is especially valuable in stomach and bowel troubles.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of glycerine: "In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach), it is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric acidity. It is useful in chronic intestinal dyspepsia, especially the flatulent variety, and in certain forms of chronic constipation, stimulating the secretory and excretory functions of the intestinal glands."

When combined, in just the right proportions, with Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot and Mandrake root, or the extracts of these, as in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, there can be no doubt of the great efficacy of glycerine in the cure of all stomach, liver and intestinal disorders and derangements. These several ingredients have the strongest endorsement in all such cases of such eminent medical leaders as Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, Phila.; Prof. Hobart A. Hare, M. D., of Med. Dept. Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., and Prof. John King, M. D., Authors of the American Dispensatory, and scores of others among the leading medical men of our land.

Who can doubt the curative virtues of a medicine the ingredients of which have such a professional endorsement?

* * * * * * * * * * * *

A lazy liver may be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging, torpid liver it is a great mistake to lash it with strong drastic drugs. A torpid liver is but an indication of an ill-nourished, enfeebled body whose organs are weary with over-work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood-making glands, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.

Constipation is cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One or two a dose. Easy to take as candy.

GAMES TODAY.

Calumet at Duluth.
Lake Linden at Winnipeg.

(The political reporter covers the game.)

The third day of the Hancock-Duluth convention dawned bright and clear, but owing to the great strength shown by the Duluth delegation on the two previous days, and the expectation that the third day would be a repetition of the two previous ones, the attendance was somewhat smaller than on the first two days.

But the Hancock men had a surprise up their sleeves. During the night they held a caucus, and formed a combination with Dame Fortune. The St. Louis county delegation again presented a solid front for the third game of the series, but they had not counted on the move of the Michigan men. No hint was given by the Hancock men of their plans, and the game opened with no unusual features.

The Duluth managers expected to carry off the palm on the first ballot, and expected a fight to be made and they were accordingly not surprised when the voting began, and neither faction appeared to have the advantage.

On the fifth ballot, however, Dame Fortune, who had been persistently supporting the White Sox in the two former games, swung her support to the Patriots, and on the seventh ballot a stampede followed, which gave the Patriots the control of the game, and nominated them as winners.

It was a big surprise to the 500 spectators in the grandstand and bleachers, as the preliminary showing was all in favor of the White Sox, and the shrewdest baseball prognosticators predicted that they would make a clean sweep of the convention.

On the first four ballots there was a deadlock, the score standing 0 to 0, but when preparations were made for the fifth ballot, there was excitement in the air. Speiser struck out, and Stewart was hit by a pitched ball. Then the big Dame Fortune delegation swung over to the visitors, and where they had found Morton a mystery before, they solved his curves easily. Hopkins and Foster singled in succession, and Stewart scored. Wares was retired, and Cox drew a nice double as his plum, scoring the other two runners.

The Sox were taken unawares by this sudden show of strength, and for two ballots could do nothing to recover their lost ground. In the seventh the visitors rallied still another run to their support, on a single by Stewart, an error by O'Dea, and Foster's hit.

The Sox made a desperate effort to recover their lost ground, and presented a solid delegation of three votes in the last half of the inning. Lovett and Helding singled, and Adams drew a base on balls. Morton hit to Cox and Lovett scored. Then Livingstone drew a clean single, and two more votes were in, but the lead could not be overcome.

This status was maintained throughout the final ballots, and the Patriots carried off the honors of the day.

The convention adjourned shortly after 5 o'clock, and the Hancock delegation caught the evening train for home, jubilant at carrying off one plum of the three, when they had expected utter defeat all along the line.

SHUT OUT TIGERS.

Pitcher Fogerty Hands Calumet Team Last Game of Series.

Grand Forks, June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Tigers dropped the third game to the leaders yesterday, in a rather fast exhibition. It was Mr. Fogerty's kindness that allowed the leaders to take what they wanted. In the third inning he passed four men as fast as they came to bat, and then to make the game a sure thing for the visitors he made two errors. After the game was lost he allowed the visitors just two little hits for the remaining six innings, and shut down on free transportation.

The visitors scored in the third and also in the seventh. In the seventh Corrigan led with a hit, and then errors by Fogerty and Harris allowed him to score. This gave the visitors a total of six runs, and the Tigers were unable to get a man home.

Ott certainly did a stunt at the bat, taking three hits out of four times to bat, which was nearly half the number received by the Tigers. The other five hits were scattered. For the visitors the hits were taken by Corrigan, Mutter, Slear and Morrison, and they were all singles. Harris was the only man who struck out for the Tigers, while Fogerty landed two for the visitors. Three double plays added considerable interest to the game and showed how fast the men could work at times, when it was called for. The score:

HOUGHTON LOSES.

Fargo Hammers Out Victory From the Michigan Bunch.

Fargo, N. D., June 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo closed the present series at home yesterday afternoon with another victory over Houghton. Finnegan was in the box and won his seventh consecutive victory, though Houghton's loose fielding rather than his stellar box work won the contest.

Beecher for the visitors was knocked out of the box in the fifth and Left Fielder Kippert was substituted in the middle of the disaster, but stopped the scoring in the next three innings.

Sensational fielding by Grogan for Fargo at second and a hair raising spear by Tailor of the visitors were the only fielding features.

The Fargo team left last night for Houghton and will play twenty games in the copper county and Duluth before returning home July 6.

SLUGGING MATCH.

Maroons Win in Awful Slaughter of Pitchers at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., June 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Both Sporer and Newcombe were hit freely in yesterday's game, but the Maroons had their batting clothes on and bunched their twenty hits for seventeen runs, aided by the glaring errors of the visitors. DISTINCT SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

Shown in Past Week's Report of the Pig Iron Market.

Cleveland, June 14.—The Iron Trade Review says: The market shows distinct signs of improvement this week. This is especially true of pig iron, as the demand for basic and Bessemer has continued strong, and that for foundry grades is much more active. The purchase of 15,000 tons of basic by a Schuylkill valley interest has taken about all of that grade available in that district. The Cambria Steel company has purchased 90,000 tons for delivery for the last half of the year, while the Republic Steel company has contracted for 17,000 tons from the Bessemer association for third quarter delivery, and the association has disposed of 7,500 tons to other interests. There is a very heavy demand for foundry irons for prompt delivery, and stocks of such grades in furnace yards are very light.

The price of northern iron is much firmer, the lowest quotation for No. 2 being $16.25 valley, although $16 can still be done in the Ironton district. In the South, prices are also firmer on ordinary business, although some low quotations have been made on large inquiries. The announcement that two blast furnaces are to be erected at Indiana Harbor is further evidence of the increasing importance of the Chicago district as an ironmaking center. There are now eight blast furnaces in process of construction, or contemplated, in Chicago and vicinity.

Billetts are scarce and the price for Bessemer is firm at $27 Pittsburg. The strike of structural workers has checked building operations to some extent, but the demand for shapes for new buildings and bridges are strong. Chicago will require 25,000 tons for track elevation, and the new plant at Gary, Ind., will take 50,000 tons.

KERR GOES FREE.

Minneapolis, June 14.—For lack of evidence, Assistant County Attorney Dahl moved a dismissal of the case of the state against Judge William A. Kerr, and the motion was granted by Judge Brooks yesterday. At the same time, at the request of the state, the old indictment for grand larceny against Judge Kerr was nolled, and he is now secure from further prosecution in connection with his affairs with the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

THE MYSTIC SHRINERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Chicago, June 14.—The thirty-second conclave of the Imperial Council Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine came to an end last night with the election of officers. The retirement of Henry A. Collins of Toronto, Can., as past imperial potentate, resulted, according to custom, in the advancement of each subordinate officer one degree, and in consequence chief interest centered in the lowest office, imperial outer guard. There were seven candidates for this office, but after the second ballot, when Dr. J. Putnam Stevens, Lewiston, Me., lacked but three votes to secure a victory, the six other candidates withdrew from the contest, and Dr. Stevens' election was made unanimous. The new officers of the imperial council follow: Imperial potentate, Alvah P. Clayton, St. Joseph, Mo.; imperial deputy potentate, Frank C. Roundy, Chicago; imperial chief rabban, Edward J. Alderman, Marion, Iowa; imperial high priest and prophet, Fred A. Tines, Los Angeles; imperial treasurer, Benjamin W. Rowell, Boston; imperial recorder, J. Frank Creat, Fargo, N. D.; imperial first ceremonial master, Wm. J. Cunningham, Baltimore; imperial second ceremonial master, William W. Irwin, Wheeling, W. Va.; imperial marshal, Jacob T. Barron, Columbia, S. C.; imperial captain of the guard, Frederick R. Smith, Rochester, N. Y.; imperial outer guard, Dr. J. Putnam Stevens, Lewiston, Me.

The date for the thirty-third conclave was fixed for May 7, 1907, at Los Angeles.

STAYING QUALITY TELLS.

Observations by a Man of Long Experience Among Men.

New York Sun: "One of the essentials to great success that many men lack," said a man of years and of long experience of men, "is the staying quality."

"It is one thing for a man to start off with his work in great shape; quite another thing for him to keep that gait with undeviating and unshakable persistency. There are many men who are on their jobs at the end of the first year, just as they were at the begining; but nothing like so many that you can rely on to find right there and plugging at it just the same or better at the end of five years.

"Men get tired, or slack, or think they are not appreciated, and then if they haven't got the real stuff in them they let up, and maybe let go. Here's a young man who works well and faithfully and effectively for a year, and gets, as he thinks, no recognition; and then if he is really only a sprinter, not a long-distance man, 'What's the use?' he says to himself. 'Here I've been working for a year for this man, like all possessed, and I get never a glimmer. What's the use of trying to do anything for a man like that?'

"And with that he lets up in his work, and as likely as not drops back into the ranks of the men that do a day's work for a day's pay and listen for the whistle. He thinks he isn't appreciated, and 'What's the use of trying to do anything for such a man?' He doesn't know that the boss has had his eye on him all this time, wondering if he wouldn't do just this thing that he has done now, namely, quit, and seeing him doing it with regret, but without any great surprise.

"For he has seen men turn out that way often. A new broom sweeps clean; but it does not seem to be given to many men to be able, so to speak, to renew their sprints, and maybe to add more and better ones, and, with consistent courage, to keep steadily sweeping clean.

"He has seen plenty of men do bravely for a year and then let go, and he has seen men that would go the gait for two or three years, or more, and then weaken. As a matter of fact, it takes him a long, long time to be persuaded that the man is really a stayer, and he may never be fully and completely, 100 per cent, persuaded, for he has seen men go five, ten, fifteen, twenty years, and then let go; and so it's up to the man himself to make good.

"The boss can't coddle him, for if he begins coddling he knows he's got to keep coddling, and a man that has to be coddled is really no good; that is, not fit for the high class. Bosses, big men, do sometimes encourage young men that they think are promising; for they are looking for such men, and they want them, want them bad, and sometimes just the right amount of encouragement will pull a young man over the line between the common-place young men and the men that are good for something, and confirm him as a real stayer; but unless the man has got it in him, taffy is likely to do him more harm than good, and to make him less useful, as the wise boss knows by long experience.

"And so the man has got to prove his staying quality out of himself, without help, and if he is a real stayer he finds a grim and growing pleasure in staying; and if he is a real A No. 1-er he finds he's getting a cleaner, firmer, easier grip on his work, and doing more and doing it better. And then he begins to find himself in a different atmosphere with relation to the boss or the business. Nobody is throwing any flower shops at him, even now, but he realizes that things are different, and now he's getting on.

"I have never known a real stayer to fail of his due reward."

SINFUL STRAWBERRIES.

Harper's Weekly: On a recent Monday morning the pastor of a church in Virginia was the recipient of a basket of strawberries brought to him by a little girl of the parish.

"Thank you very much, my dear," said the minister. "These berries are as fine as any I've ever seen. I hope, however, that you did not gather them yesterday—the Sabbath."

"No, sir," replied the child, "I pulled 'em early this mornin', but they was a-growin' all day yesterday."

HOPE OF THE BALD.

Kansas City Times: "I can always tell a man this time of year who is losing his hair," said a northeast car conductor yesterday.

"They always ride with their hats off where the sun will beat down on them and the wind blow their scanty locks about. Every man that is getting baldheaded imagines if he could go bar-headed long enough in the open air the head of hair of his youth would come back."

TREACHERY OF NATIVES

Results in the Murder of American Officer in Mindanao.

His Comrade, an Ex-Soldier Also Loses His Life.

Manila, June 14.—First Lieut. Edward C. Bolton of the Seventeenth Infantry governor of the province of Davao, island of Mindanao, and Benjamin Christian have been murdered on the beach on the west coast of Davao by a Mungalagan and his two brothers. The murderers have not yet been captured.

A report received here by Gen. Wood from Gen. Weiss, who is at Zamboanga, states that Bolton and Christian passed a night at the Mungalayan's house and were returning to Malleta in the morning, the Mungalayan brothers acting as guides for the Americans, both of whom were unarmed. Bolton and Christian were attacked unawares. The Mungalayan has the reputation of being a cutthroat and murderer. He is second chief of the Tagacolas, who are non-Christian Filipinos.

Lieut. Bolton was endeavoring to pacify the people by peaceful methods and habitually went unarmed. He was regarded as one of the best officials of the government in the islands, and had accomplished much. He had stopped at the Mungalayan's house may times previously, but had never before been molested.

Christian, the other murdered man, was a discharged soldier and foreman of the government farm at Malleta.

A report of the murder received at constabulary headquarters gives the additional information that the Mungalayan is the leader of a band of 200 religious fanatics who are terrorizing the country, and recently sacked a place known as McCulloughs, near Malalog. The Americans are gathering at Malalog. One company of regular troops and one company of the constabulary were dispatched from Zamboanga at daylight today to scour the country, arrest the murderers, if possible, and restore order.

Capt. Langpore has been acting governor of Davao and placed in charge of these operations.

ADVOCATES SOME ACTION

Neil McInnis Says New Courthouse Work Should be Started.

"I believe we should get the construction work on the new courthouse started this year and, as a member of the courthouse commission, I am in favor of taking some immediate action toward that end," declared Neil McInnis, of Eveleth, a member of the county board who has been in the city for the past few days during the Republican state convention.

"We have decided that we need a new courthouse and have agreed on and bought a site. I see no reason why there should be any more delay. As a member of the commission that is to have charge of the building operations I am ready to see the preliminary steps taken right away.

"I believe that the foundations for the new building should be completed this year and there is no reason why it cannot be done if the commission gets down to work and gets things started."

Canada's Coming Navy.

An arrangement has been made with England, whereby a number of trading ships will be kept in Canadian waters and Canada is to pay the cost of maintaining them. Heretofore England has borne the cost of defending Canada with forts and guns and ships of war. The best and least expensive way to defend the system against attacks of disease is to keep strong and well fortified by an occasional dose of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. For 53 years it has been proving its wonderful merit as a health maker and keeper, so that you need have no hesitancy in taking it, as the weakest stomach can easily retain it. It is a specific remedy for poor appetite, sour risings, flatulency, heartburn, costiveness, dyspepsia, indigestion, female ills or malaria, fever and ague. Don't fail to try it.

BALL PLAYER BELILLE KILLED BY AN ORE TRAIN.

David Belille, pitcher of the Odanah Indian baseball team, was struck by an ore train last night, dying at Ashland today. Last fall, Belille was the star player on the St. Thomas football team of St. Paul.

HE GOT EVEN.

This story has several morals. Also, it has three heroes, a heroine, an eccentric philanthropist and a score of supernumeraries of too little importance to be mentioned by name, says the New York Sun. The heroes are Mr. Bunker, Mr. Brown and Mr. Beverley; the heroine is, or was, Miss Hosmer; the eccentric philanthropist is Mr. Worthing. So much for the introduction; now for the story:

Bunker, Brown and Beverley work for Mr. Worthing. On January 3 last the three young men held an important interview with their employer.

"What do you want?" said Worthing to Bunker.

"A raise," said Bunker.

"And you?" to Brown.

"A raise."

"And you?" to Beverley.

"A raise."

"Can't have it," said Worthing. "You get $25 a week now."

"I know that," said Bunker, "but that ain't enough. We are worth more than that. We want $30."

"Too much," said Worthing.. "Still, I do not wish to discourage you. You are deserving young men, and I like you. I do not wish to leave you without hope. I will increase your salary on one condition. If you will get married I will pay you $30 a week."

Bunker, Brown and Beverely turned pale. "Married!" they said. "This is very sudden. We must have time to think."

After due deliberation they reported their decision.

"Sir," said they, "we refuse to accept prosperity on such onerous terms. Twenty-five dollars a week according to our calculation will go further for one than $30 for two."

Then Bunker, Brown and Beverley went back to their desks and continued to work for $25 a week. Usually they lunch together. Last Monday when Bunker and Brown got ready to leave the office and looked around for Beverley they found that he had already gone. They saw him at the restaurant, but they did not join him. Beverley was not alone. Miss Hosmer sat opposite. Miss Hosmer beamed upon Beverley and Beverley beamed upon Miss Hosmer. They were happy. Bunker and Brown were not happy; they were envious.

"Ungrateful dog," said Bunker. "So that is why he has left us? He has treated us most shabbily. But we'll get even. We'll have revenge."

He called the waitress.

"Jennie," he said, "do you see our friend over there? Well, he has deserted us. He is married. Go and tell the rest of the girls the old chap is married. It'll make him feel good for you to take some notice of him."

Jennie told the other girls, the other girls told the proprietor, the proprietor told the patrons and the patrons told each other. It was an exciting time. Everybody looked, everybody talked.

"See the bride and bridegroom," they said. "Don't they look nice?"

Beverley and Miss Hosmer heard, saw and blushed. Nevertheless, they talked earnestly. Bunker and Brown tried to make out what they said, but they could hear nothing. However, they found out all about that the next day. Early Tuesday morning Beverley engaged Mr. Worthing in an animated conversation.

"Sir," said he, "I want my $30 a week."

"Married?" said Worthing.

"Yes, sir."

"Good," said Worthing. "I am glad. You deserve more than $30 a week. I will promote you. You shall have $40 a week, with the prospect of $50 the first of next year."

Bunker and Brown almost fainted. When they came to Bunker asked:

"Say, Beverley were you married at lunch time yesterday?"

"No, said Beverley." I hadn't thought of it then. Little girl just came in to spend the day. You put the notion into our heads. Congratulations, you know, and gossip and dishes of rice and wedding cake. Seemed like the real thing. Little girl awffully nice. Known her long time. Like each other tremendously.

"Why not?" says I.

"Why not?" says she.

"Let's," says I.

"Let's" says she.

"So we did. All due to you. Thanks, awfully."

THE STAR'S CRISIS.

The beautiful young star was feeling the effects of the terrible strain she had been under for the past forty-eight hours, says the New York Sun. It was her first season as a star, and she was about to take the step upon which her whole future depended.

"I—I—I c-c-can't t-think of a s-single new w-way!" she sobbed.

Her manager's heart, callous as it was from long contact with a public that always wants its money's worth, or more, was deeply affected by the sight of the lovely face, tear stained and pale from sleeplessness.

"Of course," she went on, the torrent of brine temporarily abating, "I've got to keep inside the limit of the law."

"Yes," assented the manager, "unfortunately, we have to do that."

"The only new idea I can possibly think of is to stand on my head, but I'm afraid my features wouldn't come out plainly that way. Besides, it would spoil the effect of my hat, and I simply must have my hat on."

"You wouldn't want to try that living picture idea? You, life size, trying to hide behind a champagne bottle?"

"No. That would be advertising champagne. I want all the advertising myself."

"Well, then, how about wearing the headlines of a yellow extra? It would give you a big puff."

She shook her head firmly.

"No," she said; "that would be merely sensational. I want something unique."

After a silence of several desperate minutes, her manager was about to make another suggestion, when the photographer was announced.

The beautiful young star, in the throes of emotional despair, hailed him as her last hope. Clutching him by the shoulders, she told him all and begged him ot save her promising career from disaster.

The photographer, being a man of penetrating insight, at once realized that the fate of a sensitive and trusting young woman was hanging in the balance. Putting down his camera, he began to think. He thought with such fierce intensity that his eyebrows contracted until they met in the middle.

The beautiful young star sat with clenched hands and bated breath, while her manager chewed viciously on the end of his cigar.

Two seconds more and the beautiful young star would have dropped dead, killed by the suspense; but the world was not to be thus ruthlessly robbed of her in the very bloom of her talented and artistic youth.

The photographer's face slowly relaxed. The light of reason returned to his eyes. A faint smile twitched the corners of his mouth.

The beautiful young star could stand it no longer.

"Speak, man!" she screamed, springing to her small and expensively booted feet. The photographer's lips moved and sounds issued therefrom. He was speaking the words that were to lift the clouds of doom that was hovering over the bright young life.

"Why not try a plain, quiet picture?" he said. "You'd very nearly have the whole field to yourself, and the picture would be a winner all right."

The beautiful young star sank gracefully into a chair, and her soft white throat fluttered gently as she sighed melodiously.

"Oh," she breathed through parched and quivering lips, "what a relief Kind sir, how can I ever pay you for this? I was just about driven to the point of using that old and tiresome pose of sitting on the pinnacle of a church steeple."

SHERIDAN'S PARENTS.

Youth's Companion: One of the sweetest and most pathetic war stories is about the Sheridans, father and mother of Gen. Phil Sheridan.

The old people were living at Somerset, Ohio, when word came that Gen. Sheridan had suffered a great defeat in the Shenandoah valley. They slept none that night, but in the morning the old gentleman said:

"Mother, I have thought it all out. Phil wasn't there when the fight began. That is what the paper said. It would not be like our boy to remain away throughout the battle. As I make it out, Phil returned in time to save the day. I'll go to the store and wait until the paper comes, get the news and hurry back. I don't believe there's anything to worry about."

"I hope you are right, father, but I'm afraid yesterday's news was correct. Phil has had so much good luck I'm afraid he's had bad luck in this battle."

Old Mr. Sheridan was sitting on the steps in front of the store when a man rode up and called out, "Good news from Sheridan!"

Then one of the bystanders caught up the morning paper and read the account of Sheridan's return to the army, of his turning the tide, of the president's message of thanks, of Sheridan's heroic conduct and the complete route of the enemy.

The paper said it was one of the greatest victories of the war.

That was enough for Mr. Sheridan. He started on a trot to tell Mrs. Sheridan the news about her son's greatest battle.

She saw him coming and hurried to the gate to get the tidings from Cedar Creek.

"Glory to God, mother, glory to God! Phil licked 'em! The president has sent him the country's thanks, and the paper says it was one of the greatest fights of the war. I knew Phil would get back in time to save the day."

The old couple hugged and kissed and kissed and hugged again and again.

After they had gone into the house the old lady suddenly became very sober.

"What's the matter, mother?"

"Father, did the paper say anything about John?"

"No, but you know Phil would have sent a dispatch if anything had happened to John."

John was another son, a private in Sheridan's army in the valley.

AN IMPORTANT POINT.

Kansas City Journal: A certain rich Pittsburger visited Philadelphia's academy of natural history, where is one of the finest collections of stuffed birds in Americsa. The money value was the prime interest. The custodian was asked how much the collection was worth. "I've never figured it out," said he, "but it is safe to say, at a guess, that these stuffed birds are worth not less than $200,000."

"Heavens!" exclaimed the man of money. "Is it possible! What are they stuffed with?"

As a soft answer turneth away wrath so a quick answer to a Herwant ad. often turns away bad luck.

Rheumatism Cured in 24 Hours.

T. J. Blackmore, of Haller & Blackmore, Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "A short time since I procured a bottle of Mystic Cure. It got me out of the house in 24 hours. I took to my bed with Rheumatism nine months ago and the Mystic Cure is the only medicine that did me any good. I had five of the best physicians in the city, but I received very little relief from them. I know the Mystic Cure to be what it is represented and take pleasure in recommending it to other poor sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

"It takes eight days to make Perfect Malt"-- PABST.

To brew the best beer the brewer must first have, make or buy perfect Malt, for the malt is the soul of the beer.

Perfect malt is only made by the exclusive Pabst eight-day method. This process is double the expense of the usual four-day method of making malt. Four-day malt cannot make perfect beer such as because four-day malt is a forced and unnatural process and beer made from four-day malt lacks the nutritious food elements which distinguish Pabst Beer.

Pabst eight-day malt, the choicest hops, pure water and a process spotlessly clean are the secret of the superiority of Pabst Beer. Mrs. Davis, who is well known in this city, where she resided nearly all her life, had gone to Kalispel from her home in Covington, Ky., to attend the wedding of a niece. The ceremony was to have taken place today.

She is survived by a husband and a son, the latter being 5 years old. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

WORKING ON THE LAST BRIDGE

Completion of Missabe's New Bovey Branch Near at Hand.

The piles for the last bridge to be constructed for the new Bovey branch of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road have been driven, and the construction work on the bridge proper is progressing most satisfactorily.

The completion of this bridge, which lies west of Snowball, will practically mean the completion of the line as well. Most of the trackla ying has been done, and there is nothing in sight to prevent the running of trains over the new line by the first day of July.

Work has been finished and the men paid off at some of the construction camps, and aside from the completion of this last bridge and a few other things, nothing remains to be done except to improve the roadbed here and there, and make other final arrangements for the installation of regular traffic over the road.

The officials of the road are very well pleased with the way things are going. So are the residents of Bovey, Coleraine and other places which the new line will place in more direct communication with the outside world.

Unknown Friends.

There are many people who have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with splendid results, but who are unknown because they have hesitated about giving a testimonial of their experience for publication. These people, however, are none the less friends of this remedy. They have done much toward making it a household word by their personal recommendations to friends and neighbors. It is a good medicine to have in the home and is widely known for its cures of diarrhoea and all forms of bowel trouble. For sale by all leading druggists.

Kansas City, June 14.—The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway company was found guilty here late yesterday afternoon by a jury in the United States district court on four counts of granting concessions on packing house shipments for export, to the Armour Packing company, Swift & Co., Cudahy & Co., and the Nelson Morris Packing company.

The conviction carries with it a fine of from $1,000 to $20,000 on each count. Judge Smith McPherson, the presiding judge, deferred sentencing the defendant until June 22.

ONE CIPHER TOO MANY.

New York, June 14.—Through an error in transmission the losses of the Royal Exchange Assurance corporation were stated in a London dispatch yesterday to be from $20,000,000 to $22,500,000. Corrected figures show that the corporations San Francisco losses are from $2,200,000 to $2,400,000.

GOVERNMENT TO PAY EXPENSES

Of Meat Inspection According to Agreement of Committee.

Washington, June 14.—A meat inspection provision was completed by the house committee on agriculture yesterday, which it is declared by the committee will insure that American meat and meat products are healthful, clean, and in every respect wholesome, and fit for food.

The important features of the legislation are that it places the cost of the inspection on the government, and makes an annual automatic appropriation of $2,000,000 to pay the expenses. It requires a rigid postmortem and antemortem inspection of all animals killed for food. It requires a government label as a passport for all meat and meat products which enter interstate commerce, and in addition to this label, a certificate of purity to the carrier and to the secretary of agriculture for such products which enter foreign commerce. To secure this label the product must be handled in accordance with sanitary regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of agriculture, who is authorized to employ, without regard to the civil service law, for the first year, an adequate corps of efficient inspectors, to supervise the enforcement of his regulations.

ALL PRAISES FOR DULUTH

Delegates Unanimous in Commending Hospitality of City.

Warm Commendation for Handling of Convention—Hotels Praised.

Everyone was satisfied with the way the convention was handled, and the delegates and candidates had many nice things to say about Duluth, in the hotel lobbies last evening. It was fortunate that the weather man permitted this fair city to wear her brightest frock and her warmest smile. For some of the delegates, it was their first visit to the Head of the Lakes, and to say that they were favorably impressed with Duluth, is expressing it very conservatively. On all sides they were enthusiastic in their comments.

The roomy Armory proved adequate to house the big gathering. All of the delegates were seated on one floor, and there was no confusion. The delegates were so situated that they could get around easily, and the handling of the large crowd was admirable. It was impossible to admit all those who wanted to attend the convention as spectators. The galleries were filled, but despite the size of the crowd, there were few delays. The speakers could be heard distinctly in all parts of the auditorium. The decorations of the hall also elicited favorable comment.

Duluth was warmly congratulated by the delegates on the way the visitors were cared for by the hotels and restaurants. They were crowded to their capacity all the time, but the Commercial club and other organizations found accommodations for those who were unable to secure quarters at the regular hostelries. And there were no instances of overcharging, either for meals or sleeping quarters, in spite of the rush. This was especially commented upon by the visitors.

The Commercial club's system of caring for those who had trouble in getting rooms at hotels was the admiration of all who had to make use of it. Delegates or visitors who were too late at the hotels, and were directed to the Commercial club, approached there somewhat dubiously, but immediately found rooms in convenient locations, and were greatly pleased.

One noticeable thing was the demand at the hotels and cafes for planked Lake Superior whitefish. Many of the visitors made it a point to order that delectable dish, and those places which had not ordered enough, found themselves unable to supply the big demand.

The huge aerial bridge attracted many of the delegates to the government piers. This triumph of engineering interested them as much as any of the things of interest which are to be seen in Duluth.

"I don't remember having attended a convention which was better handled than this one was, and Duluth has shown herself to be a most hospitable city," said Senator Samuel Lord of Kasson, one of the defeated candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. "Of course, all of us could not be elected, and I am sure that everyone feels that good men have been chosen to represent the party in the coming election."

"Duluth handled the convention well, and it is a beautiful city," said J. F. Jacobson of Madison. "I have been more than pleased with the treatment we have received."

"Everyone is pleased with the way Duluth has taken care of the convention," said James A. Martin of Stearns county. "There was not a single hitch to mar things. One thing that struck me with particular force was the fact that none of the delegates, so far as I have heard, was overcharged for hotel accommodations or meals. That speaks well for the city, for the crowd was so big that the temptation of the hotel and restaurant men to raise their rates was great. Many delegates have spoken to me about the nice way they were treated."

"Duluth certainly lived up to her reputation in handling this convention," said Joel P. Heatwole, former congressman and editor of the Northfield News. "The people of the city have proven very hospitable and all the delegates and candidates are pleased, I know."

"Duluth is certainly all right," said Attorney General E. T. Young. "The arrangements were perfect and I think everyone is going away well satisfied, even the defeated candidates."

"As a convention city, Duluth certainly is a grand success," said Frank M. Eddy of Sauk Center. "There is a feeling of general satisfaction over the manner in which affairs concerning the big meeting were conducted, and everybody is fairly well satisfied with the results. No reason why the Republican party in Minnesota shouldn't meet with a memorable sucess at the coming election. I have been attending state political conventions and other kinds of conventions ever since I was old enough to vote, but I was never at one where the delegates and visitors were so well treated, or had a better time."

W. B. Douglas of St. Paul, former attorney general of Minnesota, was in the city yesterday, but not as a delegate. He remained at the convention only until after the nomination of Chief Justice Start and A. L. Cole, and then boarded the afternoon train for home.

"Duluth is to be complimented on the manner in which plans regarding the convention were carried out," he said. "She has made a name for herself as a convention city. All the delegates and other visitors are entirely satisfied with the treatment accorded them, and will leave town entertaining a more friendly regard for Duluth than they ever had before. I never saw a convention hall better arranged for the orderly seating of delegates. There was no hesitation in seating the outsiders in their respective sections, and the hall wasn't so crowded as to be uncomfortable. The weather we have enjoyed while here is something long to be remembered. It has been ideal. I favored Jacobson for governor, but think the selection of Cole will be popular, and I believe he will win out at the polls in November, although there is no use disguising the fact that Governor Johnson will be a strong opponent."

"I am glad the convention was held in Duluth," said Julius H. Block, defeated candidate for governor. "No city in the country could have treated the delegates and their friends in better shape. The affair was very successfully conducted, and all the boys are complimenting your committee on arrangements. They are pleased with Duluth, and with the hospitality of Duluth. You have one of the greatest cities in the Northwest here, and it will continue to grow in size and importance. Everyone who has been in the city during the past few days has received even a better impression of the town than he ever had before. The weather man treated us royally. I am sure Mr. Cole will be elected governor. He is well liked and party harmony will give him the office for which he aspires."

"Duluth's hospitality is of the rarest type," said Senator R. B. Brower of St. Cloud. "I have never seen people more magnificently treated than we have been and I know that everyone of us will feel that he cannot say too much for Duluth."

Duluth as a convention city cannot be surpassed," said A. T. Koerner of Litchfield, former state treasurer and father of P. C. Koerner, who was a candidate for the office before this convention. "Our entertainment has been of the finest kind and we cannot say too much for you in appreciation."

Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones, who has been here during the convention, says that Duluth is the best place in the state to hold a large convention of any kind. Of course this is not his first visit here by any means and he is well acquainted with the city. Said he last night:

"I guess you fellows must have had this weather made to order or else the gods are smiling on the Republican party, for I have never experienced such absolutely superb weather at this time of the year in any place. And the way that Duluth has handled this convention is great. I really believe that if it had been part of the business of the convention to chose its next meeting place, it would have been pretty nearly unanimous for Duluth for the convention two years from now."

Frank Clague of Lamberton, speaker of the house of representatives, was another man who is very much pleased with the fact that Duluth had the convention. In speaking of it he said:

"I hope Duluth will get the convention often, if it is to be my good fortune to atend; for I do not know of a place on the map where the weather conditions are so ideal. It is a big and pleasing change to sit here and not swelter to death like you do in St. Paul. There, as everybody knows that has attended a convention in St. Paul, one almost has to gasp for breath in the convention hall, but here your bracing air makes us vigorous and today we broke the record for quick conventions. That's the way to do business, but you can't do it that fast on a summer day in St. Paul or Minneapolis. And your Commercial club and citizens have certainly treated us royally. It could not be done better and I wish Duluth all the luck and prosperity it can posibly have. I'm glad the convention was held here for the reason that it will give a whole lot of the delegates, whose idea of Duluth was hazy, a proper appreciation of Minnesota's great lake port."

Senator G. B. Ward of Alexandria is more than pleased with the treatment he has received here. Said he:

"Why, this is a natural convention city, and it seems to me that the previous state central committees have overlooked a good deal when they missed Duluth. You have handled the convention in splendid shape and everybody feels pleased. The delegates will know more about the third largest port in the world than they ever did before and it will be a good thing for them as well as for Duluth."

Julius H. Schmahl, the successful candidate for secretary of state, while pretty happy over his own success, also has time to be happy over the treatment he has received at Duluth. He said:

"Speaking for myself and the people with whom I have talked from my part of the country, I can say that we are thoroughly satisfied, not only with our luck but with the way we have been entertained. Every Duluthian, it seems to me, appointed himself a committee of one to see that visitors were handled properly. The glad hand was out everywhere and those who had to stay in some private houses say that the hospitality shown was rare indeed and they have been delighted. They say that these private families took them in almost as members of the family and made them feel at home. Duluth will have a good many more warm friends in the Southern and Western parts of the state than she has had before, for our people know you now."

Samuel A. Langum, secretary of the state senate, says he never saw anywhere such complete arrangements for entertaining and have them work out so successfully. He says that the people from the First district will never forget Duluth.

"And," he added, "when you want the convention again we will boost you."

Joseph T. Mannix, representative from the Fifty-first district and cashier of the newspaper men of the Twin Cities, says Duluth is the queen of the cities for entertainment and beauty.

Representative B. H. Timberlake of the Thirty-ninth district, who was in the Hennepin delegation, is an old visitor to Duluth and has always liked the city and its citizens, but says he never dreamed of such hospitality as was shown.

Representative Sherman S. Smith of Minneapolis said concerning the hospitality shown here:

"Say, you fellows are daisies. Duluth for mine."

"The convention has been a big success from the standpoint of arrangements," said R. W. Nelson of Stillwater. "I think all are entirely satisfied with the way in which it was conducted. Duluth has treated her guests in fine shape, and I am sure they duly appreciate it. A good many of the outsiders who never were here before are surprised at what they have seen, and pleasantly so."

"Duluth may well pride herself on the way the convention went through," said L. S. Cant of Alexandria. "There wasn't a hitch anywhere. All the delegates were pleased with the hall and the seating accommodations, and have nothing but good words for the hospitality of Duluthians."

"If you will guarantee such weather as this at any time desired in the future, probably the politicians can be prevailed upon to hold all their conventions in Duluth hereafter," said G. W. Nash of Pipestone, Minn. "The weather has been perfect. At no time was it any too warm in the convention hall. As a convention city Duluth is a fine success."

"The delegates are delighted with Duluth," said W. J. Brown of Warren. "The convention was conducted to their satisfaction, and the way the guests were treated could not be otherwiso than pleasing."

New York, June 14.—The opening trading on the stock market today was languid and indifferent and made little change from last night's prices. The tendency was lower, but St. Paul and Baltimore & Ohio were pushed up nearly a point with some offsetting influence. Delaware & Hudson fell 1½, and Reading, 1⅛.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Hazlett Must Go to Prison for Life for Killing Van Buskirk.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Forman—The jury which has been trying J. B. Hazlett on a charge of shooting and killing L. M. Van Buskirk, a carpenter, at Genesseo, N. D., March 20 last, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree and the court sentenced him to life imprisonment. The defendant is 62 years old and has large property interests. The principal witnesses for the state were the widow of the dead man and Fred Foeman, an eye witness of the killing.

Mrs. Van Buskirk testified that Hazlett had made love to her; had attempted to induce her to elope with him and had threatened her husband. Foeman told of the commission of the crime and swore that Hazlett had endeavored to get him to say that the shooting was accidental.

In his own behalf, Hazlett took the stand and swore that Van Buskirk called hum vile names and made a lunge at him; that he pushed him back with his gun barrel; that Van Buskirk grabbed the gun and while the muzzle was against his breast the weapon was accidentally discharged.

Fargo—Convicted of practicing medicine without a state license, Dr. F. N. Snyder of this city was fined $50. The doctor is the manager of a sanatorium in this city and advertised to cure chronic diseases.

O. G. Major, president of the Minnesota Farmers' exchange, is in the city with W. S. Green of Ashland, Wis., stirring up interest in the excursion to Ashland on June 20. The farmers interested in independent elevator lines in the state will make the trip with a view to investigating the advantages offered by Ashland as a terminal elevator point.

Kenmare—As the result of a young man foolishly pointing a small rifle at her, Anna Knapp, living near the Diamond mine, is suffering from a serious, but it is believed not serious, wound. The young man had a 22-caliber rifle and playfully pointed it at the young woman and threatened to shoot. She grasped the barrel and in the struggle the gun was discharged, the bullet entering her shoulder. Doctors probed the wound, but have not yet located the ball. The young man says he did not know the gun was loaded.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sisseton—John Campbell, an Indian, residing near the village of Peever, was found dead near his cabin door by members of his family. It appears that two white men of Peever village became drunk the night before and went to the Campbell home about 12 o'clock to have a spree. After getting the Indian beastly drunk and grossly insulting the woman of the house, the two men left the premises, leaving Campbell out in the back yard, where he spent the night, and was found dead the next morning. The affair is being investigated by the authorities, and it is probable that arrests will follow.

Bath—The steel bridge across the James river, five miles south of this town, is in a dangerous condition, owing to the high water. It is almost impossible to cross at that point. The water has now reached the level of the grading of the approach to the bridge. The structure on the telephone line between James and Bath, is reported as being the best place to cross the river.

Mitchell—While at work on a scaffolding near the top of a house, O. Delong, a carpenter, fell and sustained injuries from which he died soon afterwards. He was 61.

WHEAT IS DEPRESSED

Prices Go Down Everywhere in America, Except in St. Louis.

Flax Closes Stronger After Dull Session in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 14.—Rains in Illinois, Missouri and other places which needed it sorely caused a weak wheat market in America today. The declines were everywhere except St. Louis, where the July option closed ¼c up. The September option there was unchanged. Predictions of rain for this part of the country also had a repressing effect on the market. Liverpool closed ¼d to ½d lower, Paris unchanged to ⅛c higher, Antwerp and Berlin unchanged and in Budapest there was no market, it being a holiday.

The July option closed ⅜c lower in Duluth, ⅝c in Chicago, ½@⅝c in Minneapolis, ⅝c in New York, ⅜@½c in Kansas City and ⅝c in Winnipeg. The September option closed ½c lower in Duluth, Minneapolis and New York, ⅝@⅞c in Chicago, and ⅝c in Kansas City. The October option closed ⅝c lower in Winnipeg.

Corn had a wide range today, the July option in Chicago selling above 53½c and closing unchanged at 52⅝c. Corn was ¼d to ⅜d lower in Liverpool. July oats sold to 40¼c during the day and closed ⅛ higher at 39⅝c in Chicago.

Carr receipts at Duluth were 18 against 15 last year and at Minneapolis 146 against 163 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 164 against 178 last year. Chicago received 7 against 2 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 257,000 bus., last year 241,000 bus. Shipments 222,000 bus., last year 212,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 81,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 553,000 bus., last year 484,000 bus. Shipments 726,000 bus., last year 409,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 12,000 bus.

Wheat was fairly active and weaker during the session of the Duluth market. July wheat opened 3¼c lower at 83¾c, declined to 83⅜c at 9:50, rallied to 83¾c at 10:45, declined to 83¼c at 11:30, rallied to 83⅝c at 12:50 and closed at 82½c, a loss of ¾c from yesterday. September wheat was inactive at the opening, which was ¼c lower at 82¾c, declined to 82¼c, rallied to 82¾c, declined to 83⅛c and closed at 82⅝c, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday.

Flax was dull and weak during the early part of the session but strengthened later. Flax closed ⅞c higher in Hull and unchanged in Antwerp.

July flax opened ½c lower at $1.13, declined to $1.12¾, rallied at the close to $1.13¼, a gain of ½c over yesterday. September flax opened ¼c lower at $1.13⅜, declined to $1.13¼, rallied at the close to $1.13⅝, a gain of ¼c over yesterday. October flax was inactive at the opening, sold as high as $1.13¼, as low as $1.12¼ and closed at $1.13, unchanged from yesterday.

July oats and oats to arrive and on track closed ½c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Heavy Rains Wednesday Night Have Depressing Effect on Wheat.

Chicago, June 14.—Rains last night in Illinois, Missouri and the Ohio valley had a depressing effect today on the wheat market here. Pit traders, commission houses and local longs were quite free sellers, and the principal support came from shorts. July opened unchanged at 83c, and sold off to 82⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 170 cars, against 125 cars last week and 189 cars a year ago.

The market was very nervous all day. Toward the middle of the day sentiment became quite bullish and prices advanced sharply, the July option selling up to 84@84c. Later the market eased off again on renewed profit-taking, July declining to 83¾c. The close was easy with July down ⅜@¼c at 82½@83c.

The partial relief from drought conditions in Missouri and the Ohio valley, occasioned by rains last night, caused weakness in the corn market. Commission houses and longs were the chief sellers. The market lacked any substantial support. July opened ½c to ¾c lower at 52¾c to 52¼c and declined to 51⅝c. Local receipts were 395 cars, with 157 of contract grade.

A strong tone developed toward the end of the first hour on buying by several prominent commission houses. The price of the July delivery advanced to 53¼c. Later a reaction followed on profit-taking and the close was about steady. Final quotations on July were unchanged at 52⅝c.

Despite the weakness of wheat and corn, the oats market was strong, there being an active demand by shorts for the July option. There was a little show of weakness at the start, but all of the initial decline was quickly regained. Commission houses were actvie bidders for the September option. July opened unchanged to ½c lower at 38⅛c to 38⅜c and advanced to 39⅛c. Local receipts were 132 cars.

Provisions were quiet and a trifle easier. A 5c decline in the price of live hogs was the main factor. September pork was off 2½c at $16.57½. Lard was down 5c at $8.02½. Ribs were 2½@5c lower at $9.22½.

Close: Wheat—July, 82½@82¾c; Sept., 82⅝@82¾c. Corn—July, 52⅝c; Sept., 52¼@52⅜c. Oats—July, 39⅛; Sept., 35⅝@35¾c. Lard—July, $8.77@8.80; Sept., $8.95. Ribs—July, $9.22½; Sept., $8.95. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was not the same action in wheat as on previous days, but a good range of prices and a good trading market, at that. Helped by the strength in coarse grains, by some country buying, by additional buying on the part of the house which bought a million bushels late yesterday, prices rallied from an early dip to 83 cents or better for both July and September. Late in the session there was a break of about 1 cent from best prices, and this was followed by a quick rebound to better than Wednesday's level. The close was a fair to late decline of about ⅜ cent for the day. No doubt the talk of new wheat movement induced some of the selling. Bull leaders who sold considerable wheat yesterday appear to be holding off to replace at more of a reaction. The adverse crop reports from points in Kansas, Nebraska and Tenn. were the most radical yet received and sufficient to have given the market a decided advance, but for the fact that the edge appears to be off at the present, holders liquidating moderately, in the face of the expected new wheat movement. A continuation of present conditions over Kansas and Nebraska will off-set everything else, and on any breaks, caused by local selling pressure, believe wheat is a purchase.

Corn—An early drop of about ¾c in corn prices was followed by a sensational upturn of 1½c, which landed both July and September at 53½c. It was a see-saw market the last hour, and prices closed practically the same as yesterday. Receipts are estimated larger at 472 cars. This is offset by the claim that acceptances on country bids are not heavy. There was a good volume of outside buying on the early break, as well as Northwest buying orders. It did not take much force in the market to make early sellers replace their corn. Nebraska and Kansas reports suggest injury to the crop with any further drought. The forecast does not give any promise of rain for that section.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: July oats 40c in Chicago, and the end is not yet. If this price represented only some local speculative interests it would not be of great importance. As a matter of fact, it represents the feeling of the entire trade and the entire country on the serious outlook for the next crop. Any reference to the condition of the crop given out at Washington last week caused only a smile from those who are acquainted with the facts concerning the growing crop. As conservathive an authority as Murray, of the Price Current, while attempting to show that corn is not yet seriously hit in any part of the country, makes the bold declaration that the oats crop is unmistakably and materially short. Even in Illinois, where fair rains have fallen recently, delegates to the Grain Dealers' meeting at Peoria give it out that over a large portion of the state the crop is spindling and heading in many places at only a half foot high. The same people concede that hay is a very light crop.

A Chicago leader who is long the biggest line of oats in the trade goes on record as saying that oats prices for all months will easily reach 40c or over. Experts declare that south of a line drawn through Chicago, the promise for oats is not to exceed 50 per cent. Giving the Northwest credit for a good yield, the total crop of the year may easily be brought down to about 75 per cent of an average yield. Messages here this morning from Nebraska claim that wheat condition has gone back steadily every day since May 25, when the official report was made up. A special report from Frankfort, Kan., declares that corn has reached a critical stage, in need of rain, and that oats are a failure.

Cincinnati Price Current: With the exception of cool weather which is delaying the ripening of winter wheat the crop otherwse is maintaining its recent promise. Cool weather is checkng the progress of corn somewhat but the stand is generally good and actual injury not indicated. Oats and hay crops are unmistakably short.

A Toronto letter says: "Have just had a talk with a traveller for a large bag concern of Montreal, who is somewhat of a crop expert, and very reliable. He surprised me by stating that the Ontario winter wheat crop will not be more than 75 per cent of an average crop. In some sections the crop is good, but taking it all through he is positive it will not turn out more than 75 per cent of an average crop. My previous advices regarding our Ontario winter wheat crop have been very favorable. I believe, however, this report is most reliable."

A SNEEZING GHOST.

Boston Herald: It was some years ago, when the late Barney Macauley was playing an engagement at the Park theatre, Boston, in his play, "A Message from Jarvis Section," that a friend met the actor in a Tremont street drug store.

"I have just purchased a drug," said Macauley, "invaluable to me in my profession, when my supply gives out I hasten to replenish it."

He held up a small bottle containing a brown powder which he had purchased, then resumed: "At times I am attacked with fits of sneezing. There will be 50 or 60 prodigious sneezes in succession, and when I do not have this powder the only way I can stave them off is by extraordinary facial contortions, such as twisting my nose sideways, working my jaw, etc.

"And that reminds me. A while ago at my theatre in Louisville, Ky., I was playing the ghost to Edwin Booth's Hamlet. My first words to Hamlet, 'Mark me,' were followed, to my horror, by premonitory symptoms of a sneezing fit. Ye gods! Imagine a sneezing ghost, and the house was packed. I stared solemnly at Booth and began to twist my nose in all possible directions.

"Booth, poor fellow, having no knowledge of the cause, was at first startled, then horrified, thinking I was coming down with a fit or going crazy. He backed nervously off the stage. I slowly followed him, making fearful faces, which I concealed from the audience as best I could.

"When I reached the wings, Booth eyed me dubiously. 'In the name of heaven, Barney, what's the matter?' he whispered hoarsely, still backing away.

"'Sneeze,' I managed to say.

"My stage manager, having seen my trouble, and knowing what was required, was ready with the antidote, after a pinch of which I was myself again.

"I backed on at another entrance, impressively beckoning Hamlet, who followed, and our scene went on. The audience, or some of them, at least, noticed that we took an extra turn around the block, but thinking, no doubt, 'twas some new business, did not mind, and all ended happily."

NEEDED A NEW LIVER.

Boston Herald: "Old Hunker" McLaughlin was a well known character in Chelsea some 25 years ago. This is a story told of him:

At one time Hunker was ailing and called on the city physician, who told him to wear a liver pad, to be had at any drug store. On inquiring the price, and finding it high, he got his wife to make one for him.

In about a week he said, "Bridget, the b'yes all keep away from me. What the divil is the matter? Am I dying?"

"Sure you're not dying," she said. "It's getting better every minute ye are. Take off that liver pad and let me put a fresh liver into it for yer."

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Rallies Not Held and Closing Was Feverish and Unsettled.

Violent Rise of Reading Was Feature of Final Hour.

New York, June 14.—The opening trading on the stock market today was languid and indifferent and made little change from last night's prices. The tendency was lower, but St. Paul and Baltimore & Ohio were pushed up nearly a point with some offsetting influence. Delaware & Hudson fell 1½, and Reading, 1¼.

Most stocks advanced fractionally beyond their opening prices before the market began to give way. Sympathetic strength was maintained for a brief time only through the marking up of B. & O. and other favorites. When the market weakened much of the advance was lost and some large declines resulted. Among the notable changes were:

Advances—Virginia-Carolina Chemical 2, B. & O. 1¾, and Northwestern and Illinois Central 1.

Declines—International Pump 2¾, D. & H. 2, International Pump preferred 1½ and St. Paul, National of Mexico preferred, Tennessee Coal and Sloss-Sheffield Steel 1 to 1¼.

Selling pressure was renewed causing declines in Reading of 2, St. Paul preferred and Sloss-Sheffield Steel 2¼, Anaconda 3, and Northern Pacific, United States Steel, Amalgamated Copper, Sugar, Central Leather and Locomotive preferred 1. B. & O. showed resistance and its renewed rise of 2⅝, made a center for the moderate rally. Consolidated Gas moved up 2. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Extensive selling undermined the market on the heavy liquidation in Reading inducing the closing out of other large lines of stocks. Anaconda had dropped 5 points up to 1 o'clock. D. & H. 4, Reading 3¼, Pacific 2, Sugar reduction preferred 3, Northern Pacific 2, Copper 1½, Union Pacific 1¾, and Great Northern preferred, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Erie, O. & W., Smelting, Locomotive, rPessed Steel Car, Colorado Fuel and Lead 1 to 1¼.

The market was relieved from pressure while the shorts were covering but as soon as this buying was completed the decline was renewed. Reading and Amalgamated Copper betrayed the most acute weakness. Lackawanna sold off 15 points on one transaction. Reading gave way 5, Pacific 3, Great Northern preferred 2¾. Amalgamated Copper 2⅝, Colorado Soutnern second preferred and Railway Steel Spring 2. American Car 1⅜ and Denver & Rio Grande 1.

A violena rise of Reading was the feature of the final hour. That stock was made to sell, momentarily at 132, an extreme decline of 5⅝, in the stages of the decline was made by ½ point intervals with immediate recoveries by as wide intervals. Large stop-loss orders were thus uncovered. Prices broke sharply elsewhere. Losses in Delaware & Hudson ran to 7, Northern Pacific 6, Hocking Valley 3½, Great Northern preferred 3, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Smelting, Colorado Fuel and General Electric 2 to 2¾, Illinois Central 1¾, United States Steel 1½, Missouri Pacific 1¼ and other important stocks a point. Reading rebounded a points and other stocks showed the effects of a scramble among shorts to cover. Transactions diminished in volume on the recovery and rallies were not held. Baltimore & Ohio extended its rise to 3, and the closing was feverish and unsettled.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was weaker again today, following the decline in New York and London metal market. Selling principally by disgusted holders, who have been waiting for the long-predicted boom. A small amount of investment buying appeared on the decline, but we do not look for any general buying unless the market sells off more, and think it will pay to watch the better class of stocks for next ten days, with the view of picking up some cheap stocks. Amalgamated, Range, North Butte and Osceola are beginning to look cheap to us.

New York Money.

New York, June 14.—Money on call, firmer, 3@3¾ per cent; ruling rate, 3¾; closing bid, 3½; offred at 4. Time loans strong; 60 days and 90 days, 4¼ per cent; 6 months, 4¾. Bar silver, 54½c; Mexican dollars, 50c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds steady.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, issued on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

LEAP PREVENTS FATAL EXPLOSION

Hero in Runaway Seizes Pile of Dynamite and Jumps.

Fosston, Minn., June 14.—Jorgen Haugen of Rosebud, together with his daughter, Charles Juve and Mr. Hultberg, had a terrifying experience and a narrow escape from being blown to atoms as a result of a runaway.

The four were in a wagon enroute to the Hill river country, where a ditch is being constructed by the Juve brothers. The wagon, besides its passengers, contained supplies among which was a large quantity of dynamite. Near the church in the country north of here the horses took fright and started at a breakneck speed down a long, steep hill.

Haugen was driving, but found it impossible to control the animals. All that he could do was to keep them in the roadway, and it was a difficult matter to do even this. The road was uneven and full of bumps and along one side ran a ditch and the other was lined with the stumps of trees.

The wagon swayed and lurched as the horses tore down the incline, and the passengers expected every moment that it would strike a rock or a stump and the dynamite would be exploded by the concussion. Just as the bottom of the hill was reached the end of the wagon tongue dropped to the ground and threw the horses.

Seeing what was about to happen and feeling sure that the explosion would follow, Charles Juve seized the case containing the dynamite, and as the speed of the team slightly slackened, he leaped with it to the roadside. It was a terrible hazard, but fortunately he lit where there was a quantity of sand and thus saved his own life and those of his companions. The others were thrown from the wagon by the fall of the horses and the supplies were scattered broadcast. None was hurt seriously, though Haugen sustained several bad wrenches by his efforts to control the maddened animals.

BONES IN FRAGMENTS.

Dynamite Prematurely Explodes and Injures Farmer.

Little Falls, Minn., Jne 14.—A premature explosion of dynamite inflicted terrible injuries upon Charles Chandler, a well-to-do farmer living near Randall. A charge of the explosive had been placed under a stump and the fuse lighted. Something went wrong with the fuse and before Randall had gotten more than three or four feet away the explosion occurred. The stump was blown to atoms and the dirt and gravel scattered about in all directions.

Randall was thrown to the ground and those who reached him first believed him dead. A physician was hastily summoned and it was found that Randall was alive, but that the bones in his left leg and left arm were broken into fragments. His body was badly bruised from the impact of small stones and his right eye was filled with sand.

The physician says that unless blood poisoning or necrosis of some of the small fragments of bone do not supervene either of which is probable, the injured man will recover.

How to Break Up a Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. DECLINED TO BE A QUEEN

Princess Patricia of Connaught Rejected Suit of Alfonso.

Proposal of Present Bridegroom Before He Met Princess Ena.

London, June 14.—"There are half a dozen reasons why I can't and won't marry you—now that I come to think of it there are a great many more—and any one of them would make me say 'no' to you for all time."

No woman ever keeps her proposals to herself, and princesses are no exception to the rule. Nor are they any exception to the rule that the friends to whom they confide their hearts' secrets generally prove lax guardians of them. And thus it comes about that it is now possible to tell the story of how Princess Patricia of Connaught refused the hand of the king of Spain, some months before his engagement to Princess Ena of Battenberg, as it was told by the princess herself. It began—at least, the interesting part of it—with the words quoted above.

"But no one ever says 'no' to me," was Alfonso's response. "I can wait and I will. Do you understand, fair lady? Do you think I am going to give up the girl whose photograph I have carried all round Europe for the last three months?"

"There are scores of nice little Austrian princesses much more suitable for you than I am."

"They are commonplace; they are prosaic," returned Alfonso. "They wear pigtails. I can't stand pigtails."

"Why is it, King Alfonso, that a man always wants something he can't get. Mrs. Leslie, one of mother's ladies, who is an American, told me that, and what American women don't know about men is not worth knowing."

"You must introduce me to Mrs. Leslie," said Alfonso, "for it strikes me she is a philosopher. She certainly has told you the truth. I expect it is because all the marriageable princesses in Europe, except those of Great Britain, have been flung at my head that I don't want any of them. But what are your reasons for saying me no?"

"To start with, I am not in love with you. In the second place, I would not change my religion for you or any other king. The third reason is I want to live in England and devote myself to art. Mr. Sargent told mother that if I weren't a princess he was sure there was a great artistic future before me. The other reasons I need not mention now."

King Alfonso laughs all day long. When he wakes up at night he laughs. He laughed loud and long at the princess's objection, and he insisted that before the week was over she would change her mind. He knew but little of the character of the young lady with whom he was dealing. Princess Patricia has a temperament which the Scotch would term "dour." She is rather clever, abnormally self-willed, has a smattering of philosophy, and it is not surprising that she has a most exaggerated idea of her artistic capabilities since her sketches—ordinary, pleasant little productions which might be executed by any talented young girl of her age—are greedily welcomed by such institutions as the New Gallery and the Royal academy. Great artists have fussed over the princess's "talent," her "insight into nature," her "powers of draughtsmanship," until they have beggared their vocabularies of superlatives. The result is she believes she is destined to become one of the great artists of the age, and is so enthusiastic, after the fashion of young girls, that she is prepared to give up anything "for art." If the truth is to be admitted, it is the possibility of achieving a halo of fame in artistic life in England which has been the primary cause in preventing Princess Patricia accepting the throne of Spain.

Everybody knows that rumors were rife early last year that negotiations were under way for an engagement between Princess Patricia, the second daughter of the king's brother, the Duke of Connaught, and the king of Spain. As is now apparent, it was not the king's fault that it did not take place. Save for the religious obstacle, which Princess Ena tripped over so lightly, the match would have been highly appropriate. Though neither of them can be called beautiful, according to the standard that prevails outside the charmed circle of royalty, most people would consider Patricia, rather the better looking of the two. She has certainly more brains and is much more vivacious. She is just two months younger than the king. She was born on St. Patrick's day, and that is why she was christened Patricia, which her intimates have abbreviated to "Pat."

The duchess of Connaught is, in a quiet way, an ambitious woman, and was greatly disappointed at the princess's rejection of her kingly suitor; but the duke of Connaught said promptly, "Let little Pat please herself. I am in no hurry to get rid of her." Princess Pat has always been the pet of the family, and has more or less ruled her parents and every other member of the household.

Princess Patricia has her own set of friends, many of whom are a great deal older than herself, notably Mrs. Adair who, of course, might be her mother. When the duke of Connaught was commander-in-chief in Dublin, Princess "Pat" used to spend weeks at a time with Mrs. Adair at Glenveagh castle. They motored together—Her Royal Highness is an expert driver at the wheel; they walked about in "Galway" cloaks in the lanes and visited the peasantry, and it was here the princess took her first lessons in Gaelic; her first instructions, too, in dancing an Irish jig. She is the only royal princess of the moment who speaks Gaelic, and last season when society went mad over Mrs. Adair's innovation over Irish jigs in her ball programs there was no more graceful figure in each "set" than the duke of Connaught's younger daughter.

As a mimic she is decidedly clever, and the late queen delighted in hearing her "do" an Irish brogue. This she imitates to perfection. On many occasions Her Royal Highness has expressed herself strongly at the inartistic and vulgar way in which the Irish brogue is so frequently presented on the English stage, and has said, "If only I had a chance!"

Her broad and, for a princess, rather unconventional views of life are the result of her constant companionship with another American woman. Since Princess "Pat" was a few years old, Mrs. John Leslie has been connected officially and most intimately with the Duke of Connaught's household. Like her sister, Mrs. George Cornwallis West, she is a strong personality with that definite magnetic power which so many American women possess. Strong, yet sensitive, intuitive and intelligent, well read and sensible, such a woman could not fail to be an influence in the life of any girl.

Queen Victoria, who has no penchant for American women, at first resented very much Mrs. Leslie's intimacy with the Duchess of Connaught and spoke several times to her daughter-in-law on the subject. On one occasion when Her Royal Highness arrived at Buckingham palace to dine quietly with Her Majesty, and consequently wore semi-evening dress, the queen looked her up and down and said:

"I expect it is your American friends who are influencing you against the importance of ceremony. I should have thought you knew I never excuse any guest from wearing full evening dress when dining at my table. I brought you here tonight," Her Majesty went, "to tell you I do not think the girls"—she referred to Princess Margaret, now Princess Gustav of Sweden, and Princess Patricia—"are improving in their manners. You allow them to mix too much with Americans, whose democratic opinions are fatal to girls of their ages, who are naturally enormously influenced by their environment."

"Then," said the duchess, "I am afraid they will have to go on being influenced. Even for you, I could not think of breaking with women who have been my best and most interesting friends since I set foot in England.

Princess Pat goes to Dorchester house, the American ambassador's London residence—every other Thursday when she is in London, that being Miss Reid's "day" in her studio, when she receives all her own friends. The ambassador's daughter is as keen on art as the princess, and she has been taking lessons from some of the academicians, including Prof. Herkomer and Mr. Sargent.

Every other weew while the Connaughts are at Clarence house, Princess Patricia also has an "at home" in her studio and scores of her friends, who all "do" something in artistic life—art, music or literature—assemble there. Mrs. Jack Leslie and Mrs. Adair have permission from the young hostess to bring anyone they choose and there are at the moment no invitations more eagerly sought after than Princess Patricia's.

The lady who refused the throne of Spain is emphatically radical in her tastes and is fond of saying, "I am rather like Uncle Bertie (King Edward), for I don't care a pin what the color of people's blood if they are interesting and do something. While Uncle Bertie doesn't care if they possess money!"

When Princess Patricia eventually found out that King Alfonso had accepted her "no" and laid his hand and heart at her cousin's feet, woman like, she felt piqued.

"I was wise to have refused him," she said. "A man who can change his affections and his intentions as quickly as he has done is unworthy of any woman who thinks seriously—fortunately for Ena, she doesn't take life seriously."

The bride-elect and Princess Patricia used to be rather good friends, but ever since the announcement of the engagement they have never been seen together. And Princess Patricia refused to be one of Her Spanish Majesty's bridesmaids. The attitude of Princess Pat has not impressed her friends favorably, and they say it savors decidedly of the dog in the manger.

"Every man's task is his life-preserver." A Herald want ad. will get you a new and better life-preserver if the old one is unsatisfactory.

WEST DULUTH

MISS FARGO JUNE BRIDE

Weds Roger Munger Weaver at Her Home Amid Friends.

Both Popular Young People—Go On Honeymoon Trip.

At 2:30 this afternoon, Roger Munger Weaver and Miss Sarah Carlotta Fargo were united in marriage by Rev. H. W. Johnson, at the home of the bride. Mr. Weaver and Miss Fargo are two of the most popular young people in West Duluth society.

The house was decorated in green and white, a large arch of smilax, decated with wedding bells, forming a prominent feature of the scheme. The only attendants were two flower girls, Genevieve Johnson and Dorothy Bowen, the first bearing the bride's bouquet, and the latter the ring and a rose. Miss Fargo's wedding gown was white silk de chene, and her traveling dress of gray.

An informal reception was held immediately after the ceremony, at the close of which Mr. and Mrs. Weaver left on their wedding trip. They have kept their destination a secret, and all the efforts of their friends to discover their route have proved unavailing. Mr. Weaver's business will not permit of his remaining away longer than Monday next, so they will be at home to friends after that date, at 417 North Fifty-third avenue west.

The only out-of-town guests at the wedding were Claude Fargo and Carl Weaver, respectively brothers of the bride and groom, both arriving from Minneapolis yesterday.

To Have Play and Speeches.

The Twentieth Century Progress club is sparing no efforts to make its entertainment on Thursday, June 21, a great success. The principal feature will be a three-act play, entitled "Sunset," the cast to be composed of the same people who took part in "David Garrick," as presented under the auspices of the A. O. U. W.

The address of the evening will be delivered by Alderman L. A. Barnes and Hon. P. C. Dowling. The entertainment is to be held in St. James hall.

Wrestling Matches.

West Duluth is to have a genuine, first class wrestling match tonight at the close of the vaudeville entertainment in the Great Eastern hall. The preliminaries will be Tom McCune vs. Sig Thompson. Art Rosene, of West Duluth has a hunch that he can throw four good men in twenty minutes, wrestling time, and has posted a forfeit in case he fails to do so. The principal contest of the evening will be Morris Harris of Superior, vs. Young Beel, the Copper country champion for $50.

Will Get Court in Shape.

The West Duluth Tennis club is beginning to awake from the apathy induced by the wet spell, and is figuring on getting its courts into shape in the near future. The new brass works building, necessitated opening up the alley between Fiftieth and Fifty-first avenues, which will take one of the courts, and the club is as yet undecided as to whether they will build another court or get along with only one this summer.

Holding Rummage Sale.

The ladies of the Asbury M. E. church are holding a rummage sale this week in the Palmer block on the corner of Fifty-sixth avenue west and Grand. On Saturday they are planning to sell bread, cake and pastry, in addition to their other stock.

Nearing Completion.

The new building of the West Duluth Brass works is rapidly nearing completion, and the company expects to occupy it during the latter part of July. The building is located next to the National Iron works, and is a novelty in local factory construction, as walls and partitions are built entirely of concrete blocks.

West Duluth Briefs.

Allen Ransome of St. Paul was in town on business yesterday.

W. C. Burdick has returned from a business trip to Hibbing.

Ollie Olson, a 15-year-old girl who has been living with her parents on the cemetery road between Sixty-first and Sixty-second avenues west, yesterday ran away from home. She had just received a whipping from her father, and as soon as he had gone to work she disappeared, and has not been seen since.

Mesdames F. P. Thompson, C. L. Dixon, F. D. Vibert and T. A. Stewart of Cloquet, and Mesdames A. E. Moe and D. M. Pringle of Stillwater drove in from Cloquet yesterday on a shopping trip.

The West Duluth police have collected about $70 in dog taxes, and they now think that nearly every dog in the western end of the city has a tag.

Miss Alice Lowe of 524 Fifty-sixth avenue is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. H. Atwood, of Cloquet.

WILL J. DAVIS GETS A CHANGE OF VENUE.

Chicago, June 14.—Will J. Davis, former resident manager of the Iroquois theater, who is on trial, charged with manslaughter in connection with the Iroquois theater fire, was today given a change of venue by Judge Smith, it being represented that owing to prejudice, growing out of the fire, the defendant would be unable to secure a fair trial in Cook county. The county has not yet been decided upon.

RAILROADS

EXCURSION FROM WEST

Great Northern Will Bring Special Here June 22.

Chicago-Twin City Rate War is Declared Off.

An excursion from Grand Forks, N. D., and intermediate points will be run into Duluth over the Great Northern, Friday, June 22. No passengers will be taken on this side of Grand Rapids. The special train is due to leave Grand Forks at 6 a. m., and should arrive in Duluth at 3:45 p. m.

Excursionists will return on a special train leaving Duluth at 2:35 p. m., Sunday, June 24, arriving at Grand Forks about midnight. It is expected that 1,500 or 2,000 people will take advantage of the special rates to visit the Head of the Lakes.

This is the first excursion to be run into Duluth over the Great Northern this season. The Northern Pacific will run the second of its 1906 excursions into the city next Tuesday, June 19. It will come from Wahpeton, N. D., arriving here at 2:35 p. m., according to the schedule as at present arranged.

While the Grand Forks excursionists are here there will be a ball game between Duluth and Grand Forks.

THE GRAIN RATES.

Railroads Are Giving Them Their Careful Consideration Just Now.

Grain rates are monopolizing the attention of the railroad traffic managers at present. The agreement as to the differential between gulf and the Atlantic ports, which stands 3 and 4 cents in favor of the gulf, expires on June 30, and meetings are being held to try and arrange either for a continuance of this agreement for another year or for an entirely new arrangement. The indications are that the agreement will be renewed.

Another matter which is agitating the Western roads is that of the elevator charges at the Missouri river. The railroads now include in their rates 1½ cents for elevator charges at the Missouri river. This charge is dictated by an agreement which the Union Pacific has with the Peavey company of Minneapolis, which has some 450 elevators along its lines.

Other roads have been forced to make this same charge in their rates, and it has been the cause of much dissatisfaction on the part of the grain shippers and some of the other railroads.

President Stickney of the Great Western probably will be the first to break away from this practice. He practically has given notice of his intention to make the elevator charge an extra charge where the grain actually goes through the warehouse. It is claimed that to include this in the rate gives advantages to the shippers of grain who own elevators at the Missouri river, in as much as that much of the charge is rebated to them.

This proposition of Mr. Stickney has met with the approval of one or two other Missouri river roads, but the Union Pacific naturally is strongly opposed to it, as its legal department has advised that the Peavey contract is legal and enforceable and the road will be compelled to pay that charge.

As for the question of the differential, the western roads are hoping that the eastern roads will agree to absorb the lighterage charge on export grain at the Atlantic seaboard, and include it in the 13 cent rate, which will make the through rate on this class of grain from theMissouri river 23 cents, made up of the local of 11 cents west of Chicago and 13 cents east, f. o. b. boat New York.

RATE WAR IS OFF.

Railroads Between St. Paul and Twin Cities Reach Agreement.

The rate war between the Chicago-St. Paul roads was declared off yesterday. A meeting of the passenger officials of all the interested roads was held at St. Paul, and it was agreed that the sale of tickets to Chicago and return, for $12, good for the return trip up to Sept. 30, should be discontinued.

The war was precipitated last Friday, when one of the roads began selling these tickets to get the service of carrying the Minneapolis teachers and students, whose schools had just closed, to their summer destinations.

New Cars Received.

About half of the 500 new ore cars ordered last year by the Duluth & Iron Range road, have been delivered and are now in service. Both this road and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern are receiving consignments of ore cars daily from the works of the Pressed Steel Car company of Pittsburg. The Missabe road ordered 750 new cars.

Railroad Notes.

A special train carrying Alladin Temple of Mystic Shriners of Columbus, Ohio, returning home from a trip to the Yellowstone Park, will arrive in Duluth at 7:55 a. m. June 23, arriving over the Northern Pacific, and leaving on the same road, via Ashland, for Chicago at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The party is headed by Al G. Field, the minstrel.

The regular Northern Pacific train which left at 11:10 last night for the Twin Cities was composed of twelve coaches, on account of the returning delegates who attended the Republican convention. There was talk of running a special at 7 o'clock, but this was abandoned because so many of the visitors wanted to take a trip on the bay and lake in the evening.

Carl Dahlberg, formerly traveling freight agent out of Minneapolis for the Nickel Plate, has left the railroad business to become a merchant at Tonia, N. D.

HAS NO CHOICE FOR GOVERNOR

Shaw Says His Iowa Work is Purely for Party.

Chicago, June 14.—Secretary Shaw was in Chicago today en route from Davenport, Iowa, to Washington. "The reason as stated in my telegram," he said, "that I had conferred with the president before going to Iowa was that a certain Washington newspaper correspondent had filled his paper with stories to the effect that the president was displeased that I should become interested in Republican politics in my own state.

"Of course the president is not interfering, and will not interfere, in Iowa factional politics; he would not, if I wanted him to, and I would not let him, if I could help it, if he so desired. What is more, I have not interfered in Iowa factional politics, and do not intend to. I have stated in all my speeches that I have no candidate for governor of Iowa. I have spoken for no one, and I have spoken against no one. I do not care who holds the offices in Iowa. I am interested only as a Republican, in the success of Republican principles. I have simply spoken for my party, and I have defended the record of that party.

"The fight in Iowa is getting bitter, and in their zeal some Republicans are liable to become forgetful of Republican party principles. I have painted, as best I could, the old party, which I believe is yet of far greater importance than the consummation of any man's ambition."

THE LONGWORTHS VISIT COMMONS

After Viewing Inspection of the Yeomen of the Guards.

London, June 14.—Congressman Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Longworth, accompanied by Secretary Carter of the American embassy, were present today at the inspection of the Yeomen of the guards on the grounds of St. James palace. The weather was dull and cold but the visitors enjoyed the interesting spectacle.

With Ambassador and Mrs. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Longworth afterwards lunched with the speaker of the house of commons, James Lowther, and Mrs. Lowther, and attended the sitting of the house. Mrs. Longworth sat in the ladies' gallery with Mrs. Lowther and Mrs. Reid, Mr. Longworth going to the distinguished strangers' gallery. Earl Percy escorted the party through the house of lords and later John Henniker Heaton entertained them at tea on the terrace of the house, where the leaders of the political parties in the house of commons and house of lords were present.

When asked in the house of commons today what precautions had been taken to see that British army contractors used sound material in the manufacture of canned meats, War Secretary Haldane replied that no current army contracts were held by British makers. When contracts were held by British subjects, army officers paid surprise visits to the factories and took samples which were submitted to a government analyist.

Mr. Lea, Liberal, suggested that Mr. Haldane send trained officers on surprise visits to American packing houses, while William Redmond raised a laugh by suggesting that there was plenty of room for improvement at home and asking for information regarding what quantities of tinned meats and other provisions supplied by British firms were condemned during the Boer war.

RUSS LEADERS PESSIMISTIC

Radical Elements Daily Getting More and More Out of Hand.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—Such shrewd judges of the situation as Prof. Milunkoff, leader of the Constitutional Democrats, are growing more pessimistic daily. The Radical elements in the lower house of parliament are getting more and more out of hand, and events in the interior are marching so rapidly that people almost doubt whether the surrender of the government to the demand for a responsible ministry would not now come too late. The leaders consequently are preparing for eventualities. The authority of parliament is growing constantly in the country, and if the extreme elements can be held in check a little longer the leaders hope that when the crisis comes the government will realize the futility of resistance.

On the other hand, the agrarian movement, which is now extending in all directions, threatens parliament as well as the government, and it is increasingly manifest that the troops who come from the villages are siding with the peasants from whom they are recruited. Even the Cossacks are beginning to rebel against the odious work of holding the people in subjection. M. Svesshnikoff, a Cossack member of the lower house, claims to have received a thousand letters from Cossack soldiers saying they are tired of playing the role of oppressors of the people, and adding that the time-honored name of Cossack, formerly synonymous with brave protectors of the country against the ravages of savage hordes on the borderlands, was now anathematized, and they desire to right the wrongs they have been compelled to inflict on the nation.

The district court has returned an indictment against M. Litanoff, the member of parliament from Saratoff and editor of the Social revolutionary paper Dielonaroda (the peoples' work), which was recently confiscated for attacking officials of the government, and proceedings have been begun against fourteen workmen who issued a revolutionary address to the country. The whole question of the inviolability of the persons of members of parliament is thus ralsed.

Thousands annually bear witness to the efficiency of Early Risers. These pleasant, reliable little pills have long borne a reputation second to none as a laxative and cathartic. Sold by all druggists.

Another Pleasing Concert.

Another of the French & Bassett concerts was given yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. The numbers, selections from Donizetti, Gounod, Liszt, Verdi and Sousa, with suc hartists as Johanna Gadski, Melba, Sembrich and Scotti and Sousa's band were listened to with great pleasure. One of the interesting numbers was the lullaby from "Jocelyn," sung by Miss Frances Woodbridge of this city, accompanied by Miss Simonds. These weekly concerts are looked forwar dto with much interest and pleasure by a large number of music lovers and the cordial invitation extended by the company is accepted with keen pleasure.

THE characteristics that have made Blatz Beers world-famed are an invariable feature of each brand. Whether your dealer offers you Blatz "Wiener," "Private Stock," "Export" or "Muenchener," you will be sure of a beer that's brewed for quality along either Bohemian or Bavarian lines by the Blatz Process.

Wiener

BLATZ—MILWAUKEE

And it's this very process that's the answer to the much talked of Blatz Character—that "peculiarly good taste." All of the fundamental and essential elements of honest brewing are only the "setting" on which is built Blatz Individuality. If you're a lover of draught beer—keg beer—you should cultivate the "Blatz Sign habit."

Bottled Blatz is available, or should be, in most first-class places. Ask for Blatz Private Stock.
